Rev. F. L. Wiseman delivered an address upon the "Freedom of the Truth." Referring to Freethinking, he said the Freethinker was like a man who tied his leg to a rope which was attached to a tree, and which prevented him going outside a very limited area. On every hand man found his action limited by impossibilities over which he could not pass. There was no such thing as absolute freedom. By freedom he meant following out the laws of their being. Perfect freedom lay in the perfect adjustment of oneself to the laws of his being. That was exactly what the Lord had said, "The truth shall make you free." Every addition to their knowledge was a widening of range of their freedom. The people of the nineteenth century were very much freer of the universe than those of the early Christian ages. The invention of writing, printing, steam engines, and electrical machines, had immensely widened the scope of individual life. If we could find out the last conclusive laws of our being we should then have perfect freedom. Truth was the expression of the unseen in the seen, the eternal in the passable, the expression of the Heavenly Father in his blessed Son Jesus Christ. The power of Christ on earth lay in his knowing the truth, which knowledge arose from the perfect and uninterrupted communion which existed between the Father and the Son. Men were not here on earth by chance: they were here by a Divine plan, and if they looked they should see all the perfect plan, and should be able to do all things by following Christ, and the law of their being would be fulfilled.

Rev. H. Foster Pegg took for his subject, "Jesus only." Jesus Christ is the crown of humanity. What will make life, death, and eternity glorious to the Christian? "Jesus only."

The evening meeting was devoted to missionary speeches and evangelistic addresses by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor and Rev. J. G. Train, Hull. Mr. Taylor emphasised the need that Christ has for a missionary Church, while Mr. Train spoke on the subject of "Three conditions of sinners in life." Mr. David Drummond presided, and announced that a large wooden structure capable of holding 6,000 people, would be erected for Mr. Moody's meetings soon to be held in the city

COUNT CAMPELLO'S WORK in connection with the Italian Church Reform Association is growing in a most unexpected manner. As shown by the latest report, in which Rev. Ugo Janni makes an earnest appeal for increased support, saying that while religion in Italy wavers between idolatry and superstition, the country can do nothing for herself in regard to the Gospel which she so much needs. The hon. sec. is Miss Mayor, 20, Manor-place, Paddington Green, W.

BELFAST WAIFS.

Excellent homes for destitute boys and girls are "Elim," Crumlin-road, Belfast, and "Olivet," Ballygowan, co. Down. The maintenance of this work, which has been in existence sixteen years, depends upon contributions sent voluntarily, and their operations are limited only by the funds contributed. Destitute children of all denominations are received from all parts of the country, and the grand aim of the work is to lead all of them to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Last year was one of rich blessing in every department of the Homes. Ninety-two boys and girls shared the advantages of the institutions. Of these, twenty-four have gone forth to situations of various kinds, where they are able honourably to earn their own livelihood; eight have been restored to relatives who had become fitted to look after them; two have died, and fifty-eight boys and girls remained. "Elim," in addition to sheltering numbers of working lads, and fostering among them habits of industry and thrift, is also becoming an employment bureau of "out-of-works," and an agency for advising and helping all sorts and conditions of men and women, as well as boys and girls, who are in distress and trouble.

Friends who are in the neighbourhood should give a look in at the homes. Gladdening testimonies such as the following are often received from those who have boys and girls in employment. "The Rectory, Niagara-on-the-Sea.—Annie is going on very satisfactorily, and reflects great credit on the home. She looks back lovingly upon the happy years spent there." Annie has been nearly three years in her situation. The work is directed by Mr. David Henderson, "Elim," Crumlin-road, Belfast.

Colportage in Ireland.

Amongst the societies that usually avail themselves of the presence of visitors to Dublin Christian Convention is the Bible and Colportage Society for Ireland. Its annual meeting was held on Friday in the Christian Union Buildings, Mr. John R. Fowler presiding

Mr. Cotter, the energetic secretary, read the report, from which it appeared that an additional colporteur had been appointed to Limerick. The object of the society is to circulate Scriptures, and books, periodicals, and tracts, founded on and agreeable to the Word of God. The colporteurs have been well received by Romanists as well as Protestants, and been able in many cases to converse freely on religious subjects with the people. About £4,000 worth of books were sold during the year, and 44,000 tracts distributed. It is desired to place a colporteur in each of the twelve counties of Leinster.

The Chairman said that in connection with the Irish Presbyterian Church, the Episcopal Church of Ireland and the Methodist, body, together with their own society, there were employed about sixty colporteurs in the country. These are quite inadequate for the needs of the country, and he earnestly appealed for help to enable the society to extend this good work.

Several colporteurs gave interesting accounts of their hazardous, difficult, and yet encouraging work; and addresses were delivered by Rev. J. Hudson Taylor (who expressed his belief that there was never such an opportunity for evangelistic work in Ireland as at present); Rev. Samuel Prenter, and Captain West

Young Women in Ireland.

The annual conference of the Irish Y.W.C.A. was held in the Friends' Meeting House, Dublin, on Friday last. Mrs. S. H. Smith, president for Ireland, stated that the membership had increased to 17,576, with 328 branches. Miss Reynolds spoke of the evangelistic work of the society. Rev. J. Hudson Taylor addressed the meeting, taking John iv. as a model chapter for the study of Christian workers at home and abroad. Mrs. Oatts, of Glasgow, gave an interesting account of work in that great city amongst shop girls, factory hands, and in drawing-rooms.

Mrs. Smith again presided at the afternoon meeting, and delivered her annual address to the association. Mrs. Oatts also spoke. The new training home for missionaries in connection with the Y.W.C.A. in Dublin was reported upon, and addresses were heard from young ladies about to go out to China and elsewhere as missionaries. The meeting was also addressed by Miss Marrable, hon. sec., on the subject of "Steadfastness."

In the evening a public meeting was held in the Metropolitan Hall, the spacious building being filled. Captain Tottenham and Mrs. Oatts gave addresses.

THE RIDING LESSON.

"This is the horse I brought for you, Miss Lucy," said the kind old riding-master to a young lady, as she descended the steps of a seaside villa, in her riding habit. "I knew you wanted a quiet one, so I looked out Philbert; you can depend upon him."

"One, two, three," and she shot into the saddle, and the party started off.

Now, this ride was the means of showing her more clearly than ever before the difference between faith and feeling. Three lessons it taught, putting her in mind of three Bible verses; and I daresay when you have read this story you will know what those three lessons were without needing to be told.

Miss Lucy was very timid on horseback, and, though quite happy when her horse walked, the moment it began to trot, she exclaimed:

"Oh, is this horse quite safe? Will he go quietly?"

"Safe as a Bath-chair," said the master. "I told you I chose him on purpose for you." So on they went, and after a minute or so she began to feel more comfortable, but still her doubts and fears were not removed, for when they came on to the Downs, and the horse felt his hoofs upon the springy turf, the pleasure of it made him step so lightly and fling his head so high that his rider thought she could not manage him any longer, and at the word "canter" she had a fresh outburst of terror. "Are you sure he won't run away and throw me off?"

"He's as obedient and gentle as a lamb," said the master again. "He won't do anything but what I tell him," and on they went up to the top of the hill, where they saw only the clouds above them and the shining sea all around, east, west, and south. "Oh, Mr. E——" cried Lucy, "please do stop!" She felt all her strength and control were going.

What a coward she was! you say. Well, I am afraid there is no denying it. Lucy was an arrant coward.

"I know it's dreadfully silly of me," she said, "but I can't help feeling as if my horse was going to bolt and throw me over the cliffs into the sea."

"Why, miss," said the master, reproachfully, "I haven't a better horse to give you than that. It belongs to the owner of the stables—his own cob that he rides himself when he's at home. I wouldn't put you on to one you couldn't trust through thick and thin, not for anything in the world; and besides, no accident could happen when I was by to prevent it. You're all right with me."

"Yes, but I don't feel safe," she said.

"Never mind about that," he replied. "You take my word for it that you are safe, and you'll soon feel safe enough. We won't ride towards the cliffs, since it frightens you"; and at a word from him all the horses turned inland.

"Oh, I see," he said, "you're holding the reins too tight. It isn't your hanging on to the bridle that makes you a bit safer, it's sitting up straight in the saddle. As long as you do that you're all right, unless the saddle turns round, and I've taken good care it sha'n't. Now hold yourself up, don't lean over to one side or other, or you may have a nasty fall. Look right ahead between the horse's ears, let people see you are at your ease; and as for the reins, if you cling to them like that you'll spoil the horse's mouth, and not be able to guide him a bit. I'm going to take you to see a very pretty farm."

It rather amused Miss Lucy to be treated like a baby, and promised a reward if she were good. Then it flashed upon her that she must be treated as a child, for she had not for that occasion either the strength or the courage of her years.

She had learnt already what it was to take God at his word, and the lines—

> I would be treated as a child,
> And guided where I go,

came into her mind. And, strange as it may seem (for this is not a make-up story), it helped her to trust the man, who knew better than she did in this matter. "I won't be afraid," she said to herself; "after all Mr. E. is the best judge, and anyway he is responsible to bring me safe back." Down a steep crumbly hillside they went, and she felt anything but secure; still, trusting entirely to his word, she by degrees left off thinking about her own safety, and began to enjoy the beautiful scenery he was showing them. So much was this the case that she allowed her horse to go where he liked, and presently the master had to say, "Keep close to me or you'll get into some mischief."

On their way home he took them up again to canter on the cliffs.

"You are all right now, aren't you?" he said to his timid pupil.

"Oh, yes," she answered laughing, "I took your word for it, and though I didn't feel one bit safe at first now I do."

She had learnt by that time, you see, not to depend upon her clinging for an imaginary safety, nor upon her feelings for enjoyment of security, and the moment she left off thinking about herself, the pleasure of her ride began. And, moreover, instead of being a hindrance to all the others, she was now able even to direct and encourage the timid ones.

Still no earthly thing can be a perfect image of the heavenly. The boldest and most skilful rider may be lost—the most trustful and obedient learner will sooner or later have to depend on his own horsemanship, not on his master's. Not so with those who are safe in Christ. They never can perish, for they have not to depend on themselves.

And now, of course, as the story is done, you won't want to read the moral. Perhaps you have been able to think it out for yourselves, and for those who have done so, I set down here the three lessons Lucy learnt, and the three texts they remind her of. Can you find out the chapter and verse, I wonder?

1st. Take my word for it.

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

2nd. Sit straight up boldly.

"Uphold me according to thy word, that I may live and not be ashamed of my hope." "Hold Thou me up and I shall be safe."

3rd. Look right ahead.

"Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee." "Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established."

"Looking unto Jesus, the Beginner and Finisher of Faith." C. W. M.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.

Mr. A. G. Dodderidge writes:—"After more than six weeks' truly happy services, we closed the Mission on Sunday, September 18. The interest was kept up steadily to the last. Day after day the children and adults gathered round (sometimes to the number of 400 to 500), and the passers-by, often attracted by the sweet singing of the children, stopped to listen, and remained throughout the meeting. 265 members were added to the Children's Scripture Union. The Sunday afternoon services in the Pier Pavilion were most successful, several who had gone to the pier merely for pleasure came to the meetings."

SANDGATE, KENT.—Four weeks' very happy children's services were held on the beach by Mr. C. E. Faithfull, Marseilles, assisted by occasional helpers. Many children joined the "Children's Scripture Union," and grown-up people found help from the services.

FRIENDS OF THE CHILDREN are much indebted to Mr. Arthur Renwick, who is intimately acquainted with the working of the Act relative to State children in New South Wales, for his letter to The Times. In 1879 Christian men and women began voluntary work for the relief of destitute children, and in 1881 the system they inaugurated was placed under State control. The barrack system was never once entertained, the plan of boarding out has been found as the solution of the difficulty. At the end of the tenth year the wards of the State numbered 2,369. 1,373 were being paid for by the State, the remainder were placed out as apprentices or for adoption.

MR. TOYE'S ORPHAN HOME.

To tell of God's dealings with him during the past year, Mr. Henry Toye gathered his friends together at the Home in Lewisham-road last Friday evening. The high respect in which he is held, and the quality of his faith in God for the support of his family of nearly one hundred and fifty orphan and friendless girls drew a very large company. It is an occasion which many in the south-east district never miss.

Mr. Toye was able to say that during all the past year his little folk had wanted for nothing. Consistent with his habit he had never asked for support for them at the hands of man. No one need inquire of Mr. Toye as to the condition of his store-room, for though utter want overshadowed his household, to God alone in prayer his needs are made known, At the annual meeting, however, he was under no constraint, for the store-room and coal-cellar doors were wide open, and it could easily be seen that shelves, bins, and corners were abundantly filled, while the file for unpaid accounts had not a single adornment to denote its use.

That Mr. Toye is at times hard put to it is no secret. He says that to have a banking account upon which he could always draw cheques would hardly conduce to the life of faith which God would have his children lead. To have faith, he says, faith must be tried; faith to be strong must be strongly tried. Some of the experiences which he related were certainly of a wonderful character. One day he will never forget. Not a piece of coal was in the cellar, and there was no bread in the house. The tea hour was not far distant, and a knock came to the door. A baker stood there to ask if Mr. Toye would accept of some bread. He left eleven and a-half quarterns; had it been only eleven there would not have been enough for tea! The door was not closed, when two vanloads of coal were driven up, that had been ordered by an unknown friend to be delivered immediately.

Mr. Toye has a strong belief in self-help. He has built his own school-room. He begins the day at 4.30 a.m., and though increased in years, his health is most satisfactory. The company much appreciated the singing of the children. W. M.

REV. F. B. MEYER.

On Sunday last Rev. F. B. Meyer said farewell to his late church and congregation at Regent's Park Chapel. Every seat was occupied in the morning, and in the evening the spacious chapel was crowded in every part ten minutes before the commencement of the service. The morning text was Hebrews xiii. 20, 21, and that in the evening Jude 21. In the course of his remarks he said that whilst there were several things in his new sphere which he would have wished otherwise, yet he considered it a good opportunity for Christian testimony and work amongst the masses of the people in the neighbourhood of Christchurch being, in his opinion, only second in need and misery to the East End. He asked them to distinguish between their inability to understand all the reasons that actuated him in making a decision, and their faith in him as their pastor and friend, expressing a desire that they would still continue to pray for him and retain him in their affections. He said it had been his earnest endeavour, during the trying crisis through which they had passed, to realise, both in word and act, the high ideal which he had always set before them. He was glad to feel that he was leaving the door open behind him, and would always have pleasure in doing his utmost to help them in any way.

We understand that a movement is on foot to give Mr. Meyer a tangible proof of the affection and gratitude of the people who have gathered around his ministry. He commences his work at Christ church, Westminster Bridge-road, next Sunday.

SUNDERLAND.—A new form of popular gathering has been inaugurated at Sunderland by Rev. R. B. Shepherd, pastor of Sans-street Wesleyan Church. On Sunday evenings, from nine o'clock to ten o'clock, the chapel is thrown open "in order to bring backsliders to knowledge of God." Light refreshments and music are provided, nobody asks the people about their souls, and by allowing the guests to talk and make themselves perfectly free, the rev. gentleman hopes by thus making the chapel a public-house without the drink to arouse in the attenders an interest in the religion of Jesus Christ.

Lights and Shadows of Mission Work.

No. VIII.

It was at the C—— Mission that I made the acquaintance of the rector of H——. I seldom employ such methods now, but at the close of an address to believers, I asked those who were conscious of having backslidden from Christ, or were desirous of closer fellowship with Him, to acknowledge the truth by rising to their feet. About thirty responded, and, among the others, my friend. Joining me on the way to the vicarage, he asked if my fellow-missioner and I would give him ten days in his own parish. "I feel I have been living too near the world," said he, "I have gone in too much for the garden party and that kind of thing, but, God helping me, I am determined to break from it all, from this time." Intervening months rolled by, and the time for the mission arrived. My companion had the first Sunday all to himself, and we had every reason to believe that God used him in the conversion of one of the churchwardens. He had made use of a favourite illustration of my own, "The sinking ship with the lifeboat alongside," and, oh, it did one good, on one of the following nights, to hear that bluff, west-country farmer acknowledge before his neighbours that he was no longer on "the sinking ship," but "safe in the life-boat."

We received great help in the prayer meetings from a Wesleyan family, the members of which came up to our gatherings from a neighbouring seaside parish, and one day the rector, my fellow-helper, and myself received a pressing invitation to visit them at their home. They had a lovely place on the shore of one of the prettiest of pretty bays indenting our coast. They seemed to be all believers, and being, after the manner of all old-fashioned Methodists, most lavish in the hospitality shown, I knew we were in for a happy time of it. But God had reserved a pleasure for us that had never been expected. We had nearly finished tea, when a text that is often suggested to me by the sight of such a family came rushing into my mind. I had first felt its force when gazing at a picture painted by the Rev. J. B. Waddington, and hung in the breakfast-room of his vicarage at Clitheroe. Written under that picture, "A broken-hearted wife taking a last kiss from the lips of a dying husband," were the words, "We shall be caught up TOGETHER." And now, with the possibility of the Master's return at any moment, I began to wonder whether, in case of such an event occurring, the loving souls around me would be caught up "TOGETHER." I gave expression to my thoughts; a young lady dropped her head on the table and began to weep. I requested the others to plead her cause at the Throne of Grace—for I knew what had happened—while I conversed with her concerning her position before God. She seemed deeply affected, and I believe we left her on her knees when we returned to H——; but three or four years afterwards, meeting her brother at the Birmingham "mission," I was informed by him that she found peace in Jesus soon after we had gone.

One mistake I made at this mission I must tell for the sake of other missioners and evangelists. I one night gave a painful anecdote, in which a young lady's name was mentioned. I thought I was perfectly safe in doing so, for I was well-nigh three hundred miles from where she had lived and died; but the very next night her brother turned up at the meeting, and on the following evening her mother. Oh, the harm that has been done by thoughtless people in this direction. Fellow-workers, let us always be careful in our use of names where it is possible to give pain.

On the second Sunday—after the morning sermon—the parish clerk came into the vestry, as I thought, to help me remove my gown. To my surprise, he began to speak on soul matters, and we ended our conversation by sinking on our knees, while he asked God for mercy. Painful experience in the case of others forbids me to speak as definitely as I once should have done, but I believe the dear man, like the praying publican, went down to his house justified from all things.

One of the most striking events of the mission was the conversion of one of the rectory servants. A woman of most violent temper, both her master and mistress were frightened at her, and the recital of her doings in a former situation compelled me to rise, one night, at the sound of footsteps in a passage, and barricade my bedroom door. The last night but one of the mission she was out the whole of the night, and my worthy host—a most gentle-spirited man—begged me to suggest some means of getting rid of her that might not be calculated to infuriate her to some deed of violence. "You MUST get rid of her," said I, "so pluck up courage; and, while I pray God to smooth matters down, go and dismiss her." He went; but in a few minutes returned to say that she professed to have been converted on the previous evening, and had made a long journey through the night to do something that she felt ought to be done by a soul professing Christ. "I have never seen her so gentle," added he, "and whatever has been its nature, some wonderful change has certainly taken place in her." At the next meeting she prayed, she confessed how great her sins had been, and "Thou knowest, Lord," said she, "that my heart has been the home of evil spirits; but oh, I thank Thee that, last night, Thou didst cast them out through thy preached word." Her manner was very excited, but she regained calmness; and, ever afterwards, when I heard from H——, I was told that she was going on well.

With regard to my friend himself, his determination to live only for the Lord proved to have been true and real. He spoke like an inspired man at the close of the mission. His after letters were all intensely spiritual; and doubtless he would have become a power for God in that neighbourhood. But he was not to be left here to pursue his work. He was to be taken right home. God's providence in removing such a man from such a parish at such a time was enshrouded with mystery, but one remembers that "He doeth all things well," and is silent.

I have remarked, in another sketch, how a particular hymn or tune will "take" at some particular place. It was so here. Everyone was so delighted with a wild swinging, chorus the words of which are reproduced here, that people came to the meetings expecting it to be used as regularly every night as other parts of the service. When this kind of thing happens I always yield to the popular desire. The mission ends; the hymn or tune remains; and as often as it is used in after days, it is certain to awaken mission memories. Years have fled since the H—— mission; but I feel certain that, though many of those who gathered with us then have gone into eternity, there are others who could not hear the words of the refrain—

I'll stem the storm, it won't last long,
I'll anchor, by-and-by,
In the haven of eternal rest,
With Jesus ever nigh, without thinking of it, in its every detail, and the truths it brought home to their consciences withal.

AN EVANGELIST.

The Land Afar.

"A better country, that is a heavenly."—HEBREWS xi. 16.

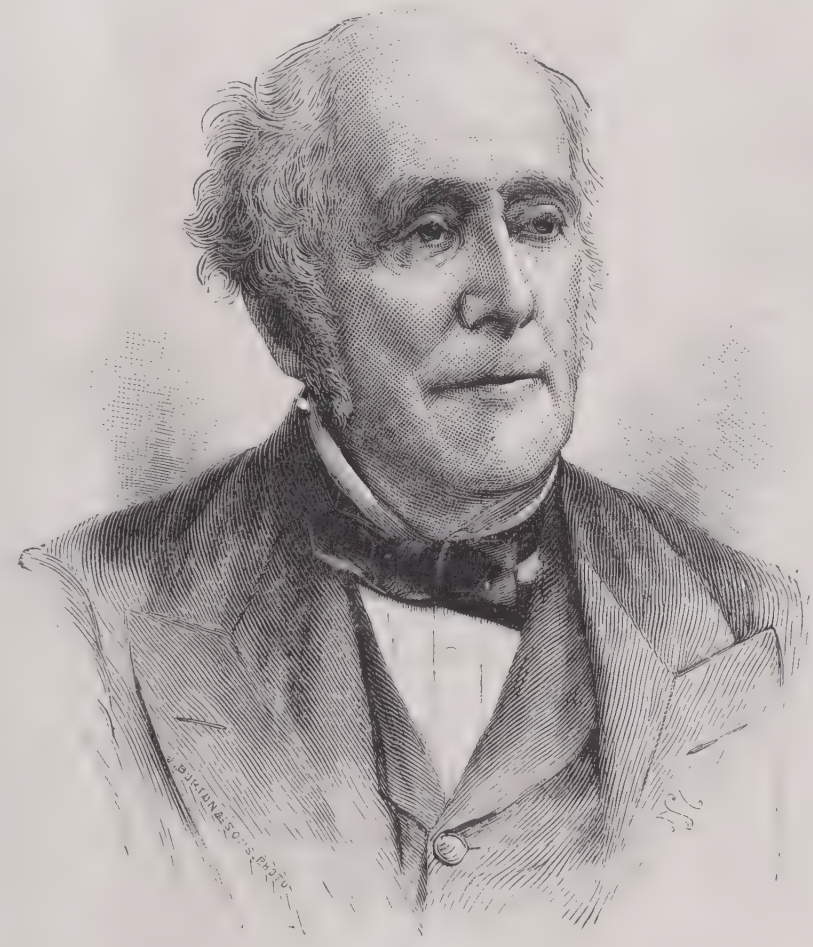
Words arranged. GEO. C. STEBBINS.

From "NEW HYMNS AND SOLOS." (London, Morgan and Scott. 1s. 6d.) Compiled by Ira D. Sankey and now being used, in conjunction with the Standard Collection of 750 Pieces, by the Choirs at Mr. Moody's meetings. (All Rights Reserved.)

WHEN ONCE HEAVENLY ZEAL is come down upon thine altar, though no water can quench it, yet must it be preserved by ordinary fuel. Especially the preacher's lips must keep it alive. Sermons are bellows for this purpose. The word read is of Divine use, and so by its motion the coal is stirred. And when thou hast heated thyself, take heed of catching cold again, as many have done, and brought their zeal to death's door. —Ward.

THE LEVITES that kept God's watch in the temple were charged expressly, morning and evening, if not oftener, to look to the lights and the fire. He that shall forget, at the least, with the curfew-bell in the morning to stir up and kindle the same, if not oftener, with Daniel, I cannot conceive how he can possibly keep fire in his heart. Will God bless such as bid Him not so much as good-morrow and good even? —Ward.

THE LATE MR. THOMAS COOK,



ORIGINATOR OF COOK'S EXCURSION TOURS.

MANY have been the social blessings which have flown from the exercise of Christian ingenuity; but few individuals have done so much, and realised such a large and beneficent purpose as the founder of the celebrated Cook's tours.

THOMAS COOK, who recently died at the advanced age of 84, began life in a humble home at Melbourne, in Derbyshire, and had few advantages in childhood. At the age of four he lost his father by death, and at ten was earning a penny a day working in a garden. The support of his mother was shortly afterwards a filial responsibility, and the lad took to selling fruit in Derby Market-place. At the age of fourteen he was apprenticed to a wood-turner in Derby, and acquired considerable skill in mechanical pursuits. The drinking customs of the day impressed him seriously; his mind revolted against the drink, and becoming a total abstainer, he maintained, throughout a long life, sound temperance principles.

More than that, the young man early came under the power of the Gospel, and, associating himself with a Baptist church in his native place, entered with enthusiasm upon Sunday-school and other work for Christ. His services were deservedly appreciated very highly, and on reaching the age of twenty he was appointed a village missionary for the county of Rutland, under the General Baptist Association. There were no railways in those days, and in one year Mr. Cook covered over two thousand miles on foot in the discharge of his duties. In 1832 he married Miss Mason, the daughter of a Rutland farmer, and removed to Market Harborough in Leicestershire, where he combined his business as a wood-turner with work for the Baptist Association. Here he became actively identified with the temperance movement, and as secretary, publisher, and lecturer of the South Midland Temperance Association, he contributed greatly to the progress of the cause.

It was in connection with this work that the idea first struck him which led to the world-wide organisation of travel with which his name has now become associated. Concerning the beginnings of this enterprise, he has explained that in 1841, shortly after the introduction of steam railways into the Midlands, while walking from Market Harborough to attend a temperance meeting at Leicester, fifteen miles away, the thought flashed upon him that the new means of locomotion might be made subservient to the promotion of the cause which was so near to his heart. He broached the matter at the evening meeting, and it was received with cheers, and three weeks later a special train of twenty open carriages was engaged to carry 570 people from Leicester to Loughborough, at a charge of a shilling per adult for the return journey. This was the beginning of the gigantic excursion system, and the "personally conducted tours" which have, during the past generation, had such a humanising effect upon civilised communities throughout the world.

(From a Photograph by Messrs. T. Burton & Sons, Leicester.)

Taking up his residence in Leicester, Mr. Cook afterwards organised trips to Derby, Nottingham, and Birmingham, carrying large numbers of people. The Isle of Man, Ireland, and Scotland were successively taken within compass of the enterprising tourist operator; then came the Great Exhibition of 1851, to which Mr. Cook despatched 150,000 excursionists from Yorkshire alone. Ground was then broken on the Continent; the hotel coupon system was begun; and other developments followed in quick succession. At present, the establishment has over thirty branch offices, gives direct employment to 3,000 persons, and keeps 500 accounts with railway companies, and 700 with hotel proprietors. It issues yearly more than three million tickets, and furnishes facilities over nearly two millions of miles of routes by sea and land.

Mr. Cook also opened hotels and boarding houses for the accommodation of his patrons, and boarded over 12,000 in Paris during the exhibition of 1867. In 1868 he took his first party up the Nile, and subsequently obtained the control of the whole of the Nile passenger traffic. When the veteran retired from active life in 1878, his son, Mr. JOHN M. COOK, came into command, and a few years later the firm of "THOMAS COOK AND SON" were entrusted with imperial responsibilities in the promotion of the expedition to Khartoum for the relief of General Gordon.

Mr. Cook was a Christian as well as a man of business, a philanthropist in heart and practice no less than a benefactor of men by the important commercial agency he had founded. His life was a ministry to the public well-being. In his native town, some handsome Memorial Cottages, which he caused to be erected for the benefit of aged poor, will keep his memory green. To Leicester he gave a commodious Memorial Hall for Sunday-school and mission work. When at Jaffa last spring we found his portrait hanging up in the house of Miss Arnot, whom he had liberally aided in the building of her schools.

When Mr. Cook departed this life in July, the newspapers were unanimous in praise of his integrity and straightforwardness. One remarked with much force, "If travel is education, Mr. Cook must be regarded as the greatest educator the modern world has known." On the occasion of the funeral, Rev. W. Bishop, minister of Archdeacon-lane Chapel, Leicester, with which Mr. Cook was long associated, speaking from intimate acquaintance, said:—

> Mr. Cook was a man of splendid physique, great power of endurance, of generous impulses, and large ideas. He was first and chiefly a Christian man. That was at the root of all he was and did. His great life work was not suggested to him by the hope of self-enrichment and self-aggrandisement. It came to him as a benevolent inspiration. His first thought, as he tells us, was of the good a trip to Loughborough by train would be for the Sunday-school scholars of Leicester, by carrying them away from the vicious associations of the Leicester races. He repeated the experiment as a means of promoting the great temperance reformation to which he had become ardently attached. He possessed great depth and intensity of conviction. Conscience was his king. Wherever he went, into whatever society or country, he never swerved from his total abstinence principles or practice, or compromised his Christian beliefs or convictions.

Speaking of him later at a memorial service, his friend Mr. Bishop said:—

> Christian work in many places at home and abroad owed much to him, and benefited by the prossperity which God gave him. But he was not only a Christian man, who served a generation according to the will of God, but one who could suffer also. Beautiful was the spirit in which he accepted those multiplied sorrows that fell upon him in later days. What the loss of his beloved and only daughter was to him no one could tell: he never referred to her without deep emotion. Again, when he became blind, he gave himself up with a beautiful humility to the Divine will. He never uttered a bitter or repining word, but with a wondrous patience accepted what he always said was mysterious beyond all comprehension, but which he believed to be God's will.

The faithful servant and companion of his declining years, wrote to a correspondent concerning his last hours: "He was as usual full of plans and arrangements for everybody, and he has left much undone he wanted to accomplish; but had he lived to be a hundred years old, he would never have finished. He greeted me most mornings with a fresh idea for some one's benefit."

"Like a shock of corn fully ripe," he was gathered in, leaving a name full of fragrance, and completing an honourable career which should have inspiration for Christian young men for a long time to come.

CLOUD REVELATIONS.

"And they feared as they entered into the cloud."—Luke ix. 34.

On Tabor's Mount the loved disciples stood;
And whilst, transfix'd with awe, they upward gazed
On Vision rare, whose brightness made it good
For them to tarry there, their minds still dazed
With the effulgent light which shone around—
Lo! a translucent cloud hung o'er the hallow'd ground.

With fear they shudder'd, as they felt that they
Were being wrapped within its fleecy folds;
Their souls were filled with terror and dismay,
Like one whom pale-faced superstition holds
Within his grasp and frightens with a ghost;
Of all degrees of dread theirs sure the uttermost!

But once they were envelop'd in its shroud,
From out its depths they heard a voice Divine;
Yea, God Himself spake to them 'mid the cloud
And favour'd them with yet another sign
That towards such as they his wrath had ceased,
Speaking of One beloved in Whom He is well pleased.

And so with us, when entering the gloom
Of some affliction or bereavement sore:
It is that our experience may bloom
With tokens fresh of love which evermore
Utters its sweetest words to hearts that mourn,
To bent and bruised reeds who trials great have borne.

'Tis through the cloud that those revealings come
Whereby the life of faith is best sustain'd;
'Tis when the saint with speechless grief is dumb,
When to its misery his soul seems chain'd,
'Tis then that God delights to show his Face,
And clasp his trembling child in his Divine embrace.

What though environments may wear a look
Which threatens to submerge our peace of mind;
No true disciple God e'er yet forsook,
Complete deliv'rance we shall surely find;
And, in the hour when all things seem to fail,
Our hearts shall hear God's voice, and faith by grace prevail.

The Railway Mission.

Encouraging reports have been received from the two travelling missionaries sent out by the Railway Mission to work among the railway men in Cape Colony. Forty-five stations were visited and eighty-six meetings held in three months, with many tokens of spiritual blessing among the people, who gave the missionaries a warm welcome. At some stations the railway people never hear the Gospel except when they are visited by these missionaries.

Miss Law sends from Egypt an encouraging account of her work at Alexandria and Mansourah among the Mohammedans, Copts and men of other nationalities employed on the lines there. Miss Law is very anxious to hear of a lady who would join her as a voluntary worker. She sends an urgent appeal for help, as the men are in sad need of the Gospel, and are very willing to listen to it. Information will be given by the secretary, the Railway Mission, 18, New Bridge-street E.C.

Christian and Sceptic.

The well-known evidential missioner, Rev. A. J. Harrison, has delivered a very striking series of addresses at Exeter Hall on "Christianity and Scepticism." The lectures, arranged for by the Y.M.C.A., were apparently designed with the view of influencing some in the great army of London sceptics. That object was secured so far as exciting deep interest was concerned; for in the good audiences that assembled last week, for five nights in succession, there was a fair sprinkling of those who were not careful to hide the fact of their being unbelievers in Christ and his Gospel. It was a great deal to get such men (for we are not aware that there were any of the other sex) within the sound of Mr. Harrison's voice. What the exact results may be we cannot say, but certainly the outcome must be good. At any rate, the faith of those already owning the sway of Jesus Christ—and they were the great majority of those present—could not fail to be strengthened. We would hope and trust that not a few of the doubters were led to take the place of the convinced Thomas, and to say "My Lord and my God."

Mr. Harrison is facile princeps in his special line of teaching. He has had great experience in dealing with unbelievers and questioners, and he has met with unusual success. We take it that his success is owing as much to his wise and truly Christian methods in exposition and discussion as to his complete mastery of his theme. The present writer well recollects hearing a set discussion between the late Mr. Charles Bradlaugh and a would-be defender of the Christian faith. As to the spirit shown in the wordy warfare there was little if anything to choose between the noted infidel and his antagonist—both were utterly unchristian and unkind. It is very different with Mr. Harrison: he has drunk deeply into the spirit of his Master, and he is much more anxious to convince the sceptical, and to win the wavering, than to register an argumentative victory. Above all he is so thoroughly respectful and kind towards his opponents that he commends himself and his cause as few Christian controversialists in modern days have done.

The lectures dealt with the reasonableness of faith in God and in Christ: with the mutual bearings of Christianity and science, Christianity and the Bible, and cognate matters. The subject of the closing address on Thursday evening was "The Power of an Endless Life." It was shown at the outset that all men bear the same relation towards the accepted laws of nature, and the question is how far our attitude towards these laws is affected by belief or unbelief in God and a future life. Mr. Harrison had no difficulty in making it plain that faith in God intensifies and makes stronger the secular life of the Christian. The future life is closely linked with the present, and the salvation of God is a present salvation, so that faith, if it be worth anything at all, has a real influence on human conduct here and now. Mr. Harrison won the favour of his agnostic hearers by declaring that a Christian ought not to shrink from co-operating with unbelievers in working for the public welfare so far as they had common ground. On the other hand, he contended that the evils in society, which all deplored, are not to be set down to Christianity, but to fallen human nature; and that Christianity is the only effective remedy for these evils. Of course there is much Christian profession that is allied with sheer selfishness. A mere orthodox profession cannot be accepted as certain proof of Christianity; we must look at the measure in which a man's life is animated by the Spirit, and is obedient to the example, of Jesus Christ.

Mr. Harrison went on to show that the teachings and doings of Jesus Christ, instead of being opposed to secular progress and happiness in the noblest sense, were conducive to them. Some of the sayings of Jesus that are oft quoted by opponents of the faith were taken up, and their true bearing and meaning pointed out in a very lucid and convincing way. The lecturer cautioned his doubting friends against taking their interpretation of Christianity from the mistakes of theologians or from the lives of ordinary Christian professors. There are some periods in the history of Christianity in our own country which one must look on with mingled feelings. Great as our Puritan forefathers were in some respects, there was not a little in their methods that was inconsistent with the Spirit of Christ and the Gospels. But the excesses of the Puritans were as nothing compared to the profligacy of the régime that succeeded theirs. Experience, said Mr. Harrison, had taught him to fight shy of defending anybody or anything except the New Testament and Jesus Christ.

After an earnest plea that Christians should construct and conduct their politics on the basis of eternal righteousness and justice, and not on the shifting sands of party expediency or personal ambition, the lecturer turned the attention of his audience to the claims and sanctions of the future life. Though the fact of a future life may not be capable of scientific proof, there is in nature, in revelation, and in analogy ample ground for our faith in such a life. Believing that the present life is only a part of the great whole, the Christian is bound to frame his conduct accordingly. Much harm has been done by regarding the pictorial imagery of the book of Revelation as a literal presentation of what the future life may be. Speculation on the subject is vain, and our clear duty is to attend well to the responsibilities of the present, knowing that the future is in our Heavenly Father's hands, and He doeth all things well. Mr. Harrison's peroration was very eloquent and impressive, and elicited many expressions of enthusiastic approval.

Succeeding the lecture an hour was given to discussion. Objectors had an allotted period in which to frame their criticisms from the platform, and the lecturer had a like privilege in reply. There were some half dozen critics, all of whom expressed their admiration of Mr. Harrison's courtesy and eloquence, while raising points of objection, from the standpoint of the secularist, to some of his remarks. Most of these brethren seemed perfectly sincere, and some showed ability in the statement of their views. Detailed notice would be unprofitable; Mr. Harrison's replies were always to the point, and to a Christian observer, at any rate, most conclusive.

On behalf of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Clarence Hooper (who presided) thanked the sceptical friends for their attendance and their excellent behaviour in stating difficulties. If the Y.M.C.A. could at any time render them help, it would be most freely and gladly extended. The heartiest thanks of all were accorded to the lecturer, and the hope was expressed that he would again lecture in Exeter Hall.

We may take this opportunity of mentioning the issue of a valuable volume from the pen of Mr. Harrison, The Church in Relation to Sceptics (7s. 6d., Longmans, Green, and Co.).—It is framed on the Socratic plan of question and answer, and deals in an exceedingly able and helpful way with the varied phases of secularistic unbelief, and how to meet them. Teachers, preachers, and all who have it in their power to influence sceptics towards the perception and acceptance of revealed truth would do well to study these pages, which are truly fascinating, instructive, and strengthening. Mr. Harrison's mission is one of the highest possible importance in these days, and he has been divinely qualified to conduct it.

HOMES FOR AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND.—Rev Henry Bright, founder of these homes in Hanley-road, Crouch Hill, N., writes:—"On Tuesday, November 8, we hold a conversazione and public meeting, at 4 and 7 p.m., with the object of raising the amount needed to free the buildings entirely from debt. You will be glad to know that £132 is all that is required to do this." It is hoped that this amount will be contributed at the meetings, so that sums promised conditionally may not be lost to the fund.

The Revival in Ireland.

IN COUNTY KERRY.

It seems a pity (writes a correspondent) that Mr. Moody's visit to Tralee should have been limited to one day, when Belfast, with all its privileges for a Bible-loving people, was given a fortnight. We heard Mr. Moody say in Cork that he had long given up singing "Hold the Fort"; that the day for mere defence was past, and the day for aggression begun. Certainly Tralee was a good example of a preliminary skirmish in fields unfought before. For while three-fourths of the large Butter Exchange building were filled with Christians, Protestants, and sympathising friends from all parts of the town and county, brought up under special railway arrangements, the lower part of the hall was filled with a crowd of Roman Catholic men, women, and boys, attracted by the preacher's name and fame, and many of them intensely attentive to hear him.

He began by deprecating the standing hostility of Protestants and Catholics, described the good relations subsisting at Northfield by contrast, and begged for a quiet hearing. Some of the audience cried out that that was fair, and, except for some good-humoured applause or laughter at times, he had his request. The addresses were very solemn and conscience-searching, as the preacher "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," and followed with the great proclamation of pardon and peace. In the after-meeting, he formed the centre of a large group of young men, all Romanists, and for about twenty minutes discussed, in a conversational way, with them, with the happiest effect.

The beautiful and pathetic singing of Mr. Vance contributed largely to the softening of harsh feelings, and the quietness and order of the people.

THE WORK IN LIMERICK.

We briefly noted in our last issue the two days' meeting conducted in Limerick by Mr. Moody. The first meeting was at 8 a.m. on Sunday week at the Theatre Royal, which had been engaged for the mission. Some 600 were present, and listened to an earnest address to Christians upon being filled with the Spirit. At 3 p.m. the theatre was filled with an audience many of whom had come over twenty miles to be present. Mr. Moody spoke with great power. Many were awakened. On Sunday evening the theatre was packed in every corner, and scores were standing in doorways, behind the scenes, and in the halls. Mr. Vance won the good-will of all by his cultivated voice, good taste, and spiritual life in the singing of the Gospel solos. The silence of the audience and their rapt attention to the preacher's earnest and burning words were noticeable and impressive. When the first meeting was dismissed, very few left, and a second meeting of enquirers was organised, where many were personally dealt with. On Monday three meetings were held, Mr. Whittle conducting one, and Mr. Moody the other two. All were largely attended, and the closing one packed, with hundreds turned away. Persons who came from a distance begged for admission until every available inch of space was occupied. In the after meeting scores of men and women rose for prayer, and remained to the after meeting.

On Tuesday Mr. Whittle continued the meetings at the theatre at 3 and 8 p.m. Rev. George Grubb arrived from Clifden in the afternoon, and rendered valuable assistance in one of his inimitable Bible readings to Christians upon the subject of "The Consecrated Life." He also assisted Mr. Whittle at the evening meeting. Soldiers had been specially invited to this service, and many were present. The audience in the theatre was nearly as large as at Mr. Moody's meetings. Mr. Whittle spoke specially to the soldiers. He gave an interesting account of the conversion of Captain Hedley Vicars, and also of the use made of 1 John i. 7 in the life of Captain Vicars in the conversion of his old commander, General O. Howard, of the American Army. Mr. Grubb preached the Gospel with great power, using the story of the conversion of Cornelius. Many inquirers remained for the after meeting to be dealt with.

On Wednesday and Thursday Rev. Henry Montgomery, of Belfast, was present at the meetings held. Growing audiences assembled at each succeeding meeting, the evening gatherings filling every available part of the theatre. The number of inquirers each night also increased. On Thursday night Mr. Montgomery had around him over a hundred young men, eagerly questioning him on matters pertaining to the great salvation, while Mr. Whittle conducted a large inquiry meeting in another part of the building for all classes.

On Friday afternoon a meeting for children was held. This was one of the largest and most successful meetings for young people ever held in Limerick. Mr. Whittle was at his best amongst the children, and many, it is believed were led to give their young hearts to the Saviour. The closing meeting of the week was on Friday night. The theatre was crowded, and Mr. Whittle delivered a powerful Gospel address. A large number remained for the inquiry meeting. After this second meeting the evangelist met a large company of young men to whom he further spoke, and advised them strongly to a careful study of the Word of God.

Sunday was the closing day of the mission, and three meetings were held. At the morning meeting Mr. Whittle gave an earnest address to Christians from the miracle of feeding the 5,000. Rev. Henry Montgomery spoke powerfully to a crowded meeting at three, on Paul's conversion; many remained to the after meeting, conducted by Mr. Whittle. At eight o'clock the latter spoke with great power and effect. At the close of this meeting Mr. Montgomery conducted a general inquiry meeting in the theatre, while Mr. Whittle went to the Wesleyan Chapel, where he invited any who had received blessing during the mission to follow. Large numbers went, and these were suitably addressed.

There has never been a mission in Limerick in which such general interest was shown. Numbers of all classes and creeds were present at every meeting, and it is believed that good and lasting work has been done.

Mr. Whittle left for Waterford on Monday, where he will conduct meetings during this week.

MR. MERTON SMITH IN DUNDALK.

Your readers will rejoice with us to hear of a great wave of blessing which has been moving a number of hearts in Dundalk during the mission of the last fortnight by Mr. Merton Smith, following up Mr. Moody's visit of two days. It is no easy matter for a worker to come in after a visit by Mr. Moody, and especially if he be a stranger to the place. Mr. Smith, however, has thoroughly succeeded in holding the people, and the two days of awakening has been followed by a great gathering in of those who profess to have decided for Christ. Between five and six hundred have attended from night to night in the parochial school house, and last night they were very closely packed. The number of those who seemed to decide each night has been remarkable.

Mr. Smith's power of illustration, his great variety of thought, and his large experience of all classes of people combine to maintain a deep interest in his auditory, and his singing power is an immense help. The Spirit of God uses the simple Gospel message to touch and win many hearts. We have had several of our Roman Catholic friends present, and some have been at the after meetings.

The meetings continue until Thursday, when Mr. Smith leaves to take up the work of following Mr. Moody in another of his short missions. We are expecting great things in the closing days of the mission. The meetings since Mr. Moody left us are held in connection with the Irish Evangelisation Society. JAMES BARTON, Hon. Secretary.

Dundalk, Sept. 24.

Another correspondent writes:—The influence exerted upon the young men has been specially remarkable, and numbers stand up in the after meetings to confess Christ. Many of the most indifferent and careless have been awakened. An earnest loving spirit unites the Christian workers of all denominations, and there is a deep spirit of prayer for blessing on the work, and for individuals in whom they are specially interested. There have been children's services where the little ones literally press into the Kingdom. Afternoon meetings have also been held to give people in outlying country-places an opportunity of attending, and the employers in the town most kindly allowed their assistants time to come to these, to help them on in the Christian life.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN BELFAST.

Rev. John McNeill continued his mission in Belfast during the past week. The audiences, if possible, were larger than during the previous week, His "Talks to Business Men," in St. George's Hall at midday, attracted large numbers of business men, the hall being crowded each day.

In its report of the closing meeting in the great Convention Hall on Friday evening, the Belfast News Letter says:—"Speaking numerically, the closing meeting was one of the most successful in connection with Mr. McNeill's mission in Belfast. Undeterred by the threatening character of the evening, thousands were flocking to the Convention Hall long before the hour of meeting, and some time before the proceedings commenced the doors were closed, as not a seat was available. Indeed, numbers had to be content with standing room in the passages. The service was one long to be remembered, and one could not help being struck with the earnestness and devotion of the worshippers, which were increased and intensified after the rousing address of Mr. McNeill. He said he wished to thank the committee and the choir and the thousand and one other helpers who had contributed by their hands and hearts to the success of the meetings. He had addressed during the fortnight he had been here an aggregate of 155,000 people. If he had been in the regular ministry, and preaching, say, in Regent's-square Church, London, it would have taken him a full year to have preached to the same number. He had never seen anything like this mission in his life, and he thanked God for the work he had been able to perform, and for whatever success had followed the preaching of his Word."

Writing of Mr. McNeill's mission in Belfast, The Christian Advocate says:—"The Gospel has been faithfully preached, and multitudes have professed to have stepped out of darkness into light. The mission has marked an epoch in the history of Belfast, and will never be forgotten by those who have attended it. It has demonstrated that the masses of the people are heart and soul with Christianity, and that the Gospel can move men as nothing else."

MR. MOODY IN GALWAY.

In the course of his evangelistic tour in the south and west of Ireland, this servant of Christ reached Galway on Saturday night. It had been arranged that he was to deliver three addresses on the following Sabbath. A committee representing all Protestant denominations had taken charge of arrangements. The first service was on Sabbath morning at ten; the hall was filled and Mr. Moody held his audience spell-bound from the beginning to the close. The address was specially for Christians, and was truly heart-searching.

The second meeting was at three o'clock; the hall was packed, and a side room filled. Large numbers stayed for the after-meeting, and many made their decision for Christ.

The last meeting was the best of all! all churches and all classes were represented, and the hall was crowded in every part. Mr. Moody's appeals were most powerful, and made a deep impression. Many stood up and expressed their determination to serve the Lord.

People came thirty and forty miles to be present at these services. No such meetings have been held in Galway within the memory of any living person. Let the prayers of Christians everywhere go up to the throne of grace for Galway.

O.

DEAR SIR,—In a paragraph in last week's CHRISTIAN you refer to the evangelistic campaign going on in Ireland, and suggest that the present is a most favourable opportunity for circulating Christian literature freely throughout the land. Will you allow me to emphasise this suggestion, and to say that in the opinion of those best able to judge the country was never more ripe for such an effort? As one interested in Mr. Moody's mission, may I venture to suggest that the little book which the evangelist has written, and entitled, "The way to God," is most suitable for distribution? It contains chapters dealing in the most interesting way with vital truths, and should be scattered broadcast. Will Christian friends interested in the spiritual welfare of Ireland kindly help us in this good work? I notice in your columns of last week that already a beginning has been made. If those interested in aggressive Christian effort in this country rally to our help, a most important service will be rendered to evangelistic work in our midst.

It is pleasing to add that a friend has handed over £10 to encourage us in this good work.—I am, Yours, faithfully, Belfast, Sept. 24. HENRY MONTGOMERY.

MISSIONARY FAREWELLS.

CHINA AND INDIA.

A large congregation assembled in Clapton Hall, Stoke Newington, on Tuesday evening last week, to bid farewell to Dr. A. G. Parrott and Dr. Henry Soltau, who are leaving for medical mission work in China and India. These brethren have both, in years gone by, been engaged in work for God in the foreign field. They are also well known to a wide Christian circle at home. Dr. Neatby having read Exodus xxxiii. 12 to end, there was a season of prayer, in which the outgoing workers were earnestly commended to God.

Dr. Parrott began an interesting address by referring to his past labours in China, extending over several years. He came home for rest and to qualify for medical work. Going back, oppressed with a sense of the urgency of evangelising the millions of the East, he hoped to be the subject of the prayers of those who remain at home. He related incidents showing the native darkness of the people and the enlightening power of the Gospel. To tell Chinamen that Christ saves "without money and without price" is to excite their great astonishment; for personal effort and human merit are of the essence of the Buddhism which so many of them profess. Yet some among whom he laboured heard the truth to their joy, for they had long thirsted for the rest of soul which faith in Christ gives.

One man, a Buddhist priest, wanted something —he knew not what. He had, at the age of ten, been given into the hands of the priesthood, in fulfilment of a parental vow. While still young he heard that the true religion was known in the West, and that by it men were saved from sin. A dream to the same effect convinced him that Buddhism was not God's truth. With another man he studied the Gospel according to St. Mark; they bought a New Testament which had been left (by Mr. Parrott) at an innkeeper's three years previously. The companion reader sought a missionary, and came to a knowledge of the truth. This man then went to the priest and told him of his discovery—that Jesus Christ was still alive, and had the same power as when on earth to forgive sins. The priest also accepted Christ, and both have since been faithful disciples. In the course of a year or so the ex-priest was the means of leading more than fifty other Chinamen into the light of the Gospel in a region where there were no missionaries. In his spare time he has visited neighbouring villages and hamlets with the Gospel, and has been the means of preaching being commenced in many market towns and one walled city. The incident shows how God can use native Christians in China.

Dr. Parrott intimated that his purpose is to reside in the old city of Si'ngan, in the province of Shansi, in the north-west of China. It has a million inhabitants. There may be Romish priests in the place, but there are no Protestant missionaries. On two occasions he had been very well received on visiting Si'ngan, and he hoped with medical and surgical skill to win the hearts of many to listen to the good news of salvation.

Dr. Soltau delivered a stirring address, speaking of the extent and depth of the darkness in heathen lands, and also of the leadings of God in taking him to India. In 1875 he gave himself to the Lord for work abroad, and went for a short time to Burmah, and then to China. Coming home in 1881, he went out again in 1883, intending to remain in Burmah for some time, if it should be the Lord's will. After a while, however, ill-health occasioned his return home.

Having studied medicine and surgery, he had during the intervening years been working among the poor of London, in the midst of suffering bodies and souls—people in darkness and misery, and almost heathen in their unbelief and infidelity. These have been years of happy labours; but the field is the world, and not simply London, or England. Having enlarged upon the darkness of heathenism, Dr. Soltau appealed to Christians at home to do more toward world-wide evangelisation. While China is a country of great cities, India is the land of many villages, so that to reach the people long journeys are required. Work under such conditions will be new to Dr. Soltau, who intimated that he would make Ootacamund, in Madras, the centre of his future work. During the hot season the Government of the Presidency is stationed there, and the place is largely populated.

There are many countrymen of our own in the place, also Eurasians, living without God; many who are in bondage to Rome are there; and Theosophists have their head-quarters in the town. It is hoped that the medical mission will prove a valuable adjunct to Gospel preaching. In conclusion, Dr. Soltau urged his hearers to be intense in their lives, and to pray for the missionaries, that God will bless their testimony. He left with the audience the words of Deuteronomy x. 12: "And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee," etc. He asked Christians to read their own names instead of "Israel," for the words express the obligation of all who profess to fear the Lord.

Both these labourers take out wives and children with them. The prayers of many of our readers will follow them in their journeyings and testimony.

CENTRAL AFRICA.

A party of five workers are on the eve of starting for the Garenganze country, under the leadership of Mr. A. J. Swan, to reinforce the little band of missionaries there. Mr. Swan, as our readers may recollect, has been in the field for some years, having joined Mr. F. S. Arnot in 1887. He has lately been on a visit to the homeland, where he has taken to himself a wife. He now goes back with his life partner and three other helpers—two Christian sisters and one brother.

All were commended to God in prayer at a largely attended meeting held in Beresford Chapel, Walworth, last week. Addresses were given by Mr. Swan, and by Mr. F. S. Arnot, who is now recuperating in this country. We are glad to know that his strength is being restored. After some practical comments on the great commission and the responsibility of the Christian Church for carrying it out, Mr. Swan related some interesting personal experiences to illustrate the preserving and sustaining providential care of God in the midst of a heathen people. He told of the slaying of the chief Msidi by an officer of the late Captain Stairs' exploring party; Msidi was the chief of the Garenganze country, with whom Messrs. Arnot and Swan had pleasant relations for years past. Other doubtful doings of white men towards the natives were mentioned, and prayer was made that the hands of ungodly men might be restrained. Mr. Swan said that since he left the field no direct word had come from the three brethren now at work in the Garenganze country, Messrs. Lane, Thompson, and Crawford, but it is hoped that letters are on the way. As to the time of departure, Mr. Swan said it had been fixed for October 8, but the arrangements for the vessel in which they were to sail had been altered, and as it is desirable they should reach Africa as soon as possible, they might be able to sail from Southampton on an earlier date.

Some further interesting particulars were given by Mr. F. S. Arnot as to the work and workers, and much earnest prayer was offered on behalf of the outgoing friends, as well as for those now in the high places of the field.

Gospel Tent Work.

We have closed our nineteenth summer's tent campaign. Our first tent was erected this year on June 5 in a very populous and needy suburb of Bristol. A few young men, filled with enthusiasm for souls, being grieved that many of the inhabitants never entered church or chapel, believed that such might be induced to attend special services conducted for them. In this they were not disappointed. Many of the ringleaders were subdued by the power of the Gospel, and became helpers during the remainder of the mission. A small tent was fixed adjoining the larger one for dealing with inquirers, and over 350 names and addresses were taken down of those who were personally prayed with and pointed to the Saviour.

Our second tent was pitched at Burnham, in which 110 services were conducted, besides those on the sands whenever weather permitted. After nine weeks of ploughing, sowing, and a little reaping (chiefly amongst the visitors) we closed with a social tea in the tent, of which 130 partook, being addressed afterward by Mr. James Wright, Mr. Douglas Russell, and myself.

No. 3. Tent was erected at Bishopston (a rapidly-growing suburb of our city), whilst the Gospel Hall was being enlarged. Here likewise the Gospel proved the power of God unto salvation, besides saints being edified and further instructed in the ways of the Lord. Jas. A. Vicary.

PERTH CONFERENCE.

Women's Meetings.

At the evangelistic meeting, on Monday evening, Mrs. Kelman, Leith, gave a solemn and earnest address on the words "Lost, Sought, Found." (Luke xv.)

Miss Fraser presided at the tea meeting on Tuesday afternoon and opened with a word of welcome. Miss Murray, Gartshore, stated that there are 327 branches of the Young Women's Christian Association in Scotland. The central premises in Edinburgh are now in good working order, and a hall is being built behind. About 100 dine daily at the restaurant. A restaurant with employment agency and evening classes has lately been opened in Greenside (Edinburgh) and is largely used. Miss Stewart has been working this summer as usual among the herring curers at Peterhead.

Miss Ferguson gave a short account of her branch of the Scotch Girls' Friendly Society in Aberdeenshire, emphasising the importance of the personal link between associate and member. At their monthly meeting her members work to support a child in a home. A special meeting during the Y.W.C.A. week of prayer was followed by a week of evangelistic services conducted by Rev. H. G. C. Macgregor, of Aberdeen. Several S.G.F.S. members confessed Christ at that time.

Mrs. Oatts, Glasgow, gave some particulars of Mr. Moody's work in Belfast. While disposed perhaps to envy results there she felt that God is blessing the work in a quiet way everywhere. In illustration she mentioned several cases of conversion in Glasgow which had come under her notice, and asked prayer for that city and the 12,000 young women in the East End.

Mrs. Miller gave a sketch of the British Women's Temperance Association which has existed in Scotland for fifteen years, and now has ninety branches, with a membership of about 9,000. Some years ago this Association visited all the public-houses in Edinburgh. One publican said that at first he felt very much taking the pennies that should have gone for children's shoes, but after a time he got hardened to it. He and his wife, however, practised temperance in their own home. The B.W.T.A. supports bills in favour of temperance legislation, early closing, separation of grocery and spirit licences, etc. It also takes an interest in travelling showmen, working always on Gospel lines.

Miss Fraser referred to the Brownsland Temperance Home, near Peebles, which she had recently visited. Miss Haslam spoke of temperance work in Manchester, where a day of humiliation and prayer, when all present were urged to bear a part of Christ's burden in this matter, was followed by the remarkable reclamation of a poor woman who had long been looked upon even by the city missionaries as a hopeless drunkard.

Mrs. Brown Douglas presided at the tea-meeting on Wednesday, and read Psalm lxvii. Miss Fraser asked those present to take an interest in The Tailors' Friend, a magazine for tailors, to be begun in November, and expressed the hope that reading would soon be begun in the tailors' workrooms in Perth.

Miss Douglas gave a short account of the conversion of Mr. Warszawaik, and mentioned some details of his work among his Jewish brethren in New York, which has been greatly blessed. For further particulars she referred to her little book "Hermann Warszawiak," published by A. Elliot, Edinburgh.

Miss Brown, from Calcutta, spoke of work among women and girls in India, the Bible instruction given in the schools helping to open the doors of Zenanas. Boys as well as girls attend the Mission Sunday-school, and ask for tracts to distribute.

Miss Haslam having referred to Mr. Wilkinson's work among Jews in London, gave a little sketch of Dr. Barnardo's work. She asked for interest in the "Young Helpers' League," which was begun last autumn with the view of getting children of the better classes to help Dr. Barnardo's 4,400 poor children, and in connection with which she is seeking to start "habitations."

Miss Martin spoke of Miss de Broen's work in Paris, especially in connection with the dispensary, where the knowledge of the Bible is being spread, and appealed for more workers.

THE ALBANIANS AND THEIR NEEDS.

By Rev. Dr. Thomson, Constantinople.

It is known to many that through the operations of the British and Foreign Bible Society, aided by those of the Religious Tract Society, not a little has been done to give the Gospel in their own language to a European race that has been kept for centuries in an almost inconceivable state of bondage. Most of them are members of the Greek Church, either of the Greek-speaking or the Slavic-speaking branch, yet they are denied the use of their own language, as a means of spiritual instruction or education, and told that it would be profanation to speak or read of sacred things in a miserable patois. So speak the Greeks of the Albanian language, interesting in every respect to philologists and historians. We understand their political object is to claim Albania as a part of Greece, but we cannot, on any grounds whatever, withhold the Gospel from perishing men, especially as nearly one-half of the nation had professed Mohammedanism in order to enter the Turkish army, the only outlet to their enterprise.

Since 1861, when a determined and persevering effort was made to disseminate by sale the Greek and Albanian New Testament, there has been a wonderful change in the attitude of that people. They have begun to appreciate the Word of God as never before; they have opened their eyes to see the beauty and intelligibility of their own much-maligned language; an honourable spirit of nationality has been called forth; and on the basis of a common nationality and a common language, there has been a wonderful approximation of the various fragments, into which the nation seemed formerly hopelessly divided. The Mohammedans especially purchase very readily the Christian Scriptures, and encourage their Christian brethren to do so too, who are often deterred by the threats of their clergy.

Since Rev. Gerasim D. Kyrias was appointed six years ago superintendent of colportage in Albania and Macedonia, he has held nearly regularly public worship in the Albanian language; and since his appointment two years ago to Koritza, a town on the transit route from the Adriatic to Macedonia, both the circulation of the Scriptures and the interest of the people in the way of life have greatly increased. One man has after careful examination been admitted a member of the Mission church, the attendance at the service varied from twenty-five to fifty, and in the Sabbath School much interest was shown, many of the mothers accompanying their children, attracted greatly by the singing of translations into Albanian of Mr. Sankey's hymns, so full of the hope and faith of the Gospel.

Just a year ago Mr. Kyrias' younger sister, Sevastia, who had then completed her education at the American Girls' College at Constantinople, began a girls' school in Koritza, in her brother's house, in which the medium of instruction was Albanian. In July last the school was publicly examined in presence of the Turkish Governor and his official attendants, and a large audience of the relatives of the pupils and the citizens of the town. The attainments of the children, both in Scripture knowledge and general education, were highly satisfactory, and called forth general approbation, and especially a cordial vote of thanks to the promoters of the school, that is to the Turkish Missions Aid Society, and indirectly to the Bible and Tract Societies.

The result has been very satisfactory. Double the former number of pupils are now desirous of attending the school; that institution itself has received Government sanction; a female helper will be required and is ready to come; and as it is impossible to give a satisfactory education through the Albanian language alone, it will be necessary to teach both English and Greek; this will require, it is presumed, at least one other teacher. It has been said that the school and the religious services too have been hitherto held in the house of Rev. Gerasim Kyrias. This, however, is not agreeable to the course of Turkish law, nor was it in fact possible to continue it long. Hence a new house has been purchased with the help of the American Board and other contributions, and repairs and additions are now being made to it to fit it for the object of affording both chapel and school houses.

The Albanians themselves have exhibited on this occasion much liberality: but the friends of the truth are still comparatively few, while their opponents are numerous and influential. Hence for the purpose of completing the purchase and repairs and additions to the house for chapel and school, the payment of additional teachers, the purchase of school furniture, both benches and seats and maps, pictures, books, and writing materials, it is calculated that a sum of about £150 sterling at least is required for the school-year now commencing. As is the case with all the Greek schools in Macedonia and Albania, education is free, the schools being supported by the community. Hence in this Albanian school, too, education is entirely free.

To show the zeal with which many regard this school, it may be mentioned that, as it is considered unbecoming for a girl of twelve or thirteen years of age to appear publicly as a pupil, not a few such pupils went early to school, stayed there all day, taking their meals with them, and returned home in the evening, that they might enjoy the privilege of attendance. Women's meetings, too, have been held by Miss Sevastia, the teachers migrating from house to house among the best families of the town, who most heartily welcome them to their house for study of the Word and prayer.

The Mission of the American Board in Bulgaria and Macedonia, by whom Rev. Gerasim Kyrias was instructed at Samakov, licensed as a preacher, and two years ago ordained as an evangelist to his countrymen, takes a warm interest in the progress of the truth among the Albanians—who number in Turkey, it is believed, about three millions and a half. Rev. Mr. Baird has, by their direction, made great progress in the study of the Albanian language, and has several times visited Koritza and reported favourably. Quite recently Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bond also visited Koritza, and received a most favourable impression of the work there. But the American Board is not in circumstances to render the financial aid required, and hence this invitation to "come over and help."

Anything sent to Rev. T. W. Brown, of the Turkish Missions Aid Society, 32, The Avenue, Bedford Park, Chiswick, London, or to Rev. Dr. Thomson, Bible House, Constantinople, will be most thankfully received.

AN IRISH KESWICK.

A convention for the deepening of spiritual life was held on Friday and Saturday last in Clifden, co. Galway. Dr. Stoney and Capt. Tottenham, of London, had charge of the arrangements, which were carried out in connection with the Irish Church Missions to the Roman Catholics. Long cars and wagonettes conveyed a large number of clergy and others from Galway, the fifty miles' ride being enlivened by singing and happy intercourse together, Rev. G. C. Grubb and his amiable travelling companion, Mr. Bidlake, being of the party.

The mountains round about Clifden would almost remind one of Keswick and its surroundings. Why not institute an Irish Keswick at this delightful Connemara town, where the intervals between the meetings could be pleasantly spent in mountain clambering, boating, riding, or walking amid wildly grand and awe-inspiring scenery? The meetings were largely attended, much credit being due to Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Stoney for the kind and careful way in which they undertook and carried out the arrangements for the comfortable accommodation of visitors from a distance, in which efforts they were ably assisted by Captain Tottenham.

Dr. Stoney presided at the Conference, and the lay as well as the clerical agents took part in the prayer meetings. Mr. Grubb spoke at considerable length at each meeting, God evidently accompanying his servant's words with the Holy Spirit's power. Several converts and children of converts attended, and the universal testimony was that it was one of the most profitable gatherings they had ever had in Connemara.

Mr. Grubb remained over the Sunday and preached twice in the Parish Church, now vacant through the recent decease of Canon Goodisson. As the missionaries, agents, and other visitors returned to their various spheres of labour, very many testified to definite blessing received, and there was but one opinion that the committee of the I.C.M. had done a right thing in thus, as "iron sharpeneth iron," seeking to stimulate and cheer the various workers in this field.

A HOME OF INDUSTRY REUNION.

Wednesday week was very wet, but a goodly number of friends gathered at the Home of Industry, all one in heart and desire. Some were from foreign and some from home fields; some were burdened for fresh service; others had been steadily at their posts—old warriors filled with rich experience, younger ones full of hungering and thirsting for more light to know the Master's will.

During the social hour, Miss Grissell, from Tunis, told of the Lord's faithfulness amid difficulties. She related incidents that filled many with heartfelt praise.

Miss Gleasier, sailing shortly for India with others, asked for prayer that all she had learnt might now become a living reality, and that all might prove the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway."

Mr. Chas. E. Faithfull entreated fervent prayer on behalf of twenty-one schools in Spain, threatened with lack of means.

Mr. Crombie, a Canadian Evangelist, poured forth the burden of his soul, to go and preach the Gospel in Ireland.

These varied voices called forth much prayer and praise from brethren and sisters. Many who are now in the far-off fields were upborne to the Throne of God with tears and divine tenderness.

Notwithstanding the heavy rain, Dr. Neatby was able to be present, and to give a refreshing draught of truth from the inspired Word. He expounded Rom. xii. 1: "Present your bodies, a living sacrifice." The measure of God's love to us is the gift of his Son; and in Him life, death, things present, things to come. The command to present our bodies, comes to us, not as those who are bond-slaves, but as being bound by chains of love. The whole body is to be yielded. How is it that many Christians are not fully happy? They have started without a full surrender.

Miss Macpherson gave a few touches upon her two months' tour among friends and relatives mostly in old Scotland. Her first visit to Keswick, she said, was a time of real soul-refreshing, creating a deep longing that some of these men of God might be invited to visit Canada. In that land there are hundreds of young men almost ready to go and lay out their lives for Africa. At Dallas, near Forres, a blessed season of communion was spent. She found it a retreat of the right kind, away among the hills, making one's whole being praise the Lord for the hidden saints in Auld Scotia, who cling to the atoning love and work of Christ.

At Strathpeffer Spa, Miss Macpherson met with hundreds of health-seekers; a little circle daily assembled themselves for prayer and praise. A delightful fortnight was spent in Aberdeenshire, finding a lady friend burdened with desire to build a small mission house for farm servants, and a larger hall for Gospel work, as a memorial of a beloved mother.

A visit was paid to the Bridge of Weir, where a few days were spent with Mr. and Mrs. Quarrier and their grand family of a thousand destitute orphans. The occasion was that of "Thanksgiving Day," and the opening of seven new houses, built of substantial grey stone and all paid for. Trades of every kind are taught, and the spiritual well-being of each child cared for. About a couple of thousand friends came from far and near to do honour to the children's friend. Mr. Campbell White, of Overtoun, as chairman, enjoined all to live a more rejoicing life. A quiet week was passed on the Clyde with fellow-workers fresh from the battle of the Prison-gate Mission. How lovely were the old hills and lochs of her childhood's days. Glasgow had a few days, and there she found great advances in steady plodding work for the Master. From there she passed to busy Liverpool, which was the last place visited. There she welcomed her sister, Mrs. Birt, just returned from Canadian shores.

Miss Macpherson is now at work gathering in another family for transplantation to Canada. She asks her fellow-Christians to have fellowship with her in another winter's campaign.

THE EARL OF KINNOULL, a short time before his death, in a long and serious conversation with Dr. Kemp, Edinburgh, thus expressed himself:—I have always considered the Atonement the characteristic of the Gospel. As a system of religion, strip it of that doctrine and you reduce it to a scheme of morality, excellent, indeed, and such as the world never saw; but to man, in the present state of his faculties, absolutely impracticable.

GOSPEL WORK IN CHICAGO.

The following interesting account is from The Interocean, one of the greatest secular dailies of Chicago:—While there is so much being said about corruption of officials and wrong-doing in Chicago, it is some consolation to know that there are agencies at work to counteract the evil at its source. Many people think of Mr. Moody's Bible Institution merely as a school for training missionaries, and forget that it is connected with the Chicago Evangelisation Society, whose aim is to reach the masses in the city. Each summer this Society employs three or four of the best evangelists in the country, and sends them out with large tents into neglected districts. They have assistance from the hundred and fifty young people at the Bible Institute, and a regular warfare is waged. This is the sixth summer these tents have been used, and some neighbourhoods where the tents have been year after year are almost transformed. This is especially true of streets branching off Milwaukee avenue. Ferdinand Schiverea, the Brooklyn evangelist, has been there for three summers.

Lately they had a big day at his tent on North avenue at the corner of Washtenaw. They began with a prayer meeting at half-past nine in the morning. Rev. T. B. Hyde, of Mr. Moody's Church, Rev. James Rowe, of the Methodist Church, and other ministers, came in to help. At half-past ten a preaching service began, and an hour later Mr. Schiverea sent the people home to get their dinners. His hearty, good-humoured way of telling them what he wants them to do catches their attention and keeps their goodwill.

In the afternoon there was more preaching in both German and English, but the best thing was a grand rally of children. The tent, which seats about thirteen hundred, was well filled, and fully half were children. Miss S. W. Poxon, who has a way peculiarly her own of getting into the children's hearts, talked to them about "Room for Jesus and No room for Jesus—Is your heart like the manger of the inn?" The little folks hung upon her words, and M. B. Williams, who has another tent on Lincoln and Eden streets, called on those who wanted a different life to rise. There was a general response all over the tent—men, women, and children rose to their feet—over a hundred of them.

A rousing meeting was held at night. The tent was full, and something like 500 were standing outside. As Mr. Schiverea went past one of the worst dens of vice in the neighbourhood a gang of young men called out, "There goes Schiverea; we're going with him to the tent"; and go they did. The business in these places has been poor since the tent has been there. Two carousals have been closed for want of business; the owner of one, cursing the tent, said it had spoiled his business. No one could do any business there excepting the tents.

All this work is being done for the benefit of the city, and deserves the hearty support of good citizens. It would pay a business man who wants to see the masses reached to visit the place.

The following is from The Independent, of New York:—

In view of the special need for aggressive Christian work among the vast crowds who will visit the Fair next year at Chicago, great preparations are making for the coming winter in Mr. Moody's Bible Institute. Two new stories on the main building are about completed, which will afford accommodation for one hundred additional men. Mr. Moody, who expects to spend a large portion of the year in Chicago, is trying to secure leading men from England and America to preach in various languages and give instruction in the institute in addition to the regular corps of preachers. It appears likely that more room will have to be provided for the women's department in order to accept all the promising applicants. The musical department of the institute will also receive special attention. It is proposed to gather and train a large male choir to sing at the services to be held during the World's Fair.

MR. SPURGEON'S ORPHANAGE at Stockwell received on Sept. 7 seventeen new boys. Within a week one of them—a lad from Essex—exhibited symptoms of scarlatina, and shortly afterwards another was similarly attacked. Mr. Charlesworth, after consultation with Dr. Soper, medical officer, directed that the patients should be isolated in the infirmary, which is itself a detached building, and, in order that the regular staff might not become contaminated with what has since proved to be scarlet fever, a professional nurse was engaged. It is mentioned that the general health of the 500 boys and girls is excellent. No epidemic has ever broken out in the institution during its twenty-five years existence.

THE AMERICAN MARATHI MISSION.

This mission is occupying an extensive field in India. Its principal districts are Bombay, Ahmednagar, Wadale, Rahuri, Kolgaw, Parner, Sirur, Satara, Sholapur, and Roha. One prominent event of the year that has gone was the very sudden death of Rev. Lemuel Bissell, D.D., who was the secretary of the mission, the sub-treasurer at Ahmednagar, and the principal of the Theological Seminary, besides having the permanent care of a large district. His death leaves a serious gap in the mission forces. For nearly forty years he had turned off a great deal of work, and his memory will long be precious in all the native churches.

The necessity for retrenchment has prevented expansion of work, and there has of necessity been very little aggressive effort. In connection with the girls' schools a very interesting incident occurred. One member of the new circle is a Hindu child, about thirteen years of age, whose school course was interrupted several years ago by her marriage. For a long time she was lost sight of, but one day returned to her accustomed place. It appeared that her mother-in-law had beaten her and driven her away, so she said, "I am never going back; I am going to study," and her whole face lighted up with the thought. For awhile she attended school only as a day-scholar, then her parents moved away, leaving her at the school, and promising to send monthly remittances for her support. Strange to say, they have needed no reminder of their promise, and their daughter is earnestly seeking to live the Christian life.

Trevandrum Mission.

Trevandrum is the capital of the native state of Travancore, in South India, and the district was for thirty-two years superintended for work in connection with the London Missionary Society by Rev. S. Mateer, whose failing health compelled him to return to England on furlough in February, 1891. Latest intelligence of the mission is from the pen of Rev. I. H. Hacker, who shows that the Trevandrum district is a most important sphere of service.

The city itself, being the seat of Government, and having within its limits the residences of His Highness the Maharajah, the British Resident, and the homes of the principal officials of the State, both native and European, besides having a population of 60,000 people of various castes, would afford ample scope for all the consecrated energies of one man, with as many native helpers as could be afforded, while the district stretching out thence to twenty-five miles beyond, where fifty-one churches are scattered at intervals of five to ten miles apart, with 9,595 people, is more than one man can possibly manage. Mr. Mateer's work has been blessed abundantly, as is fully recognised in the loving address which the people presented to him on his departure, but both at Trevandrum and Quilon the fields are white ready for the harvest, and waiting for some of God's reapers to go and gather the grain.

Mr. Hacker expresses the hope that very soon his board may be enabled to send more workers to the most needy parts of Travancore. Mr. Mateer's address is 2, St. Helen's-road, Hastings, from whence he issues some very interesting illustrated books, treating of his field of labour and its people.

The Faith Mission.

Morebattle and district in Roxburghshire has received a visit from the Scottish Faith Mission, with the result that after two months' steady work a goodly number of people have openly professed conversion, while Christians have been quickened and stimulated. The meetings, which were begun in Morebattle in the end of July, were remarkably well attended. Though most of the people had come at first out of curiosity to hear two young women preach the Gospel, many were deeply impressed, and not a few decided for Christ, some of these being visitors from Edinburgh.

It was at Apford, however, a farm place three miles off, that the most effective work was done. Here the meetings were held in the barn, which was filled night after night for more than a month. Many appeared profoundly impressed, and remained to the after meetings for conversation, Quite a number decided for God, there being several households in which nearly all the members have taken their stand for Him.

A prayer union has been formed, to conserve and direct the new energy and life that have been awakened. Doubtless the Christian work of the district will largely benefit from this accession of spiritual life and force, as it will also provide for it a most desirable outlet. Colin M. Gibb.

A MISSION TO ZULUS.

Mr. John Meek, of Othello Farm, Rorke's Drift, Natal, seems to be an instrument raised up to do important work for God among the Zulus. He lives in a wild stony district, where the hard work of farms is done by Zulus, whose kraals lie in every direction. He himself long ago married a Zulu princess, and is much thought of by her fellow countrymen. He is more familiar than almost any other European with the life and thought as well as the language of the Zulus, after living forty years in the country.

He was converted to God in 1889, and on the very same day invited twelve Zulus living near him to become Christians. For eighteen months he saw no fruit, but seven of the twelve were baptized in June, 1891, the eight, a sorceress, in July; and by the end of the year there was a church of thirty-five adults, with ten children under age.

Dr. Dalzell, of the Gordon Memorial Mission, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Osborn-Howe, of the Zululand Mission, have formed the highest opinion of the worker and the work. Mr. Meek was devoting too much time to evangelization to leave either time or strength for farming. The church needed caring for, and some place of meeting better than stifling Zulu huts had to be provided. At last with the hearty goodwill of the Zulu brethren, Mr. Meek is throwing in his lot with the well organised Gordon Memorial Mission, whose centre, Umsinga, is fifteen miles distant. This is the only society caring for an area of 400 square miles and 30,000 Zulus. Its eleven stations are scattered at distances varying from seven to twenty-four miles from the centre. But the mission has no funds to provide the needed premises at this new station, which will be called Isibindi. It is estimated that £150 to £200 will erect a school church to hold 300; teacher's house will cost £20; another school at a distance £60; each of the teachers can be secured for £24 a year, and Mr. Meek will become an agent of the society. This is a much cheaper method of securing the permanence of the work than if it had remained unattached. The educational work was becoming absolutely necessary, as Mr. Meek himself recognises the friends in this country who rejoice in his conversion, and the evident door opened to him, will gladly receive gifts for this effort; these may be sent to Miss Cutbush, 56, Norroy-road, Putney, Surrey.

SEAMEN'S INSTITUTE, BARCELONA.

On arriving here, about eighteen months ago, we were distressed to find that nothing was done for the thousands of English-speaking seamen who pass through this port each year. It has been the habit of the chaplains to visit the ships once a week, and invite the men to church, but as the church room is a long way from the harbour, and as sailors are by no means clever at finding their way in foreign cities, it was a rare thing to get any men to attend. My husband found that the work could never be of permanent good unless we could get rooms near the water, where the men could meet all through the week, have services suited to their needs, and, in fact, feel that the place was their very own! We therefore at once set about getting such a place, and after a year of laborious effort opened it last January.

We have rented a flat overlooking the harbour, where we hold services, have books, papers, and piano, and various recreations. One generous lady made us a splendid gift of furniture, another the gas-fittings, and many other friends have helped in different ways. We still lack much. Of course there are expenses, for the house must be kept up. A few newspapers regularly sent by friends will be a great boon. British, American, or foreign will be alike welcome, especially illustrated numbers.

As an aid towards procuring the necessary income, we have formed a society of ladies, which we have called "The Stand-by League," our object being to work for a sale to be held at Christmas next. We require now a boat in which to bring the men to our rooms, as many ships do not allow their own boats to be down in foreign ports.

The Bishop of Gibraltar is much interested in the work, and gave us £50 towards the initial expenses, besides promising us an annual grant. Our success so far is the best proof that such an institute was needed. In the first six months, just ended, we have had an attendance of 1,546 men, who have themselves subscribed about £30 to help us.

Yours faithfully,

Seamen's Institute, Isabel Geikie Treadwell.

OF REDEMPTIVE WORK among grown-up people there may well be some doubt and scepticism, but of preventive work among young lads there can be nothing but hope.

AMONG CONTINENTAL JEWS.

Through the goodness of the Lord I have been enabled to undertake a second mission tour in Germany and Austria, which lasted about six weeks and was full of interest, and, I trust, of abiding blessing.

On board the steamer I made the acquaintance of an old Jew, who was on his way to Jerusalem to wait for the coming of the Messiah. I told him the Messiah could be found without going to Jerusalem, and I showed him, from the Scriptures, that He had come, and had atoned for the sins of the world; moreover, that by believing in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, he would have eternal life, know joy and peace of heart, and the forgiveness of his sins. At Ostend, where we separated, he thanked me for the words I had spoken, and also for the New Testament I had given him. When I shook hands with him, he remarked, "How is it the English people believe in Christ as the only Saviour, and the Messiah of Israel; yet they have never told me of it? I have been in England forty-five years, and never heard of this before."

Arrived at Brussels, I visited a good many Jewish families, in company with a Jewish friend who had known me in London. I was received by many families, who listened gladly to the message of life. At Cologne I called upon a great many Jews, some of them old acquaintances. Those who are now followers of the Lord Jesus Christ told me of the joy and peace they had found in the Son of God. Many new doors were opened to me. On the Sabbath I visited the synagogue; the service lasted nearly two hours, but contained no life, no reverence. Service over, I posted myself outside to give away tracts and to say a few words as the Lord would direct. At first a few gathered round me and asked questions. Presently a crowd collected, and the cry was raised, "Away with the apostate!" However, none laid hands on me, and I continued to give them the message of the grace of God.

Barmen and Elberfeld were also visited. In the former I met some Christian friends, and in the latter some Jewish families, to whom I gave tracts and Scriptures. At Münster and at Osnabrück I visited a great many families, all of whom, except two, received me and gladly accepted tracts. At Bremen, on the Sabbath, I went to the synagogue. Many Jews came round me after the service, and for nearly an hour (in the synagogue) I pleaded with them to accept as their Saviour and Friend Jesus of Nazareth, whom their fathers had crucified, but who was none other than the Son of God and Messiah of Israel. One gentleman who had been listening most attentively whilst I was preaching asked me to his house for further conversation. We searched the Scriptures together, and in the evening when I left he said to me, with tears in his eyes, "I thank God with all my heart for having brought you here to-day For a long time I have been dissatisfied and in a state of unrest with our Jewish ceremonies. I now know the reason. I have not looked to the Lord, who alone is able to give rest and peace of soul." We prayed together, and I commended him to the Lord. I gave him a New Testament, and when leaving Bremen he came and thanked me most heartily for having been the means in God's hand to bring him into the light and liberty of the Gospel of the grace of God.

At Neuenkirchen I had the privilege of preaching to large congregations on behalf of Israel, and to warn the people of God against the anti-Semitic feelings and movements at present at work in Germany. Some came after the service to thank me for the word of warning. Arriving in Hamburg, I met with many refugees, to whom I gave Scriptures and tracts. In Berlin I visited many cafés and restaurants frequented by Jews. I had many conversations and discussions. It gave me much joy to find a former inmate of our house a happy and rejoicing believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. He had heard the message of life at 7, Finsbury-square, for the first time. At Leipzig, with an old friend, a pastor in Thuringia, I visited many families. This friend has now undertaken to give his spare time in visiting among the Jews in his district, and act as voluntary worker in connection with the Barbican Mission.

After visiting Dresden and Prague, I spent some time at Vienna, where I met with three Jews, who did come to my mission hall in London. Two are now sincere believers in Jesus Christ, and rejoiced my heart by their testimonies. I also visited Salzburg, where, however, I did not meet with so kindly a reception. After Munich I visited Darmstadt, Worms, and Mayence. In the three latter towns there are large Jewish populations, but no Jewish missionary. Calling at Frankfort, I turned homeward viâ Cologne. From what I have seen, I am constrained more than ever to ask all who take a deep interest in God's ancient people for more loving work and earnest effort on their behalf in the German-speaking countries of the Continent.—Yours faithfully,

Christlieb T. Lipschytz.

LONDON FLOWER GIRLS.

The Flower Girls' Mission has now completed twenty-six years of labour among the extremely poor but interesting class of street-traders who rank as flower and watercress sellers. As is inevitable under the circumstances, the work increases on their hands, for the traffic in flowers has grown to such an extent that the constituency which the Mission seeks to benefit is continually enlarging. What would-be friends have to be careful of is not to judge flower-girls as a class by the conduct of rough and dirty interlopers who in summer may take to flower-selling as a temporary venture. Among the more genuine sisterhood, or those kept to the work all the year round, we found many industrious young creatures, who are leading pure and noble lives, but who might possibly want a friend to help or encourage them were it not for Mr. Groom's Mission. Such will often leave the streets if a more suitable opening is found, and it is because the best subjects thus enter into more congenial openings that the streets apparently present no improved appearance, although much good is being done. The flower-girl's lot is an exceedingly hard one, temptations to evil abound on every side, so that some allowances may properly be made. The object is not to encourage young girls to take to street-trading, but rather to draw them from it, and to train them for domestic service. Then, the fact that there are eighty-six children in the homes at Clacton shows that the operations in this department are never allowed to flag. These little ones are worse than orphans; every one has been rescued from surroundings too terrible to be described. In bitter winter weather a man and woman will be discovered living in comfort and idleness, their source of income being the earnings of miserable little girls, who, in wind, snow, or frost, are abroad on the streets selling flowers or begging, as opportunity offers. One man actually kept his children locked up in a kind of stone cellar, except when he drove them out on to the streets to procure the supplies for his own base self-indulgence. It needs a separate agency to keep an eye on such people as these, and in due time hundreds of waif girls will be rescued for spheres of Christian usefulness who would otherwise have gone on their way to be lost sight of in the vortex of vice and crime.

This Flower Girls' Mission has gradually extended its good influence throughout London; there are now twelve branches, each being a centre of Christian influence, while at every one the flower-girl enjoys such facilities as she herself knows best how to value. They have their weekly meetings, religious services, clubs, sewing-classes, penny bank, etc., while cases of sickness or distress, by becoming known, are at once attended to.

The establishment of what is known as the Flower Girls' Guild promises to be attended with the best results. The first guild was instituted by Mrs. Franklin Taylor, and on May Day, 1890, the Princess of Wales inaugurated the work by sending forth to their work the first members; they were dressed in a neat uniform, and this is to be continued. The advantages ensured by membership are both great and far-reaching, and extend even to those who purchase flowers. None save those of good character can be enrolled; and as the flowers left unsold at the end of the day are kept in a place provided for them at the station of the district, no danger of contamination through an impure atmosphere is incurred. In addition to the Princess of Wales, the Duchess of Fife and the Duchess of Teck show an interest in this work. It will become a means of stimulating the interest of the upper classes in the Flower Girls' Mission.

The Industrial Brigade of artificial flower makers earned £1,100 for general expenses during the year; and numbers of young women are continually being drafted off from this company into the ranks of domestic servants. London is confessedly a sad place for domestic servants; but none are friendless who come within the reach of such influences as these.

An additional building will be opened at the Little Girls' Village at Clacton this autumn. There are 1,500 children in the Sunday Schools at Clerkenwell, and about 1,000 persons still continue to attend at the Sunday evening service at Foresters' Hall. The class among whom the work is carried on is an extremely poor one, so that, to take advantage of the opportunities which occur, funds are always being needed. Mr. Groom's address is 3, Sekforde-street, Clerkenwell.

"THE CONVERTED PUB."

Such is the name given to a building in one of the poorest parts of Manchester. It was formerly used as a public-house, but some three years ago the rector of the parish (Rev. F. J. Horsfield) was able to secure it on favourable terms, and it has since been used as a mission hall and ragged school. Bright, happy, evangelistic services, with Bible classes, mothers' meetings, and temperance meetings, have been regularly held there on weekdays and Sundays, as well as classes on week-nights for the children attending the ragged school.

The work has been greatly blessed—people who knew the place but too intimately in former days have been converted within its walls, and now sing songs of praise where formerly songs of ribaldry were heard, and God's name spoken only in blasphemy.

All in connection with the place have given their services gratuitously, with the exception of a Captain of the Church Army, and it would be easy to multiply interesting accounts of the way in which God has owned and blessed their labours to both old and young.

But now the days of the old "Converted Pub." seem to be drawing to a close. For twelve months past the whole building has been quite inadequate to accommodate the numbers who wished to attend (especially on Sundays), although bedrooms and kitchen have been pressed into the service, and in addition to this the place has become so terribly dilapidated and damp that it is absolutely necessary a new hall should be provided at once.

A plot of land has been secured at a moderate rental, but £600 is required to build the plainest possible hall which will be large enough for the purpose.

The district was recently dubbed by a representative of one of the Manchester papers "a perfect Whitechapel," and whilst those in attendance at the place have, with the help of generous friends, been able to pay rent, coal, gas, etc., it is utterly impossible for them to raise so large a sum as is now required locally. The parish in which it is situated contains nearly 11,000 people, all poor, and last year by a splendid effort they raised nearly £1,000 for the repair of church and schools. Reports of the work, with the fullest information, may be obtained on application to Rev. F. J. Horsfield, the Rectory, Queen's-road, Manchester.

Magic Lantern Mission Work.

Five years ago a letter in your columns telling of our need of a magic lantern to give additional interest to our work among the Jews in Italy, brought means to buy an excellent lantern and a collection of twenty-four choice pictures, illustrating the life of Christ, and a selection of impressive subjects from the Old Testament.

The kind friends who then helped will be glad to hear that these lantern lectures have been a most effective means of gathering both old and young to hear the Gospel. Not only in Rome, but in one hundred and twenty-nine towns and villages of Italy has the "old, old story" been set forth through the means. Our mission assistant, himself "an Israelite indeed," takes it with him in his annual summer tour, to visit the Jews throughout Italy.

It has been a means of making the Gospel story more vivid to Jews, and also to Gentiles. Here at Abetone the peasants come to see it in our big kitchen, fifty at a time, and listen in awestruck silence.

It makes the facts all the more real to them, especially as few can read. They have little teaching about Christ, who is represented to them chiefly as the Holy Child in his mother's arms, the dying Saviour on the cross, or as the angry Judge. The beautiful teaching of his life and example is, therefore, unknown to the masses in Italy.

We need fresh slides, especially in the winter work at Rome, and will be very grateful for help to enable us to get some. These may be sent to my Rome address, 5, Via Gregoriana. I wish some artist would give us pictures of some of our modern Christian martyrs, such as the boys of Uganda (to accompany the hymn they sung in the flames), and the Jewish martyr of Abyssinia, etc. I find that to give living examples of the power of faith in our own days is most effective. (Mrs.) Katharine Burtchaell.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—On behalf of revisit services of Rev. W. Haslam to St. Paul's, Southsea, October 8 to 17.—For blessing upon special services (September 25 to October 13) at Ashburton, Devon, to be held (D.V.) by Mr. Opie Rodway, of Stroud.—On behalf of a series of Evangelistic Services for Young Men, in Exeter Hall, September 23 to October 3, conducted by Dr. Harry Guinness.—For blessing on a mission at Newburgh-on-Tay, by Mr. J. A. Smith.—For blessing on a mission by Mrs. Baeyertz in Dundee, October 2 to 14.

DAY OF ATONEMENT.

Dear Sir,—I do not know whether you may be reminding your readers in your next issue that Saturday, 1st October, is the Jewish Day of Atonement. It is well worth while to visit the synagogues that day. It is the one day which every Jew observes—fasting from sunrise to sunset—however he may disregard sabbaths and other festivals or feasts. It is a solemn testimony to consciousness of sin, and need of expiation, that is felt in the heart of man.

In some parts of the country large meetings of Christians are held for united prayer for the Jews on that day. More than ever our sympathy should take that form now, when there are such evident tokens of awakening among God's ancient people.

Yours truly,
D. McL.

POPERY IN CENTRAL AFRICA.

Dear Sir,—Being a regular reader of your ever welcome paper, I thought it might interest some of your numerous readers to know that it is quite time Protestants became aware of the rapid advance all through Central Africa of the Roman Catholics. Cardinal Lavigerie agitated in Europe, and posed as an anti-slave champion. Allow me to say that his real and principal object was to advance his Church all over this continent. Since leaving Europe this is actually what he has done. Large numbers of priests have been sent here, also to Lake Nyanza, and they are not content to labour in separate districts, but boldly encroach on Protestant grounds. Their ultimate object is to get full control of Central Africa. I warned the Churches years ago of this danger, but it passed unheeded; probably you could assist them to realise the position by inserting this letter.

Rome is the same to-day as ever, and she does not tolerate any other religion but her own, except perforce.

Personally, I see more danger to our work from them than from the Arabs. How is it that people are so blind as to patronise such a man as Cardinal Lavigerie? When will Protestants cease to be deceived in this way? Yours sincerely,

A. J. Swann.

"DEVOUT (?) CRITICISM."

Sir,—In your last issue you comment with deserved severity on the claims of some recent critics to be considered devout students of the Word, while all the time they are seeking to deprive that Word of one of its chief claims to respect and belief, its veracity and inerrancy in regard to statements of fact.

In regard to Canon Cheyne's reiteration of the supposed inconsistency between David's introduction to Saul as a minstrel and thereafter as the conqueror of Goliath, the real solution is to be found in 1 Sam. xvii. 25. David, on reaching the camp, is told that "The man who killeth him (Goliath) the King will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house free in Israel." Such a promised recognition is seen from verses 26, 29, 31, to have fired the enthusiasm of the shepherd lad, just as the prospect of winning the Victoria Cross would nerve every brave and loyal soldier. In v. 31 we read that the king was informed of the youth's question as to the reward held out.

Accordingly, "when he returned from the slaughter of the Philistine. . . . . Saul said unto him, 'Whose son art thou, young man?'" (56, 58). The motive of the king in putting this question was to ascertain the name and residence of his father, in order that he might fulfil that portion of the compact by "making his father's house free in Israel." He knew quite well who David was, his favourite harper; but it is unreasonable to think that the king or his commander-in-chief could remember the name of his father, even though it had been mentioned before. All public men know how difficult it is to retain the names of all whom they have ever met in the course of business; but to make oneself acquainted with the name, status, and residence of each and all of the fathers of those who have written books on Biblical Criticism would be an excessive demand on the capacity of the human mind. It was not, then, of David that Saul was ignorant, but of David's father; and he asked his father's name to fulfil the compact referred to in v. 25.

Thus, so far from there being inconsistencies in the narrative, the narrator is most careful to supply links of connection in order to weave all into a web of accurate and well-ordered history. In xvi. 19—23, David is sent for to Court; in xvii. 1, a Philistine invasion takes place; in v. 13 we are told that the three eldest brothers of David had to join the colours; accordingly we learn in v. 15 that David could no longer be spared from home, and as Saul was aroused from his fits of sullen depression by the war-fever, David went home to take his brother's place in tending the flocks; then in v. 17, he is sent to the army in the field with some supplies for his brothers; and then the rest follows in regular sequence and absolute consistency.

As having read and taught the classic writings of Greece and Rome, I strenuously maintain that there is no narrative in these to be for a moment compared with the Scriptural narratives for accuracy and consistency. This position of inerrancy has been secured by their plenary inspiration, which, while it allowed free play to personal characteristics, guarded the writers from mistakes.

I am, yours faithfully,
W. Millar Nicolson, D.Sc.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. William Forbes closed an eight days' mission at Callender on Sunday last.

Rev. W. Haslam's engagements for October are: Oct. 1, St. Cuthbert's, Bedford; Oct. 8, St. Paul's, Southsea; Oct. 20, Swansea.

Devon.—A three weeks' Lent mission has been held at Buckfastleigh by Mr. John Elliott, in connection with the Y.M.C.A. There has been manifest blessing.

Mr. C. B. Minor commenced a fifteen days' mission in Barnsley on September 25. On October 10 he began a mission at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end-road, London, E.

Mr. A. Bunn, a Joyful News evangelist, has conducted a series of special evangelistic services at Rowbar Wesleyan Church. He has been assisted by Rev. W. C. J. Neville, and the spiritual results have been very encouraging.

Mr. James Jones has concluded a month's services at Cumberland Hall, Hotwell's, Bristol, with signs following. Many of the meetings were held in the open air, the Christian workers turning out in good numbers to his assistance.

Mr. Henry Smith has concluded his fourth summer's tent-work in Suffolk. He has visited Gazeley, Mildenhall, Icklingham, Flempton, Thurston, Rougham, and Cheltenham. Many have professed to accept Christ, and believers have been quickened. Mr. Smith commences a three weeks' mission at Broomhill, Suffolk, October 2.

A Tent Mission has been held at College Park, Willesden, during the past six weeks, conducted by Mr. Bell Chambers and Mr. G. Hefford, of the London Evangelisation Society, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church of England. The attendance throughout has been well sustained, and it is believed that many have been brought to a saving knowledge of Christ.

Ireland.—During the past week Mr. J. Brandon has been conducting a very successful Gospel mission in the Methodist Church, Armagh. Rev. Harry Jones, of Ashbourne, England, has been holding a similar mission in the Magdalene Church, Belfast. Rev. Thos. Waugh has closed a fifteen days' Gospel mission in Cork. The services were largely attended, and many decided for Christ.

Nunhead.—At Edith-road Baptist Chapel a ten days' mission has just been held, conducted by the Revs. F. C. Spurr and F. B. Meyer. The attendance increased daily, until the building was filled with attentive audiences. Christians of all denominations took part in the daily prayer meetings, which were conducted by Rev. T. J. Cole. It is felt that much good has been done by the mission, not only in awakening the careless and indifferent to seek salvation, but also in leading believers to greater consecration of heart and life to the Lord Jesus.

Mr. B. Fay Mills closed his work in San Francisco on August 31. The 25th was observed as the midweek Sabbath. Several thousand business houses were closed during more or less of the day. Services were held in forty churches at 9 a.m., and at ten Mr. Mills preached to an audience of 5,000; at two, 6,000 were present, and in the evening there were 8,700. Over 5,000 cards have been signed so far, 300 of these being Chinese. The various churches will continue the special work. Mr. Mills is now at Salt Lake City, and from thence goes to San Jose.

Mr. John Currie, evangelist, has been holding meetings in the St. George's Cross tent, North Woodside-road, Glasgow. He writes:—"Having returned, after an absence in America of twenty-three years, to the city of my birth, it is my object to do all I can for my old companions and shopmates and sporting friends that I used to run with in the days of a sinful life. I was converted over seventeen years ago in the Y.M.C.A., Montreal, Canada; and, since that time I have travelled over much of the United States and Canada, telling the story how Jesus saves lost sinners. Anyone needing my help in any way that will glorify my Master can have it—as He gives me aid—by addressing me at the Gutta-percha Workers' Gospel Union Hall, 85, London-road, Glasgow."

Personalia.

The Gawin Kirkham fund, for the benefit of his widow, has reached about £700. It is still open, and contributions may be sent to Colonel Morton, the Conference Hall, Mildmay Park, N.

Rev. J. Guinness Rogers, of Clapham, has sufficiently recovered from his recent severe illness to enable him to preach in Westminster-road Congregational Chapel, Liverpool, of which his son is the pastor.

Rev. W. Ross, of Cowcadden's Free Church, Glasgow, whose work for the past ten years in Glasgow is regarded by many as the most successful in that city, lectured at the Chicago Bible Institute from September 14 to 20.

Canon Fleming's sermon on the death of the late Duke of Clarence has realised a profit of £1,300, which has been divided between the Gordon Boys' Home and the British Home for Incurables. Over 50,000 copies of the sermon have been sold.

Capt. W. H. Dawson, who has been for some time in reduced health, is now a good deal better, and proposes to take some share in Gospel work in Bournemouth during the early part of the winter. He hopes to be there for the Sundays in November and perhaps December.

Mr. William Kilner, the well-known Wesleyan Methodist, is progressing towards recovery from a serious illness. The Methodist Recorder says:—"The Finsbury Park Circuit, and indeed London Methodism, could ill afford to lose such an earnest, kindly, generous worker as Mr. Kilner."

Mr. George Müller, the founder of Ashley Down Orphan Houses, Bristol, completed his eighty-seventh year on Tuesday. The many Christians in all parts of the world who praise God for having spared his servants so long will pray that he may still do much good work in the great harvest field.

Pastor Frank White, after a lengthened absence through weak health, hopes to resume his place at Talbot Tabernacle on Sabbath morning next. His ministry for some time, in any case, must be very partial, and strictly limited to his own flock. Mr. Finlay Gibson remains with him as his valued fellow-helper.

Mr. James M. Merry, of Miss Macpherson's Boys' Home at Stratford, Ontario, was married on September 6, to Amelia Gardner Mowat, of that town—a devoted Christian worker and enthusiastic Christian Endeavourer, who will doubtless prove a useful helper at the Home of Industry. The young couple are expected in London at the end of this week, it being intended they should assist in the East-end work.

Rev. W. S. Swanson, who is now attending the Pan-Presbyterian Council in Toronto, has had conferred upon him the degree of D.D. by Rutger College, New Brunswick, which is in connection with the Reformed Church of America. The college was founded in 1770. It is hardly necessary to mention that he was for years an English Presbyterian missionary in China. For some time past he has resided in London, acting as Foreign Mission Secretary.

Rev. Henry Hagell, who for the past sixteen months has acted in the capacity of Church Secretary at the Edinburgh Castle People's Mission Church, Rhodeswell-road, Limehouse, E., in connection with Dr. Barnardo's Homes, has left in order to assume the superintendence, with Mrs. Hagell, of the Dr. Barnardo's Home for Little Boys, Teignmore, Gorey, Jersey. Will friends please note Mr. Hagell's change of address?

Dr. Lefroy's influence at Norwich is steadily increasing. The Cathedral nave mission services have been renewed, and the Dean has commenced a course of sermons on the text, "The Lord is my light and my salvation" (Psalm xxvii. 1). In the Lent of 1893 it is hoped to hold a mission in the Cathedral, with Rev. E. A. Stuart as missioner. The Dean has announced a monthly breakfast at the Deanery, which he invites the parish clergy. After breakfast they will adjourn to the library for the consideration of pastoral subjects, especially preaching. Arrangements have likewise been made for a course of lectures on "The Life and Times of the Leading Fathers and Bishops of the Earlier Centuries."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS AND SUPERINTENDENTS are invited to send a postcard to Messrs. Morgan and Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., for a specimen packet gratis of the monthly periodical, "The Herald of Mercy." It contains anecdotes, pictures, and other interesting and profitable reading, helpful to teachers and scholars.

The Book World.

ALONE AND NOT ALONE, founded on facts, by Mrs. Zillah Dugdale, is an attempt to show the importance of timely warning and counsel being given to such as are suffering from adversity consequent upon a sinful course of life.—National Temperance Publication Depôt.

CHRIST'S FULL SALVATION, a series of addresses by Rev. G. C. Grubb, M.A., has been issued in a third edition by Marlborough and Co. (1s.). It is hardly needful to say that teaching of a singularly high order is presented with force and fervour.

Messrs. Partridge have added to their series of shilling picture-books, SUNBEAM'S PICTURES AND STORIES, and LITTLE ROSEBUD'S PICTURE BOOK. The coloured and other illustrations, with bold letterpress, will make these specially welcome to little folks.

BO-PEEP (published by Messrs. Cassell & Co., 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d.) is truly "a treasury for the little ones." What with the spacious gallery of pretty pictures, and the small stories, sketches, and poems in big print, it will be a never-ending source of study and wonderment.

HALF ROUND THE WORLD WITH GENERAL BOOTH (1s. 6d., 101, Queen Victoria-street) is a detailed and illustrated narrative, by the General's factotum, Mr. Nicol, of the recent tour he took to Africa, India, and the Antipodes. The style of narration is graphic, and the book has an historic value to Army friends.

BUSH LUCK, an Australian story, by W. H. Timperley, is reading such as most boys will delight in. A young emigrant from England became a good colonist in Western Australia. Expeditions inland involved encounters with kangaroos and aborigines, which are vividly depicted. From first to last the pages are full of life and interest. (3s. 6d. Religious Tract Society.)

Under the title of THE STORY OF KESWICK, the principal addresses given at the recent convention are collected into a neat quarto volume, with frontispiece showing Derwentwater and the Friar's Crag, and well-executed portraits of the leading speakers. Many will be glad to possess it as a memento of a wonderful season, or to send it to isolated and far-off friends. (1s. Marshall Brothers.)

OLD MISS AUDREY, a Chronicle of a Quiet Village, by Evelyn Everett-Green, is a capital story. When the noble old lady first took up residence in Clare the gossips spoke against her, and the curate prejudged her as "dangerous." As a fact, Miss Audrey was a Christian of exceptional intelligence and piety; her works demonstrated her faith, and those who once detracted lived to admire and extol. The village clique is subjected to well-merited rebuke, while the leading character is so excellently drawn that we can but regret that every parish has not its "Old Miss Audrey." (5s. Religious Tract Society.)

THE PRINCE OF PREACHERS: A Sketch, a Portraiture, and a Tribute. By James Douglas, M.A. We have placed before our readers a few extracts from the earlier part of this appreciation of the late Mr. Spurgeon. Some idea of the freshness of the volume may be formed from the fact that Mr. Douglas writes from information obtained at first hand. For years he had exceptional opportunities of converse with the great preacher, saw him under varying conditions, and heard him descant on matters of personal reminiscence, as well as upon points of theological interest and inquiry. The sketch is vivid, the portraiture sympathetic, and the tribute that of a warm friend. (2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d. Morgan and Scott.)

SHORT PAPERS ON GREAT QUESTIONS. By Catholicus (6d., Nisbet).—The questions considered in this pamphlet include, among others, Christian union, Apostolical succession, Pentecost, miracles, sanctification, and prophecy. It is safe to say that no single reader of intelligence will agree with all the writer says, but it is equally certain that having begun to read, he will read to the end. Never have we seen a more striking setting forth of the fact of disunion, and the evils attending it, nor of the folly of any attempts at reunion which do not proceed on lines laid down in the Word of God. In dealing with prophecy, the author accepts the historical method of interpretation, but applies it in a way of his own. His views of the second coming are not likely to commend themselves to many who will heartily agree with the earlier chapters of the book. There is a freshness and vigour about the style that makes the book easy to read.

OCTOBER MAGAZINES.

ALL THE WORLD, the monthly record of the Salvation Army, is largely taken up with the "Week of Self-denial," but there are other striking papers descriptive of Army work at home and abroad.

The current issue of THE QUIVER (6d., Cassell and Co.) closes the volume. It is strong in serial stories of a superior order, but there is a large admixture of homiletical and descriptive matter. The high tone of the magazine remains untarnished. A varied and attractive programme is announced for the forthcoming volume.

Those two old favourites in the family circle, THE SUNDAY AT HOME and THE LEISURE HOUR (6d. R.T.S.) also conclude their publishing year with the October issue. In the former Rev. D. Burford Hooke has an interesting paper on "Some Old Welsh Preachers." Mr. Richard Heath's sympathetic pen does justice to the memory of the recently-deceased veteran "Thomas Cooper," Chartist and Christian apologist. "Religious Life and Thought in Switzerland," is a fresh and fruitful theme. Dr. Hugh Macmillan gives a delightful sermonette for the young, "Apples of Gold in pictures of Silver." Perhaps the most widely interesting topic in THE LEISURE HOUR is the paper on German statesmen, in which ex-Court Chaplain Stoecker, the notorious Jew-baiter, is described as a man whose influence on German life is a national misfortune.

Young women who desire help in acquiring the facile and useful art of phonography should follow the series of practical papers on "The Girl's Own Shorthand Class," now appearing in The Girls' Own Magazine. "By Atlantic Bays in the West of Ireland" is another series of papers worthy of attention. Spinsters ought to find comfort in Mr. Holden Pike's recital of some happy members of that numerous body.

"A Century of Missionary Enterprise" is the timely topic of a statistical and stimulating paper by Dr. George Smith in The Sunday Magazine. The character of Count Leo Tolstoi, oddly designated "The Christian Anarchist," is briefly outlined by E. M. L. McDougall. "His religious convictions," we are told, "are yet in the making." Many readers of Good Words will turn with expectant interest to Rev. Mark Guy Pearse's characteristic "Homily for Hospital Sunday" on the Blind Beggar. "In the Laureate's Footsteps," a paper profusely illustrated, is full of personal and biographical attraction.

FAITHFUL WORDS ALMANAC for 1893 is very attractive and useful (Holnes). THE BRITISH PROTESTANT ALMANAC is suitable for localisation (Stoneman). These are both penny sheets.

THOUGHTS ON REVIVAL, by P. Barclay, M.A. 3d. Edinburgh: Religious Tract and Book Society of Scotland. The thoughts are to the point, and we trust they will have many readers.

Messrs. Jarrold and Sons have issued, in the form of a tasteful booklet, with the title NORFOLK STORIES, three readable sketches by Mark Knights (6d.). They are suggested by local legends and customs.

MUSICAL SKETCHES FOR LITTLE PLAYERS. (1s. C. Wickins and Co., 41, New Bond-street, W.) A very useful collection of melodies from the classics, arranged for young pianists. The work is fingered throughout, and the tunefulness of the melodies will prove an incentive to their study.

BURIED ALIVE, OR A MODERN STORY OF ROMISH TYRANNY. A terrible narrative, which appeared in the Spanish newspapers in 1885, is translated into this small pamphlet, the preface of which is from the pen of the late venerable Dr. J. A. Wylie. (1s. Dublin: R. Chapman, 10 and 11, Temple-lane, Dame Street.)

THE BRISTOL GOSPEL BOOKS are a good series. They narrate true occurrences, and the titles invite attentive perusal. There are three:—"Not Physic, but Christ," "Gone! but whither?" "The Clergyman's Conversion." A specimen packet of six sorts may be had for sixpence post free from H. A. Burleigh, Gordon House, Tyndall's Park-road, Bristol.

Messrs. Haddon and Co., of Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, publish in a shilling volume a collection of magazine articles, by Mr. W. T. Stead, on "Journalism," with a highly appreciative biographical notice of the author from the pen of Mr. E. H. Stout. Mr. Stead has a very exalted opinion of the power of the modern Press, and he has helped in no small degree to secure for it that power. However one may dissent from some of Mr. Stead's views and methods, he compels admiration and respect for his ability, thoroughness, and enterprise.

Bethnal Green Free Library.

THIS excellent institution is now in the seventeenth year of its existence, and the various agencies employed by the Committee for the benefit of the dense working population which surrounds it show signs of unabated vigour. The large reading room is filled night after night by readers who include Bible students, artisans, lads, young girls, and elderly men. The number of men during 1891-2 was 37,519. The lecture hall is an important factor in drawing the men and their wives away from their daily burdens to spend a bright hour or two listening to good music, or to lectures illustrated by dissolving views. The evening classes for the youth of both sexes will re-open shortly, and instruction in arithmetic, book-keeping, handwriting, French, Italian, shorthand, type-writing, and dressmaking, at reduced fees may be had. A valuable gift of books has just been received numbering more than eleven hundred volumes.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

MR. RICHARD COAD has held a very successful temperance meeting in Bolton. Great interest was taken in the meetings by working-men. No fewer than 2,701 temperance pledges were taken.

In some notes of a cycling tour in the Scottish Highlands, Rev. H. Miller, of Hammersmith, says of the island of Lewis:—"Except in the case of three hotels in Stornoway and two grocers' shops, which have a wine licence, there is not a place in the island where alcoholic liquor of any kind is to be had. Drunkenness is unknown; I did not see a single case."

A correspondent, writing with reference to the proposal to take the names of Band of Hope members at the Chicago Exhibition, says: "It would be more to the purpose to collect the names of abstainers of twenty-five and upwards who have been such ever since they joined a Band of Hope in youth. I see many, now 'moderate' drinkers, who were once Band of Hope members, and many abstainers who became so in mature life."

It appeared during the course of an application to the Corporation of London the other day for a reduction of rent, that a sum of £4,500 had been given for the transfer of one of the Corporation leases, the property being a public house in the neighbourhood of Billingsgate Market. It was stated that, owing to either the growth of temperance principles among the porters, or to the efforts of the Christian Mission, the public-house property in the district was no longer a very remunerative investment.

Obituary.

MRS. HARTLAND.

MANY will hear with regret of the death of Mrs. Hartland, a devoted friend of the Baptist Missionary on the Congo. Her son was the early companion of Thomas Comber, and accompanied that missionary pioneer on his second voyage to Africa. Congo missionaries, returning sick and worn, could always anticipate a warm welcome on the part of "Mother" Hartland, who was a member of the church at Camden-road, of which Rev. G. Hawker is pastor.

REV. W. O. PURTON.

The death is announced of Rev. Walter Onions Purton, rector of Poynings, in the 59th year of his age. He was a man of considerable literary ability, and the author of several works. From 1869 to 1876 he edited The Record; later on he established, and down to his death edited, The Churchman, a journal which has for twelve years filled the place of the old Christian Observer. The Record says: "His work, embodied with that of others, has done much to place Evangelical thought in a fair light, whilst helping to remove the prejudice and ignorance entertained in regard to it in other quarters." Mr. Purton had been for some time in failing health.

REV. GEORGE SAUNDERS.

This minister of the Congregational Church at Woodside, Aberdeen, died suddenly in the Manse on the morning of Sunday week. On Saturday afternoon he was in his usual health, but during the night was seized with a severe shock of apoplexy, from which he never rallied. Beginning life as a tradesman, Mr. Saunders had always a leaning towards evangelistic work; and in 1853 he went to Glasgow, where he found congenial employment as a city missionary, and at the same time attended theological classes under Dr. Wardlaw, with a view to his preparation for the ministry. In 1856 he was requested to supply the pulpit at Millseat, the minister, Rev. Joseph Morrison, then being in poor health. Before he left Millseat, however, so ably and acceptably had the young preacher discharged his duties, that he received a unanimous call to the pastorate congregation; and, accordingly, he returned as minister. After a faithful ministry of twenty-two years, Mr. Saunders accepted a call from the congregation at Woodside, in succession to the Rev. James Rae, who went to New Deer. Mr. Saunders proved himself to be an earnest and devoted minister. He was always identified with evangelistic and mission work, and was a warm advocate of the temperance movement all his life.

THE BAND OF HOPE IN YORKSHIRE.—At the annual conference at Sheffield on Monday, it was reported that 1,152 Bands are included in the Yorkshire Union, with a membership of 164,188. The president, Mr. Martin Field, of Bradford, encouraged his hearers to expect from the present Parliament Sunday closing, the prohibition of the sale of liquor to children, the abolition of grocers' licences, and local option. No less than 296 members of Parliament have pledged themselves to vote for local option.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2.—DEUTERONOMY XIII.

THREE occasions are suggested in which the people might be drawn after other gods, whether by a false prophet, a relative, or a community. Similar suggestions are constantly made by our own evil hearts, by the great enemy of our souls, and by companions. Our love to God, and loyalty in his service, have to be maintained in the face of strenuous opposition. The stream is always against us, and probably is permitted to be so as part of our discipline. It is not simply that God may know what is in our hearts, but for us also, that we may seek from Him grace to counteract the evil of which He makes us aware; thus the Lord our God proves us. The extermination of evil was to be merciless, no quarter was to be shown to the dearest, the wife of the bosom, or the friend. It was only so that God could turn from the fierceness of his anger and show mercy; and whenever in our lives it seems as if the hand of God had gone out against us, it becomes us to search and try our ways so as to discover if there has been any alienation of our heart from Himself, so that we may deal with it, and enjoy once more his compassion and care. The one test for us all is that suggested in the closing verses of the chapter, to ask what is right in God's eyes, those eyes that run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show Himself strong on behalf of them whose heart is perfect towards Him.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 3.—DEUTERONOMY XIV.

It is not enough to remember the holiness of God, but to bear in mind that we are called with an holy calling, to be a people for his own possession, and it must be our constant aim to walk worthy of that high calling. Let us often remind ourselves that we have been chosen to be God's representatives and instruments amongst men. Thoughts like these should influence our food and dress. The parted hoof speaks of separation; and the chewing of the cud, of meditation on the ways of God, and each of these should colour our life. The love of God in our hearts moulds even our treatment of the lower animals: "Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's milk." We should not do less than the Jews in the setting apart of our tithes for God, and it is wonderful how they will come back to feed ourselves, and to fill our hearts with joy. O my soul, dost thou sufficiently rejoice before the Lord thy God, and shed thy joy upon thy household, and if not, may not the reason be that thou art niggard in thy gifts to Him, or that thou hast forsaken some Levite, stranger, widow or fatherless, that were within thy gates? Satisfy others and thou shalt be satisfied; share with others and thou shalt be filled; have times of respite from work, for holy joy and converse, so shall thy God multiply the work of thine hand, by his blessing that maketh rich and fruitful.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4.—DEUTERONOMY XV.

Freely we have received, let us freely give. The Hebrews were taught to live a generous, bountiful life, giving to him that asked, not turning away from him that borrowed, not exacting money which had been lent. They were not only to give because of the Divine law, but without compunction and reluctance, prompted by the spirit of love. "Thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest." The open hand was to be the sign of an open heart, and right behind this free bestowment of benefaction there lay the perpetual memory that God would bless them and give to them. Giving is also pre-eminently the Christian's duty. We are meant to be channels, and not receptacles; God's stewards, entrusted with wealth and talent and spiritual gift that we may pass them on. If we refuse this office our parsimony not only staunches the flow of God's gifts, but it becomes sin to us. The Hebrew slave went forth laden from the term of his servitude, and are we to suppose that God will deal less liberally with his servants, redeemed from the bondage of sin? None of God's faithful servants, who have given Him double the service of a hireling because they love Him, shall go empty. Would that we had become so wedded to Him in love that the ear pierced to the door-post in consecration might be the emblem of our service. Ah, Master! it is well with us in thy home; we will not go away from Thee; "our ears hast Thou bored."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5.—DEUTERONOMY XVI.

Let us have special days of commemoration in our lives. The day of our birth, of some great deliverance, of some crowning mercy. Anniversaries, when we shall live again in the past with thankfulness, and from which we shall look forward into coming days with hope which cannot be ashamed. It is for this reason that the seasons of the Christian year are so helpful. We, too, have our Paschal Feast, when we recall the coming forth from the Egyptian bondage through the blood of the Lamb that was slain, an emancipation which involves the putting away of the leaven of malice and wickedness. We, too, have our Pentecosts, when we seek again our share in the gift of the Ascension, and stand before God with a tribute of freewill offerings in our hands, giving not our money, but ourselves, that we may be fulfilled with his grace and heavenly benediction. We, too, have our Feasts of Tabernacles, when we are altogether joyful, when the tides of blessed emotion well up in our hearts, like the spring rains in the wells, when we neither hunger nor thirst, but are led to the living fountains of waters as in the great Tabernacle Feast of Rev. vii. At such times we give as we are able, and because the blessing of God is given to us. The "altogether joyful" (v. 15) must be blended with the "altogether just" (v. 20); only so can we taste the wine of life, and inherit all that God has put in Christ for us.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 6.—DEUTERONOMY XVII.

Often in these chapters we are reminded of "the place which the Lord your God shall choose"; there only could they rightly worship, there only feast, there only learn his will. For us, too, there is such a place, it is the meeting-place between God and men, in the Man Christ Jesus. Blessed is the man whom God chooses to approach unto Him, and to stand there all the days of his life. Let us make it our ambition to "dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of our life, to behold his beauty, and to enquire in his temple." It is not enough for us to have a suspicion that something is wrong; we must search diligently to be quite certain. A scrupulous, morbid conscience is much to be dreaded; God's Spirit is always definite; but when evil is clearly indicated, it must be "put away from the midst of thee." Presumptuous sin, that committed against light and knowledge, is of all sin the most deadly. What the Levite or judge was to the Jew, that conscience illuminated by truth and quickened by the Holy Ghost, is to us, and we must not swerve from its sentence to the right or to the left. Our King is our Brother. His love is pure and single to his Church. For our sakes He was poor. The law of his God was in his heart. He abideth King for ever. God's chosen King and ours.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7.—DEUTERONOMY XVIII.

"He hath made us priests;" our inheritance, therefore, is God Himself. "The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup." Oh, Christian soul, how great is thy privilege, to be chosen out of all the tribes of men, to stand to minister in the name of the Lord. Make full proof of thy ministry for men toward God and God toward men; and make much of thine heritage, claim and appropriate all thou needest. What intensity must have burnt in the hearts of some of those ancient Levites, who came with all the desire of their souls to the precincts of the Tabernacle. Such fervour fulfilled the main pre-requisite of service. "Then he shall minister." The desire of our life is the assurance we may become all that which we are taught to yearn after. Ours is a higher law than that of other men. What they do cannot be suffered in us, and what is abominable in them is a thousand-fold more so in us. Do we make enough of the prophet-side of our Saviour's ministry, who is the Moses of his church? Do we listen enough to the words of his mouth? Are we careful enough to perform all that our Father commanded through Him? Do we consult Him enough? That He fulfils the conditions and answers the test of the true prophet is unmistakable, because what He has said has followed and come to pass, and shall yet do so, till time shall be no more.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8.—DEUTERONOMY XIX.

Again, we have careful instructions about the cities of refuge, where shelter might be given to men who had killed their neighbours unawares, without malicious forethought. A clear distinction must always be made between sins of will and those of passion. Jesus is our refuge city, within easy reach of all betrayed into sudden sin, almost unawares themselves, overtaken in a fault. In Him, shut away from the avenger of blood, the soul will have time to think, to review the causes that hurried it into sin, and to return unto the Lord. Side by side with our enlarging life will come increasing peril of this sort, and therefore an increasing need of Him who is co-extensive with all our need, and the additional three cities were needed for the enlarged border. But the Lord Jesus is no shelter for those who wilfully and persistently pursue courses of evil. Oh to keep all his commandments. So shall we come to love the Lord our God, and to walk ever in his ways, and so will He enlarge our borders, and give us all that He has promised to his saints. We have no need to encroach upon another's influence or work, because a man can receive nothing except it be given him to possess. The false witness suffered the evil that he had thought to do to his brother. It is an eternal truth. Curses come home to roost. Our malediction or our benediction affects us more materially than it does anyone else.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 9.

DORCAS RAISED TO LIFE.

Acts ix. 32—43.

GOLDEN TEXT: VERSE 36.

Lydda, probably identical with Ludd of the Benjamites (1 Chron. viii. 12), and since called Diospolis, was about a day's journey west of Jerusalem, and not far from the Mediterranean coast. Saron (35) does not refer to the village of that name, but to the fertile plain of Sharon (Isa. xxxv. 7), which extended along the coast from Cesarea to Joppa on the south. Joppa (36), the modern Jaffa, is a very ancient seaport on the Mediterranean coast (Josh. xix. 46; Jonah i. 3), and a little more than thirty miles from Jerusalem.

Believers in both these towns are called saints (32—41). It is the term used in the New Testament, not for those who have died, nor for the most eminent believers, but for all the members of the Church of Christ. It means "holy ones," those who are set apart for God, indwelt by God, and living for God. It should be one purpose of the Church to-day to redeem this name from the ridicule which the inconsistency of many professors has brought upon it.

ÆNEAS HEALED (33-35).—We know nothing of this man beyond what this narrative tells us. He was a fitting subject for the display of the power of Christ. His palsy made him perfectly helpless; and having kept his bed for eight years, he may have come to regard his case as utterly hopeless. That he was well known appears from the effect produced by his healing (35). Without strength and without hope, such are we before Christ saves us. The miracle is wrought by Jesus Christ (34). Peter cannot do it; he is but the instrument through whom Jesus acts. The words of Peter declare a present ("maketh") and a complete healing ("whole"). Such is the message which we are empowered to deliver to every needy sinner—a present and a perfect salvation. Yet it demanded faith in Æneas. He must appropriate Christ's work, and his faith must at once express itself in action. This is just the point where so many fail. They remain unsaved, not because Christ does not give, but because they do not take. Begin now to act your faith in Christ. Attempt the impossible thing in dependence upon his power. The effect of the miracle reached far beyond the man himself (35). It arrested and convicted many others, and turned them to the Lord.

DORCAS RAISED TO LIFE (36—42).—Dorcas is the Greek word for the Syro-Chaldaic word Tabitha. The word means gazelle, an animal distinguished for its slender and beautiful form. It was frequently used as an image of beauty. Whether Dorcas possessed physical beauty or not, she possessed that beauty which, in the sight of God, is of far greater value (1 Tim. ii. 10). Her saintship did not consist of ecstacies and raptures, but of practical benevolence. Her faith found expression in works—not occasionally and fitfully, not in a stinted measure—she was "full of good works." That is not more than should be true of us all (2 Cor. ix. 8). She worked not for the rich who could repay her, but for the poor, and especially for widows (39). (Jas. i. 27). Many Christian ladies, whose lives are unsatisfying because self-centred and without holy purpose, might imitate this good woman. While she was with them (39).—This had been her opportunity. When death laid her low, others bore willing testimony that she had not wasted her time. We have all of us similar opportunities—are they passing by unused? (Eph. v. 15, 16).

How mysterious it seems that such a woman should sicken and die (37)! Let us learn to bow before Him whose ways we cannot understand. In this case, however, we may see some of the blessing resulting from the strange providence. It brought out more vividly the value of this woman's work (39), and may not this fact have led some to resolve to imitate her? It evidenced the true unity of the body of Christ (39). It led them to exercise faith for the working of a great miracle; for, after hearing of the healing of Æneas, had they not hope of something more than sympathy in sending for Peter (38)? And it served to display more marvellously the power of the risen Saviour. He was glorified; their faith was strengthened; the sorrowing widows were comforted; and many others believed (42).

Nothing could be more graphic than the description of the miracle (40, 41). Peter remembered the raising of Jairus's daughter (Mark v. 37).

Peter tarried in Joppa. According to Rabbinical notions, a tanner's trade was unclean. The Apostle did not so regard it; and it is evident that if the house was disregarded by others it was known in heaven (x. 6).

THE

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL

WILL POSITIVELY CURE

THE MOST SEVERE FORMS OF THE FOLLOWING AILMENTS:—

COLDS.

Madame ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-Nos Castle:—"Madame Patti has found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial indeed, and the only thing that would enable her to rest well at night, when having a severe cold."

CATARRH.

Rev. HENRY S. LUNN, M.D., writes from 5, Endsleigh-gardens, London, N.W., November 16th, 1891:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

ASTHMA.

Miss HUDDLESTON writes from Walmersley House, near Bury, Lancashire, 15th October, 1891:—"Miss Huddleston is finding the Carbolic Smoke Ball a great blessing for Asthma. She is very glad to say that it is doing her a great deal of good when hope had almost gone."

BRONCHITIS.

Dr H. G. DARLING, M.D., Linden Cottage, Shepherd's Well, Kent, writes, 18th April, 1892:—"I had used the Carbolic Smoke Ball only a few times when it gave me immediate relief—although I am 83 years of age and have suffered more than one-third of that time from Bronchitis complicated with Asthma."

DEAFNESS.

Mrs. KINGSLEY writes from Woking Village, Surrey, May 10th, 1892:—"I have very great hopes of being able to hear quite well by the end of the month. My whole throat was in a dreadful state, and when we consider I have been deaf since 1884, I think the improvement in the two months since I commenced using the Carbolic Smoke Ball is wonderful."

THE FORTY-FIRST SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CHRONIC CATARRH — FOLLOWED BY BRONCHO-PHTHISIS—CASE AT CHESTER.

Mrs. MARTHA POOLE, of 36, Gloucester-street, writing on March 5th last, says:—"I have been recommended to you by a friend who has seen a remarkable case under your treatment."

Several of her family had died with chest disease. For three years she had been troubled with chronic catarrh. The cough had now become much worse, was violent at night, and troublesome all night and morning. The phlegm had recently been mixed with blood as well as fluid blood spat up. The breathing had become very bad. Had commenced to lose flesh. Her strength also had declined. Cod liver oil and various medicines had been taken with no effect.

I advised her fully. In about three weeks she reports her cough to be much less troublesome, expectoration improved, and her breathing better. In her next letter: "Cough a great deal better, and other symptoms;" also that, "She could now sleep well all night."

In two months from commencement she says: "I am wonderfully better—in fact, a different woman to what I was before writing you." In the next letter: "I am stronger and better in every way."

Writing me June 24th (nearly four months from commencement) she says: "I thank God for all the blessing received from your medicine. Please make use of any correspondence between us for the good of others."

THIS PHENOMENAL OFFER IS MADE TO THE READERS OF THIS JOURNAL ONLY.

On receipt of this Advertisement, accompanied by Postal Order for 6s. or 74 stamps, we will forward DIRECT FROM OUR LOOMS to your address one of our 7s. genuine SEAMLESS WOVEN REVERSIBLE CARPETS, suitable for Drawing-room, Dining-room, Bedroom, &c., handsomely bordered, and woven in thirty different patterns and art colourings to suit all requirements, and LARGE ENOUGH TO COVER ANY ORDINARY-SIZED ROOM. These Carpets are manufactured from a material equal in wear to wool, and are undoubtedly the cheapest in the world.

With every Carpet we shall ABSOLUTELY GIVE AWAY a very handsome RUG to match, or we will send TWO CARPETS and TWO RUGS for 10/6. Money willingly returned if not approved.

The Queen says: "Decidedly stouter and handsomer than any of the kind, the price being the astounding part of the matter."

Schoolmistress: "For style, durability, and cheapness, they cannot be beaten."

Penny Illustrated Paper: "Manufactured in every variety of colour, and is one of the most surprising bargains I have seen."

Church Bells: "Truly wonderful value."

Thousands of Testimonials similar to the following and Repeat Orders have been received from our Customers.

"166 Crown Street, Aberdeen.

"Gentlemen,—The two Carpets and Rugs to match you sent us two years ago, have given every satisfaction, and are still in use.—Yours faithfully, "ALEX. MALCOLM."

This SOCIETY combines the advantages of Mutual Assurance with Moderate Premiums.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that an Assurance of £1200 or £1250 may generally be secured from the first for the yearly payment which usually would be charged (with profits) for £1000 only—equivalent to an immediate Bonus of 20 to 25 per cent.

The WHOLE PROFITS go to the Policyholders, on a system at once safe and equitable,—no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss. Large additions have thus been, and will be, made to the policies of those who participate, notwithstanding the lowness of the premiums.

The SURPLUS at last Investigation (1887) was £1,051,035, which, after reserving one-third, was divided among 9384 Policies entitled to participate. First additions (with few exceptions) ranged from 18 to 34 per cent. according to age and class. Other Policies were increased in all 50 to 80 per cent.

The New Assurances completed in 1891 were £1,208,287.
Premiums in year £609,292. Total Income £936,713.
The Claims (including Bonus Additions) were £368,000.

Over 60 per cent. of the amount of these Claims was paid in respect of Policies which had participated in the Surplus—the Bonus Additions averaging almost 50 per cent. of the original Assurances.

THE FUNDS now exceed £8,000,000.

[The usual non-participating Rates differ little from these Premiums.]

* A person of 30 may secure £1,000 at death, by a yearly payment during life, of £20 15s. This premium would generally elsewhere secure £800 only, instead of £1,000. OR, he may secure £1,000 by 21 yearly payments of £27 13s. 4d.—being thus free of payment after age 50.

† At age 40, the Premium ceasing at age 60, is, for £1,000, £33 14s. 2d.—about the same as most Offices require during the whole term of life. Before the Premiums have ceased the Policy will have shared in at least one division of profits.

To Professional Men and others, whose income is dependent on continuance of health, this limited payment is specially recommended.

ALL POLICIES (not seafaring or military risks, for which special arrangements may be made) are WORLD-WIDE, and free from Restrictions on Residence after five years—provided the Assured has attained the age of 30

THE PRINCE OF PREACHERS:

A Sketch, A Portraiture, and A Tribute.

WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT.

By Rev. JAMES DOUGLAS, M.A.

SOME REVIEWS OF THIS NEW LIFE OF MR. SPURGEON.

From the "Sword and Trowel":—

"Since the 'Prince of Preachers' has been promoted t glory, many tributes of love and esteem have been rendered to his memory; but the one before us far excels all others that we have seen at present. Mr. Douglas knew Mr. Spurgeon, loved him, reverenced him, and fought by his side in his great battle for the faith; it was meet that he should sketch his portrait, and he has done it perfectly. We could scarcely wish to have a word altered from the first page to the last."

From "Word and Work":—

"In its own way it is quite unique, as it deals with Mr. Spurgeon not from the outside, is not a hash-up of stale incidents with which most religious persons are perfectly familiar, but is a keen, loving, sympathetic analysis and exposition of the powers, purposes, and achievements of the great modern apostle."

The Rev. THOMAS SPURGEON says of this book:—

"I have been happily conscious that the book is not a mere narration of oft-told facts (with some fiction) and worn-out anecdotes. The 'Sketch' is good; the 'Portraiture' is better; the 'Tribute' is best of all. Right glad am I that Mr. Douglas has succeeded so eminently in his difficult but congenial task."

Another Correspondent (intimately associated with the late Mr. Spurgeon) writes:—

"I had expected great things of Mr. Douglas, and I am more than gratified. Within the scope designed by the author, the 'Portraiture' is by far the truest and fullest to life of any I have seen."

VOL. II.—THE BOOK OF PSALMS

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

A Review from The Quiver:—

"An admirable little volume of notes on the Book of Psalms which ought to prove very helpful to any preacher or evangelist, while as the companion of the private student it would be invaluable."

This volume on "The Psalms" is reproduced in a smaller size, known as the "Pocket Edition." Neatly printed, with border rules to each page. Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt, 2s.

"We heartily commend this beautiful service to our musical friends.'
—Irish Congregational Magazine.
"We had the best test of the quality of this Service of Song in hearing a Saturday night choir of young people give it a very successful rendering. The story is a very telling one. Some of the music consists of old favourities, but with a sufficient number of new and simple airs to make it, we believe, a favourite service in our evening gatherings for some time to come."—Baptist Messenger.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving a sketch of the late Mr. Joseph Weatherley.

The London Mission at the Metropolitan bernacle, conducted by Mr. Moody, begins xt Sunday, when meetings, freely open to , will be held at 3 and 6.30 p.m. From nday to Friday inclusive the meetings will as follow :—

1.0 a.m.—For clergy, ministers, and Christian rkers.
.30 p.m.—Open to all.
.0 p.m.—For men only, by ticket till 7.30; erwards free to all.

tickets will be required for the Sunday etings or the morning and afternoon week- y meetings. Workers who can influence n to attend the week evening gatherings uld get a supply of tickets from the ssion secretaries at 186, Aldersgate-street, d distribute them in likely quarters.

} Hon. Secs.

We hope many of our Irish readers are lowing up the suggestion we made last ek that congregations in remoter parts uld facilitate the attendance of their stors at the approaching Dublin meetings. ny of these are doubtless feeling the isola- n of their position and the lack of spiritual mulus such as Christian fellowship affords. nen the opportunities throughout Ireland pushing the battle to the gate are now so merous, nothing ought to be left undone at would help in bringing the light of a pure ring Gospel to bear on the masses of the ple.

At the opening meeting of the Baptist ion on Monday, in Walworth-road Chapel, v. R. Henry Roberts, the president, de- ered a manly address on "The Witness of Bible to the Kingdom of Heaven upon rth." He maintained that regeneration st precede righteousness; reform without eneration must turn out a delusion and a re. In a practical application of the prin- les of the Kingdom, he denounced the opium ffic, and urged the substitution of courts of itration for war; at the same time pro- ting against the use of the Lord's Day for itical demonstrations of any kind. God's l is the sum of human duty, and those who k the Kingdom must also maintain the hteousness thereof

On Sunday last, Mr. Wainwright, pastor of the Tabernacle, Bournemouth, presided over a meeting at which about sixty (chiefly of the younger members) were present. It was the close of the third quarter of the Missionary Prayer Union, initiated by Mr. Wainwright. The bond of union is an agreement to pray daily, and to give at least a halfpenny a day, for mission purposes. The amount brought in for the three quarters has been over £45, and the donations increase. Most had given a halfpenny; the other amounts varied from a penny to sixpence. It was touching to find how large a proportion of the whole had been given by young servants and others of small income.

A missionary is able to live in many places on £60 a year, or even less, and there are hundreds, not to say thousands, of churches in which the habit of prayerful giving, if once adopted, might go on increasing until this generation of Christians should have fulfilled its obligation to evangelise this generation of the world.

Perhaps one of the means of grace most needed to be emphasised by pastors and teachers is the grace of giving. An indifferent, aimless, and thoughtless community, where "evil is wrought by want of thought as well as want of heart," would be transfigured into an intelligent, large-hearted, and generous church, by carrying into practice those words of the Lord Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." It only needs that the pastors lead their flocks into these green pastures.

There are many young people in our Gospel and after meetings, whose hearts are made soft and receptive by the preaching, and who could be led to a definite, simple trust in the Saviour through a little kindly talk. Workers too often overlook the children, thinking their time and care are better bestowed on older inquirers. We believe, on the other hand, that no larger or more lasting return for effort expended can be had than in the case of the young, who have little to unlearn and to relinquish before they take up the yoke of the Master. A touching incident on page 15, "Nobody asked us," illustrates the good that may be done in this direction.

The Evangelist Matthew (xviii. 11) quotes a saying of Jesus thus: "The Son of Man is come to save that which was lost." Here the context relates to the little ones. Luke (xix. 10), relating the story of Zaccheus, quotes Jesus as saying, "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Is it because the little ones only want saving, but the grown-up sinners must be sought in order that they may be saved?

The agitation at the Metropolitan Tabernacle is not allayed. The committee that has espoused the cause of Mr. Thomas Spurgeon is still active, and its members are full of expectant hope. It would seem, however, that the elders have resolved not to await the complete signing of the requisition, but have resolved to hold a Church-meeting to-morrow (Friday) evening, not to elect a new pastor, but to provide for the present filling of the pulpit. We trust this great church will act in a manner worthy of its glorious past; and that no cause be given to the enemy to blaspheme. Give God time, and He will make manifest his will.

It is a matter of great regret that these difficulties furnish matter for the daily Press, not slow to take advantage of the excitement which is afoot: but the amount of real intelligence brought to bear on the subject is amusingly manifest by the grave announcement that Mr. Moody is considered a likely candidate for the vacant post!

We are thankful that an energetic inspector is employing what power the law gives him to sweeten some of the houses in the neighbourhood of Drury-lane. Humanity itself is insulted by the disclosures made in the public court before Mr. Vaughan.

> In four houses no less than forty-seven people had to find such accommodation as they could amid an accumulation of rubbish and foul air. No sanitary conditions can be said to have existed in connection with them. The cisterns were unprotected against contamination from the vitiated atmosphere.

It is terrible to think that such places exist at our very doors. The responsible authorities could not exercise a higher patriotism than to sweep such dens out of existence.

That legislation on the drink question is one of the elements needed to promote social reform and the revival of religion is daily becoming more apparent. The Echo points out that the conduct of the licensing authorities is actively degrading :—

> Let anyone take a walk round the Sailors' Home in Liverpool, or in some of the lower parts of Manchester and Salford, or in the East and South of London, and count the public-houses and see how they swarm, and he will learn a lesson in regard to the way in which the authorities have discharged their duties as guardians of public morals.

The nation is being destroyed by the traffic, and the traps are set the thicker in the very places where there is less moral power to withstand temptation.

Those who are conversant with the movement which ended in the passing of the Ten Hours Bill and other Acts regulating labour in factories, will remember what painful evidence was adduced to show the excessive mortality among the workers and their necessarily neglected children. It is stated that the British Medical Association recently obtained special information in regard to the high death-rate of infants in Staffordshire, pointing to the fact that the extensive employment of women in factories and large works in that county is the cause. Steps will be taken, it is said, to bring the matter before the Government.

An evening paper calls attention to the extent to which betting absorbs the attention of dwellers in some of our northern towns. It says :—

> Barnsley town is one of the principal centres of coal mining in Yorkshire. Has the reader ever seen the crowds of grown-up women, lads, and young girls, who assemble in the market-place from all the low quarters of the town, to hear the last "tip," and stake their pence, or their pots of beer, on some coming "event"? I know no spectacle more repulsive, more degrading, than the rush of these women for the latest edition of some filthy sporting rag.

Scenes like this may well cause some hesitation in the use of the term "Christian England."

In this month's Expository Times, Professor Sayce reads the sceptical "higher critics" a very instructive lesson from Oriental archæology. The campaign of Chedorlaomer and his allies against Palestine, and the account of the priest-king Melchizedek, as given in Gen. xiv., have been confidently pronounced impossible and mythical by "advanced" scholars. Dr. Sayce adduces the testimony of the cuneiform tablets found at Tel-el-Amarna; and these not only furnish names and circumstances which throw remarkable light upon the earliest campaign of history, but confirm in every point the record concerning the King of Salem, who met Abraham when returning from the slaughter of the confederate kings.

Another attempt is being made to revive the Brotherhood scheme. The Church Times has received a communication "from a clergyman living in a quiet spot within an hour's reach of London, with a beautiful church and Catholic services, in which he suggests that the place is very suitable for the first beginnings of a brotherhood. There is a little house close to the church, and 'if it should so be that God is calling anyone to take up the work,' he could lend the church, give the house, and add a stipend." The writer adds that when the work begins, if it ever does begin, it will be "without any flourish of trumpets, or episcopal patronage." A room or two of a tenement house in a London slum, where the "brothers" would have to rub shoulders with those "ready to perish," would be a far more rational centre from which to study and ameliorate the ills of life than the "quiet spot" with its "beautiful church and Catholic services." What is wanted is doing, not dreaming.

France has lost a generous philosopher and distinguished littérateur by the death of M. Renan. Trained in the Roman Catholic Church, the author of the "Vie de Jésus" found that he "could not become a priest without culpable hypocrisy." From error and superstition he made a recoil which landed him in Deism. He regarded Christ as a Divinely-inspired philosopher, not as the Way to God, and his writings have magnified humanity and flattered intellectual pride.

He is reported to have asked his wife a few hours before dying:—

"Why are you sad?" "Because I see you suffer," she replied. "Be calm and resigned," replied the dying man; "we undergo the laws of that nature of which we are a manifestation. We perish, we disappear, but heaven and earth remain, and the march of time goes on for ever."

A newspaper correspondent characterises this as "showing something of the hopeful temper of a Christian!" On the contrary, the Christian has confidence in his death, and can say, "I know Him whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him" (2 Tim. i. 12, R.V.).

What a lurid light is thrown upon the persistent wrongdoing of the Russian executive by the painful fact that during the last six months no fewer than 7,729 persons, male and female, have been sent as prisoners to Siberia. The following paragraph from the telegraphic news of Monday last indicates that there is no relaxation of the persecuting régime:—

Six Stundists, at present in gaol in Balta and other towns in the government of Podolia, are to be tried in a few days for endeavouring to convert some Russian peasants to their faith. About a year ago ten families were exiled for life to Eastern Siberia from Balta convicted of a similar offence, and there is no reason to doubt that a similar fate awaits the unfortunates now about to be tried. A short time ago Nicolas Stanenko, a Protestant leader, was exiled to Gerusi, in the Caucasus, for a similar offence, and in the village of Novoselovka the police have fined a number of the villagers seventy-five roubles each for meeting together for worship.

Surely the end must soon come to such a terrible condition of things.

The United States Congress recently voted a large sum of money to the World's Fair at Chicago, on the condition that the Exhibition should not be opened to the public on Sundays. A movement has been set on foot in the States to have this condition set aside. It is noteworthy that most of the Roman Catholic newspapers are supporting the agitation for the repeal of the clause, and that they are supported by "influential leaders of the Romanists."

The prompt action of Mr. Taylor, of Chicago, with regard to the proposal of a number of Spaniards to introduce bull-fighting in that city the same as in Paris, is most commendable. He communicated by cable with the president of the Illinois Humane Society, who was then in Paris, who replied, "Permission refused; would arrest promptly and prosecute vigorously." The Old World has transplanted many forms of vice to the New, but it is to be hoped that the United States will, at least, be spared this degrading pastime.

The spread of Christianity in India is hindered, not helped, by the conditions under which the poorer Europeans and Eurasians exist. An enquiry has lately been made by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and he reports that the pauperism among the children of domiciled Europeans in Calcutta is disastrous, while among the Eurasians of mixed descent "it can scarcely be paralleled in any other community in the world." The suggestions of the Indian Government for the relief and removal of this social scandal do not appear at all adequate.

That slavery has been practically stamped out in Burmah, is the latest good news from Rangoon. Not only that, but it has been done without bloodshed. One hundred and ninety slaves were set free during the past year in the hills administered from Fort White. The British flag will not tolerate slavery; it is the work of the Church to carry the news of emancipation of the soul from the dominion of sin.

Peace has its killed and wounded as well as war. From recently-issued official reports it is gathered that during twelve months six hundred and twenty-eight men have been killed, and nine thousand six hundred injured in the course of their daily work on the railways. Since 1874 upwards of eleven thousand railway men have been killed, and one hundred and fifteen thousand injured. During last year one hundred and sixty lives were lost in shunting operations. Of "accidents" to passengers the public is kept well informed, and due inquiry is made into them, but the yearly wholesale slaughter of employés passes almost unnoticed. In the face of such figures as the above it is high time that railway companies should, in common with employers of labour in factories and workshops, make proper provision for the safety of their workmen. Many accidents are due to long hours. Are we to wait for some terrible catastrophe to an express through an overworked servant falling asleep to bring about a reform in this matter? And will nothing short of an Act of Parliament check the terrible annual homicide?

It is satisfactory to learn from the last report of the Inspector of Reformatory Schools in Ireland, that the number of inmates of these institutions in that country has decreased year by year until in 1891 it was 716, as against 1,160 twelve years ago. From an accompanying sketch of the origin of such schools, we are told that in America, if a child is found begging or wandering, or consorting with thieves and bad characters the parents are warned, and if this produces no effect, the child is taken before a magistrate and committed direct to a reformatory or industrial school. There is much to be said in favour of such a plan, for the punishment of children by imprisonment has a hardening effect. To rescue the child from the streets and all demoralising surroundings, to train him to be an honest and useful citizen, is a surer method of thinning the criminal ranks than the reclamation of adult and confirmed offenders. Doubtless, it has its disappointments, but these are far more than outweighed by the success.

Whilst many unworkable theories for the amelioration of labour are being aired, it is satisfactory to meet with a new method which stands the test of practical excellence. An engineering firm in Sunderland proposed last January that the working day of their employés should begin at 7.30, instead of the early hour of six, and that the week's work should consist of forty-eight hours, instead of fifty-three. But the wages were reduced all round five per cent., the promise being made that the old rate should be resumed if the new system proved successful. That promise has been fulfilled. There has been an increase of output; the labour cost of engines has decreased, and the men and lads have physically improved by the alteration. This is a sensible proceeding; employers and employés alike are to be congratulated in the belief each has in the other's good faith.

EARTH AND HEAVEN.

EARTH.

Bright visions faded, tear-bedimm'd eyes;
Love broken-hearted, little ones' cries;
Hopes crushed forever, friendships untrue;
Clouds of dark doubting over the blue.

Falt'rings and failings, unfulfilled vows;
Lines deeply tracing well-beloved brows;
Hours idly wasted, tares wildly sown;
Tresses of whiteness where the gold shone.

Hopings and longings, pleadings in vain;
Days of endurance, midnights of pain;
Strugglings and strivings, never to win;
Seasons of anguish, wrestlings with sin.

Truth changed for error, honour for gold;
Cruel beguilings from the true fold;
Darkness and tempests, billows and waves;
Weapings and wailings, newly-made graves.

HEAVEN.

Love for the loveless, joy for the sad;
Smiles for the tearful, making them glad;
Rest for the weary, wealth for the poor;
For the afflicted, troubles no more.

Health for the suff'ring, healing and balm;
Peace for the tempted, making them calm;
Light for the gloomy, sight for the blind;
Friends for the friendless, tender and kind.

Flight for the eager, work for the strong—
Work which shall tire not all the day long;
Home for the homeless, wanderings o'er;
For the oppressed one, justice and law.

Strength for the feeble, power for the young;
Youth for the aged, life just begun;
Food for the hungry, clothing and place;
For the deformed one, beauty and grace.

Songs for the sighing, hushing their cries;
Lore for the simple, making them wise;
For the deaf, hearing, musical sound;
For the long-parted, lost faces found.

For the lone orphans, mother at last;
For the worn soldier, warfaring past;
Freedom and safety, nought to appal;
Perfect perfection—JESUS FOR ALL.

Prevention Better Than Cure.

Speaking to a medical friend the other day we asked, "What is the best thing for cholera?" "Not to take it," was the prompt and emphatic reply. The wisdom of this answer becomes more apparent when we learn that although the safe treatment of this dreaded disease is still uncertain, precautions for its prevention are well and widely known. By the careful labours of the Board of Health it has hitherto been hindered from taking root in English soil. So long as its germs are detected and destroyed, death is little likely to reap its wonted harvest within our land.

Were it possible to guard against the introduction of doubts and denials which sap the very foundations of faith by similar watchful wisdom, our countrymen might have been preserved from the epidemic of unbelief now undoubtedly raging all around. Let it be noted, however, that the seeds of any disease must find a fitting soil ere they can germinate and grow. Though plentifully sown, they are harmless where they find no food for their growth. Had the faith of our country been robust and reverent the questionings and carpings of Continental criticism would never have taken root among us. But unfortunately some who have been set for the defence of the Gospel have, in our judgment, helped, whether consciously or unconsciously, to undermine evangelical belief; while they have, at the same time, sown the fruitful germs of unbelief. In these circumstances, while we deplore the prevalent marked indifference to divine truth, we cannot pretend to be ignorant of its cause.

Referring to a recent article on "a downgrade confession," a correspondent asks "how the recovery was effected." He acknowledges that our description of the disease is complete, but he complains that we do not prescribe an antidote. Alas! as in the case of many other fell diseases, we have no recovery to report. In some departures from the faith, such as we have described, it is beyond the power of man to "renew them again unto repentance," and the only remedy available to grieving friends is earnest prayer on behalf of the erring ones. For though they may be beyond the reach of loving appeal and reasonable argument, they are not beyond the reach of the Holy Ghost. Recovery is possible, though we must confess it is not frequent.

In writing as we did, our purpose was to warn rather than to restore. Our faith is chiefly in prevention, since there is no certainty of cure. So soon as anyone questions the authority of Scripture, he is adrift on a shoreless sea, without chart or compass, and at the mercy of the winds and waves. There are only three final judges, to either of whom we may resort: to the council of experts in Rome speaking by the Pope, to our own reason, or to the apostles and prophets writing by inspiration of God. Can there be any doubt as to the choice of wisdom? The Bible alone has proved in every age a sufficient and efficient guide. Apart from all other reasons—and these are neither few nor weightless—the whole experience of believers attests the supreme worth of Scripture.

Listen to what an observer from the outside has said:—"Nor, even now, would it be easy, even for an unbeliever, to find a better translation of the rule of virtue from the abstract into the concrete, than to endeavour so to live that Christ would approve our life?"* The life of Jesus is the fulfilment and crown of Scripture. Friends and critics alike being witnesses, there never has been any life so worthy or so noble as his. Is it not, therefore, the highest and truest wisdom to regulate our conduct by the revelation in which He invariably trusted, and the fuller revelation He has, by his apostles, bequeathed to us? Phos.

God's Sheep.

An Encouragement to Faith.

II.—"THE SHEEP OF HIS HAND."—Ps. xcv. 7.

We have seen something of the blessedness of being the sheep of God's pasture: not less blessed will it be to recognise, and, by God's grace, to realise, something of what is comprehended in being "the sheep of his hand." Many helpful and restful words cluster around the hand of the Lord as revealed in Scripture; words that tell of guidance, of provision, of protection, etc., but perhaps the leading thought is that of power—God's Hand engaged on behalf of his people.

1. God's hand ensures remembrance of the sheep. "I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands" (Is. xlix. 16). Graven, not written; therefore indelible and inseparable. But why upon the hands? Our thoughts are carried back to the typical Aaronic High Priest, upon whose "holy garments" were fastened the breastplate and shoulderpieces, each having the names of the tribes of Israel engraven upon precious stones, that the High Priest should (Ex. xxviii. 12, 29) bear the names of the children of Israel upon his heart and upon his shoulders "when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the Lord continually."

But Aaron was, so to speak, "off duty" sometimes, and the engraven names of Israel were separated from the High Priest when he laid aside the holy attire after service (Lev. xvi. 2, 4, 23). Our great High Priest, the Lord Jesus Christ, goes far beyond the type. His people are graven not upon priestly garments, but upon his hands—his person; and there can therefore be no separation, no moment when He is "off duty," or his people unrepresented before God. "He ever liveth to make intercession for them."

2. It is a safe, secure hand. "I give unto them (the sheep) eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand" (John x. 28-30). Such simple, full, strong words! How should they strengthen and confirm the feeble hearts of many trembling believers who are afraid lest they should fall away, and eventually be lost. Neither man, circumstances, nor the devil himself can pluck from that hand. As if still more to encourage faith in this sure word of promise, the Hand of the Father, Who is greater than all, is brought in, followed by the words, "I and my Father are one." And so, to be in the hand of Christ is really to be in the hand of the Almighty Jehovah. What strength! what comfort! what security! Look not so much at thy powers of "final perseverance," dear troubled soul! but more to the final preservation of thy faithful Lord.

3. God's hand is a delivering hand. In Isaiah l. 2, God asks a question, "Is my hand shortened at all . . . . or have I no power to deliver?" And in ch. lix. 1, He answers it emphatically, "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save." But, someone says, "What about care, the little worries of daily life?" Even in this there is deliverance if you will take God at his word. Read Psalm lv. 22; 1 Pet. v. 7; Phil. iv. 6, 7, and see what God promises with regard to care—all care. Fulfil his conditions, "make known" your need, and cast it upon him really; leave it in his hands, believing that He undertakes. He does not need that you should help to carry one end; let Him have the whole of it, and peace must result. With "the peace of God" keeping and guarding the heart, what room is there for worry or anxious care? God's delivering hand will do what all the worry in the world cannot do—only trust Him.

Again, how many groan under and struggle against the mastery of besetting sins, crying out in impotence, "The evil which I would not that I do. . . . . O, wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me?" Would to God that all such would prayerfully study chapters vi. vii. and viii. of the Epistle to the Romans, and learn there how sin has been despoiled of its power in the death and resurrection of Christ, so that the believer (who also "died to sin" judicially in Christ) has a right to be free from its tyranny and lordship. Continuous trust in the Lord's keeping power will bring continuous victory over sin. Let us ever distrust ourselves, and ever look to our Lord's delivering hand.

4. God's hand is an empowering hand. "In the shadow of his hand hath He hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath He hid me" (Is. xlix. 2). Clearly these words are addressed primarily to Christ, but they have a strong bearing for believers as well. The thought of protection may be the first that comes to the mind, but something deeper is here. Hidden in God's hand for a purpose; v. 3 says, "Thou art my servant, in whom I will be glorified." Hidden to be used, to bring glory to God. Surely the secret of all true success in spiritual work lies here. Of what use is the sword, the arrow, without an arm to wield it? Unfitness in the weapon may hinder its usefulness, the sword must be sharp, the shaft polished, the vessel "meet for the Master's use," and much cleansing (John xv. 2 R.V.) from sin, and sharp discipline may be needed; but when the weapon, the instrument, is fit and prepared, it is helpless until the Almighty hand of God takes it up, and the amount of effectual work will depend, not upon the instrument, but upon the arm that wields it.

To what extent are we, God's sheep, feeding upon the pasture He has provided, and with what result? Are we growing? Are we spiritually healthy? Is our condition creditable to our Good Shepherd? Or, are we stunted, sickly, and a discredit to Him? What do we know experimentally of the safety, deliverance, and power that are ours so surely as we are "the sheep of his hand"? May God take this message of his Word, and seal it home on every heart "to the praise of the glory of his grace"! C. W

SEASIDE BIBLE CONFERENCE.

The fifth annual Inter-denominational Seaside Conference for Bible Study, under the direction of Mr. L. W. Munhall, held this year in Educational Hall, Asbury Park, New Jersey, U.S.A., and was pre-eminently a success. The teachers were Bishop Wm. Taylor, of Africa; Professors Wm. G. Moorehead and J. M. Stifler; Drs. A. T. Pierson, Nathaniel West, Wm. J. Erdman, and A. C. Dixon; and Pastors George C. and Wm. Needham, D. M. Stearns and H. L. Hastings. Mr. Sankey was present at three sessions of the conference, and gave, with his old-time effect, a number of his inimitable solos. Fully three thousand persons were in attendance, first and last, not less than five hundred of whom were ministers of the Gospel.

The notable addresses of the conference were the three given by Dr. West on the "Higher Criticism," and Dr. Pierson's on "The Sevenfold Structure of the Bible." The range of subjects was quite wide, but in all cases fundamental truth was sought after and expounded.

At one of the sessions the leader asked for 1,000 dollars for Bishop Taylor, with which to found a mission station on behalf of the Seaside Bible Conference. In ten minutes the money was pledged. The spiritual atmosphere of the conference was most delightful. The Holy Spirit's power was manifested to the comforting of many, the saving of some, and the enlightening of all reverent and teachable souls present.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND BOOK SOCIETY.—During the financial year ended in March last, this society made 710 free grants of books, tracts, etc., amounting in value to £2,833, to poor clergymen and missionaries, parochial and Sunday-school libraries, and young people's institutes. The work is described in a very readable report, copies of which may be had from the secretary, Mr. John Shrimpton, 11, Adam-street, W.C.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.—A conference for the deepening of the spiritual life has just been held at Clifden, Connemara, under the auspices of the Irish Church Missions. Two members of the committee attended, and conducted deeply interesting and impressive services extending over two days. They were accompanied by Rev. George Grubb, who took part in the conference, and also preached twice in Clifden Church. A large number of Christian workers and converts from the Church of Rome, from all parts of the surrounding country, were present, and testified that the conference was the means of much refreshing and blessing from on High.

THE WITNESS OF DAILY LIFE.

BY REV. GEORGE WILSON.

At Evangelical Alliance, Dundee.

The outcome of sanctification in daily life. Let us emphasise the thought that in the Inspired Word daily life has a very prominent place. Let me read a few verses from one typical passage to introduce the Bible conception of daily life. Turn to Col. iii. 16 (the speaker read from ver. 16—25). Here is daily life. Daily life just means our daily relation. Here is a trinity of relations that embraces almost every aspect of daily life. A holy relationship between husband and wife, between parent and child, and between master and servant. Few are outside some one of these, but if any are not included, then, lest any be missed, the passage closes by bringing in the relationship of man to man, of neighbour to neighbour. Thus minutely and blessedly does the passage show us the outcome of a holy life in various kinds of relationship, including that between rich and poor, between the sick and the healthy, between the favoured children of fortune and the toil-stained who are bearing the adverse circumstances of life. In one or other of these relations you and I have to live the life of Christ, bearing about with us the marks of the Lord Jesus. And it is in this daily life more than anywhere else, more than in the recognised spheres of religious life, that we have to be living epistles of Christ. When gathered together for his worship with uplifted heart or bowed heart, it is easy to be holy and separate; and when called upon to stand by God's Word, to guard his altar, in private or in family devotion, it is again comparatively easy to show the tokens of grace and godliness. But when grace enters the daily life, when the grace of God makes the husband tender and considerate, the wife patient and devoted, the children reverent and ready, the parents prudent and wise, the servant conscientious and faithful, and the master brotherly, just, and regardful of the feelings of those under him, then men around begin to take knowledge that they have been with Christ, and that the Christ-life is entering into and moulding the common things of daily life.

Now, where does the Bible place this daily life,

AND HOW IS IT TO BE LIVED?

This will lead us to speak for a little of the incoming of sanctification, as well as of its outcome; because nothing can be more clear than that without an income there cannot be an outcome. I often have wished our evolutionists would think of this, and supplement their evolutionary teaching by some healthy teaching as to involution. If the power be there in things spiritual as well as natural, it must have come from somewhere. Now, there is a great deal of beautiful nonsense talked about this religion in common life. Men shrug their shoulders and say: "I am a business man; I don't read the Bible, I never pray, I don't believe in Christ; but I pay twenty shillings in the pound, cheat no man, and bear in market and on 'change the record of a spotless life." Another says: "I have no altar in my home, no Bible on my table, and my children are not taught to pray; but I do not beat my wife or growl at my children, and I have a fairly bright and happy home; that's the religion of daily life I believe in." Yes; you believe in a religion which scarcely reaches the level of civilised heathenism. Now where does the Bible place this common life? It places it around the Cross. Take the great classic passage on this common life—Rom. xii.—the most beautiful of all treatises on the domestic, social, and commercial life. Where does it begin? By laying deep the foundations on the doctrinal and logical statements of man's ruin by the fall, of redemption by the Lord Jesus Christ, of our glorious privileges in Christ (at ch. viii.), and it even sweeps in the Jew (in chs. ix., x., and xi.); and then on that grand foundation and platform comes the opening "Therefore" of chapter xii. Thus the whole principle of Christianity in common life springs from the Cross and from union with Christ. Take in the same way one or two other passages. In the one I read from Col. iii., you see godliness in the common things of daily life resting on resurrection with Christ, and life in Christ. So also in another classic passage on the subject—Eph. iv. and v.—where oneness with the Lord Jesus Christ, a unity which I cannot make and cannot break, becomes the basis of common duties. And similarly in parallel passages in Titus and Philemon which deal with everyday life as based on the Cross. The fact is, in the deepest sense, the man who has not been to the Cross cannot be a true husband, the woman who has not been to the Cross cannot be a true wife, those who have not been to the Cross cannot be the best of parents or children, or servants or masters. The foundation of common life is the Cross,

THE CENTRAL FACT IN THE UNIVERSE.

There is not a flower that blooms, a bird that sings, a sun that shines, but hangs on the Cross of Christ, without which God would have had to sweep his creation, marred by sin, back into annihilation.

So in daily life we must recognise this Cross, and that in three ways; there are, of course, many more aspects, but on these alone can we stay now. First, if am to live in right relationship to my fellow men, I must begin with a right relation to my God; for until then I will never understand aright my relation to my fellow men. Jesus Christ puts me in a right relation to a God as my Father, and then it is I learn my brotherhood with all fellow believers and my relation of sympathy and help with every man in the world, that is, even those outside of Christ. Therefore, I venture to say that when we have anything to do with putting a man in any position of trust, our first question should be, Is he a Christian? That is the great test of a man's fitness for any place of trust, if we would view the matter as God views it.

But the second thing is

for even when we have been redeemed we cannot be left to ourselves. We need light along the line of the will of God, and this we have in the inspired Word, opened to us by the blessed Spirit, and in the teaching of Providence as God leads us day by day. This guiding we all need. As I want to be quite practical, I may say here to husbands and wives: There is something far more important than a bright, happy, respectable home. Is it a Bethel? Is it God's house? Is it a house of prayer? Are you being guided along the lines of God's will? Are you seeking his guidance in every detail? Do you learn from his Word and in prayer how to watch the divine hand in daily life?

What are you going to do with these gifted sons of yours? Train them for high position in banks and other enterprises? Or is it your first aim to send them out as servants of the living God in daily life? Never mind the wealth of money, if you have the wealth of true godly manhood. If you aim at this you will have Divine direction for it. I do not deny the value of ameliorating laws and social improvements; but the labour question and other hard problems of the kind can only be solved by Christ, who brings us into true relationship with all men.

Now the third thing is ADEQUATE ENDOWMENT.

We may get into the right relation, and we may know there is adequate direction, but we need executive power. We would, but we cannot. Then remember there is power, power available, and it is in Jesus Christ. Some person says, "That man knows nothing about it; he has not a wife and sickly children in a bare home, or a small income and great difficulties. He would not speak as he does (you say) if he knew how my hand trembles as I open the morning letters, and hear of crashes here and there. He does not know how the timbers begin to creak in the anxieties and cares of life." Well, I don't know all—though I do know something—but this I do know: that God knows all. Tried husband and weary wife; harassed parents and children; anxious masters and servants; there are resources in Christ yet untouched by you. He is able to solve all your difficulties, and to enable you to overcome all hindrances in his strength. That is the incoming we need for a true outcome in daily life.

Now I need not dwell at length on the outcome. This only will I say, it will be ruled by the greatest law in life, the law of the universe, and that is

FRUIT AFTER ITS KIND.

That is a law never broken, and God will have us bring forth fruit in this manner. I have known men preach a good sermon, lead admirably in prayer, sit down by the bedside of some struggling soul and help greatly, but I have known they were not always liked in business, nor kind to their wives. Then, to speak plainly, I say it is a sham. There must be fruit after its kind. If you are a pious man on Sunday you must be one on Saturday. What you preach in the pulpit you must live in the office and the home. The world can somehow find some answer to our best logic and weightiest arguments but it has no answer to the witness of a common business man or woman who lives Christian holiness in daily life; sanctification lived before the eye of the world—that is fruit after its kind, fruit to the glory of God.

Now the outcome of such a life will have three aspects. There will be an about it. I confess I hunger after more simplicity. How refreshing it is in this age of complexity and wearisome elaboration! My prayer is, give me a simple life, a single eye, a wealthy life—not because wealth is great, but because wants are few; simplicity in food and drink and raiment, and I was going to add, if I may, simplicity in our churches. Simplicity is not the order of the day, but it was characteristic of the life of Christ Himself, and if you and I be true to Him, we must manifest the same Divine simplicity in wants, habits, and deportment.

Then another outcome of this blessed life will be

BEAUTIFUL SELFLESSNESS.

I do not say unselfishness merely; I go deeper and say selflessness, a blessed self-hiding in a Christian solidarity, in which we share one another's burdens, weeping with those whose home has been shadowed, and whose cradle has been emptied, and rejoicing with them that rejoice. Oh, for more of this Christ-like selflessness in daily life. This is what we need in Scotland—the culture of considerateness. It is marvellous the change Christianity works in this respect. I have gone to a rich man's house and found the sweetest culture, the most abundant comforts, and yet I have gone away missing something. I have visited the same house after the great change had come over that man, and found a new sweetness and beauty and considerateness in speaking to the servants, correcting the children, and I saw in that the secret of a sanctified life, the lovely outcome of a sanctification in daily life. Again I have gone into the home of a working man and seen the unholy cuff and kick, the scorn on the husband's face and sourness on the wife's face. But going back to the same house when conversion has taken place, I have found the man become a courtier, and the woman a queen. A beautiful consideration and selflessness had come in as the outcome of sanctification in the daily home life.

Lastly, there will be a beautiful and

CHRIST-LIKE NATURALNESS.

I remember my friend, Pastor Monod, startling the people at Keswick by saying "all men need a second conversion." People pricked up their ears—was not this heresy? But, he continued, "I mean that a man must be converted from a natural man to a spiritual, and then back again from a spiritual to a natural man." That is what we want, to be brought to a sunny, happy life; and it ought to be the outcome of sanctification. How often have you observed that a housewife, for example, will answer all your questions about home affairs, and the like, in the brightest and most sunshiny manner; but put a simple question such as "How are you getting on with the Lord?" Lo the whole aspect changes, a gloomy, austere countenance is assumed, apparently as the proper religious bearing. We do want a spiritual grace to naturalise in us beauty and brightness; so that people may see in our daily life how sweet and lovely is the outflow of unrestrained grace and gladness in the Lord. I remember that John Henry Newman, in his pre-Romanist days, wrote that when asked "Why do you do so and so? Why do you spend so much time in prayer? Why are you so absorbed with Christ and his interests?" he replied, "The only thing I can say is, 'It is just our way.' Oh, that it may be "just our way" to be bright, happy, sunny Christians. It ought to be our way to be reflections of our Lord in look, word, and deed, and not least in temper and in the way we do everything and meet all around us. This is the outcome of sanctification in daily life.

I close by reminding you that there is no tribute of glory to God we can bring so real and true as this—the quiet display of a holy and sanctified life in our daily deportment and walk. A friend of mine once asked a young man applying for admission to the outward Church, "Are you a child of God?" "Yes, I am." "Under whose preaching were you converted?" "I was not converted under any man's preaching, but under my mother's practising." That is the best thing we can see as the outcome of sanctification in daily life.

The Irish Revival.

Last week we noted Mr. Moody's brief Sabbath sit to Galway, in the West of Ireland. On Monday e reached Athlone, and preached to a large audi-nce, business having been almost entirely sus-ended in order that the people might see and hear im. On Tuesday he addressed meetings in Sligo, nd Wednesday he devoted to Boyle, returning in ie evening to Sligo for another meeting. On Thurs-ay he addressed large meetings in Enniskillen. n Friday he spoke at Newry, and this closed his our through the Irish provinces. Following up s meetings in Waterford, Mr. D. W. Whittle nducted services there last week; this week he is Tralee. Mr. Merton Smith, after closing his ission in Dundalk, is now following up Mr. oody's visit to Newry. Fuller particulars of these forts we hope to furnish in our next issue.

THE BELFAST MISSION.

The work inaugurated in this thriving northern ty by Mr. Moody is being vigorously continued by e local brethren. United meetings are being held n both sides of the river with manifest tokens of od's favour. The large St. Enoch's Church has en filled night after night to hear speakers from e city, without any unusual attractions. The in-iry meetings were largely attended. Other meet-gs are being held this week. We understand that e names of over 3,000 inquirers were taken during e four weeks of Messrs. Moody and McNeill's issions.

TESTIMONIES TO THE WORK.

In The Witness of last week a number of impres-ve testimonies to the depth and reality of the ork at the Convention Hall are given by various cal and other friends who attended the meetings. e extract portions of two or three:—

Rev. Henry Montgomery (Albert-street) writes—is generally agreed that our city and district have en greatly stirred by the mission of God's noured servants. Large numbers of Christian orkers have received fresh strength and stimulus r future service, as well as additional experience the solemn business of speaking with their llow creatures on the momentous questions that me up in such work. Younger Christians have en encouraged to begin this form of service, and ve been happily engaged in seeking to win others the Saviour.

Rev. A. J. Wilson (Malone) writes:—It was my ivilege to attend many of the meetings, and to me in contact with many of God's people who ve been revived, and inquirers who had been akened, and I have not the slightest doubt that ere has been a real and glorious work of the irit of God—a work the magnitude of which, if it properly followed up, only the great day will clare. Wherever one goes there is found an un-customed readiness for conversation on the things eternity, and certainly the different evangelical nominations in the city have been brought into oser fellowship. This in itself is something to be ankful for. I believe our ministers during the ming winter should throw themselves heartily to evangelistic work, that young converts should gathered into classes for instruction, and that, en they have gifts and graces, work should be signed to them. Above all, we must continue with one accord in prayer and supplication."

Rev. Charles Davey (St. Enoch's), writes:—I n very hopeful about the results of the mission. nsidering the immense number who heard the ith, the clearness and power of the preaching, and e evident tokens of the Spirit's presence, there n be no doubt that a work has been done for ich there is abundant cause for thankfulness to od.

MR. SMITH IN DUNDALK.

The mission by Mr. Merton Smith in Dundalk, ich followed up Mr. Moody's visit, closed with a eat Gospel temperance meeting. The results of is mission have been very remarkable. The Lord s made bare his arm in mighty converting power, d we trust a great number have been gathered in. Of those who stood up to ask for prayer at Mr. oody's meetings many are now rejoicing, and a eat number have from night to night been added the throng of those who are not afraid to say they ve been led to Christ and have peace in Him. ore than once I found young men apparently posing and cavilling one night and the next or following saw them come forward to acknowledge they had found the Lord. We dare not say how many are converted, but we believe that over 200 have credibly professed to trust the Lord, whilst many others are more or less blessed.

The closing temperance meeting was addressed by Dr. Rainsford, Incumbent of Dundalk, Mr. Wilson, of Manchester, etc. Mr. Merton Smith, who was in the chair, kept the large audience of Protestants and Catholics bright and interested by some hymns and solos sung by him and the choir. Finally, there was a stirring address from himself, and at the close of the meeting 250 persons signed the pledge, and some anxious ones were dealt with.

Ireland is being moved by the Spirit of God, and the Lord's people need awakening to use the opportunity to press home the Gospel. At Banbridge, last Sunday, though the weather was not favourable, such a large crowd attended the tent services of Messrs. Carleton and Shea (I.E.Soc.), that the tent walls had to come down, and the preacher addressed a large crowd of hundreds outside the tent, as well as a crowd packed inside.

Mr. Moody spoke twice in Newry on Friday with marked results, and Mr. Merton Smith commenced a mission there on the Sabbath to follow up the work. Mr. Burrows, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, follows Mr. Moody in Sligo.

MR. MOODY IN MANCHESTER.

A brief mission of four days' duration was begun by the evangelist in Manchester on Sunday. For a week previous daily prayer meetings had been held, so that when Mr. Moody arrived, the way was well prepared.

On Sunday morning Mr. Moody addressed the workers at eight o'clock, in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, from Mark ii.; and he urged that the faith of the four men who brought the sick of the palsy to Christ should be exemplified in Manchester. The faith that will overcome all obstacles and hindrances is the faith which the Church and the world of to-day need.

Two services were held in the St. James's Hall in the afternoon and evening, when the vast hall was filled to its utmost capacity. In the afternoon Mr. Moody addressed both Christians and non-Christians. Those who are not Christians need to come to Christ for rest. Those who are, to take his yoke and therein find rest.

In the evening Mr. Moody preached and gave a very searching message. At the close he asked that those who desired to be prayed for should rise in their seats, when a very large number of young men did so. He was much struck to see so many, and said it surely meant that God was going to do a great work in Manchester. A number went into the inquiry room, where Mr. Moody was aided by a staff of experienced workers; while Mr. Leonard K. Shaw continued the meeting in the large hall.

The singing was in the hands of the Sacred Song Association, with a choir of 250 strong on the platform. During the remaining three days of the mission there were three services each day.

Soldiers' Home for Athlone.

The garrison in Athlone consists of a regiment of infantry, and two batteries of Royal Artillery, about 800 men in all, most of whom are either English or Scotch. The need of a Home is very great; there is absolutely no place outside barracks where these men can spend their evenings but the public-houses. Temptations abound on every hand, and there is as yet no way of escape provided.

Quite recently some of the troops went to a camp where there was a Home, and much Christian help. While there, many were awakened and touched by the simple Gospel preached, and some professed conversion. These men are most anxious to see a home opened here, which would be a source of spiritual blessing and temporal comfort to all the troops in the town.

A most suitable house is at present to let. If we fail to obtain these premises, it seems impossible to get another in any way suitable. As Miss Sandes is so overburdened, having already the responsibility of six Homes, we must make an effort to guarantee the purchase money, which is £200, and annual rent of £35. Miss Sandes, now at the Soldiers' Home, Park Gates, Dublin, will gladly answer any inquiries on this subject.

LITTLE EMIGRANTS.

How I wish readers of The Christian, who have so long supported Dr. Barnardo's work, could have been unseen observers of the many interesting incidents which occurred en route from Liverpool to Toronto amongst the children whom I had the privilege of accompanying on September 1 in the s.s. Mongolian. We began our voyage with a succession of strong westerly gales and high seas, which resulted in much discomfort and sickness, during which the children were devotedly watched and tended by Mr. A. B. Owen, the superintendent of Dr. Barnardo's work in Canada. The boys soon recovered health and bright spirits. Then came our last opportunities to faithfully deal with them about matters pertaining to eternity. It was when we were gathered with this object in view, we would have specially liked your readers to have been present to have watched the quiet, reverent hush of the children as they listened to the reading of the Scriptures; the stillness, broken only by feelings of emotion while we were petitioning God in prayer.

On September 12th we arrived at Grosse Island, when we were quietly informed by the authorities that all the steerage passengers would have to land and spend some time in quarantine, while all their luggage was fumigated. I landed with the boys. That part of the island in which we were located was little better than a miserable swamp, infested with creatures to us most loathsome. Our only shelter was a rough wooden shed; to make matters worse, torrents of rain fell heavily. Nevertheless, not a murmur was heard from the children, who remained cheerful throughout.

Through the energy of Mr. Owen we were able to leave the island after a stay of three days only, for which mercy we were deeply grateful. On September 16 we arrived safely at the Boys' Home, Toronto, and within a few hours of our arrival every boy emigrant was successfully placed out. Of course, I cannot say how many of these dear lads have truly given their hearts to the Lord, but I doubt if there be many who have gone to their new homes without having an earnest desire to feel God's guiding hand through the untrodden path of life's journey. Many fine gentlemanly fellows who were once inmates of our London Homes have called since I have been here; not a few of them are earnest workers for Christ.

THE Y.M.C.A. IN FRANCE.

The National Conference of French Y.M.C.A.'s took place at Valentigny, in the department of Doubs, Eastern France, from the 22nd to the 25th ult. At the request of the French unions, Mr. George Williams, accompanied by Dr. Kirby, London, and Mr. W. H. Mills, attended and took part in the proceedings. Reports were presented for the groups of Associations in the different departments, showing a considerable increase both in the number of Associations and the membership. It was announced that the Paris Association was erecting a building for its work, which, together with the site, will cost £40,000.

A leading family of French Protestants, the Messrs. Peugeot, of Valentigny, entertained the delegates in a princely manner. Pastor Appia, of Paris, Professors Bard and Porret, of Geneva, Mr. Armand Peugeot and Pastor Bach, of Lyons, were among the principal speakers. Crowded meetings of delegates and friends of the work took place day by day, the discussions at which were marked by a practicalness and a measure of enthusiasm unprecedented in French Y.M.C.A. work.

Mr. Williams's liberality has enabled the French national committee to engage the full services of a worker to visit and help the Associations throughout France, and to stir up interest in their work in places not yet occupied.

WESSON RIO HARBOUR MISSION.—Mr. Irvine writes from Rio, September 8, that the mission continues to be blessed in the work of helping and saving sailors. The meetings of late have been blessed by some happy conversions and bright testimonies of God's saving power. Mr. Williams will have reached Rio by this time. The hon. sec. of the work is Lieut.-Col. Hobbs, Carlisle.

The Evangelical Alliance.

CONFERENCE AT DUNDEE.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

ALTHOUGH a flourishing branch of the Evangelical Alliance has been working in Dundee since 1868, the annual Conference of the Alliance has not hitherto been held in that thriving city. Considerable local interest has therefore been awakened in the present visit; all the more that the Christian Convention, for some years held annually in Dundee, has on this occasion been wisely merged in the Evangelical Alliance Conference. This union of forces has proved strength, both in regard to the numbers attending and the character of the platform.

A conversazione, as also a welcome meeting, was held on the evening of Monday week. The Lord Provost of Dundee (Mr. A. Matthewson) presided, and gave the Alliance a hearty welcome to the metropolis of flaxendom.

Addresses of welcome followed by Revs. Andrew Inglis, John Reid, and J. E. Houston. Responsive words were spoken by Lord Kinnaird, Dr. Baedeker, and Mr. Lethaby.

Mr. A. J. ARNOLD concluded the proceedings of the evening by giving an outline of the new Report of the Alliance, indicating the aims and the practical value of the Alliance. He specially emphasised the fact that it does not propose to create artificial unity by the amalgamation of Churches, but to foster the unity which really exists, and to encourage its manifestation. A glance followed at the origin and history of the organisation, with a rapid review of its work at home and abroad in the way of furthering Christian unity, maintaining the annual week of Prayer, and last, but not least, taking steps on behalf of persecuted Christians from the days of Matamoros of Spain down to those of the Stundists in Russia. Even now the Alliance is pleading with the Emperor of Russia on behalf of these persecuted and scattered ones.

Each morning a devotional meeeting, presided over by one of the local ministers, was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall.

TUESDAY'S MEETINGS.

On Tuesday morning the Conference proper opened in the Kinnaird Hall, Lord KINNAIRD, who presided, very briefly introduced the proceedings, and after praise and prayer, the first address was given by Rev. H. E. Fox, the esteemed vicar of St. Nicholas, Durham. Some extracts will be found on another page.

Rev. PRINCIPAL DOUGLAS, D.D., moved what are known as "The Practical Resolutions:" that is eight resolutions drawn up in 1846, and commending brotherly kindness, prayer for the Holy Spirit especially on Monday forenoons, the observance of the week of prayer, the correction of error and the defence of the truth in a spirit of love, the owning of Christians of different bodies as brethren, and earnest prayer as well zealous effort for the advancement of the Kingdom of Christ. Having read these resolutions, the venerable speaker referred to many evident tokens that a true conception of the vital unity of all Christians is gaining wider acceptance. Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Wesleyan, Baptist, and other Evangelical bodies are found banding themselves together in the common work of a common Lord and Christ. In bringing this about he believed the Evangelical Alliance has been largely honoured.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

Rev. JOHN URQUHART spoke vigorously on the Postulates of the Higher Criticism; going back to the dawn of modern criticism and showing how doubt being thrown on the Pentateuch, men began to build up theories of their own as to its origin and authorship. Mr. Urquhart carried his audience with him as he swept these theories aside and claimed the Bible as a direct and infallible revelation from heaven.

In the afternoon Mr. W. S. FERGUSON, of Kinmundy, presided; having read Hebrew ix. and x., he recalled the message of Archdeacon Taylor as to the Infallible Word, the finished work, and the consecrated worker, and enlarged briefly and practically on these three points.

Rev. JOHN BENNETT, D.D., then gave an address on "The Once-offered Sacrifice." It was a clear and weighty setting forth of the orthodox view of the atoning sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ. In closing he remarked that an attempt is being made in the English Church to abolish the Lord's Supper altogether and institute the Mass instead. I have here (he said) a book which has fallen into my hands. We have, as you know, in the Church of England an authorised Prayer Book, but some are not content therewith, and here is a new Prayer Book drawn up by a curate (since promoted to a living), and entitled, "A Ceremonial of the Altar, and Guide to Low Mass according to the Ancient Customs of the Church of England"—that is, Romish customs. I have taken the trouble to compare it with the Romish Missal, and I find it is all taken out of the Missal. The speaker read the list of contents, all bearing on the Mass in various forms. Here, he continued, we have "Hail Mary, full of Grace," now said by many a Church clergyman. They confess to Mary and the saints, and beg these to forgive them. The priest is instructed to be careful in making the body of Christ, the wafer comprehending his most holy body, most holy soul, and most holy Godhead. These things are all from the Missal. He also found in the book one enormity which is not in the Missal, and which, he supposed the author devised for himself.

Why do we mention this on an Evangelical Alliance platform? Because he claimed that the Alliance which has helped many suffering Protestants must come to the help of the Church of England, and demand that it shall not be allowed to be to all intents and purposes as Rome itself. Let all Protestants unite heart and soul in a demand which cannot be resisted, that confession to man, Transubstantiation, the Mass, and a host of similar Romish practices and dogmas, must not be tolerated within the Church. It is an evil day, a day of sore need; and we look for the help and sympathy of all who know and rejoice in the simplicity and fulness of the Gospel of salvation through the once-offered sacrifice of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Bishop TAYLOR, of the Moravian Church, followed with an address on "The Substitutionary Work of our Lord Jesus Christ." The time expiring, his argument had unhappily to be left incomplete. With its Greek quotations, minute analysis, and retranslations of many passages, as well as its unfinished state, this address was unreportable. The speaker has promised to write it out for publication in Evangelical Christendom.

WEDNESDAY'S MEETINGS.

Mr. J. A. CAMPBELL, LL.D., M.P., presided, and the Rev. GEORGE WILSON, M.A., followed with an address on "Daily Life," which we give on a preceding page.

Professor J. RADFORD THOMPSON followed with an address on "Romanising Tendencies of the Day." As those who believe we have inherited a priceless blessing in the Reformation we must oppose stoutly that which we find sapping the very foundation thereof; though we would much rather be building up truth than exposing error, however necessary that becomes at times. We are asked to consider our duty as Evangelicals towards the Romanising tendencies of the day. These tendencies are very powerful, insidious, and widespread. Rome has evidently resolved, if possible, to recover Britain. It is now her coveted position; she feels that in losing it she lost her strongest post, and she is putting forth every effort to regain its allegiance.

What methods are employed? Rome is great at organisation, and during the last two generations has multiplied largely her churches, schools, reformatories, convents, monasteries, priests, nuns, and sisterhoods. Nor is this all; she is great at advertisement, and has a wonderful art in keeping her dignitaries and functions before the public mind by means of the Press. But, notwithstanding all this, the number of converts has been few compared with the efforts put forth. All of you may not agree with me in what I am about to say, but after pretty extensive investigation and observation I have come to the conclusion that the Romeward movement is all but spent—that is, towards the Church of Rome itself. But we come to what seems to me the more serious danger. I believe it is unquestionable that, especially in the English Church, the increase of Romanist principles and practices is greater than ever. What do I mean by these? I mean particularly the adoption of

SACERDOTALISM AND SACRAMENTARIANISM.

These principles, as distinguished from the organisation of the Church of Rome, are spreading, I believe, more widely than ever. A larger number of our clergymen, in the South at least, are assuming the position of, a discharging the functions of, "priesthood." T Mass is professedly offered in multitudes of called Protestant churches, and the body of Chr is held to exist on the altar after the consecrati of the elements. Some who hold these e principles of Rome repudiate her claims as church, but the fact remains that they ha adopted Romanist principles.

How are we to account for this, in days when have an open Bible and a preached Gospe Partly because in these days of unsettlement a unrest many crave for an authority relieving the of personal responsibility; and this they suppo they will find in a priesthood. The superfic opinion held in many quarters appears to that the great alternative lies between Rom Catholicism on the one hand, and Agnosticis on the other. Of course I do not adm that for one moment. I believe that h tory and observation alike show that ju where Rome holds widest rule there unbelief a scepticism peculiarly prevail. But while denyi the fact, it is well to note that the idea exists a tends towards the adoption of Romanist principl Moreover we feel that a priesthood interven between the people and God, and that the confe sional is an institution calculated to sap the sacre ness of family life and arouse the worst passio of humanity. Yet further we find that t spread of these principles and practices is det mental to spiritual life. Catholicism lays stress the external in religion and in so doing injures t vital and spiritual.

What is our duty in view of these facts? Fi a more diligent and systematic study of Scriptu It is ignorance of the Bible that leaves people op to Romanism.

THE BIBLE AND ROME CANNOT LIVE TOGETHE

Familiarity with the Word of God is one of the b defences against this insidious foe. We want mo definite study of what Evangelical Christian really is, remembering that it is not a mere ter but a thing of vital significance. We want understand our Gospel principles and privileges many do not now understand them.

Then we have to recognise the true nature of t Church of Christ as distinguished from Rom imitation; the true nature of a teaching ministry distinguished from a sacrificing priesthood; ministry depending not on an apostolical successi but conferred by Him who is the source of light a power. Finally, we want prayerful, resolute co fidence in God. There need be no panic. T Lord reigneth and will not forsake his church a his truth. Let us do our duty and leave the iss to Him, who to Rome's proud waves can say "Th far and no further."

Rev. JOHN WATSON followed with an address "National Righteousness," speaking out vigorous and plainly on the land question, the bothy syste and the liquor traffic.

The afternoon meeting was devoted to the qu tion, How are the non-churchgoing to be reache Mr. JOHN PATON, late of New York, presided, a gave some account of what has been done America on behalf of emigrants, who, to a la extent, lapse into entire unconcern as to religio matters.

A MIGHTY REVIVAL NEEDED.

BY REV. JOHN SMITH.

Whatever in the way of practical remedies have to propose I trust all will understand th everything is based on vital faith in the Gospel the grand remedy. Now, we have to recognise t extreme complexity of the problem before u "Non-churchgoing" is a convenient phrase, but does not cover the whole ground. Many who attend church are not what we would regard as l ing Christians; while, on the other hand, some least who do not go to church undoubtedly ha reached the Saviour in some way. Still, in such land as ours, churchgoing is a fairly satisfacto test of the state of the case.

Mr. Smith passed on to deal with statistics sho ing the magnitude of the sunken class, such criminals, drunkards, prostitutes, and vagrants— vast army all of whom might be regarded as outsi the churches. Then came the lower class labourers, such as the one-room dwellers (in Gla gow alone 35,000 families occupy one room), t farm servants, who are largely housed in bothi and thus shut out from the restraints of family life. Next came the industrial classes of artisans and mechanics, the large majority of whom do not frequent the churches, being unhappily met at the church door by a tax in the shape of a seat rent; many of them are impressed with the idea that the church is not in sympathy with them. In dealing with this class he maintained that long hours, Sunday labour, night work, and similar things kept many from the house of God.

Coming to a higher class, he showed the disastrous effects of mere pleasure-seeking, gambling (one of the gravest growing evils of the day), and racing. He might be asked if scepticism, as such, was a serious evil in Scotland. His own experience was that it was not. Very few deliberately break from the faith by adopting secularist views, although in some quarters nebulous ideas are leading young men to agnosticism. In Scotland, at least, scepticism and infidelity are not making headway to any great extent.

Coming now to the remedies, Mr. Smith said:—With regard to the sunken classes it is evident something must be done in the way of auxiliary helps. While we seek to bring them to hear of Christ we should do something in the way of restoring self-respect and habits of industry. Hence I feel that General Booth, and others like him, have set us an example of how to begin with this class. Much may be done in the way of temperance and shutting up public-houses, with their innumerable temptations, but besides we want to bring social remedies into wide action. I know, as I have already said, that the direct and grand remedy is the Gospel of the grace of God reaching the heart and conscience, but we must find means to bring it to bear. I have the conviction this state of things is not irremediable, and that the Church, being aroused, will regain lost ground.

How is this to be done? First, I believe, by within the churches. Hence I rejoice in what some have thought the unpractical movement after a higher and holier Christian life. There we shall find the driving force to help us to the solution of these questions. We have within the churches a mighty power to be let loose. We ministers value the financial resources of our people, but have we learned to value their vital spiritual force? What if the energy, power, and talents of our members were fully consecrated to Christ for his service! What a reserve power there is in the passive Christian life of our churches! Let that be stirred into activity, and we should have force more than equal to the task before us. In Aberdeenshire a gentleman moved on behalf of the farm servants resolved on special efforts to reach them. He got the Earl of Aberdeen to speak the first night, and the place was crowded by the class he sought to reach. There are hundreds of Christian men in Dundee and elsewhere who could do great things for the non-churchgoing if they were roused. I can give you from Edinburgh grand examples of advocates and other cultured and godly business and professional men doing splendid work in Bible classes and so on. It is we want, but the firing of men and women within our churches to a life of surrender and devotion. There lie the unexhausted resources of vital Christianity. And how much might be done for the saddest of all the sunken classes—our fallen sisters—were our Christian women roused to a sense of their power!

Many things might be added should time permit—special efforts for special classes, special and systematic soul-winning movements by our presbyteries, and the use of churches all the week round and not on Sabbath day. And I have often thought we should have lectures analogous to the University Extension Lectures, but by distinctively Christian men dealing with everything from a Christian point of view. These are hints of our true line of action. If, in a spirit of genuine self-sacrifice, our people throw themselves into a great evangelising movement, there is hope of our land and all lands. We want a mighty revival, and nothing less. With holy energy and living faith what might not be done in such a blessed crusade!

Rev. JOHN MACPHERSON said: I feel very hopeful about Home Mission work. I see what godly and devoted men are doing abroad, and once the church is stirred on the matter I expect to see similar results at home. What we want is life, new life, more life. As one said about a young convert trying to speak, "Give us fire and blunders rather than culture and coldness." I do not for a moment mean that culture is synonymous with coldness; but simply that we will welcome all—even if uncultured—who are full of the Holy Ghost and spiritual fire. Once Christian men and women are fully roused, we shall see great things.

In the open conference which followed, Dr. Clement Clemance urged house-to-house visitation, Mr. W. Roxburgh thorough district work, and Rev. John Reid home mission union. These suggestions were practical and pointed, and given as following on the lines laid down by Mr. Smith, and cordially accepted by all.

(To be concluded.)

WITH THE HOP-PICKERS.

BY WILLIAM LUFF.

FOR the tenth time Mr. T. S. Heley, of Wing, Leighton Buzzard, has conducted a few friends on mission work among the hop-pickers of Herefordshire and Worcestershire. Tracts were freely distributed in more than sixty villages on the way out and home. Some 150 hop-yards were worked, with the result that personal appeals, by printed or spoken words, were made to over 13,000 pickers. Some of these people were of the lowest order, while many were well behaved, and not a few showed signs of real Christian appreciation.

Among the hop-pickers proper we had many capital meetings. It was wonderful how in many cases our visits and appeals seemed timed and appropriate. In one yard Mr. John Jones, of Shepherd's Bush, was led to speak of his beloved daughter gone to heaven; many seemed moved, notably two women. As he concluded his address, one of them said, pointing to her fellow, "That woman and me can feel what you say, sir, for we had our two sons drowned." Sisters were there, and together we shed tears of sorrow and sympathy.

We were holding a meeting on Sunday morning in a farmyard where a man had died since the previous Lord's Day. While one was speaking we learned that the shed directly in front of us, with a padlock on its door, was where the dead body lay silently waiting burial in the afternoon. It made our service doubly solemn as we thought of the one who could not now hear our appeal, but who seven days before had mocked and despised the Gospel of Christ.

Perhaps our best meeting was our last. Work was over and the fires kindled for the tea and supper of some two hundred and fifty pickers. The smoke was rolling in clouds from barn and shed and open hedge-side, but as soon as we started a hymn, men women, and children gathered round and listened most attentively, while we told the story of the Saviour. Their faces would have been a marvellous study for an artist, had there been sufficient light to see the upturned countenances.

We found that more was being done for the pickers in these districts than in previous years, and would venture to suggest that Christians living in the neighbourhood should try and organise for future years to reach the many who come from afar to sojourn and work in the district.

"A TESTIMONY FOR GOD AT BILLINGSGATE" is the title of the new report of the Billingsgate Christian Mission. There is still a heavy debt on the building, and the committee will be glad to hear from any friends willing at once to lighten their burden, and to make it possible for the institution to be placed without undue delay in trust with the executive of the London City Mission. The hon. sec. is Mr. Alfred Walters, 6, The Corridor, Billingsgate Market, E.C.

MARYLAND POINT SCHOOLS AND MISSION.—This effort among East London poor continues to enjoy the Divine blessing. The missionary reports:—"This year I have made 6,013 visits and calls to the homes of the people, 591 visits to the sick and dying, read the word of God to the people 1,924 times, given away 6,107 gospel tracts, held 163 meetings in the mission hall, fifty meetings in the lodging-houses, and forty-nine open-air meetings." Copies of the annual report, with other information, may be had from Mr. John Stabb, 6, Norcott-road, Stoke Newington, N.

WHAT'S TO BE DONE?

I SIT in my office with correspondence, accounts, requisitions, appeals, etc., all round me, inwardly begrudging the time they conspire to absorb, which I would vastly prefer to spend amongst the boys already under my care. To minimise interruption, I have appointed Mondays from eleven to two, as a time specially devoted to seeing folks who wish to bring cases of boy-trouble before me—but, notwithstanding, my boy-attendant is frequently popping in, with the traditional formula, "A boy wants to get into the home, sir."

Well, our purse is empty; the home is very full; quarter-day, with a lot of urgent claims, is at hand; our receipts to support our four homes were nil this morning, £2 5s. 6d. yesterday, 18s. the day before. I ask, "What's to be done?" Let us see this poor fellow anyhow, and hear his tale.

G. O. P. comes from a village in Berkshire. He is now sixteen years old; has never known father or mother; was put in Hungerford Union when fifteen months old, and was brought up in the workhouse for nearly thirteen years, and was then placed out in the service of a neighbouring farmer at 3s. a week wages, no lodging, no food. To live on this pittance he had to lodge with an old widowed grandmother, aged eighty-five, who was herself receiving parish relief (1s. 6d. a week, and two half-quartern loaves), to walk two miles a day to his work and two miles back, and satisfy the cravings of hunger by eating turnips.

After a year's work he got 3s. 6d. a week, but about six months after he repeated to a boy a tale he had heard from another boy about a son of the clergyman. The clergyman laid down to the farmer that, as the boy's employer, it was his duty to thrash him for this. After some hesitation, the farmer was persuaded to do so. He and one of his men went down to the grandmother's cottage late one Saturday evening, and told the boy he was wanted downstairs. When he appeared he was dragged over to a shed, where he was stripped and held over the shafts of a waggon, while the farmer flogged him with a hunting crop. The next day the attention of the police and a doctor was drawn to his state, and a prosecution was undertaken of the farmer and his man, who were fined, the farmer 20s., and the man 10s. The sapient Bench, feeling, I suppose, that such interference between employer and employed must not be encouraged, refused, however, to allow the prosecution the costs incurred.

After the prosecution he could get no more work in the village, so made his way into Reading, where he found employment with a plasterer for three or four months at 9s. a week, but when this man had no more work for him he tramped up to London and tried to pick up his living for a month or so, carrying parcels, holding horses, etc., sleeping at night in Salvation Army shelters. In one of these a vagrant gave him the address of our Home, and advised him to apply to me for a start in life.

There is his tale (which has since been amply substantiated), and there stands the homeless, ragged, famishing lad. I sit back in my chair and I ask again, "What's to be done?"

We must squeeze in another bed somehow. It will never do to let him sink to the level of a vagrant without having a helping hand stretched out to him. The past may have warped his disposition and crushed out all desire for a life of honest industry. But some friends, for Christ's sake, will surely adopt this workhouse waif? £7 10s. will clothe each such lad, and keep him through the winter, and the £10 to pay for his emigration to Canada in the spring, so as to give him what he has never had before—a start in life."

To each reader I pass on the question, "What's to be done?" and add another, "Who will do it?" in the spirit of Heb. xiii. 16.

J. W. C. FEGAN.

The Boys' Home, 95, Southwark-street, London, S.E.

BLACKBURN, LANCASHIRE.—The Blackburn Y.W.C.A. convened a meeting in the town on Monday week to bid farewell to Miss Thompson, a former travelling secretary of the association, who sails this month for work in India in connection with the C.M.S. She made an earnest appeal for personal consecration to God. Heart-stirring addresses on the missionary subject were given by Miss Rose Johnson, of the North Africa Mission, and Mr. Marcus Wood, of the China Inland Mission.

SALISBURY CONFERENCE.

This conference is undoubtedly hearty and practical. With Mr. Thwaites for chairman, the meetings could not be dull. He is overflowing with energy, and is gifted in an unusual measure for conducting such a conference. Almost every moment is utilised for the best possible purpose. The after-dinner speeches, strictly limited to five minutes, are extremely interesting and suggestive. And the little Bible expositions that follow the tea are not less valuable.

The popularity of the conference is steadily growing. Each year the attendance increases, so that for some of the meetings the hall is hardly large enough. It is gratifying to find each year a larger number of Nonconformists are present. As denominational fellowship becomes more difficult there is certain to be a coming together of those who are one in evangelical truth and in living union with Christ.

The speakers, so far as their ecclesiastical position could be known, represented almost all sections of the Church. But many were known only as members of the body of Christ. Whether they were Conformists or Nonconformists did not transpire, and did not matter.

The chief advantage of the conference is that no one can return from it with a mere feeling of enjoyment. Not that the meetings are not interesting; but they are so intensely practical that everyone is stirred up to desire to do some definite service for Christ. In the brief hearty speeches of those engaged in various forms of Christian service new plans are suggested which others may usefully adopt. Contact with some of the speakers at Salisbury reveals how much of spiritual tact and ingenuity there is in the service of Christ. Not a few leave the conference to enter upon forms of work never dreamed of before. Mr. Thwaites has no affection for consecration that does not lead to service; nor is such consecration worthy of the name. "Whose I am, and whom I serve" should be the motto of every man who would live the consecrated life.

THE AFTERNOON MEETINGS.

After dinner, on each day, there was pleasant social intercourse, and friends spoke of the work with which they were more particularly identified. On Tuesday afternoon Rev. J. Hudson Taylor gave an account of an interesting conference in China, which he had attended about two years ago, which helped him to see how the work of Christ is developing in that land. Mr. J. E. Mathieson referred to the opium question, and remarked that the settlement of it was by far the greatest missionary question of the day. No less than one-half of the human race is settled in Asia, where the mischief resulting from the use of opium is so rife. It is the greatest hindrance to the spread of the Gospel in these regions.

On Wednesday afternoon, Rev. A. G. Wilcox obtained a good hearing in representing the claims of the Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland. Its Protestant character, Scriptural teaching, and Apostolic method ought to elicit the confidence, the sympathy, and support of all true lovers of Ireland. Quietly, and without controversy, the Readers are daily employed in visiting from house to house, in doing good as they have opportunity, and have invaluable opportunities of making known the truth to all sorts and conditions of men.

On Thursday afternoon there was a numerously attended missionary meeting. Mr. Thwaites, in opening it, said he had received a message from Mr. Eugene Stock, who was at present in Australia. "Tell the Christians at Salisbury Conference," he said, "that they will have to be very whole-hearted to beat the Australian Christians." Last year, the speaker added, we determined to have a missionary of our own, and we started a penny-a-day subscription towards his support. If any will repeat that experiment, we can send out another, who is desirous of going out.

Rev. Obadiah Moore (West Africa) gave a vivid little sketch of his own history, from his entering a school at ten years of age until now. Reminding his hearers of the words of Bishop Tucker, in Exeter Hall, "Africa waits!" he concluded by saying, with true pathos, "I will only add that Africa has waited long."

Mr. Dudley Kidd, of the Cape General Mission, greatly interested the meeting by the details of work which he gave. We have had a marvellous work, he said, amongst drunkards, and many have been saved. A lady has been courageous enough to enter drinking saloons to appeal to those to be found there. Many trembled for her as they saw her quietly taking this step; but her Father in Heaven was with her, and not a hair of her head has been touched. Some of the very brightest conversions which have come under our notice have been those of men found drinking in canteens.

LEICESTER CONVENTION.

INTERNATIONAL CHRISTIAN POLICE ASSOCIATION.

A Convention was held last week at Leicester, which, though not so large as some in numbers, was a marked time of spiritual power and blessing. It was planned in connection with the Christian Police Association, which holds two conferences annually, one in London, and the second in some provincial centre. The arrangements for the comfort and entertainment of visitors were admirably carried out by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Walker, of Enderby Hall.

The speakers were Rev. G. C. Grubb, Messrs. Millard, Campbell, Ewbank, Bidlake, and David the Tamil, and Mr. Dudley Kidd, of the Cape General Mission. Most of the speakers arrived on the Saturday and took part on Sunday in the services and mission meetings in Leicester and Enderby. A large men's P.S.A. Meeting was addressed by Mr. Grubb, and an open-air meeting on the lawn at Enderby by David the Tamil.

On Monday evening the keynote was struck by Mr. Grubb in a searching address on Daniel v. 23. Part of the Tuesday morning meeting was devoted to the C.P.A. Conference, the subjects being "Confessing Christ" and "Prayer."

Several policemen gave practical illustration by confessing Christ for the first time; and the subject was followed up by testimonies and forcible addresses from Messrs. Millard, Kidd, and Campbell. After some striking testimonies to answered prayer, Mr. Ewbank and David took up the subject, the latter speaking with great power and simplicity on the conditions of true prayer.

The afternoon meeting, taken by Mr. Grubb and Mr. Kidd, was a time of deep heart-searching. The addresses were followed by a continuous stream of prayer, the confessions and short petitions showing that the Holy Spirit was dealing with souls and revealing to them their need. In the evening the large Temperance Hall was well filled, the police delegates occupying the orchestra. Mr. Grubb's address on Ex. xii. 13, "When I see the blood I will pass over you," is not likely to be forgotten by any who heard it.

The praise-meeting next morning lasted by common consent from 9.30 to 12 o'clock, when it was cut short by the arrival of the brakes to convey the party to Enderby, where lunch was generously provided in the open air by Mr. and Mrs. R. Walker, followed by a meeting on the lawn and several "talks" with "David." Most of the travellers left for the evening trains with hearts full of praise and glory, a few remaining to help in a children's meeting conducted by Mr. Millard and a village meeting at Enderby with Mr. Grubb and David.

Band of Hope Union.

The continued progress of this organisation during the past year is largely due to the zealous efforts put forth in connection with the "Million More" scheme, the object of which is to increase the membership of the union from the enormous number of children remaining outside the ranks of any recognised temperance body. In the course of home visitation it was found that the children in one-third of the families visited were already members of Bands of Hope, proving the wonderful hold which the movement has obtained in the homes of the people. The invaluable work of the lectures in day-schools has been vigorously maintained; and many pleasing instances of the usefulness of this effort, not only to children, but also to parents and teachers, were received. Authoritative opinion has been obtained from the Education Department that the delivery of these lectures during school hours is quite in accordance with Code requirements. Many towns and villages have been again visited by the regular staff or honorary workers, for lectures, conferences, and meetings; and bearing in mind the importance of appealing to the eye as well as to the ear of children, a large stock of illustrative appliances has been utilised.

The issue of standard temperance volumes to be placed in libraries for young people has been continued. Compared with the vast capital invested in the liquor trade, the financial resources of the Union are small; but the work relies on the generosity and patriotism of all who have at heart the real welfare of young England. The address of the Union is 4, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

METROPOLITAN MUSIC HALL.—The seventeenth season of evangelistic services commenced on Sunday evening last. A crowded audience filled the building. The solos were rendered by Mrs. Randall, and an address given by Mr. Chas. Cook on "Life, death, and the great hereafter." About 600 persons remained to the after meeting, and much blessing was seen.

MR. MEYER AT CHRIST CHURCH.

Under very encouraging circumstances, Rev. F. B. Meyer began his new ministry last Lord's day at Christ Church, Westminster Bridge-road. The weather was extremely unpropitious; nevertheless, large congregations assembled morning and evening. No alterations were made in the order of the liturgical service; the prayers, however, were read by an assistant, whose voice, it may be said, is by no means too strong for such a large auditorium. Mr. Meyer's morning discourse was from the appropriate text, "By the manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God."

In the evening, Mr. Meyer preached an earnest and impressive sermon, from Rom. v. 17, "Much more they which receive abundance of life, and of the gift of righteousness, shall reign in life by One, even Jesus Christ." It was a very solemn message alike to saint and sinner. The preacher pointed out the great distinction there is in the Christian experience, between the bare possession of life, and that abundant life that enables a man to reign, to cope with indwelling sin, and to wield a saving influence over others. The grace of God, as shown in human salvation, was briefly but lucidly expounded; and some of its characteristics—freedom, the universality of its scope, and its marvellous channel, the God-man—were ably dwelt upon. Coming to close quarters with his hearers, the preacher searchingly inquired if and how far each had received this grace. He showed that failure in life and testimony had arisen from not receiving in all its fulness and overmastering power the Divine gift. There are many things not definitely promised by God, for which we may rightly pray; but the things He has promised it is our privilege to claim. Each morning before he leaves his bedchamber let the Christian on his knees claim the keeping and guiding power of God; if he does he will discover what possibilities of victory in the Christian life there are for him.

At the close of the evening service a short after meeting was held, to which a goodly number remained, and the day did not pass away without some gathered fruit. Doubtless there was fruit that the preacher as yet knows not of.

In his pulpit announcements, Mr. Meyer said he would be in the vestry to see all who wish to speak with him on Mondays from 4 to 6 p.m. On Monday evenings, at 7.30, a prayer meeting will be held. On Thursdays, at 11.30, there will be service, and sermon on some aspect of the higher life. On Fridays, at 8 p.m., a Bible class for Christian workers will be held. The subjects will be those of the Sunday-school Union International Series, and the class will be open to a l. On Saturday evenings at six o'clock, a prayer meeting will be held to ask God's blessing on the work. All seats in the galleries are free. Many of our readers will unite in praying that the rich and increasing favour of God may rest on Mr. Meyer's labours in his new and enlarged sphere of effort.

WESTBOURNE GROVE Y.M.C.A.—Seven years have passed since God led a few of his servants, interested in the spiritual welfare of young men in this neighbourhood, to organise the Bayswater branch. Attention has been steadily directed toward the principal object of the Association, namely, inducing young men to confess Christ among their companions, with the view of leading them to a saving knowledge of God's truth. That the efforts put forth have not been without signs following is seen in the attendances at the Bible-classes, and the numerous letters received by the secretary from young fellows conscious of having received spiritual renewing within the Association, from which also many have gone out to carry the glad tidings far and wide. Mr. Walter Wild carries on this good work at 172, Queen's-road, Bayswater, W.

A USEFUL AGENCY.—Good work has been done by the London Police-court Mission during the past three months. No fewer than 383 pledges of abstinence have been taken from prisoners, and 327 females charged with drunkenness have been helped. In addition, the representatives of the mission have visited 1,576 prisoners at their homes, met sixty persons at the prison gates, found homes for seventy-eight women, furnished small homes for ninety-eight families, provided situations for 182 males and females, restored seventy-nine women and girls (most of them outcasts) to their relatives or parents, sent fifty-seven lads to sea or to homes, provided clothing for ninety-one persons, had 124 special cases from the magistrates to inquire into, sent six cases abroad and seven to convalescent homes, and temporarily assisted forty-eight persons. The limit of its funds is the only obstacle in the way of still further developments.

For the Young.

OLD AND NEW.

As I was sitting at my desk, I noticed a soft, sad sound like tiny sighs coming from the garden; and I put down my pen, and leaned out of the window. The sighs were coming from the tree in front, whose leaves were already turning, and falling to the ground—one by one, one by one. Perhaps, I thought, it is sad for them to die. As I stood there, I fancied voices from the tree, scarcely louder than the sighs, and this is what they said:—

"I am tired, I am tired. Will it be my turn soon?"

"Very soon; see how thin your stem has grown. Soon you will fall, and be buried beneath the mould."

"And you, are you not tired?"

"I am content to live. I am growing old, but others will go first; and the children of the garden like us to linger late."

"Why," asked another leaf, greener than the rest, "why must we fall at all?"

"Because the Old giveth place to the New," answered the same sweet voice. "I am content to live, and I am more content to die, since God would have it so."

"And will there be a New?"

"Yes, with another year. A little time of sleep, and then an awakening, when God shall reclothe the world with green; but you and I shall be at rest for ever."

Then I listened no longer, but I fell to thinking of the Old and New, and I have woven my thoughts together to give to you to-day.

Well, let us think first of that old life. Perhaps to-day you sigh because it is the "same old life" with its round of lessons, or of tiresome duties, or of dreary want of joy. Do you long as I once longed, to change that "same old life" for another: another self, and another heart? I used to think it an impossibility; but one day it was done for me, by Christ, when I gave myself to Him. I found it out when I read these words: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." The old life will die when the new life comes. You cannot do this thing, but God can.

It may be you do not think, little child, you need another life. Yours is such a happy one. Christ said, "Ye must be born again." He knows and sees that death will end this life, and He would have you live for ever in the place prepared in heaven. Ask Him for this new life, and He will write your name in his book in heaven, and never will forget your name is there.

But we thought of other things—old friends, friends, who have played with us a little while and have gone away; friends, who have formed other friends, and do not need us now; friends, who one day lay so cold and still, and we were told they had left this world for ever. All our friends change, do they not? and we grieve sometimes that they cannot remain the same. Ah, but there is a new Friend for us all. Jesus says, "I have called you friends." Will you make this one your Friend? He will never leave you. He is "a friend that sticketh closer than a brother," and one who "loveth at all times." "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore." So death, which saddens us, will never separate Him from us; but by-and-by it will take us even nearer to Him, for then "we shall see Him as He is."

Then we thought of our old toys. Yes, there are many old things which do not please us now, if we are Christ's. Sometimes we say, "I wonder how I could have cared so much for that!" It's the new life which has pushed out the old. We are sorry when the leaves fall, but we shall not grieve in the spring, when the fresher, sweeter leaves are budding on the tree. God, when He takes away the old, gives us something better in the new. Two friends I know used to go to balls together, but one of them tasted of that new life, and she laid aside dancing with other old things. A little while ago she was standing by whilst her friend was dressing to go out; when she had finished she laid her hand on her Christian friend's shoulder, and said:—

"Do you mean that now you would not like to be going?"

"No, dear, not in the least."

"Well, it is strange, when you used to love it so; and I believe you are the happiest girl I know."

It is strange, but very, very true. It would be strange, would it not, were the tree persistently to cling to the old leaves and not permit the new to grow? This is what some Christians are doing. Little friends, if you love Jesus, seek to serve Him now. There is much your little hands can do; as well as work for older folks. There are little companions of your own who do not care for the new life and heart Jesus, our new Friend, gives. Will you seek them now? Ah, there are little ones abroad who have never heard. Will you help to send the news to them? Once before I told you about our Loving Service Band, and those who write to me at 2, Adelphi-terrace, W.C., shall hear more. God hasten the day when for the heathen old things shall have passed away. The old sorrows, and burdens, and sins. But we must hasten on.

We want to change the old garments we have worn, because God has told us we are clothed in filthy rags, and has promised us in Isa. lxi. beautiful garments of salvation and Christ's own robe of righteousness. People notice what we have on, whether it is the clothing of the body or the soul.

One Sunday afternoon you might study all the different kinds of garments spoken of in the Bible, and find out which God intends his children to wear. See that you are dressed as becometh a child of a King. The dress of the soul shows in looks, and words, and actions.

And troubles, too; we can remember many of the old. These also shall "give place," though not yet awhile. Some troubles only come to those who do not belong to Christ, and heaviness of heart gives place to joy. Sometimes we weep, little ones, in the morning, and have forgotten before night; and sometimes we carry a great sorrow in our heart for years; but beyond this world, which even now grows old, there lies our Home where Jesus dwells and comforts; for He will wipe away the tears from our eyes, who says: "Behold, I make all things new."

Dear little ones, shall we know each other there? You and I who have never met on earth. So love Jesus now, and live, that He may know you by-and-by in the fair new World of God.

MAY E. HODGES.

GLORY GLEAMS.

"Mother," said little Johnnie Wood, the other day, "is Heaven far away? It seems a long way off to children, but you talk as if it was right near." "And so it is 'right near,'" replied that Christian mother, "if we have Jesus in our hearts."

Is not this a happy thought? If we turn to John iii. 13 we shall see that the Lord Jesus spoke of Himself as being "in Heaven" while living on earth. How could this be? At first sight it would seem as though He must have been out of his element altogether, surrounded as He was by sin and so much that was hard and cold and loveless; also as we remember how little He was understood, even by his disciples. How could his days have been "as the days of Heaven upon earth"?

We shall, I think, find the secret in John viii. 29, where Jesus says, "He that sent Me is with Me; the Father hath not left Me alone." So, then, He lived in the constant enjoyment of heavenly company, and as we read the close of the verse we find He was continually engaged in heavenly employ, for He is able to say, "I do always those things that please Him."

Those who have heard no whisper in their hearts of heavenly secrets are quite unable to understand the heavenly joy which would spring from such sources as these, but it was very real to the Saviour. We remember how, upon one occasion, when his disciples had left him sitting, tired and exhausted, after a long journey, they were surprised, on their return with food, to find their Master evidently strengthened and revived, as though He had already partaken of refreshment, and so He had, but it was of meat which as yet they knew not of; but to a large extent they found by happy experience what He meant, when, after His death, resurrection, and ascension to the Father, He shed forth his own Spirit into their hearts, and as they lived in obedience to that Spirit, they found the joy of their Master fulfilled in themselves.

Dear young friends, would you not like Heaven to come down into your lives? With Jesus reigning in your hearts you will then be possessed with an everlasting joy, which will make you strong to do or to bear whatever may fall to your lot, and which will cause you not to be so greatly dismayed when earthly joys fade. Let us walk as children of light and we shall find our pathway grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. M. J. F.

AMBLESIDE.—During a short visit to the Lakes four meetings for children were held by a member of the C.S.S.M. Mr. Fleming, the secretary of the Y.M.C.A., which is heartily alive in the village, kindly offered the use of the lecture-room. The attendance rose steadily from twenty-five to two hundred, and on the last evening the children could scarcely tear themselves away. The presence and blessing of the Children's Friend were very surely felt in these little gatherings.

CLACTON-ON-SEA, ESSEX.—Children's services have been conducted here every every morning on the beach during the holiday season by Christians, both residents and visitors, apart from any particular organisations. A true spirit of fellowship in the Lord's work has been manifested, and we feel sure that eternal good will result. The children have shown great interest in the meetings, and a number have been gathered each morning, especially towards the latter part of the season. "A Singing Service" was held each weekday evening during the last four months, when a clear testimony was sounded forth in word and song of God's love and saving power.—A. S.

"NOBODY ASKED US."

A WORKER in the Chicago Bible Institute writes:—Two weeks ago in the after-meeting at our tent, after the children had passed out, Mr. Scudder called my attention to two children sitting on the front seat. Going to them, I said, "What do the girlies want? Do they want to be Christians?" The eldest one, whose name is Clara, said "O yes, but nobody asked us, and we have waited such a long time." Sitting beside them, I explained how Jesus had asked them long ago. Kneeling in a few moments the eldest one prayed that Jesus would take her heart and make it clean. We arose and I explained the words, Believe, Receive, Confess. I had a Testament in my hand, and the little girl asked if she might have it, and said, "Please mark the lesson we had to-day." This was, "Lord save me," "Lord help me," "Lord remember me." I marked each place and several other verses, asking her to be sure and tell mother, as soon as she reached home, all that had happened.

The next day we had a testimony meeting, and she was the first one on her feet, saying, "I gave my heart to Jesus yesterday, and He helps me and keeps me." She came every day through that week with her Testament. The next Tuesday she was not there, nor on Wednesday. Thursday I missed her. As she did not come on Friday, I sent three girls with two picture-cards to her home. They returned in a few moments, saying: "Clara is dead, they have just returned from the funeral." I went over to the house, found it all true. She was taken ill on Monday. Tuesday she asked for teacher; her mother, not knowing my name or address, put her off. Wednesday it rained, and she thought there would be no meeting. Thursday morning she grew worse; calling her mother, she said: "Won't you please sing—

I think when I read that sweet story of old,
How when Jesus was here among men, and the other verse about 'his hands on my head?'" But the mother did not know it. Then she asked her mother to read in her Testament the three marked lessons: "Lord help me; Lord save me; Lord remember me." I saw the Testament all marked with her dear fingers. She grew rapidly worse and passed away that evening, saying "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

GLASGOW.—The Convention held here last week on the deepening of the spiritual life was largely attended. The speakers were very much those of former years, and included Pastor Stockmayer. A deep impression was made by the truths so practically and earnestly presented.

TRUE CATHOLICITY.

BY REV. H. E. FOX.

AT EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE, DUNDEE.

WHAT do we mean by that very much misused term catholicity? Who are catholics and what is catholic? There is a catholicity evidenced by nature; science itself teaches that God is no respecter of persons, but at present we must confine ourselves to the answer from the spiritual point of view. The term catholic has come to be so closely associated with the concrete form of religion which we call the Church, that we cannot discuss the one without the other.

We agree that the Church of which we speak is the mystical body of Christ, the blessed company of the redeemed, the faithful of all people who hold and believe, as necessary and saving truths, those and those only revealed in God's Word written; in this we are all agreed. Some may fail to distinguish between the Church mystical and the Church visible; between the sound invisible Church and the corrupted visible Church; but I do not think any here are likely to fall into such mistakes. We are agreed that as there is but one Head, so there is but one body. The invisible Church we understand to mean the whole number of the elect which has been and will be gathered under one Head, which is Christ.

Holding such fundamental truths we are prepared to find little difficulty in answering the question, wherein does catholicity consist? It does not consist in a universal form of Church government. I often feel that the silences of the Bible are as instructive as its speech. Were modern divines called upon to re-edit the New Testament we may be sure a considerable number of chapters would be devoted to forms of Church government. Not so the Word of God; it is silent here. Did not the All-wise Spirit foresee the result of such silence in varying forms of government and rule? I feel sure He did. Such matters are passed over most lightly. Indeed, the learned Bishop Whitgift, writing in 1574, said: "I find no one certain and perfect kind of government prescribed or commanded in Holy Scripture to the Church of Christ. I do deny that the Scriptures do express particularly everything that is to be done in the Church, or that it hath put down any one sort of form and kind of government of the Church to be perpetual for all times, persons, and places without alteration." Similarly, a sagacious and acute statesman and thinker, Lord Bacon, wrote:—"I do confess that in revolving the Scriptures I could never find but that God hath left the like liberty to the Church government as He hath done to the civil government, to be varied according to time, place, and accidents. So likewise in Church matters, the substance of doctrine is immutable, and so are the general rules of government. But for rites and ceremonies and the particular hierarchies, policy, and discipline of the churches, they be left at large."

Again, this true catholicity does not consist in uniformity in Church usage and worship. I have often thanked God there is no book of Leviticus in the New Testament, nor any elaborate rites and ceremonies. Two sacraments there certainly are, but even their form is given in barest outline, while for the rest there are but general principles of decency and order. The meaning seems to be that as God has not prescribed any forms, these may vary if the worship itself be "in spirit and in truth."

We hear much talk of home reunion, and we ask, union of what? Union of the visible Churches? I find no such thing in Scripture. True catholicity is not what we expect but what we enjoy; not what ought to be, but what is. Has not the prayer of our Lord in John xvii. been answered? Are we still waiting to be made one? We are not. As we read that marvellous prayer we find the Lord dwells on the unity between Himself and the Father as a type of what the unity between his members should be. But the Father and the Son are not identical, nor are they uniform. What is the unity? It is a unity of will, of heart, of purpose, and of love. Such a unity is ours now; it cannot be destroyed. We are one with Him, one in Him, and members one of another. What then do we desire? That this unity should be manifested in the eyes of all men, that the world may see our true catholicity. I venture to look forward with hope to the day when all Churches or denominations holding one Head should recognise each other as true members of the one body, and while allowing each other the widest freedom consistent with harmony, shall unite without uniformity in mutual respect and love. The only rivalry shall be for the exaltation of Christ, and the only ambition for the glory of God. We expect that day to come, not by the fusion of church bodies, but by co-operation in love of the independent Churches. On that line the Evangelical Alliance has been working for years, and God has greatly blessed it.

OUTWARD BOUND.

A MEMORABLE farewell meeting was recently held at the new East End Sailors' Rest and Institute. We were bidding farewell to Chaplain THOMPSON and daughter, returning to Valparaiso. His address upon the work of God among seamen on the Pacific Coast, and the union of Christian hearts and hands around the world, will long be remembered. The account of his own conversion at sea, and the conversion of the barque Hopeful in a mighty tempest in the Pacific Ocean, to become the permanent floating Bethel in the Bay of Valparaiso, are proofs that God moves in a mysterious way

His wonders to perform,
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm.

He heartily thanked the British and Foreign Sailors' Society for all the help and inspiration given to the few labourers in that very much neglected South American continent. Much sympathetic prayer was offered for the young man, Mr. W. WILLIAMS, who was also present and took part. He goes to take up the seaman's work in the yellow fever port of Rio de Janeiro, which was so successfully carried on by beloved young Wesson, who, after two years of blessed consecration, entered into the rest of heaven. Deputy-Master WHITE, of the Millwall Docks, spoke of the blessing since the rest was opened, and of Brother Mattson's labours among Scandinavian and British seamen.

Mr. PARKINSON, who had for several years loyally helped the ladies at Smyrna Rest, told how he was engaged in the Victoria and Albert Docks with Louisa Lady Ashburton's Seamen's Rest as a centre. Mr. JOHN HAM, representing the British and Foreign Bible Society, Antwerp, spoke of how that port, where William Tyndale and other eminent translators did so much for our English Bible, was now linked on with the port of South America.

These brethren sailed on board the S.S. Aconcagua, while on board the same boat was Captain Thompson, who was also converted at sea and took part in memorable meetings on that coast last year, when there was a revival on board several ships, many being converted. He goes out for the South American Missionary Society to take charge of their mission ship, the Allen Gardiner, and has with him Mr. Gustave Johnson, another Christian sailor, as his boatswain. At the same time the barque Santa sails for Valparaiso, the captain of whom received a tract from the agent of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society at Cork eight years ago. He recently returned the tract to the agent, telling of his own conversion and the salvation of twenty men on board their vessels on the Pacific coast. When that tract was given eight years ago, the captain was second mate and the only one person at the Gospel meeting, but God met the audience of one and the simple tract was blessed to the ultimate salvation of many.

MADAME WILLARD.

IN the castle home of one of our noblest Englishwomen, ennobled, not simply by birth, but by the heroism of a life devoted to the relief of human anguish, there is resting through these autumn days another woman, whose name is a household word in the great sister country across the Atlantic. Wherever American women are banding together to rid their country from the fatal thrall of the drink curse, there FRANCES E. WILLARD is captain and standard-bearer. But a sore trouble has lately invaded the life of this devoted woman, in the translation of her beloved mother, whose career we record this week, at the age of eighty-seven. Her most intimate friend describes her as a bird with a broken wing, and it is to seek recruitment that this illustrious American lady has become a guest of Lady Henry Somerset.

MISS F. E. WILLARD.
From a photograph by Mr. C. E. Smith, Evanston, Ill., U.S.A.)

MADAME WILLARD was born in Danville, Vermont, then passing through the first stages of settlement. When fifteen years of age she commenced to teach, a work in which she was occupied until her marriage with Mr. Willard in 1831, from which time for many years she devoted herself to the training of her children, through whom her great ideas and aspirations were destined to be wrought out. Far away from the town with its noisy tumult, amid "the quiet happenings" of farm-life, five noble children were born, two of whom died in early life. It was her one aim to fit her children to play a great part in the world, and she was always considering how to qualify herself to train them. For this purpose, to the astonishment of her friends, after three children had been born, she and her husband gave the larger part of five years to study in Oberlin College.

She held it to be her duty to maintain her health, so as to be bright, agreeable company for the older children, and to be cheerful with the younger ones. She often said, as she took an early leave of her family, that she must go to bed and sleep for her children's sake, that she might still be young-hearted when she became old. She always placed the acquisition of character infinitely before that of wealth, because it was immortal. If only mothers would give themselves away to their children, retaining the training of them in their own hands, instead of entrusting them to strangers, and remembering that what they are their children will be, there would be fewer tears shed over prodigals. Miss WILLARD told the writer, in the course of conversation, that when her own mind became assailed by sceptical suggestions, her mother's usual method of reply was to start singing some favourite hymn, not surprised or impatient, but opposing her strong faith to the questions of the young soul. On one occasion she was asked at a mothers' meeting what change she would make in her method if she had her children to educate over again. She answered, "Only this—to blame less, and praise more." She was more careful to praise her children for doing well, than to blame them for doing ill. In her eyes every natural gift was God-given, and it was far better to help her child to do her best in her own line, than force her to do half best in any other line.

She was a woman of rare strength and fineness of character, inherited from a noble Puritan ancestry. Her mind was clear and independent in its thinking; her will prompt and decisive; her courage such as to win for her the title of St. Courageous! Those who knew her best, declare that they never saw her evince the slightest sign of fear at things which many dread. Her one dread in dying was, lest others might be pained and hurt. "I can leave myself," she said, "in the hands of God, but for you people to be disturbed is what has disturbed me."

But her sympathies welled over the home barrier to the great world outside. She was among the earliest to sympathise with the movement for the abolition of slavery; she took the total abstinence pledge when she was fifteen; her views of physical culture, and of the education and sphere of women, sketched out the course to which public opinion has been slowly advancing. One who knew her for thirty years says that she seemed never to harbour the least ill-will towards any human being. Her country, state, school, her grandchildren, the Church of Christ, her neighbours, the slave, the inebriate, the wrongs of Ireland, the persecutions of the Jews, the need of a Kossuth, or a poor domestic—all these found welcome in her warm and ever-enlarging heart. And all was ensphered in her love to Christ.

Her last years were spent at Rest Cottage at Evanston, near Chicago, where her husband died in 1868. Here her daughters graduated—Mary, the one sister, whose story is told in "Nineteen Beautiful Years,"* Frances, the other, began to develop that marvellous faculty which is filling the world with its fruit. The story of the latter gifted lady has already been told in these pages. It is enough to note the salient points of her life. In 1871 she was elected president of the Women's College at Evanston, and shortly after this commenced to speak at public gatherings, and has since held her place almost without a peer among women who speak.

In October, 1874, Miss WILLARD accepted the invitation of the Women's Christian Temperance Union to work with them as corresponding secretary, and beneath her guidance that movement has spread through the United States like a prairie fire. She has been from the first some years in advance of her time, and has earnestly advocated the complete enfranchisement of women, so that they may be able to influence temperance legislation. This idea is rapidly gaining ground in the States, and in some parts each woman possesses a vote. But the constitution of the society is so elastic that the various branches are left free to choose or reject this principle as a plank in their platform. We do not think that England is altogether ripe for the introduction of this principle, and if it be adopted as an ideal to which to work, great liberty must be given to each constituent branch to formulate and work out its own specific method of influencing the politics of our country.

Miss Willard is almost unequalled as an organiser. In one year she and her secretary wrote as many as 10,000 letters, and she is almost constantly travelling to confer with workers, speak at conventions, and quicken the currents of temperance influence. Returning from these distant journeys she has always relied on the welcome and counsel of the beloved mother in the old home, and it is difficult to estimate the blank in her life, now that this noble woman has passed into the "Unseen Holy," leaving behind her a trail of sunset glory.

Since February, 1877, Miss Willard has received inestimable help from Miss Anna Gordon, who was first introduced to her in one of Mr. Moody's meetings in Boston. As her friend and secretary, Miss Gordon has lived in the closest association with Miss Willard, arranging her journeys, accompanying her in her trips, conducting her correspondence, and organising with great skill and method the work of women for women in all parts of the country. Clear-brained, quick-witted, passionately fond of music, accurate in arrangement, tender and sympathetic in her friendship, she has been a sort of "organised providence," content to be unknown, and her work but slightly recognised, if only she may save the strength and enhance the usefulness of the gentle companion to whom she has devoted her life.

Evangelical Continental Society.

From many parts of Europe this society has received cheering tidings from hopeful workers, which raise the wish that the Continent may receive to a much larger degree the attention of Christians in England. Not only are more labourers needed, but it is also important to put the faithful witness in a position thoroughly to cultivate the district allotted to him. In France there is evidently stir and dissatisfaction in the world of thought, and the long-stifled voice of conscience is making itself heard. It was a remarkable utterance of the Abbé Garnier, "In trying to combat Protestantism, we have overshot the mark, and have abandoned the Book of books written by God for our instruction and edification."

As to the evangelistic field, multitudes are ready for the Gospel. A striking instance of this was experienced by a family which settled in a Roman Catholic village for a three weeks' holiday. The family worship first of all attracted children, and then the parents. Soon it was necessary to hold it in a barn, and then on Sunday 200 persons assembled to learn something of Christian truth, of which they were in perfect ignorance. Belgium is still a most helpful field.

The paganised Christianity so long current in Italy has made the people utterly indifferent to religion. This is the great obstacle to the Gospel. Still, the record of the past year is encouraging. For some years there has existed in Rome among members of the Papal Church a society for the study of the Bible, and for delivery of lectures bearing upon it. Progress, amid priestly opposition, is also reported from Spain and Bohemia, and in all these places a certain measure of support is afforded by the Evangelical Continental Society, of which the secretary is Rev. R. S. Ashton, 19, Blomfield-street, E.C.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

We give below two letters of characteristic spirituality, by the celebrated Thomas Binney and John Pye Smith, which a contributor found the other day in a copy (purchased from a second-hand bookdealer) of John Medway's "Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Dr. John Pye Smith," the well-known Theological Tutor of the Old College, Homerton. The volume had presumably belonged to the lady who was privileged to receive these peculiarly graceful and instructive epistles, which it is believed have not hitherto been published:—

"Homerton, Aug. 9, 1841.

"My dear Madam,—

"With grief I reflect that, a considerable time ago, you favoured me with a kind, instructive, and edifying letter; but that I have not yet acknowledged your kindness. While I ask your forgiveness for this so long a delay, I beg to assure you that it has not arisen from insensibility. Immediately on receiving your favour, I determined to write to you. The reason of my failing to do so was the unceasing pressure of duties, requiring from me the devotement of every successive portion of time, till actually I lost sight of my obligation and of the flow of time since it was contracted.

"Now then, dear madam, I beg your acceptance of my affectionate thanks for your thinking of me, your prayers for me, and the excellent sentiments from the Word of God with which your letter is so happily replete. This is a most pleasing and encouraging fact, for it enables me to cherish the persuasion that 'the Word of Christ dwells in you richly,' and you enjoy the blessedness of those to whom that word is precious and whose constant delight is in it.

"The doctrines, precepts, and promises of the Holy Scriptures, received with faith, and united with prayer, are indeed the Christian's storehouse. Unspeakably great is the mercy that you are enabled to derive support and consolation from it. I pray that the God of all grace may confirm and increase to you this blessing more and more.

"The recent marriage of your beloved and excellent daughter has given to me, as to others who know her value, great pleasure: for we have reason to believe that her union with Mr. —— is productive of their mutual happiness. I am well assured that, under the influence of the purest religious principles, she makes her happiness subordinate and instrumental to Christian usefulness.

"That all grace for sanctification and comfort may be richly granted to you, is the heart's desire and prayer of,

"My dear Madam, yours faithfully,

"J. Pye Smith."

"Kennington Common, June 5, 1841.

"My Dear Mrs. ——,

"I received your letter, which greatly affected me, and increased exceedingly that interest which I have always felt in you; for, although the afflicting hand of God, which has so long been upon you, has rendered it impossible for us to have any intercourse, yet my thoughts have not seldom been turned towards you, and my sympathy excited both with respect to yourself and your much esteemed partner and family. I was delighted and thankful to find by your letter, that you retained not only so clear and full a view of the great truths of the blessed Gospel, but so firm a faith in them, and that you enjoyed such a measure of humble hope and calm peace from the persuasion of your personal interest in the blessings they bring. 'At eventide it shall be light.' I am grateful to God on your behalf that thus it is with you, and that, amid the weakness and weariness of a long, dark season of sorrow, such bright and blessed beams from the reconciled countenance of our Heavenly Father visit your spirit, cheering and strengthening it with Divine supports.

"I could not help reading your letter to the deacons of the church, which still regards you as a member and sister in Christ; they have known you far longer than I, and I felt that they would be interested by hearing something, not only of you, but from yourself. I had almost, however, over-calculated my own firmness; I could scarcely get through your letter without tears, and your old friends were as much affected by it—so deeply did we feel our hearts touched, and our minds moved, by the thought of God's goodness towards you, in strengthening your faith, and 'filling you with peace and joy in believing.' Continue to trust and to plead the promise, and you will find it as true as when first uttered, 'My grace shall be sufficient for thee; my power is perfected in weakness.'

"I find from Mr. —— that some Christian friends unite in prayer for you and him on particular days. I shall not fail, I trust, sometimes to join my supplications with theirs, and to take part in this holy exercise of affectionate intercession. May the Lord continue to bless you and keep you, and to lift up the light of his countenance upon you—to be gracious to you, and to give you peace! With the assurance of my Christian regard, remembrance, and prayers, I am,

"My Dear Madam,

"Very truly your friend,

"T. Binney."

KINGSTOWN Y.M.C.A.

This union of young men for spreading the Gospel among their fellows had a prosperous time during the year that is past. Distinct progress has marked the work of providing an agreeable and profitable place of resort for young residents, strangers, and visitors. A glance through the pages of what is regarded as the best report which the association has issued abundantly justifies its title of "Work Done." The hopeful views which were cherished regarding the benefits likely to accrue from the new hall at 40, Corrig-avenue, have been amply realised since its opening in April, 1891, and the committee are rejoicing at the way in which the work of the Lord has prospered in their hands. There has been a considerable accession of new members, many of whom have proved a decided help as Christian workers, nearly all who join doing so for the sake of the opportunities thus afforded of entering Christian service. The junior section for youths between 12 and 19 years of age is a recently formed special feature, as is also the Ladies' Auxiliary, which, during its year of existence, has, in many ways, done very solid service.

In connection with the Association's Missionary Union there are two members engaged as curates, three in the Irish Church Missions, one in North Africa, and one in charge of a Presbyterian Mission Church. A former member, now in business in Australia, writes that he is using the many opportunities afforded him of preaching the Gospel of Christ, both in the streets and under cover in Sydney. Some measure of support is also afforded by the Association to the "Qua Iboe" Mission, on the west coast of Africa, which is identified with the Irish Y.M.C.A., its two missionaries having been members of a North of Ireland association,

The Sunday-night Gospel meeting has been well maintained, members of different denominations presiding in rotation. There have been evident tokens of blessing among the unsaved, and Christians have frequently testified to revival and strengthening in their own souls. Every Friday a united evangelistic meeting is also held. Members' meetings and quarterly "socials" have been much appreciated. Public lectures have formed an important and useful part of the Association's programme, with the additional advantage of material assistance to the funds. In a letter written to us by the secretary from 40, Corrig-avenue, Kingstown, co. Dublin, mention is made of the fact that just now there is much need of about £30 for the general purposes of the Association.

CONVENTION IN PARIS.—It is proposed to hold again a series of meetings for the Deepening of Spiritual Life and mutual edification, similar to those held last year. Revs. E. W. Moore, M.A., of Wimbledon, and C. G. Moore, of the China Inland Mission, will conduct the meetings, together with Rev. Dr. Noyes, Pastor Theodore Monod, Revs. Dr. McAll, W. Gibson, H. Bramley Hart, S. H. Anderson, and others. The days fixed are Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, October 25, 26, 27. Communications respecting the meetings may be addressed to Mr. W. Soltau, 28, Rue d'Auteuil, Paris.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR ISRAEL.

Upwards of three years ago, on returning to London after attending some meetings at Gloucester, Rev. John Wilkinson listened with sympathetic interest to a suggestion by Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, that the time had come for "more prayer that the Lord would remove the veil from the eyes of Christians about Israel." Invitations were accordingly sent out for the first all-day meeting for prayer which was held on September 30, 1890, and numerously attended.

The meetings this year, held on Friday last, were remarkable for the outpouring of the spirit of prayer in confession of sin, intercession, supplication, and thanksgiving. Mr. J. E. Mathieson presided at the 9 a.m. meeting. A small company gathered, and Lamentations v. and Zechariah i. having been read, the chairman based his remarks on verse 15 of the latter chapter: "I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease; for I was but a little displeased and they helped forward the affliction." The second "displeased," said the speaker, refers to God's displeasure with his own people. The heathen come and add tenfold to Israel's misery, and God is "sore displeased" with the nations. Here we get the neglect of man on the one hand, and the Divine compassion on the other. God meets man's selfishness with his own comfort. (Compare the selfishness of Hezekiah, in Is. xxxix. 8, with God's comforting words, in Is. xi. 1) God meets man's cruelty towards Israel with his own patience, carrying out his plans quietly and unseen by man. He preserves the Jew against all natural expectation. God meets man's neglect with his own loving-kindness. Even the true church needs to have "To the Jew first" hammered into her.

We are beginning to see the shaking and the stirring of the dry bones of Ezekiel xxxvii. Israel's nest is being disturbed in the lands of their dispersion. They cannot mix up with the nations round about. They begin to realise their nationality. They hold many of the avenues to power, and are pressing more and more to the forefront. Christ came to his own, and they rejected Him. But there is hope. The fig-tree is an emblem of Israel, and in Matt. xxiv. 32, 33, and Luke xxi. 28, 31, we are bidden to look for consolation. Summer is nigh, when the things spoken of are coming to pass.

At 11 o'clock, Colonel Morton took the chair, and called the attention of a large gathering to the fact that simultaneous meetings were being conducted in many other places in England, Scotland, Ireland and abroad, showing a more widespread interest in the spiritual condition of the Jew, and a more Scriptural understanding of the Word of God. It was hoped that friends would establish as far as possible in the towns and villages of this land, a monthly prayer-meeting for Israel. After reading part of Genesis xiv., he observed that Melchizedek filled up, as it were, the void in the Aaronic priesthood, for he was a king-priest upon his throne. He comes forth to bless Abraham, who, with a very small army of 318 souls, had gone against the strength of four kings. How did Abraham get the victory? It was through his faith in the Unseen God, who he knew was his Friend.

The room was closely packed at 3 p.m. The chairman at this time was Rev. John Wilkinson, who was thankful to announce that he had received a telegraphic message that the keys of the new hall of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews were now at his command. The congregation spontaneously signified gratitude to God by singing the Doxology.

Rev. George C. Grubb led the closing meeting, which opened at 6.30 p.m. He spoke on Zephaniah iii., and called attention to the threefold occurrence of "in the midst":—(1) For the cleansing of Jerusalem; (2) for the conquering of her foes, and (3) for communion with the cleansed and with the conquered. That we may hasten it, let us see if God has done the same with us. For it is impossible for an unclean heart to have power with God or with man. There is lack of power from lack of purity. There are four terrible nots mentioned against Jerusalem:—(a) She obeyed not the voice; (b) she received not correction; let us get rid of stubbornness and sulkiness of spirit: (c) she trusted not in the Lord; may God have mercy on the unbelieving believers assembled here: (d) she drew not near to her God.

The just Lord comes into our midst to cleanse away what is offensive in his sight. Let God come into the midst of this Jewish work and purify it. And then what is the consequence? "Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem."

It is better to shout than to doubt;
It is better to rise than to fall.
It is better to let the glory out
Than to have no glory at all.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY CENTENARY.

By way of opening the very interesting programme in celebration of the centenary of the Baptist Missionary Society, a large meeting was held on Monday evening in the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

Rev. John Aldis, who presided, announced himself as the oldest Baptist pastor in England, and said he had known the Society for sixty-one years, and had spoken at one of its meetings in 1835. He had never known men wiser, holier, happier, and more beneficent than those who had known it best and served it most. The present was a praise meeting, crowned with the priceless blessings of a hundred years. Never was the work larger or the prospects brighter than now.

The centenary address was given by Rev. J. T. Brown, of Northampton. In the past hundred years fresh things had been attempted, and great things had been done. From the thought in Carey's mind, missionary societies had sprung up on every hand, and missionaries by the thousand. The world for Christ had now become the set aim and universal ambition of the whole Church. The record of the society was a story to inspire the devoutest praise and wonder. Looking to the future, Mr. Brown said that their position was as grave and exciting as weighty duties and grand possibilities could make it. A pressing cry for help had come from China and India and many lands, and he urged the rank and file—the entire membership of their churches—to be animated by the spirit of their fathers. The question was intensely personal, and he asked his hearers to consider, each one, what they were doing to further the cause.

MESSRS. FULLERTON AND SMITH.

A correspondent in Ipswich writes of a very happy and fruitful series of Gospel meetings lately held by these evangelists in that city. The meetings were held in Baptist and Congregational churches.

It was a joy at the after-meeting to seek the lost and perishing, and point them to "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Although in the earlier days of the mission it was difficult for souls to take the step of going into the vestry to be personally dealt with, each night souls might be found in the pews by those who were ready and yearning to lead wanderers to Jesus. More good is often done by taking individual cases than at the larger gathering.

Each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon the Christians had a feast of fat things, and it will be a long time before they forget the Bible-readings, conducted by these two men of God.

On Sunday afternoons the evangelists held meetings for men only, while Mrs. Fullerton, aided by lady Christian workers, conducted meetings for women only. It was a joy to hear that at almost every women's meeting souls find their way into the inquiry room and are saved. A friend was stopped by two ladies after one of these gatherings, who said with tears, "We never hear things like these at our church."

On Saturday afternoons Mr. J. Manton Smith talked to the children; these were bright happy services. Saturday evening was given up to very enjoyable and profitable services of song.

While writing this, some one comes to tell me that a backsliding young woman has returned to Christ, and her young man is also anxious about his soul. Two days back I met a Christian father in the street. He has the joy of answered prayer, and either two or three of his children are now in the fold of Christ. At one place of worship, where the ground had been much prepared by prayer and waiting upon God, a teacher tells of the conversion of seven or eight out of a class of nine of the very roughest youths in that Sunday School, and he told me, "I expect to see them all brought in ere the mission closes."

One of the largest tea meetings ever held in Ipswich preceded the closing crowning service, where every point of vantage was occupied. It was delightful to see the happy restful faces as friend exchanged greeting with friend. They leave Ipswich with the hearty goodwill of the Christian people for a three-months' mission in Liverpool.

MANCHESTER Y.M.C.A.—The prizes won in the various classes, held during session 1891-2, were distributed on Monday night in the rooms of the Association, Peter-street. The Mayor of Manchester, Mr. Alderman Leech, by whom a portion of the prizes were distributed, regarded the institution as of the greatest value to the young people of the city. It had done a vast amount of good, and he hoped that it might go on prospering. The Mayor of Salford, Mr. Alderman Keevney, who also distributed prizes, added his testimony to the value of the work of the Association.

Y.W.C.A. IN DUNDEE.

Closely following the meetings of the Evangelical Alliance came those of the Dundee Y.W.C.A., Friday being the fourth anniversary of the opening of the fine new premises in a central part of the town. This branch has been in existence sixteen years, and has now a membership of over 900, including a large number of young women from the factories. It is evidently a power in the town, as was shown by the very large social gathering on Friday evening, when the Kinnaird Hall was closely packed. It is evident, too, that, while this branch takes full advantage of their various departments for the general well-being for which the Y.W.C.A. affords such scope, yet its first and foremost aim is the winning of immortal souls for Jesus Christ.

A ladies' conference was held on Friday afternoon, amongst the speakers being Hon. Emily Kinnaird, Miss Morley, of London, and Miss Doddrell, the latter giving an earnest address; she seemed to bear the message that "time is short" straight from one of the Lord's servants but recently called home. Some secretaries of country districts gave short, bright accounts of work in villages, specially Brechin and Errol.

The chairman at the great social gathering in the evening was ex-Provost Moncur, a well-known Dundee philanthropist. The principal speaker in the evening was

Mrs. Baeyertz, who commenced on Sunday a fortnight's United Mission with the Y.M.C.A. in the town, and who, in the full assurance that the Lord is at hand, knowing that she has, in Christ, the power to cast the life-line to perishing souls, does it with no uncertain aim. She at once won the sympathy of her audience by saying that she was reminded by that great meeting of the coffee suppers at home in Melbourne, at which she had often spoken. Her message that night was especially to the Lord's children, and as she gave it she would fain have each one ask herself, Is it I? From the words in Rev. ii. 3, "I know their works," she drew the solemn lesson that though these were not lazy but active, working Christians, yet, of Laodicea, God said, "I will spue thee out of my mouth." Did this mean that they should lose eternal life? Nay, but that the children of God should be cast away from work for the Master. They were lukewarm, not wholehearted. It is work, work, work everywhere, said Mrs. Baeyertz; "but as soon as work becomes the object, instead of Christ, let them stop work and go aside. She thought there were many Christians who had Christ outside the door of their hearts. How could they be Christians and have Christ outside the door, some would ask? In this way. That He was not reigning as King, supremely, in the heart. Whose will was being done in their life? Their own or Christ's? Here was the test. Christ is knocking at the door. He says, Open it to Me. That is something we must do ourselves. Christ will not do that for us. What does it mean to open the door? It means Christ in the heart; and that is heaven, on the way to heaven. What is the meaning of the shut door? It means there is a hindrance which prevents its opening. When the door is open Christ will come in and sup. "There is," concluded the speaker, "very little time. Wake up, child of God."

CONNEMARA ORPHANS' NURSERY was established to rescue the orphans of Galway and Mayo rendered destitute by the famine of 1847, but is now open to the whole of Ireland. The cases of some recently admitted were very touching. The father of one family died leaving eight children totally destitute of any means of support. Other children reached the orphanages with very little clothing, and most of those taken in were in bad health, needing care and nourishment; bills for food and clothing must continue to increase, but the management looks to the Father of the fatherless to incline many hearts to help these needy little ones; while it is never forgotten that soul-needs are still greater. The matron is Miss Butcher, Glen Owen, Clifden, co. Galway.

THE LATE MR. JOSEPH WEATHERLEY.—Friends of this departed Christian have expressed a desire that there should be some permanent memorial of his useful life. His interest in all religious and philanthropic movements, and his success in individual soul-winning, were of no common order, and issued in the most blessed results. It was in connection with the Homes for Little Boys at Farningham and Swanley, that the various qualities of his mind and heart found their readiest and fullest manifestation; and it is thought that a memorial window in the Boys' Chapel at Farningham would be a very suitable tribute of respect and love to his memory. Friends wishing to promote this effort may address Lord Kinnaird, Mr. George Williams, or Rev. F. B. Meyer, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge-road, S.E.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR SOCIETY.

BY REV. J. B. MORGAN, CHESTER.

II.—HOW TO FORM A SOCIETY.

The desire to form a Christian Endeavour Society often originates among the young people themselves. They read or hear something concerning the movement, or perhaps on a visit to friends come into actual touch of its operations. With the freshness and enthusiasm of youth they seize on the new idea. It appears just the thing in which they may find fellowship and service, and which their church, as a whole, is needing. A few of them gather together and ask, "How can we best start a society?" The present paper will attempt a simple answer to that question.

The first thing to do is to consult the pastor, or some leader of the church, whose interest in the young is well assured. It is possible some of the older folk will be, at first, a little prejudiced against the introduction of "new methods" and "multiplied organisations"; therefore, it is best to enlist the sympathies of some one with ripe experience and influence in the Church life. Try the pastor first. Tell him what the young people are feeling and longing to do. He will generally be only too ready to assist in any movement which promises the deepening of the spiritual life, and an increase in his band of workers. Should such a representation fail to convince him of the advisability of forming a Y.P.S.C.E., it will probably be best to wait patiently till the way is opened. That will not be long.

The Endeavour Society is rapidly breaking down all prejudice in England, as it has already done in America. Dr. Clark insists as a sine quâ non that the pastor shall be in full sympathy before a society is started. As a rule, that holds good; but they say there is no rule without an exception, and at least one may be found here. A certain society was formed under peculiar circumstances. The pastor could not see his way, and, as a consequence, it was commenced on neutral ground, and the meetings held in a public room. The work it did was convincing, and ere long it was received open-armed to the church premises, where it now meets with the pastor's earnest co-operation. In that case the end very nearly justifies the means. It should nevertheless be distinctly understood as an Endeavour principle that it is better to have no society than force one upon an unwilling church.

Here comes in the application of the Endeavour motto, "For Christ and the Church." Till the way is clear, and as the best way to clear it, the young people should loyally support the existing organisations. Doing so they will soon prove themselves worthy to be entrusted with work on their own lines. When permission to attempt the formation of a society has been obtained, call a meeting. Begin on as broad a basis as possible, avoiding all appearance of cliqueism and bureaucracy. It will be found better not to trust entirely to pulpit or Sunday-school announcements, or even to handbills. Every young person in the congregation should receive a personal, cordial invitation to be present. Let the same thing be done as far as possible outside among personal friends, in shops and offices; but don't attempt to proselytise. A letter specially written to each one will work wonders in procuring a good attendance, and will well repay any extra trouble. Remember, it is for Christ and the Church.

In case some may be overlooked, have at each exit door of the church, on the Lord's day before the proposed meeting, a young person to buttonhold and invite any who may possibly not have received the letter. A kindly word will have more effect than a hundred wall-posters. As a sort of anticipatory hint, it may also be said here that the printing of the Y.P.S.C.E. should always be got up as neatly and tastefully as possible.

in details tends to produce a slovenly society. They are "only trifles," but they are among the trifles that "go to make up perfection," and "perfection"—as Michael Angelo said—"is no trifle." Therefore, do not "despise the day of small things." Keeping clear of mere red-tapeism, create as favourable an impression as possible by attention in these small matters. An attractive room, or a bare room on which some little attention has been bestowed to make it look homely and inviting, a hearty greeting, a general sense of interest and welcome, may be among the humble means used to win young souls to the Saviour.

Aim to make the preliminary meeting as bright as possible. It should not be allowed to degenerate into a set and formal business gathering. The spiritual aims of the society should be kept in evidence by song and prayer. In Endeavour meetings much, of course, depends upon the leader, but, as will soon be proved by actual working, more upon the members. The Sunday School Union gladly furnishes Endeavour literature for they purpose of starting societies, and a plentiful supply should be obtained for distribution, that those present may take it home and study at their leisure. Some who do not see their way to join at first will probably do so on acquiring fuller information. The pastor is the most appropriate president for the first meeting, and either he, or someone else well posted up, should read and explain the constitution.

In many instances someone already acquainted with Endeavour work is asked to open the subject, and for practical utility that plan cannot be bettered. There are many ministers and young people who are actively engaged in propaganda work; having proved the society for themselves, they are very willing to help in its establishment elsewhere. Practical knowledge will generally be found more serviceable in the initiatory stages than that obtained from pamphlets. The object of the society should be clearly set forth. Its essentially religious nature; the different grades of membership; and the prayer-meeting pledge—at once in its stringency and its reasonableness—should be fully explained. Then let the meeting be thrown open for questions, and the friend who has been invited to speak will no doubt be glad to answer them. The following twenty minutes will probably be far more lively than question time in the House of Commons. It is simply astonishing in how many lights and side lights the society presents itself to different minds. Probably more doubts and difficulties will be cleared away in that twenty minutes than in all the rest of the meeting.

One or two words of counsel, almost in the nature of warning, may be permitted here: First of all, do not tinker unnecessarily at

THE MODEL CONSTITUTION.

Be ready, without prejudice, to take as much as can be reasonably carried out. The Christian Endeavour constitution has been so carefully thought out, it has worn so well, it is so wonderfully reasonable in all matters of detail, it has behind it such a wealth of experience, such an honoured history, above all such evident tokens of Divine blessing, that it deserves the very highest respect, and only for grave reasons of convenience and adaptability should any alteration be allowed. Especially beware of tampering with the pledge. It is triteness itself to say that the pledge is the "backbone of the society." A society without the Endeavour pledge is not a "Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour" in our present sense, and has no right to the name; just as a society with the Endeavour pledge and without the name is a Y.P.S.C.E., and ought to take the name. Here and there one comes across these invertebrate, emasculated societies calling themselves "Christian Endeavour." Nearly always they are in a limp, unsatisfactory condition. Many that have attempted to start without the pledge have been compelled, in order to exist at all, to reorganise with the pledge as part of their constitution, and whereas they were failures, pitiable and abject, before, they are well succeeding now.

These may seem strong statements to make, but they are made on the basis of experience; the basis of the man who baffled the Pharisees by saying, "One thing I know: whereas I was blind, now I see." There is prayerful thought in every line of the Endeavour constitution.

At the close of the first meeting invite the signatures of those who are willing to become members; and let those who there and then take the pledge, or who hand in their cards previous to the next meeting, be "The Endeavour Society." The starting strength of the society is then known, and the number of committees and their personnel can be decided on. Those who sign the cards of membership afterwards will be received into the society with the usual formalities, and form a nucleus for new committees. The aim should first of all be to obtain active members, but not to unduly press anyone into the active members' ranks. Far greater persuasion may be exercised to obtain associate members. The reason for the difference will be obvious on reading

THE TWO PLEDGES

You want only decided, earnest, active Christians on the first roll. You want all who have any leanings towards good things on the second.

The strength of a society does not always consist in its numbers. It is infinitely better to begin with ten active members who will be faithful to their pledge, than with a hundred, the majority of whom are indifferent. We want all to be Christ's, and to work for Christ, but we only want those who are his to be called his, and only those who are at work to be called workers. Inactive active members are an anomaly.

On the lines here indicated an Endeavour Society may be formed, and on the flesh and bones and sinew of organisation the Spirit of God will breathe, and there shall be an army to do battle for the living God.

THE GOSPEL CARAVAN AT A FAIR.

This "Caravan," after doing good service in a number of the Northamptonshire villages, and among the boot-making operatives, has for some days past been in Buckinghamshire. Passing through High Wycombe on the way to London, an exceptionally good opportunity for service seemed to present itself in the approaching annual fair. It was decided to remain in the town a few days longer for this purpose, and by means of tracts and speech and song to carry the Gospel into the midst of the pleasure-seeking crowds.

To preach the Gospel from an ordinary rostrum to a quiet and orderly congregation, or amid the sanctities of the house of prayer, is a very different matter from attempting to lift up one's voice amid the din and racket of hundreds of discordant cries, steam organs, rifle ranges, fried-fish stalls, and almost every conceivable element of "Vanity Fair." On Saturday and on Sunday many excellent occasions arose for bearing Gospel testimony, and for distributing in printed form the message of salvation. Open-air meetings were conducted afternoon and evening, assistance being cheerfully given by local friends of various denominations.

On Monday morning, the weather being bright and promising, crowds flocked in by carts, by rail, and on foot, from the country. Thousands of tracts and leaflets were distributed, and in almost every instance received with an expression of thanks. Notwithstanding various interruptions and other difficulties the service was carried through, and hundreds must have heard the statement of the way of salvation.

It is an unspeakable privilege to carry the Gospel in this way to those who are evidently unfamiliar with it, and who seem so completely out of touch with any of our ordinary religious efforts. The neglected towns and villages of our land have special claims upon our sympathy and help. The work of the "Gospel Caravan," if vigorously and efficiently supported, will fill a gap too often disregarded by workers in the Church of Christ.

P.S.—May I be permitted to state that Mr. Hadlow is not now associated with the work of the Caravan?

Christian Endeavour at Wood Green.

A society was formed here at the end of last year, fourteen active members joining it. Prayer-meetings and look-out committees were at once appointed, and missionary and tract committees were afterwards formed. A number of young people undertook to collect weekly pennies to be devoted to mission work abroad, and they have done admirably.

A member writes:—"The most interesting gathering is the monthly consecration meeting, when the roll is called, and each active member renews the vows to Christ. Many have testified to the great help these meetings have been to them. We now number nearly forty. We had six associates, three of whom have since decided for Christ and become active members. So we have much to encourage us."

THE GOSPEL IN HOSPITALS.—A correspondent writes that through the Society for Distributing Scripture Truth the wards of Islington Infirmary have been supplied with Scripture texts and rolls. She says: "I hope all Christians will help this society, for it ought to be well supported, in order that every infirmary and hospital throughout the Kingdom may in like manner be supplied with God's Word." The secretary of the society is Rev. W. M. Brown, 7, Pevensey-road, Eastbourne.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

DEPARTURE OF MISSIONARIES.

The great Exeter Hall was crowded by a magnificent audience on Monday evening for a farewell meeting to some 130 workers about to depart soon for various parts of Africa, India, China, and Japan, in connection with this Society. A large proportion of these brethren and sisters are proceeding to the foreign field for the first time, while others are returning to active service after furlough. Some are wives returning to their husbands. The platform was crammed with the outgoing friends and their sympathisers, and a spirit of intense and serious interest prevailed throughout.

The burden of Sir JOHN KENNAWAY'S opening address as chairman was the present crisis in the fortunes of the Uganda Mission. He said that mission was begun without the thought of dependence on any secular arm, but the advent of the British East Africa Company had altered the situation, and they could not now be indifferent to the political situation. Sir John recapitulated the steps recently taken by the C.M.S. in deputising the Government with respect to Uganda, and announced that the East African Company had decided to accept the proffered help of the Government for a further period of three months. News had just been received from Uganda, as recent as June 16, to the effect that the missionaries there were all in good health. The chairman feelingly commented on the special importance of the great gathering, and on the responsibility of those who stay at home to hold up by prayer and sympathy all who have gone to the front of the battle.

Much interest was excited by the roll-call of the missionaries, gone through by Mr. WIGRAM. Those present responded to their names, and brethren representing different parts of the world-wide field briefly pleaded the claims of their respective spheres. It was specially touching to hear of three sisters out of one family going to labour in the Gospel in East Africa. A speaker from the Niger region gave the sorrowful intelligence that Dr. Battersby is now on the way home again invalided, and it is doubtful if he will be able to return. A veteran Indian missionary, Rev. R. Clark, who has borne the burden and heat of the day for the space of forty years, with trembling voice pleaded for help in harvesting the fruit of much toil among the Afghans and Sikhs in the Punjaub. This part of the proceedings gave a striking idea of the widespread and far-reaching character of the work of the C.M.S., and the need there is for a large and generous support of its manifold operations.

In introducing the new missionaries going out, of whom there are twenty-nine sisters and fifteen brethren, Mr. WIGRAM expressed surprise that the ladies should be almost as two to one. Representatives of these "recruits" also addressed the assembly, creating much sympathetic concern as the result of the earnest and zealous spirit shown in their pleading words of entreaty or exhortation.

An address to the missionaries was given by Canon FAVELL. The occasion was altogether a memorable one.

TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

He who takes the child by the hand takes the mother by the heart.

I esteem it better to keep children in awe by a sense of shame than by fear.—Tertullian.

Your son is safe just in proportion as you develop the whole of him, and dangerous in proportion as you stunt him.

Your child needs sympathy as much as it needs bread. The soul is often hungrier than the body; but no shops can sell it food.

As the Sunday-school teacher sits among his boys, he ought to say to himself, "If God be not here, why am I here?"—Spurgeon.

You may as well expect to dream a house or a ship into being, as to build up the habits of boys by easy indifference and well-wishing.

Do not break your boy's spirit. By nature he is not clay that falls and flattens, but an indiarubber ball that springs up every time it falls.

It is computed that there are thirty millions of girls in India under fifteen, and that only one-third of a million are under any sort of instruction.

"Don't touch," generally is a bad rule. Children have a touch-hunger, and it must needs be gratified. But a wise mother would superintend the operation.

A sleeping babe! What a sight for any woman to behold, especially for those who have in large development the large beautiful love of children—God's gift to womanhood.

Then spake the angel of mothers,
To me in a gentle tone,
'Be kind to the children of others,
And God will bless thine own."

"COALIES" IN LONDON.

Of the various "special" branches of work carried on in connection with the London City Mission, one of the most interesting is that among the coalheavers and coal carmen scattered about the metropolis. This branch of work has only been in operation some three or four years, and at present there is only one missionary employed among the "coalies" scattered over the whole of London, but that he has during this time gained considerable hold upon a large number of the men was clearly evident at a meeting held at the Mildmay Park Wesleyan Chapel on Monday evening. This was one of the periodical tea meetings held in different districts, when some 400, including their wives, gathered to spend a happy evening.

The meeting opened with the singing of one or two popular hymns, in which the men heartily joined, after which a short bright address was given by Colonel J. F. Morton, of the Mildmay Conference Hall, who presided. Now was revealed the secret of how the missionary, Mr. Walter Prentice, has so remarkably won the hearts of the men. He is, it seems, popularly known as "the man with the music"—the "music" being a small portable harmonium which he has been in the habit of carrying with him as he has gone from one coalyard to another, singing the Gospel to the men who eagerly gather round. In this way he would often sing several Gospel songs, accompanying himself on the little instrument in the mysterious box; and thus the music has, many a time, been an introduction to the reading of a verse or two of Scripture, and a plain short talk about the need of the way of Salvation.

The "hurdy-gurdy," as some of the men call it, has, however, become rather unfit for use, and the men among themselves have contributed enough to buy a new and smaller instrument for the missionary's use, the presentation of which was a considerable item in Monday's programme.

In acknowledging the gift, Mr. Prentice took the opportunity of having a homely word with the men respecting the "unspeakable gift" which he is so constantly speaking to them of. Asking what they would have thought of him if he had scornfully rejected their present, he pleaded with them to accept the offer of the gift of Jesus Christ, just as he had accepted their gift, and to thank Him for it. One or two other brief addresses were given, and a short after-meeting was held, when there was some personal dealing with the men, several of whom were much impressed, and some of whom, it is hoped, have stepped out of the darkness into the light.

WOMEN AND TEMPERANCE.—The remarkable meetings which were held in the Memorial Hall, on Friday, May 6th, when the first conference of the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union was held, are chronicled in a special report issued by Lady Henry Somerset, who, in an accompanying address to Christian workers, says: "I earnestly urge you to consider whether you cannot show your sympathy to this great international movement, by affiliating with it the magnificent temperance work you are carrying on, and rallying under the banner that now waves the world over. In asking you to do this, you will understand that we do not seek to interfere in any way with the methods of any organisation, with its constitution, or with its officers; we simply endeavour to bind the hearts of women in the universal tie of love to God and to humanity, and to enlist them in the great war against legalised temptation." The report may be obtained post free for six stamps from the Secretary, W.W.C.T.U. Offices, Albany Buildings, 47, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

LIVERPOOL CENTRAL Y.M.C.A.—At an inaugural meeting and prize distribution last week, Mr. T. Jameson, general secretary, reported that with the co-operation of the clergy and ministers of the city, a great many young men had been introduced to Christian homes and to safe and elevating social surroundings. For their intellectual requirements a course of weekly lectures, on various interesting topics, was provided. The libraries had been freely used, and over 700 addresses and papers on literary and social topics had been given. Between 500 and 1,000 persons for different purposes resorted daily to the premises in Mount Pleasant, among whom there pervaded, it was hoped, a Christianising influence. About 600 religious appointments had been conducted during the year, in addition to daily family worship. The work of the institution having grown, it had been found necessary to make every available extension that the premises would admit, the most recent improvement being that of a "social room" close by the entrance to the institute, also increased accommodation for evening appointments. The meeting was presided over by the Mayor (Mr. De Bels Adam), was addressed by several friends.

THE CHRISTIAN'S OBLIGATION.

To do for others in some sort
What Thou hast done for me,
Since in such work thy saints have found
A closer walk with Thee.

Not to despise the lowliest task,
If done but in thy name;
Why scorn to fill a servant's place
Since Thou hast filled the same?

WITNESSES UNTO ME.

Acts i. 8.

Brothers! sisters! 'tis your calling
To bear witness for your Lord,
For you are his servants truly,
And must heed his ev'ry word;
Ye must stand up boldly for Him,
Never counting cost or pain,
Gladly bearing scorn and suffering,
So his name may glory gain.

Christians, are you witness bearing?
Soon the Bridegroom will be here,
For the night is growing darker,
With the dawn He will appear;
Are your lamps alight and shining,
Ready for the warning cry,
Praying others to believe it,
That the Lord indeed is nigh?

—E. F. Heinekey.

There are heights beyond our dreaming
There are joys beyond our scheming,
In the purpose and the counsel
Of our Lord,
And our peace is folden,
Within the promise golden—
"I am with thee, and will keep thee,
"To the utmost of my word."

—Clara Thwaites.

Oh, how unlike the complex works of man,
Heaven's easy, artless, unencumbered plan!
No meretricious graces to beguile,
No clustering ornaments to clog the pile;
From ostentation as from weakness free,
It stands like the cerulean arch we see.
Majestic in its own simplicity.
Inscribed above the portal from afar,
Conspicuous as the brightness of a star,
Legible only by the light they give,
Stand the soul-quickening words—

BELIEVE AND LIVE.

FOR WAKEFUL NIGHTS.

(By an old Writer.)

When courting slumber,
The hours I number,
And sad thoughts cumber
My weary mind;
The thought will cheer me,
That Thou art near me;
Whose ear to hear me
Is well inclined.

My soul Thou keepest,
Who never sleepest;
'Mid gloom the deepest,
There's light above.
Thine eyes behold me,
Thine arms enfold me,
Thy word has told me—
"God is love."

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—The Athenæu Hall, North-street, Brighton, has been secured f special services in connection with this mission, to b commenced on Sunday next, afternoon at 3.30, eve ing at 7; also on Thursdays at 7.30 p.m. The pr sence and co-operation of Christians in this purel unsectarian evangelistic effort is earnestly invited.

SERMON-LANE MISSION is the centre of a man sided work for God amongst the poor of Islingto Sabbath morning services are highly valued by few regular attendants found among others presen but in the evening, when home claims are not pressing, the hall is generally well filled and earne attention is manifested. Many now follow Chri in London, some in distant lands remember wit gratitude the good influence which guarded the young lives in Sermon-lane. The good work ha been steadily maintained through the bereavement and difficulties of its last year; and its present activ organisation for reaching the poor in byeways as we as highways, warrants expectation of continue usefulness. The superintendent, Mr. Wm. Wes 54, Liverpool-road, N., is ever ready to give infor mation to those who feel an interest in this mission.

WORK IN CHAMBERI, MADRID.

Five years ago, in some letters from Spain, I mentioned, among other missions visited by myself and my son, that of Mr. and Mrs. Fenn, in the district of Chamberi, in the northern quarter of Madrid. It has been established twenty years, and is what all missions in foreign countries ought to be, simply evangelical and evangelistic, not a reproduction of one of our many sectarianisms, which are objectionable enough where they are indigenous to the soil, but still more so as exotics in other lands.

Here our brother and sister, with English and Spanish helpers, have preached and taught Jesus Christ and Him crucified, salvation from sin, and victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil, through the obedience of faith and the indwelling of the Spirit. Many precious souls won to Christ have finished their course with joy; others have carried the good tidings to places near and far, while a goodly number remain in fellowship, of whom some preach the Gospel and others are earnest teachers, tract distributors, etc.

But the chief part of the work is carried on in the day schools and three Sunday schools, where about one hundred children are taught the Scriptures by converted men and women.

From the beginning more than 6,000 have passed through these schools, of whom many have died in the Lord; not a few are members of the church, and of these are some of the best and most reliable teachers. Much fruit, direct and indirect, has been borne in the conversion of parents and in the spread of the Gospel over great districts of country. Every kind of opposition has been brought to bear against this invaluable work, but it has never been more prosperous than now, three of the schools having to refuse children for lack of room.

For many years these schools have been chiefly sustained by those honoured servants of God, Mr. George Müller and Mr. Wright, whose work at the Orphan Houses at Ashley Down, Bristol, is known throughout the world. The sum required is about £50 per month, but owing to the falling off in the sums entrusted to Messrs. Müller and Wright, they have been obliged to notify Mr. Fenn that after October their support cannot be relied upon. I cannot suppose that God means these schools to be closed, which they must be if the funds are not forthcoming.

Among our editorial notes will be found some remarks bearing on the subject of missionary support through the channel of small gifts contributed by congregations and young people's missionary unions. May I suggest that a few churches or unions should assume the privilege of sustaining these Chamberi schools, and thus supply the lack caused by the necessary withdrawal of the grant hitherto provided by Mr. Müller's institution? R. C. Morgan.

Geneva Railway Mission.

The Geneva Railway Mission has a pressing need just now. Our evangelist is leaving us in November, to engage in temperance work; and one of our directors has notified us that he cannot continue his help. In view of this we should like to find a Christian medical man, well versed in French, who would give all his time to the work of the Mission, caring for the souls as well as the bodies of our dear railway people.

We can offer £40 or £50 per annum. If unable to find a doctor to give his entire time, we should be glad of the help of a competent evangelist. We also want a nurse, who would work from love to the souls of the people. The active aid of a lady of independent means would be very welcome. May the Lord send us whomsoever He pleases, but one who loves Him and loves souls. I am taken up now with other duties, and had to relinquish some of my outdoor activity, so that we are more than ever in need of help. L. E. Rilliet.

SOLDIERS' INSTITUTE, GIBRALTAR.—Another successful year's work has been marked by the growing use of this Institute by soldiers and sailors, notwithstanding increased accomodation and attraction in other directions. Nightly meetings have been held, and workers have met with much encouragement. During the stay of the Channel and Mediterranean fleets and German squadron last year, a German sailor came forward at the close of an interesting meeting, and, with tears in his eyes, expressed thanks for the blessing he had received in hearing the Gospel in his own language. The Institute has been the means of spiritual blessing to many, and is highly valued by the men who use it. The hon. sec. and treasurer is Mr. H. S. Clarke, Essendene, The Downs, Wimbledon.

THE DREADED CHINA FAMINE.

We are thankful to receive from our friends of the China Mission headquarters extracts of the latest letters to hand from Shensi, which give a brighter prospect as to the food supply:—

Mr. Thomas King, writing from Ping-yang-fu on July 15, says:—"The outlook is much better than when I last wrote. Some heavy rains have fallen, so that so far as this part is concerned [referring to the hills near Ping-yang-fu, where he was staying] the autumn crops can be planted. I trust that at other places they have had rain too. . . . . Even should they be able now to plant their autumn crops, there will be a good deal of distress until they can be reaped."

Mrs. Duncan Kay writes from Kuh-wu-hsien, on July 20:—"We praise God for the rain. We have a good supply now, and it will save us from famine, although there are even now many starving, they having had no wheat this summer. Our own people will manage to pull through, with one or two exceptions."

Mrs. Russell writes from Hiao-ih, dated July 30, that "the price of grain is still about double the usual price, but the people are greatly rejoiced at the prospect of good autumn crops."

Mr. A. R. Saunders, writing from Tai-yüen, August 6:—"The drought has been changed to floods, and a large district of land near the Fen river has been flooded, and has left a layer of sand, ruining the land for agriculture. Of course, this is small compared to what the suffering would have been had the drought continued. Several villages are destroyed by the floods."

Miss Edith Broomhall, writing from Ta-ning, July 16, says:—"We have had beautiful rains, a whole rainy week. How our hearts do praise the Lord, and how many poor burdened hearts among our Christians are feeling lighter! Everywhere the men are, or have been, in their fields; I suppose by to-day most of the sowing is finished."

Tamil Mission Ragged Schools, Madras.

The work of my schools amongst the pariah children I find commends itself wherever the details of it are known. We have now 865 scholars, with thirty-two certificated teachers. The audited balance sheet for last year has been sent to me, and I find the aggregate cost, which includes rents of buildings, salaries of agents, and other working expenses, has been £350. This has been defrayed by £210, which we were successful in obtaining in Government grants, and by £140 of voluntary subscriptions. This striking economy is, of course, accounted for by the fact that all the teachers are native Christians, and live in native style and simplicity.

For eight years we have been sowing the seed of the Gospel into the minds of the outcast children, and through the children some of the seed has fallen into the hearts of the parents, and at least produced a sympathy and interest in this mission. I am now preparing to reap the harvest. When I return to India, I propose with God's blessing to erect a hall in the heart of the native quarters of Madras for the purpose of evangelistic work, and to make it the centre of all our social and philanthropic operations. All our teachers are earnest and capable Christian Hindus, so that the preaching staff is ready to hand without any additional expense. The £1,000 will defray the cost of a splendid building on a freehold site. Many English gentlemen of well-known evangelistic repute heartily endorse the scheme, and contributions to the amount of £200 have reached me.

Within the next three months I must be on my way back to India. My address in England is 3, Prescot-place, Halifax. I shall be glad to send copies of the latest report of the mission and explanatory matter to applicants.

CHOLERA AND THE JEWS.—A number of Continental rabbis have issued a notice which practically amounts to a declaration that the prevalence of cholera in Hamburg is not to be regarded as a ground for absolving the Jews of that plague-stricken city from fasting on the Day of Atonement. The cholera is happily abating in Hamburg, and it may be hoped that no widespread evil will result from the weakness and prostration caused by the fast which may unfortunately make a Jew here and there a more ready victim to the insidious disease that has turned Hamburg into a vast hospital. When an epidemic is raging there is disease in the air, and one actual case of illness implies the possibility of many others. As the mortality returns are steadily diminishing, the Jewish authorities need not perhaps have published a general recommendation to all Hamburg Jews urging them not to fast. But the opposite course which has been pursued is, in the opinion of the Jewish Chronicle, a distinct error of judgment.

CHRISTIAN LITERATURE FOR INDIA.

A change in the name of what was the Christian Vernacular Education Society indicates that the India of to-day is not the India of 1858, when this society was set up as a memorial of the mutiny. The society has now become the Christian Literature Society for India, its secretary being Rev. James Johnston, and its offices 7, Adam-street, Strand, W.C. Coming to the sphere of the society's operations, we find a transformation so marvellous and momentous as to have the deepest significance to anyone who can compare the two periods and comprehend the importance of these changes.

To the twelve or thirteen millions of the young of both sexes now in India, who are not only able to read, but of whom many are as highly educated as our own youths who have passed from high schools and colleges, a million more are added yearly. They have been pouring into Indian society with their newly-acquired appetite for books, but the general literature of the country is unsuited for cultured men, and would never appease educated intellectual hunger, far less satisfy the cravings of thirsty souls. The new name of the society is an expression of the new departure which it has made of late, and the new enterprise with which the society is now pressing forward in the great work it is designed to do. In addition to a special fund and independently of the Indian revenue, it has made grants to the amount of £1,600 on Christian literature, besides embarking on the work of revising school books, providing literature for Zenana work, and sending out a second agent, Rev. J. A. Macdonald, to the work in Northern India; while Dr. Murdoch has returned with fresh life and hopefulness to his work in the south

ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS IN HUNGARY.—It is reported from Budapest that a serious conflict occasioned by the outbreak of a fire at a house occupied by Jews, recently occurred in the village of Kerecke, in the Comitat of Marmaros, between the Ruthenian and Jewish inhabitants. The latter were severely maltreated and threatened with death, while their houses were pillaged and destroyed. When the rioting was at its height the gendarmerie arrived on the scene and restored order. The ringleaders were arrested. A judicial inquiry is now proceeding.

GREAT GALE IN JAPAN.—A terrible gale completely devastated the Rinkin Island at the latter end of August. Four hundred people were killed at Okinawa, houses being swept to the ground, and only the most substantial buildings remained. At Honanatsa, twenty-three houses were completely wrecked, while 145 were partially destroyed. A terrific storm also occurred on September 4, when sixty-five buildings were destroyed, ten persons being killed in the Shiznoka Prefecture. No fewer than 600 dwelling-houses and seventy-one stores were razed to the ground, a large number of persons being killed. —Central News.

"THE POPPY POISON IN BURMAH" is the title of a pamphlet just published by P. S. King and Son, 5, King-street, Westminster, S.W., for the Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade. After giving disgraceful facts as to the propagation of the opium habit in Burmah, the pamphlet concludes:—"Will the British people, or the newly-elected Parliament, allow the unanimous request of the Burmese people for protection from the opium vice, which we introduced among them, to be set aside? Will they suffer the representations of successive Chief Commissioners on the spot with regard to an evil which Sir Charles Aitchison has declared to be one affecting the very life of this young and otherwise prosperous province to be overridden any longer by the Government at Calcutta or Simla, which is altogether out of touch with the needs of the Burmese?"

RELIGIONS IN GERMANY.—In the quarterly statement just issued from the Statistical Office in Germany is an account of the different religions professed by the people in the German Empire. Of the 49,428,470 inhabitants in Germany 31,026,810 are Protestants; 17,671,929 are Roman Catholics; 145,540 belong to other Christian denominations; and 562 are unclassified. They are thus distributed: Prussia has 19,232,449 Protestants; 10,251,458 Roman Catholics; and 95,349 of various denominations. Of Jews there are 567,884—of which number 372,059 are in Prussia; 53,885 in Bavaria; 34,645 in Alsace-Lorraine, 26,735 in Baden, 25,531 in Hesse, 17,877 in Hamburg, 12,639 in Würtemberg, and 9,368 in Saxony. The Rhineland has 4,710,391 inhabitants, distributed as follows:—In the Rhine Provinces there are 3,351,818 Catholics, 1,295,673 are Protestants, and 47,234 are Jews. Of the Jewish population 15,151 live in Dusseldorf, 12,048 in Cologne, 9,091 in Coblence, 6,562 in Trier, and 4,387 in Aachen. Heligoland has 2,086 inhabitants, with 11 Roman Catholics and 1 Jew; the rest are Protestants.

Obituary.

REV. ROBERT WISHART.

The death is announced of Rev. Robert Wishart, who was for thirty-two years minister of the United Presbyterian Church at Thornhill. Mr. Wishart was a native of Millport, and began life as a stonemason. He afterwards attended Glasgow University and the Divinity Hall, and was ordained to Thornhill in 1860, being then in his thirty-sixth year. He took a great interest in educational matters, and was for many years a member of the local School Board. As a member also of the Parochial School Board, and in many other ways, he took a share in the public affairs of the district.

REV. F. TILNEY BASSETT.

In our last week's issue we noted the death of the vicar of Dulverton, Somerset. Prebendary Bassett was sixty-five years of age, and came of a Norfolk family. A correspondent writes to The Record:—"Sound in the faith; as a theologian hard to match, whether in his own diocese or out of it; fertile as a writer; powerful in the pulpit, he leaves a blank which it seems hard indeed to fill. He was not only learned, but (which is far more) wise also. He was always ready to impart his stores, and there were few men to whom an intellectual or a spiritual difficulty could be communicated more freely or with better hope of salutary counsel. Years ago he set a good example to Evangelicals by publishing an annotated translation of the Prophet Hosea; and, more recently, an edition in Greek and English, with notes, of the Epistle of St. James—the favourite Epistle, it is said, of the illustrious Earl of Shaftesbury. And, while one of his earlier efforts was an exposure of Romish errors in connection with the mistranslations in the Latin Vulgate, his pen, in recent years, was usually employed in the defence of orthodox views against that Rationalism or Neology in which he beheld one of the most dangerous and fatal foes of truth and godliness."

DR. G. LANSING.

Monday morning, September 12, 1892, just as the shadows of night were beginning to pass away preparatory to dawn, the weary soul of one of God's own, Rev. Gulian Lansing, D.D., left us and entered into the joy of his Lord. "O, how glorious!" were the words oft repeated a short time before he left us, and we wonderingly inquired and looked if perchance some of the glory might be espied by us sorrowing ones. A protracted illness had kept him waiting for fully two months ere the promised rest was enjoyed. At the home of his son, J. M. Lansing, M.D., loving hands had nursed him and anxious hearts had awaited results, but neither their care nor an able physician's skill could prevent his release. He has gone to be for ever with his Lord.

We miss him; he was a father in our mission, and a leader of our little band. His suggestions, his advice, his experience, were always helpful, and oftentimes decided perplexing questions for us.

He was one of the very first to enter this field, coming here as early as 1856, bearing the brunt of pioneer effort, ever advancing the outposts. Filled with a yearning desire to bring souls to Christ, zealous for The Master, thorough in his work, persevering in his endeavours, and, above all, his heart aglow with a living, conquering faith, he was permitted to do much for Christ.

His, too, was the joyous privilege of casting his honours at the feet of Jesus, for though a born linguist, a successful student, and a very acceptable speaker, yea one whom three institutions at home delighted to honour with the title of D.D., and whose friendship, moreover, was pleasing and valued by many at home and abroad, yet he willingly gave up these that Christ through him might be glorified in a far-off field.

About five years he laboured as a missionary in Syria, and thirty-six of the sixty-six years of his life he gave to Egypt, and these have born rich fruitage, as the work here and his brethren could testify.

Cairo, Egypt. J. R.

Another friend writes:—He went to the East from America nearly forty years ago, and laboured in Syria before he went to Egypt, but for many years he has been the chief missionary figure in the Valley of the Nile. His profound acquaintance with Hebrew and Arabic placed him in the foremost ranks of Oriental scholarship, and his weight of character secured the confidence of all. As a preacher in Arabic he was unsurpassed, and he will be greatly missed by his colleagues and by the evangelical Christians of Egypt.

ONE GREAT AIM of the Invalid Children's Aid Society is to provide every poor sick child in London with a friend. The help of many more ladies is required.

Evangelistic Notes.

Ireland.—Miss Smith and Miss Bax have been holding a very successful Gospel mission in the Methodist Church, Enniskillen.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has had an evangelistic mission at Weybridge. The congregations have been large, and the spiritual results are very encouraging.

Mr. William Forbes has been evangelising in the North. On Thursday and Sunday nights he addressed large gatherings in the Gilfillan Memorial Hall, Dundee.

Mr. W. Grove has finished a week's fruitful mission in the Congregational Church, Maynard-road, S.E. The officers and members are much cheered and encouraged.

Mr. George Clarke is holding during the present week a series of special Gospel meetings in the mission church connected with the Steeple Kirk of Dundee, and right in the heart of a large working-class population.

Mr. C. Russell Hurditch was preaching at Clapton Hall during last month, and had times of gracious help from the Lord and joy in the ministry of the Word to crowded audiences, with distinct blessing in conversions.

Yeovil.—On Sunday the Yeovil Y.M.C.A. concluded a series of outdoor evangelistic services, which they have conducted throughout the summer with much spiritual encouragement. The meetings are to be continued in the Lecture Hall.

Mr. Geo. R. Cairns closed a successful ten days' mission at the Central Hall, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Sunday last. Excellent results have followed. There have been many enquirers. The Bible readings were much appreciated.

Rev. W. Hay Aitken holds a mission from October 1 to 17, at Chaddesley Corbett, Kidderminster; and Rev. A. J. Harrison delivers evidential addresses October 16 to 24, at St. Mark's, Barrow-in-Furness

Personalia.

Miss Macpherson is cheered this week by four of her former small emigrants, now young women, having contributed £5 each to enable her to rescue four others from the lone condition they once were in.

Dr. Ernest W. Gurney Masterman, House Surgeon at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, has been appointed Assistant Medical Missionary at Jerusalem, in connection with the London Jews Society.

Rev. John L. Narbel, M.A., B.D., delegate of the Société Centrale Protestante de France, is on a visit to Britain, making known the evangelistic work and financial needs of the society. His present address is, 34, Lyndoch-street, Glasgow.

Pastor Jacob and Moressa his wife have returned to Oroomiah, Persia, after moving about in Britain for fifteen months, making known, as opportunity offered, the character and claims of the work in which they are engaged among the Mohammedans of Persia.

Sister Florence (Miss F. G. Lamb) writes to contradict the report that she had sailed for Ceylon in connection with the Wesleyan Mission. She is having some rest at home before going abroad. Her passage is taken on board the B.I.S.S. Company's Manora, which sails from London on November 18.

Dr. James A. Spurgeon is seriously ill, suffering from gout in the throat. He hoped to be present at the meeting of the Baptist Missionary Society on Monday in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, but Mr. Olney, in reporting his regrettable absence, said that a consulting physician had been called in, and declared the case critical.

The Bishop of Bedford has been staying in Devonshire. A correspondent writes:—"Mr. Hole, of Georgeham, Devon, was so unwell on Sunday that he shortened the service in the morning, and eventually had to close the meeting; but Bishop Billing stepped out of the pew in which he happened to be, and very judiciously took on the service to the end. He preached from the end of the Epistle, and a fine sermon we had. It appears he has come to stay at Croyde for health and fresh air. He preached again in the evening."

Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who has been for some weeks the guest of Lady Henry Somerset at Eastnor Castle, was last week the recipient of a testimonial from the World's W.C.T.U. of the British Empire, and also of many telegrams, letters, and birthday gifts, expressing the love, loyalty, and sympathy of her friends on both sides the sea. On October 8 she sails for America in the Cunard s.s. Etruria, to attend the annual meeting of the W.C.T.U. of the United States at Denver, Colorado, October 28, which, in view of the coming World's Exposition, will be one of unusual importance

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

Of 2,554 women appearing at Clerkenwell Police-court 95 per cent. were the victims of drink; and at Worship-street 80 per cent. of the cases were due to drink.

Kansas, with Prohibition and 100,000 more people than Texas, has one penitentiary and 996 prisoners. Texas, with saloons and 100,000 less people than Kansas, has two penitentiaries and 3,000 convicts.

A special effort is about to be made by the Canterbury Diocesan C.E.T.S. to arouse sympathy with the rescue and preventive work of the society. A series of meetings will be held at Tonbridge and Sevenoaks, extending from October 17 to 22.

In Johannesburg there is a drinking bar or canteen for every fifty of the population. The secretary of the mining board has stated that drink costs the mines £5,000 a month through loss of time and incapacity for work when the natives return to it.

The continuance or discontinuance of the sale of drink in any locality is a mere matter of pounds, shillings, and pence to those who are engaged in it. To the inhabitants of a district it is a matter of home happiness, of good or bad reputation, often of life or death.—The National Bulletin.

The horrible craving for strong drink which characterises some people was forcibly illustrated at Walsall on Wednesday last. A large jar of old Jamaica rum fell from a cart, and as its contents ran down the gutter, men, women, and children scooped it up in their hands and drank it with relish!

The Autumnal Conference of the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union was held in Dublin last week. It is ten years since the Conference last met in Dublin, and the meetings then were attended by only about fifty delegates, whereas on this occasion they were attended by upwards of 200. On last Sunday sermons were preached by delegates in most of th Dublin churches, and addresses delivered in variou Sunday-schools.

A Gospel Temperance Field.

Right in the heart of a London suburb, where numbers of idlers congregate, stands a large empty building eminently suitable for holding lectures and services, and with every convenience for a bright temperance bar as well. There is great probability of its being secured for a public-house, which would mean the sixth within an area of 200 yards. For £500 the building could be had for three years, and fitted for use in God's service. It would open up a splendid sphere for work, and those interested in the state of the district are earnest in their petitions to God that the means to start it may be sent.

Several gentlemen are ready to act as an Executive Committee, and would see that everything is properly managed. Enough money might be raised locally for working expenses. Full particulars would be given to any willing to help by R. F., 29, Lombard-street, E.C.

Stratford Railway Men.

Over 4,000 railway men, including those in the large locomotive works, reside at Stratford, E. In 1880 Miss F. E. Campbell, from Mildmay, began to work here. Eight were present at the first meeting; great things have since been wrought, and earnest workers for God may be found among these Great Eastern men, whole families also being savingly blessed.

For some time past the iron room built for them to gather in has been uncomfortably crowded, and about a year and a-half ago a gentleman gave a plot of ground for a permanent railway mission hall. One friend, also unasked, generously sent £2,000 towards the building fund. The builder contracted in two divisions, the first being up to the sum in hand. That sum is now spent, and workmen have been withdrawn; the second part of the contract is untouched, and £900 is required for what remains to be done.

Miss Campbell (who is still president of the mission) may be applied to if further information is desired. Her address is 9, Portland-terrace, Regent's Park, London, N.W.

CLAPHAM ROAD CONFERENCE HALL.—The students from the C.M.S. College at Clapham Common work here on Sunday evenings, setting forth Christ crucified in simple words. It is hoped that the addition to the Hall may be speedily built; preparation has been made some time, and most of the money has been lodged. The cause of the delay is the postponement of the licence to build by the London County Council, before whom the plans were laid in June last.

Letters to the Editor.

"DEVOUT (?) CRITICISM."

Dear Sir,—May not the apparent discrepancy between the two narratives regarding David in 1 Sam. xvi. and 1 Sam. xvii. be adjusted in this way? In 1 Sam. xvi., the historian does not describe David as "a mighty valiant man, and a man of war," but only King Saul's servant. He spoke in ignorance, possibly confounding together the stripling with some of Jesse's stalwart sons, but it was in ignorance, for David himself, in chap. xvii., tells Saul of his inexperience. That Saul should not recognise David is, as you say, no great wonder, for by this time he was a full-grown man.

We have a similar mis-statement chronicled, but not authenticated, in 1 Kings ii. 15. Adonijah says to Bathsheba, "Thou knowest that the kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me that I should reign," which is mournfully untrue. In the Acts of the Apostles also, Claudius Lysias (chap. xxiii. 26) writes a letter asserting that "he came with an army and rescued Paul, having understood that he was a Roman," although he did not know this till he had bound him and was about to examine him by scourging! James Inglis.

ST. PAUL'S "QUIBBLES."

Sir,—In reference to an excellent letter of Mr. Hugh D. Brown, addressed to the Archbishop of Dublin, will you kindly allow me to say a word? It is in regard to the "quibbles" and the "ignorance', attributed by various critics to St. Paul.

His Epistle to the Galatians (iii. and iv. especially) comes under this specification. But the down-grade men are indebted for their theology on those matters to Professors Cheyne and Driver, of Oxford, and Canon Farrar, with the addition of the word "quibble" to show originality on their part. Canon Farrar furnished the material respecting the "seed" spoken of (Gal. iii.), and "that Paul must have known that the plural for the Hebrew and Greek terms for 'seed' is never used by Hebrew and Greek writers as a designation of human offspring. In the plural it means various kinds of grain"—a sapient dictum, which puts on one side the ignorant quibbles of St. Paul!

But unfortunately for this doctrine Dr. Watts, of Belfast College, shows it up, and by reference to some of the greatest classic writers exposes it to ridicule! For Sophocles says:—

γῆς ἐμῆς ἀπηλάθην
πρὸς τῶν ἐμαυτῶν σπερμάτων

"I was driven away from my country by my own offspring" (seeds) (Soph. Oed. Col. 599-600, and Æsch. Sup. 290, and Eum. 909).

Here, then, is the term, said never to be used by Greek writers in the sense of offspring, used in that very sense by the greatest of them. See The Down-grade in Criticism, Theology, and Science, by Professor Robt. Watts, D.D., Belfast College. T. T. Clark, Edinburgh, 1890) a most valuable work for the present time.

As to the Hebrew word for seed, it is a noun of multitude like the English and used for singular or plural. There was no need of making it plural unless a writer required a distinction in his argument as St. Paul does when referring to the special promise made to Abraham on his offering up of Isaac. But this subject they could not be expected to understand, for the reasons given by the Apostle himself (1 Cor. i 18-16). My apology for writing is to warn the young as to the sceptical and superficial dealings with Revelation which are afloat, and the oppositions of Scripture, falsely so called, and now in vogue.

Yours very truly, T. R.

SUNDAY EVENING SOCIALS.

Dear Sir,—May I correct the singular error which appears in the kindly notice published in your last week's issue? Our "Sunday Evening Socials" are there said to be for the purpose of bringing "backsliders to knowledge of God." You used inverted commas for this expression, a local paper having been its author. The other features noted, the light refreshments, that no one "asks the people about their souls," etc., would hardly appear to many, and certainly not to me, a course specially adapted to win "backsliders."

The remarks at the end of your kind notice really state our aim. So long as the publichouses are open on a Sunday night so long Sans-street Chapel will be kept open, that the parlourless may find warmth, brightness, and comfort under innocent and even Christian influences.

Faithfully yours,

R. Bevan Shepherd.

The Book World.

Within Thy Gates is the title of a little volume of remarkably good addresses given in the Dr. Stephenson's Children's Home chapel, by William J. Forster. (1s. C. H. Kelly.)

The Church Monthly is one of the best Church papers for localisation. The new volume for 1892 has many attractions; the articles, by high-class contributors, covering a wide range of interest, and the illustrations including excellent portraits of distinguished men. (Offices: 30 and 31, New Bridge-street, E.C.)

Alcohol and Public Health, by J. James Ridge, M.D., is a useful compendium of facts on an important subject. The author hopes it "will convince many that there is a good deal more to be said in favour of total abstinence than in favour of drinking intoxicating liquors." The pages should be carefully studied by temperance advocates. (H. K. Lewis, 136, Gower-street, W.C.)

Six in the Fold—and One. (1s. Religious Tract Society.) Lady Alicia Blackwood gives narratives from life in these pages. After chapters describing cases of joyous acceptance of the Gospel, there is "the contrast,"—the case of one who resisted God in life, and died in despair crying "Lost! lost!" These true stories should be widely read, and will bear rehearsal in Gospel addresses.

The Devotional Series, issued by Hodder and Stoughton (1s. each), already includes: Complete in Christ, extracted from "The Saint and his Saviour," by C. H. Spurgeon; Rest in Christ, from "In Christ," by Dr. A. J. Gordon; and The State of the Blessed Dead, by Dean Alford. Truly devotional in character, these books are small enough for the pocket, printed in bold type, and tastefully bound.

How to Become a Nurse. By Honnor Morten. 2s. 6d. (Scientific Press, 140, Strand.) So many young women of earnest purpose in life are now seeking an outlet for their energies in the noble profession of nursing, that a work like this has become a necessity. It certainly appears to tell all that needs to be known by apprentices in the art, and the lady who masters these interesting details will be splendidly helped towards the goal of success if she have the needful love for the work. Portraits and sketches of nurses who have achieved public fame much enhance the attractiveness of the book.

Our Children in Old Scotland and Nova Scotia.—Miss Stirling, the founder of the Edinburgh and Leith Children's Aid and Refuge Society, gives a history of her work in this attractive little volume. Several illustrations add to the brightness of the pages, which tell of labour among various classes of needy and neglected children. A good deal of interesting information is given regarding life in the older provinces of Canada. Miss Stirling rejoices in a marked success having attended her efforts. The book is very readable, and we trust many will get it, and be led to help on the work. (John Haddon and Co., Bouverie House, Salisbury Square.)

OCTOBER MAGAZINES.

Mr. R. F. Horton, in the Home Messenger (1d. Amen-corner), gives a strong pronouncement on "Amusements." Here is his sensible solution of this social problem:—"Never think of amusement. Do your life's work as earnestly and as well as you can; love God with all your heart and your neighbour as yourself, and to your unfeigned astonishment you will find this world one of the most amusing places that even imagination can conceive."

Welsh Pictures, Drawn with Pen and Pencil (8s. Religious Tract Society), is a worthy and welcome addition to the handsomely illustrated series of which it is the latest issue. Rev. R. Lovett is the editor, and has secured the collaboration of able Welsh writers. The little principality of Wales can boast of more of the picturesque and the beautiful in its natural aspects than most countries of equal size. Around these have gathered many historic, romantic, and poetic associations, so that there is an abundance of material for such a work. The result is one that must be of interest not to Welshmen only, but to all who love the beautiful and the grand.

The Century Magazine (1s. 4d.) and St. Nicholas (1s.) maintain the high standard of literary and artistic excellence that have secured for them such a sure footing on British soil. There is an indefinable quality of finish in these American serials that our less alert fellow-countrymen find it difficult to copy. Mingled with much reading "in lighter vein," The Century gives papers of solid and serious interest. One of these in the current issue is an article describing and exposing the politico-financial corruption so prevalent in the United States, and which makes high-minded citizens of the great Republic wince for very shame. Archibald Forbes describes what he saw of the terrible days and doings of the Commune in Paris in 1871. In the new volume of the magazine there will appear a series of timely papers on the "Bible and Modern Criticism." St. Nicholas, conducted so skilfully in the interests of young folks, is a wonderful collection of clever juvenile literature of varied sorts. (T. Fisher Unwin.)

Cassell's Serials.

In The Book of Health (part 5, 6d.) the action of alcohol in the human system is expounded by a writer who expresses cordial approval of Paul's oft-quoted admonition to Timothy. It is somewhat comforting, however, to know that "for healthy people alcohol is a very inconvenient form of food." The author writes with a great show of authority, but, to our thinking, with insufficient appreciation of the evils that alcohol works in those who have not the will or the power to regulate its use. Part 21 of The Life and Times of Queen Victoria (7d.) describes "the reign of Jingoism" and the disastrous Afghan and Zulu wars. The Illustrated History of England (part 72, 7d.) deals also with the reign of the present Queen at a somewhat earlier date. Part 45 of The Library of English Literature (6d.) contains studies of some of the longer prose works in our language. The writings of More, Elyot, Ascham, Sidney, Bacon, Hobbes, Locke, and Defoe are noticed and illustratively expounded.

The Worthies of Norwich is the title of a very interesting and entertaining booklet by Mrs. Herbert Jones. Reprinted from The Edinburgh Review. (6d. Jarrold and Sons.)

Sixteen Blessings of Belief from St. John's Gospel. By Rev. H. E. Heinekey. A thoughtful little essay on a glorious subject. Two a penny from the author, 8, Garlinge-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

Rev. W. Laycock, M.A., of Hurdsfield, near Macclesfield, has issued, in booklet form, two excellent sermons on The Lord's Supper; What it is and What it is not. The subject is treated "according to Scripture and common sense," in other words, from a Protestant Evangelical point of view. Protestant Churchman's Alliance Office, 30, Charing Cross.

Revelations and Fraternal Exhortations to all God's Children. Signor Alberto Chiera has issued an English edition of his Italian booklet, which is spiritual in tone and instructive in its contents. My address is, 'Tipografia Popolare, Rome.'"

Y.M.C.A. Missionaries.

We have frequently of late mentioned the imminent departure of Mr. Robt. McCann from Ireland and Mr. Holmes, of Norwich, as avant-couriers of the Y.M.C.A. in India and Egypt respectively. These two brethren have been visiting various parts of the country seeking to rouse the enthusiasm of their fellow young men on behalf of the missions they have undertaken. During the past few days farewell meetings have been held in Ireland, Scotland, and England to bid them godspeed. One of these took place in Exeter (lower) Hall on Monday evening, while the great missionary farewell of the C.M.S. was going on upstairs.

In the course of a very lively Irish speech Mr. McCann told something of his plans, projects, and past experiences. He expatiated most eloquently on the neglected masses of India's youth and the call that there is in Christian England for more practical interest to be shown in the attempt to carry the Gospel to them. He said he had been through the mill in Y.M.C.A. extension in Ireland, and he did not anticipate greater difficulties in India. It was a pity that he had such a comparatively small audience, as he appealed for practical fellowship and co-operation in sustaining the work on which he is entering. He has organised "a penny a week" plan of help on the part of Y.M.C.A. members and associates; if some 5,000 young men would take up the challenge, the thing would be done. Mr. Holmes also addressed his fellow Y.M.C.A. men, while words of cheer were spoken during the evening by Mr. George Williams, Mr. T. A. Denny, and others. We trust the Y.M.C.A.'s of Great Britain will see to it that this undertaking of the National Council is not allowed to languish for want of support.

THE GRINDELWALD CONFERENCE.—No less than 975 persons joined the Grindelwald Re-union parties during the past summer. The conference next year is to meet at Engelburg.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 9.—DEUTERONOMY XX.

The cry to arms is perpetually ringing out: and the tocsin calls us to the fight. We must war against the evils that threaten our inner life as well as against the enemies of the Lord. The nearer we live to Christ and the closer we follow Him, the more certainly shall we be involved in the conflict that gathers about his person. It is the skulker from the ranks that knows nothing of the battle. But when the foe is near, let us look away from his horses and chariots, and fix our eyes wholly on the Lord, whose horses and chariots of fire engirdle us and go forth to war on our behalf. The priest always approaches when the battle is near. Listen, troubled heart, for the still sweet voice of Jesus saying, Fear not, nor tremble. Christ wants whole-hearted men, in whom there is that absolute loyalty and trust that banish fear. Where there is not that, the soldier is practically useless, and may as well depart lest he become a source of infection and panic to others. Also how eagerly we should pray, "Dismiss me not thy service, Lord." In each of us there are natural propensities which we have no need to exterminate, though we must make them tributary. And there are forbidden things, against which God has declared perpetual hostility; these must have no quarter, and must be given over to utter extermination, "Thou shalt utterly destroy them."

MONDAY, OCTOBER 10.—DEUTERONOMY XXI.

Here is a striking illustration in which we learn the evil of sin. The blood of a smitten man would be imputed to the nearest city, unless steps were taken by its representatives to relieve themselves of the guilt. So there is much evil in the world, and of the race, and pertaining to our own lives, that needs the atonement of the precious blood; and we need to apply to the Great High Priest for the expiation of evil of which we are dimly conscious or altogether ignorant. How that barren valley, "neither plowed nor sown," reminds us of Calvary; and that running water of the river of the Holy Ghost that bears the effects of the death of Jesus through the world. Notice that we can only claim the benefits of the shed blood when we are doing that which is right in the eyes of the Lord (9). Some of the prescriptions of this chapter are far below the morality of the Sermon on the Mount, but a lower law was given because of the hardness of their hearts. Our moral tone is elevated by the introduction of successive editions of God's law, and as we obey the one we catch sight of another and higher. We must compare this legislation, not with the teachings of Jesus, but with the state of the surrounding nations of those days.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11.—DEUTERONOMY XXII.

We must not hide ourselves. The question of risk or loss must not prevent us doing as much for another's property as we would wish him to do for ours. We often shirk responsibilities suddenly thrust upon us, for no other reason than that they would involve us in trouble or expenditure. But to do this is to fall beneath the level even of the law, and how much more, therefore, of the Gospel. Thrice over it is said, "Thou shalt not hide thyself." What exactness and wisdom there is in the statutes that follow. The commandment is exceeding broad: it touches dress, which might be an occasion of temptation and sin; it deals with bird-nesting; it concerns itself with the battlements that fence a roof, and the mingling of diverse things. How stringent is God's throne of judgment. There is nothing too small for it to take cognisance of. We should be particular to exercise ourselves, to have a conscience void of offence in the smallest details. Do we build battlements around our tables and homes to keep the inexperienced from falling into drink and other sins? Are we careful against unlawful admixtures? In sins of impurity society forgives the male sinner, and is merciless to his victim. God, however, holds the balance evenly, and in each of these cases legislates in behalf of the wronged and oppressed woman. But though her Maker thus vindicates her, yet even He ordains death when her silence indicates her consent to sin. That crying out is significant of the way in which the holy soul is wont to act when suddenly assailed by the tempter!

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12.—DEUTERONOMY XXIII.

The assembly of the Lord is the Temple, where He dwells, and in these days his Church. "Ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit." There are certain conditions, however, which must be observed. Whole-hearted consecration; true sonship with God; love to the people of God; these are essential. It is interesting to see that Edom and Egypt might send their representatives, a shadowing forth of the admission of the great Gentile world into the Church. Those who fight for God must be absolutely pure; better stay away from the battle for a whole day, than go into it unclean; no care must be spared to secure the camp from all uncleanness, and all because the presence of God was essential to victory, and that presence was incompatible with permitted evil. Ah, how often have our defeats been due to want of care in the ordering of the inner life! The camp must be holy, or Jehovah cannot walk with us, or give up our enemies before us. How tenderly God legislated for the fugitive slave! How rigorously against the wages of iniquity! Let us never put into his treasury money which is not rightly or purely obtained. Christians must lend to their brethren in Christ, in cases of extremity, without requiring high interest, because God will always be paymaster for his own children.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13.—DEUTERONOMY XXIV.

The bill of divorcement was an expedient, our Lord says, because of the hardness of their hearts. But it would not be tolerated to-day in any civilised nation, so much is due to the influence of Christ. Tenderness to the newly-married wife; care for the necessary maintenance of the poor; vigorous repression of the slavery of Hebrews as a stepping-stone to its entire suppression; the preservation of the self-respect of the poor in the invasion of his home; thoughtfulness of the necessity of warm clothing for the poor in the cold Palestine night; provision that the day labourer should receive at nightfall his day's wage, because he had set his heart upon it; justice in the allotting of blame and punishment on the individual that had sinned; care for the widow and orphan; how wise and just and merciful all these items were; so human and so divine. As we consider them, we instinctively look round to find Him speaking, whose words have filled our world with sweetness and light. Ere these words were spoken the Father had committed all judgment to the Son. Let all who are poor and fatherless, and widowed and lonely, take heart at these words, and look trustfully up into the face of God.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 14.—DEUTERONOMY XXV.

Even when our brother has done wrong, we must not so requite him as to make him seem vile. The needful chastisement must be for his improvement, and not for the gratification of our vindictiveness. Never forget that God takes care of oxen, and much more of his own. We must not shrink from trusteeship or other family obligations; our duty to man is part of our duty to God, and we cannot live a righteous life before Him, whilst we are shirking any known duty to our brother. He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen. Mark that insistance on the perfect and just weight. Such is the standard that must have been applied to thee and me, had it not been applied to our Lord. But He fulfilled all righteousness, and now the very justice of God acquits and saves us. But may we be saved from being an abomination to the Lord. Oh, to do always those things which are pleasing in his sight, because He works in us to will and to do of his own good pleasure. With Amalek, the type of the flesh, there must be no compromise. It may linger in us, and steal away our strength, long after we have entered the land, cropping up again though we had thought ourselves altogether delivered from it, but it must be rendered inoperative through the continual grace of the Holy Spirit. We must never forget this. Forget not, O my soul, that thy chief enemy is the flesh.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15.—DEUTERONOMY XXVI.

Here are two formularies of exquisite beauty for those who have entered the land of rest and victory, of which Canaan was a type. If we know that we have reached it, let us not shrink from professing it. The attitude of consecration, once assumed, infers that as each new crop is reared on the soil of life it should be laid before God. Never forget your low and fallen ancestry by nature, or the affliction and trouble of earlier years before you learnt to live by faith, or the deliverances of God. Always count that all you have of earthly wealth and success is His gift. Ever ascribe your deliverances and all other blessings to the good hand of God, and rejoice in what He gives. Many Christians take their joys too sadly, as if afraid of being too joyful. "Thou shalt rejoice in all the good which the Lord thy God hath given unto thee." Before the Hebrew worshipper could rightly intercede he must have a clear conscience as to his tithes and other duties. If our brother is suffering through any default of ours, we must find him out and make all the wrong right; then we can plead with God for His oath's sake. It is well to be able to look back on a day of avouching. If never before, avouch God to be yours in the words before you, remembering that you can only accomplish your purpose by the Holy Ghost, and believe that at the same moment God appropriates you to be his own, a peculiar people, holy and zealous of good works.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 16.

PETER'S VISION.

Acts x. 1—20.

GOLDEN TEXT: VERSE 34.

Cesarea, on the coast of the Mediterranean, and about thirty-five miles from Joppa, was built by Herod the Great. Its inhabitants were chiefly Pagans, but several thousand Jews resided there. It was the abode of Philip the Evangelist (viii. 40; xxi. 8); yet not Philip but Peter, who was a stranger to the city, was miraculously directed to undertake this work. The event marked the breaking down of the wall of partition, and the beginning of the work of God among the Gentiles. Jewish prejudices were so strong that it seemed needful to employ the chief of the Apostles for this work.

Cornelius was commander of a band of soldiers consisting entirely of Italians, hence called the Italian band. (1). His character. (2). "Devout" means of reverent and serious spirit. His occupation as a soldier did not make it easy to maintain such a spirit. No circumstances are an excuse for ungodliness. "Feared," not dreaded, but worshipped and served God. Though not a proselyte, he had learned the folly of Paganism, and had recognised in the God of the Hebrews the true God. He overcame his national prejudices, and abandoned what was popular for what was right. His piety found a twofold expression—almsgiving and prayer. The one towards men, the other towards God. The two are inseparable. He does not truly pray to God who does not minister to the needs of men. This centurion is like that other mentioned in the Gospels (Matt. vii' 5—10).

Yet he needed something more (xi. 14). Salvation, as revealed in the Gospel, can only be received through the Gospel message. His vision (3-6).—Ninth hour was three o'clock, the third hour of prayer. He had spent the whole day in fasting and prayer (30). The angel had his work to do, but it was not to preach the Gospel to Cornelius. It is the ordinance of God that by men the word of salvation should be made known. This was not a dream, but an actual appearance of the angel to Cornelius (see 30). "Prayers and alms" says the angel (4), not alms and prayers, as in verse 2. God, whose messenger the angel was, looks first at the heart. No meritorious value is recognised in his prayers and alms. They expressed his fidelity to the light he had, and his desire to obtain more. God's method is to entrust much to him who is faithful in that which is little. The direction is explicit (5, 6). His obedience (7, 8).—It was unquestioning and prompt. It is evidence of the reality of his own piety that his servants also feared God, and could be entrusted with such an errand.

God does not leave his work half done. The messengers left Cesarea in the evening, and arrived at Joppa about twelve the next day (9). Peter was being prepared to receive them. His place of prayer was the flat roof of the house, frequently used in the East for that purpose. His hunger may also symbolise his longing for the salvation of other souls. The physical became the figure of the spiritual. Trance. Probably a condition in which, while not asleep, he became unconscious of all natural surroundings, and was conscious only of what God designed to reveal to him. What he saw is graphically described (11-13). The fact of importance is that the sheet contained not only clean but unclean animals of which it was not lawful for a Jew to partake. Peter's objection (14) is to be commended. It was based upon his determination to continue obedience to what he knew was a Divine command (Lev. xi.) The statement with which God met his objection (15) contained the main lesson of this vision. God was about to deal with men upon a new principle; the old ceremonialism was, therefore, set aside. The threefold repetition of the vision was in order to confirm the lesson (Gen. xli. 32).

The vision left Peter still in doubt (17). It was a definite message from God to him, yet he did not know its meaning until circumstances explained it. When the messengers appeared (18) it was not an angel but the Spirit that gave Peter his direction (19, 20). Compare viii. 29. The presence of the Spirit in the early Church was no mere influence, but a living person directing wisely all the movements of his servants.

This incident appears the more wonderful because all the links in the chain of Divine Providence by which Cornelius and Peter were brought together are manifest. But similar miracles are constantly taking place in connection with the service of Christ. They are not less wonderful, though the links do not all appear. God is still bringing together earnest seekers and willing workers.

BAPTIST.

Pastor Stone's evening discourses at Abbey-road Chapel, ...John's Wood, continue to excite much interest among ...oughtful Christians. A series of daily conferences begins ...the 11th inst.

Nottingham Tabernacle Church, under the pastorate of ...v. J. Clark, has received seventy-six into fellowship ...ring the past year, making 610 at the parent church, and ...ween fifty and sixty at the branch churches at Arnold ...d Cotmanhay.

Mr. Malcolm M. Thomson was recognised as pastor of ...ilsborough Chapel on Tuesday last week. Dr. A. E. ...wkes, of Liverpool, presided over a public meeting at ...ich many friends delivered addresses full of sympathy ...d encouragement.

Rev. A. Sowerby and family and Rev. J. S. Whitewright and family have just sailed for China, their former sphere of missionary service. They are accompanied by Mr. E. Burt, M.A., of Oxford, and Dr. Paterson, of Edinburgh, who are entering upon mission work.

The effort to amalgamate Pontypool and Haverfordwest Colleges having proved a failure, it has been decided to remove the former to Cardiff and the latter to Aberystwith. Now each of the three Welsh Baptist Colleges is attached to one of the University Colleges of Wales.

The anniversary of Rochester Baptist Church (Rev. G. A. Miller) was celebrated on Wednesday last. The annual report was of a highly satisfactory character. The Young Men's Mission Band has done splendid work in the open air, and members have been added as a result.

Two events added special interest to the harvest thanksgiving services last week at Berkley-road Chapel, Chalk Farm—the presentation to Mr. Ennals, the retiring student-pastor, of a gift of theological works, and the hearty welcome accorded to Mr. F. Neal, the new student-pastor.

Rev. F. B. Meyer has been presented with an illuminated address by the members of the Young Men's Christian Union and the Bible-class at Regent's Park Chapel. A farewell meeting was held on Thursday last, and the presentation made before a large gathering of young people.

Recognition services were held at Sutton Baptist Chapel on Wednesday, September 21, in connection with the settlement of Rev. George Turner, late of West Green, Tottenham, as pastor. Rev. F. B. Meyer preached to a large congregation; and Dr. James Spurgeon presided over a public meeting.

The anniversary services of Annandale-road Church, Chiswick, have been held, when sermons were preached by Mr. A. G. Edgerton, of the Pastors' College. At a public meeting on Tuesday, September 20, presided over by Rev. G. D. Hooper, of Hendon, the secretary (Mr. C. J. Scott) read a very encouraging report.

A very encouraging work is in progress at Duckpool-road Chapel, Maindee, Newport, Mon. In connection with the ordinary services many have decided for Christ. There are two mission rooms in connection with the church, the pastor of which (Rev. A. T. Jones) has just celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of his settlement.

In the course of his sermon on Sunday evening in Cann Hall-road Chapel, Leytonstone, E., the pastor, Rev. G. T. Ennals, urged the missionary interest upon church members individually. In addition to occasional collections the Missionary Society should receive support from each church in the name of contributing members. A foreign missionary auxiliary will doubtless be the result of this wholesome appeal.

Pastor John Felmingham, late of Burnham, has been formally recognised at Northcote-road, Wandsworth Common, S.W. The public meeting was presided over by Mr. Wm. Olney, and addresses were delivered by Revs. Charles Spurgeon, D. Llewellyn, A. T. Spufford, E. Henderson, and others. Forty-six members (converts and transfers) have been added to the roll since Mr. Felmingham began his work in the district. An appeal for funds to reseat the chapel resulted in the receiving of £160 for that object.

The church in John-street, Bedford-row, did not cease to be an active mission agency when the Extension Committee of the London Baptist Association withdrew its support. A recent report says:—"During last winter it was engaged in active aggressive work inside and out. Seven large common lodging-houses were visited Sunday by Sunday; men and women were supplied with bed and breakfast when found needy, and many were clothed. Result, a number of outcasts reclaimed from the streets, a man took his wife and family from the workhouse and set up a Christian household, sinners sought and found the Saviour, and from month to month, with but two exceptions, members have been added to the church."

METHODIST.

A syndicate has been formed in the Cardiff (Wesley) Circuit, for the purpose of immediately erecting four new iron churches in that circuit, capable of seating in the aggregate 2,000 people.

As the result of a visit paid by Mr. Nix and some of the "Sisters of the People" to Newcastle-under-Lyme, £100 a year has been promised for the support of a room in the Rescue Home at Walthamstow. This will provide for five inmates.

Temperance is progressing among the Wesleyan Methodists. The Bands of Hope number 3,882, with an enrolled membership of 400,167, an increase of 168 bands, and of over 23,000 members. Whilst not exhibiting the same rapid growth, the adult section is nevertheless steadily advancing.

The Primitive Methodist Jubilee Fund has now reached over £22,000; contributions are still coming in, and in a few weeks the series of great central meetings, to be attended by the President of Conference and Mr. William P. Hartley, General Missionary Treasurer, will be commenced.

News has been received from the Zambesi Primitive Methodist mission party not of a very encouraging nature. Mr. Buckenham is preparing to pay another visit to the Barotze king. Should he still refuse to allow the missionaries to commence work in his dominions, they intend to move away to some other part of Central Africa in search of an opening.

At Northernhay, Exeter, the Free Methodists recently secured the use of Barnfield Hall during the renovation of their chapel. An hour after the arrangement was made, the Wesleyans (whose chapel is also undergoing renovation) applied for the same building. An arrangement was arrived at by which the two congregations united, the ministers of the two churches conducting the services on alternate Sundays.

Rev. D. C. Ingram, Wesleyan, residing at a Sunday-school convention at Newcastle, said the Church in Northumberland and Durham was exceedingly and even extravagantly energetic. They had tried all sorts of dodges and devices to save people, as they termed it, but many of these had been artificial and ridiculously powerless. In his opinion, means were encouraged that had not in them the elements of success.

The Deaconess Movement exhibits steady growth among the Wesleyans, there being now eight groups of women, numbering in the aggregate 150, entirely given up to this branch of work. The oldest and largest is that under the supervision of Dr. Stephenson, a body of some fifty, most of whom have passed a probation of two years, and who exist for the work of the Children's Home in its several branches. Next to them in point of numbers are those who are associated with the West Central Mission. This body now numbers thirty, and largely aid in their own support. Rev. Peter Thompson has a sisterhood, some twenty in number, in connection with the East-end Mission.

PRESBYTERIAN.

It is stated that the Queen has commissioned a firm of architects to prepare plans for a new church to be erected on the site of the present ancient but almost ruinous edifice at Crathie, in which Her Majesty has so frequently worshipped.

A second conference of English Presbyterians and representatives of the English section of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists has been held at Liverpool, with the object of establishing a closer bond of union between the two denominations.

The Willesden congregation have decided to call Rev. A. Connell, M.A., now co-pastor with Dr. Morison, at Westbourne-grove, to the pastorate recently vacated by Rev. James Durran. Mr. Connell has also been called to Thurso Free Church as colleague with Dr. Ross Taylor.

At a meeting of the Council of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance in Toronto last week, it was stated that the Alliance has 20,000,000 Presbyterians at its back, its members coming from every habitable quarter of the globe. Since the last gathering there had been a total increase of 250,000 adult members.

At the meeting to welcome the new minister, Rev. David Wilson, at Haverstock Hill, it was mentioned that the congregation, which dates back a couple of centuries, formerly had a minister of the same name who served the church for thirty years. That was when the congregation met in what was known as Oxenden Church, Haymarket, a venerable structure standing behind houses—a customary mode of erecting non-conformist churches in days gone by.

Intelligence from Swatow describes an exceptional pressure of work in the hospital, Dr. Lyall having on his hands some two hundred in-patients, a larger number than have ever before been in the hospital at one time. Spite of this great strain Dr. Lyall's health continues to be good, better than any summer since his return to China. There now seems every prospect of his being able to stay at his post until the time at which his next furlough falls due, a length of service which a year or two ago appeared almost impossible.

SALVATION ARMY.

The memorial service for Mrs. Booth is to be held at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Oct. 18.

Major Wright, late head of the Farm Colony, succeeds Major Barritt in the South American command.

Rev. James Cregan, of Albert-bridge-road Church, Belfast, has shown practical sympathy with the Blackstaff branch of the Salvation Army by opening its recent sale of work in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. Mr. Cregan said the members of the Army had as good a right to their titles as ministers had to use such terms as "Canon," "Rev.," and "Right Rev."

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Pickering College, near Toronto, Canada, has just been reopened, and will be exceedingly valued by Canadian Friends and others.

Western quarterly meetings, held in Hereford for the first time for twenty-nine years, was a very interesting occasion, especially the solemn and weighty addresses in the meeting for worship.

At Iowa yearly meeting, on the 10th ult., "meetings were held in and out of doors, and it was computed that at one time in the afternoon as many as 12,000 people were present in the grounds of Penn College."

Conferences at quarterly meetings and the appointment of committees to attend the Home Mission Conference in November are being held and made over the country. The importance to the society of a right decision is increasingly felt.

Mr. J. Rendal Harris, the discoverer of the Apology of Aristides in the Convent of Mount Sinai, and Mrs. Helen B. Harris have, during the week, been conducting a special mission at Stramongate Meeting House, Kendal. Bible readings have been held each afternoon.

A reunion of the three Friends' Missions of Brighton, was held on the 14th ult., at the Meeting House, Ship-street, W. Clarkson Wallis in the chair. John T. Dorland, London, gave a stirring address to a deeply interested audience. Brighton friends must have been cheered in their devoted work for Christ.

Although Wilmington yearly meeting was established and held only a few weeks ago, there was a request made at Oskaloosa on the 6th ult., in Iowa yearly meeting, for a new yearly meeting for California. Should this be granted, there will be two new yearly meetings on the Pacific Coast, that of Oregon in the north, and California in the south.

On the 18th inst. the conference of American yearly meetings will be held at Indianapolis, representing nearly all the North American Continent. English friends will watch with deeply sympathetic interest the proceedings and decisions of this influential gathering, whose discussions will probably deal much with methods of work needed in one time.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The claims of the Universities Mission to Central Africa were advocated last Sunday in various churches in Dublin and the neighbourhood.

Three book ladies are going to the mission-field in connection with the Church Missionary Society, Misses Clarke to China and Miss Tobin to Uganda.

A series of meetings for the deepening of spiritual life was held in Molesworth Hall, Dublin, last week, and was addressed by Rev. Charles Inwood and others.

The annual meeting of the Irish Baptist Home Mission was held on Friday evening last in the Baptist Church, Gt. Victoria-street, Belfast, and there was a large attendance. A most encouraging report was presented.

A meeting to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. McCann, who are going out to Bombay, was held on Monday week in the hall of the Y.M.C.A. Belfast, and addresses were delivered by various ministers, who bore testimony to the valuable work done by Mr. McCann for several years past in connection with young men in different parts of Ireland.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Mr. William Whyte, of Edinburgh, one of the Free Church Assembly's delegates to the Pan Presbyterian Council at Toronto; he died at Detroit, U.S.A., ending a useful life, during which he rendered good service in Christian work, being latterly an elder of Morningside Church.—Rev. James Barles, minister of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Liverpool, in his fifty-second year.—Mr. Lawson, of Rushden, Higham Ferrers Circuit of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, a local preacher of twenty-five years' standing.—Mr. Isaac Ford, of Birmingham, who was an active worker in connection with Carr's-lane Chapel during the pastorate of Rev. John Angell James, but was latterly associated with Moseley-road Chapel, for the erection of which he was largely responsible.—Rev. J. R. Parkinson, of Worksop, who had been in the Primitive Methodist ministry for fifty-one years, and had been superannuated since 1873; he was associated with the late Dr. Antliff and others in the foundation of the system of denominational assurance.—Rev. Burlington B. Wale, minister of Carmel Chapel, Plumstead, and author of "The Closing Days of Christendom," who died suddenly on Saturday morning.

CHOLERA

Prevention.

What is best to be done to avoid the slightest risk of danger during the threatened Cholera Epidemic? There is but one course to adopt; to see that everywhere in the Home and in the Workshop the most scrupulous cleanliness prevails. Wherever there is dirt there is the greater danger of disease establishing itself.

To secure perfect cleanliness with the greatest certainty, and the least expenditure of money and labour, nothing has yet been discovered to equal

SUNLIGHT SOAP.

CHOLERA

Prevention.

What Wise Precautions can you take to avoid the risk of infection? Observe extra care in diet. Do not incur undue fatigue. Take more frequent baths. Send soiled linen to the wash as speedily as possible, and remember that disease waits upon dirt. You do not wish to be among its victims. Therefore, see that more than usual care is taken to keep the house sweet, and you will do well to insist on the free use in your kitchen of that tried friend of every household,

FOR STRENGTH.

HARNESS' ELECTROPATHIC BELT

GALVANIC & FARADIC. (By Royal Letters Patent)

THIS genuine appliance is very comfortable to wear, and the mild continuous currents of electricity which it imperceptibly generates naturally and speedily invigorate the debilitated Constitution, assist digestion and assimilation, giving strength to every nerve and muscle of the body, and effectively preventing chills and rheumatic pains, which so many people are, unfortunately, subject to in this country, where the climate is so changeable. It seems, and is, a simple remedy; but it is as sure as it is simple, and the number of unsolicited testimonials we have received from all classes of society amply prove that we do not exaggerate when we say that Harness' Electropathic Belts have alleviated the sufferings of thousands of men and women in all parts of the world, most of whom had obtained no relief from medicine, and many of them had been pronounced by their family doctors as positively incurable.

CORPULENCE
Most successfully treated without resorting to Drastic Medicines, Poisonous Drugs, Quack Prescriptions, or Starvation Dietary. Copies of convincing Testimonials and Descriptive Pamphlet Free on application.

TOWER HAMLETS MISSION.

Mr. W. R. Lane closed a special mission in the Great Assembly Hall on Wednesday last week, on which evening a special effort was made to reach the men of the 2nd Battalion of the Coldstream Guards—Mr. Lane's old regiment—which is now quartered at the Tower. Invitations were sent out to the men to assemble for tea, and upwards of a hundred responded. After tea an opportunity for conversation was afforded until a little before eight o'clock, when they mustered in the hall, together with a general audience numbering about a thousand.

In the course of an address, Mr. Lane told how he, once a soldier in Her Majesty's army, was led to enlist also under the banner of King Jesus. Referring to his boyhood, he made a touching allusion to the instructions of his Sunday-school teacher, the influence thus exerted in his early life never wholly leaving him, even when apparently deepest in sin. It was while at Windsor with his regiment that an invitation came to him, through a godly comrade, to attend a meeting for soldiers. At this point Mr. Lane touched upon the respect which an out-and-out Christian would always command even from the most determined opponent of religion, and he urged his hearers to never hide their colours or be ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. Going on with his narrative, he told how he was converted at that Windsor meeting, and of the struggle which he went through on returning to his barracks. Of his subsequent career he spoke briefly, and the whole address was calculated to appeal strongly to the soldiers present. We trust many of them may be led to follow the example of their old comrade.

A prayer-meeting on Friday evening was invested with special interest, owing to the fact that it was the six-thousandth* consecutive gathering in connection with the Mission. The proceedings were presided over by Mr. J. E. Mathieson, who, after some remarks on his interest in the work, urged his believing hearers to be mindful of their heavenly calling. Several friends engaged in praise and prayer, thanking God for raising up Mr. Charrington and those who sustain his hands, and invoking continued and increased blessing upon their devoted labours. Among those who prayed were some who had been brought to God in the Mission, and prayer was offered with work to do in his name. Eternity only will fully reveal the fruitfulness of the operations of the Mission, but this interesting meeting amply showed that long-continued efforts have brought forth much fruit.

Blackgang Mission, Isle of Wight.

The friends in this favoured spot have again celebrated their annual Thanksgiving Festival, which was held on Sept. 29. As usual on these occasions, there was a goodly assemblage of friends from other parts of the island, and this in spite of a regular south-westerly gale, interspersed with heavy showers of rain.

One could not but recognise with deep gratitude how, in spite of the diminished staff of workers, God has continued to bless and sustain the work, so that no department has there been any falling off. The strong characteristics of this little church have always been love and unity.

After a substantial tea, the platform was filled by some old and new friends of the mission, Captain Mitchell, of Portsmouth, as one of the former, taking the chair. Mr. Christopher Smith led in prayer and praise, thanking God for the blessings of the year. Opportunities were given at intervals during the evening for testimony, of which one and another availed themselves. Rev. J. Bateman, of the village of Niton, Mr. Jennings, of London, Mr. Newman, of Landown, and Rev. H. J. Crouch, of Hersham, gave addresses. A thoroughly-happy family feeling pervaded the meeting, and a spirit of thankfulness to God for all his mercies was both expressed and indicated.

Doncaster Convention.

A convention was held here at the close of the summer's work in tent No. 13 of the Evangelisation Society. God set his seal on the tent work in the conversion of some and in the restoration of others. The convention lasted two days, the attendances were from seventy in the morning to 350 the last evening. Mr. T. W. Fisher, of Dublin, Rev. T. W. Moore, Vicar of St. Philip's, Hull, Mr. Gorham, Mr. Nelson Gregson, Mr. Oscar Owers, and others took part.

A short after meeting closed two days in which many were blessed and renewed in strength by living waited upon God.

THE REVEREND WILLIAM HETHERINGTON'S

CHARITY TO THE AGED BLIND.

ESTABLISHED AT
CHRIST'S HOSPITAL, LONDON, IN 1774.

WHEREAS the Rev. WILLIAM HETHERINGTON, a Governor of this Hospital, by a generous gift made in his lifetime, enabled the Governors of the said Hospital to pay Annuities of £10 each to Fifty Aged Blind Persons, in the hope that his example would be followed by others, the Governors give NOTICE that, in consequence of the very munificent additions made to such original Benefaction, by Deed of Gift, by Will, and otherwise, they have for some years past been able to pay Annuities of £10 each to upwards of 700 Aged Blind Persons.

NOTICE is also given that Elections to fill vacancies on the above Charity take place annually in November, and that during the month of October Forms of Petition can be obtained from the Counting House of the Hospital for Blind Persons qualified as under:—

Age, Sixty-one years, or upwards.
Total blindness for three whole years.
Birth and Residence in England, to the exclusion of Wales and Berwick-upon-Tweed.
Residence, in the parish or place where the blind person resides, for three years immediately preceding the date of Petition.
Income.—Any Annuity, Salary, Pension, or Income for Life (if any) already possessed by the Blind person must be under £20 a year.
Parish Relief and Position in Life.—Those who have never occupied a better or higher position in Life than Day Labourers, or Journeymen, or Domestic and Menial Servants; or, who have ever been common beggars, or at any times during their lives have received any Parish Relief as paupers; are deemed ineligible. The intention of the Founder was to relieve such persons only as having been in a better situation in life, are disabled by Blindness from maintaining themselves, and on that account are a burden on their Children or Relatives, not in affluent circumstances; or, having but little of their own, want some addition to what they have to make life more comfortable under such an infirmity.

The above qualifications being in accordance with the expressed wish of the Founder of the Charity, the Governors, to prevent disappointment to many otherwise deserving applicants, give Notice that, unless Petitioners can prove themselves strictly qualified, their applications will be fruitless.

Brit." says: "Iridium is a nearly white metal of high specific gravity, it is almost indestructible, a beautifully polished surface can be obtained upon it." They will not penetrate the paper. Writer's cramp is unknown among users of Gold Pens. One will outwear 90 gross of steel pens. A choice is offered from 250 various shapes and points. They are a perfect revelation to those who have never used Gold Pens.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes has used one of Mabie, Todd & Co.'s Gold Pens since 1857, and is using the same one (his "old friend") to-day; it cost him only 9s. 6d., it would have cost him, in money alone, over £10 to have done the same work with steel pens.

"SWAN" FOUNTAIN PEN, 10/6, Broad, Medium, or Fine Point. Unrivalled and Incomparable.

The "Swan" is a Mabie, Todd & Co. Gold Pen joined to a rubber reservoir to hold any kind of ink, which it supplies to the writing point in a continuous flow. It will hold ink enough for two days' constant work, or a week of ordinary writing, and can be refilled with as little trouble as to wind a watch. With the cover over the gold nib it is carried in the pocket like a pencil, to be used anywhere. A purchaser may try a pen a few days, and, if the writing point does not suit the hand, exchange it for another without charge, or have the money returned. Illustrated Price List, of various sizes (with testimonials), will be sent gratis and post free. Address postal card to INDIA WAITING FOR THE GOSPEL.—A correspondent sends us the following words, written a few weeks ago by Miss Hewlett, Zenana Medical Missionary at Amritzar, in the Punjab:—"I am sure we ought more earnestly than ever to make it known that in every street and lane, if not in every house, at present it is possible to get listeners to the Gospel message, and common to find some of them really more or less interested." Our correspondent rightly says:—"In these days of anxious heart-searching among Christ's disciples as to the question, 'Shall I go to the foreign field?' such words ought to have wide publicity. Are they not a commentary on Luke xiv. 23?"

PECKHAM PARK MISSION.—The friends who devote so much time and strength to services in the Hall, 104, Lower Park-road, and in the open air thereabouts, have had cause to rejoice in evident signs during their fifteenth year of labour that they have been workers together with God in blessing to the neighbourhood. The evangelist, Mr. Lewis Wood, and his wife, are devoted to their work, and spare no pains to bring the Gospel to bear upon those who are living in neglect of the great salvation. A site has been secured for a new Hall, and is being utilised for open-air services until funds are forthcoming to warrant the erection of the building. Mr. Walter Mills, 11, St. John's-road, Brixton, is secretary.

MILDMAY HOME, TORQUAY.—Female patients who from the advanced stage of their illness are ineligible for other institutions are received at "Smyrna," Bronshill-road. Among those received was a sad and lonely orphan girl from Bristol, to whom the contrast between the Home, with its comforts, and the court where she had known poverty and hardship was very great. She said, "I don't know how I can show my thankfulness, but I pray God to bless all who have been so good to me; it seems the only thing I can do." It is practically realised that if the Home is to bring comfort, hope, and peace to those whose life draws near to eventide, all the radiance must come from Him who brought life and immortality to light by his Gospel. The hon. sec. is Miss F. Gumbleton, Connemara, Torquay.

Statement.

For Nervous Exhaustion and that tired feeling there is no remedy so useful as Guy's Tonic. Pleasantly, speedily, and surely it effects a radical change, restores the appetite, cleanses the system, brightens the eye, freshens the complexion, and makes a new being of you.

Proof.

A Letter now published for the first time:—

4, Cambridge Lodge Villas,
Mare Street, London, N.E.,
September 28, 1892.

To Guy's Tonic Company.

Gentlemen,—Mine is a tardy acknowledgment, but not less valuable, because the result of lengthened experience.

Your medicine is good to look at and nice to take, two good things in a tonic. I have often proved its virtue as a pick-me-up after prolonged exertion, and much mental and nervous exhaustion. I recommend Guy's Tonic everywhere.

My deaconesses also speak of it in terms of high praise, and "stock it" for use at the Nursing Station.

Wishing you all success,
I am, Gentlemen, yours faithfully,
SAMUEL WILKES,
Superintendent of Shoreditch Wesleyan Mission.

Guy's Tonic should be immediately resorted to when pain, weight, fulness, or distension is felt after eating; when there is drowsiness after meals; when there is a distaste for food of all kinds; or when there is a dull, weak, failing or pining appetite.

Note.

Guy's Tonic is sold by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors at 2s 9d. per bottle. It will be sent post free at this price by Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

THE FORTY-FIRST SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

"BOTH LUNGS DISEASED"—CASE AT GREAT BROUGHTON, NEAR CARLISLE.

In April of last year I was consulted by Mrs. RUTH WOOD, of the above address. She had been weakly for several years, but much worse for twelve months. Her cough had been very bad all through the winter. Phlegm yellow with greenish tint, and varied with sickness; blood mixed with expectoration, and fluid blood a week before. Pains in the left side were severe, for which iodine had been tried. There were flushings of the face and night perspirations. Loss of flesh in face, neck, chest, and arms. The ankles had commenced swelling. The doctor's report: "Both lungs diseased."

The patient recovered. In August she writes:—"I am glad to say I have received wonderful benefit from your medicine, although I have not been able to take it so regularly as I should; also the liniment you prescribed has been of service."

Writing me this spring, after her confinement, she says: "I have kept fairly well;" but she wisely determined to resume the medicine for a time.

In June last, writing for another patient, she says: "I am glad to say I have better health than for years. I am quite able to attend to all my household duties. Thanks for all your kindness."

NEW HYMNS AND SOLOS

A COLLECTION OF 138 NEW PIECES.

Compiled by Mr. SANKEY,

And Used by the Choirs

At Mr. MOODY'S Meetings.

PREFACE.

This Book contains a choice Selection of the latest and best Pieces by the Authors whose names are found on its pages.

Hoping that these New Hymns and Tunes may add fresh interest to the service of song, wherever used, we send them forth on their joyous mission.

Ira D. Sankey.

The D. L. Moody LIBRARY.

Ten of Mr. Moody's most popular works, well bound in Five Volumes, in a nicely made Case, 10s. 6d.

TITLES.

Addresses.	Bible Characters.	The Old Gospel.
Faithful Saying.	Prevailing Prayer.	Heaven.
Sovereign Grace.		Power from on High
Way to God.		To the Work!

"These are popular works by our great Evangelist, and they deserve a large sale. There can be no need for us to commend the living, blazing speech of our brother Moody. Who can equal him in natural simplicity, all aglow with holy passion?"—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, in "The Sword and Trowel."

Each of the above can be had separately, in Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, bev. boards, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"A delightful picture of the American Evangelist amidst home surroundings. . . . . The account of Christian Conferences, and helpful thoughts expressed at them, is very edifying. Mr. Moody's own 'Bible Nuggets' are among the best in the volume."—The Rock.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, E.C. And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

WORKS BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.

NOW OF

Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road.

MR. D. L. MOODY says:—"FEW BOOKS OF RECENT YEARS ARE BETTER ADAPTED TO INSTRUCT AND HELP CHRISTIANS THAN THOSE OF THIS AUTHOR. HE IS A 'MAN MIGHTY IN THE SCRIPTURES,' SATURATED WITH BIBLE FACTS AND TRUTHS, AND POSSESSED WITH A YEARNING DESIRE TO HELP OTHERS."

EXPOSITORY VOLUMES.

"The popularity of Mr. Meyer's Expositions is a good sign of the times."—British Weekly.

The Life and Light of Men. Expositions of John I.—XII. 5th Thousand. Cloth, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

Tried by Fire. Expositions of the First Epistle of Peter. 10th Thousand. Cloth, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHIES.

"Studies in the lives and times of Biblical characters . . . Marked by great care in preparation, and a suggestiveness that has made them very acceptable to preachers and teachers."—The Quiver.

Abraham; or, the Obedience of Faith 13th Thousand. With nine Original Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

Elijah; and the Secret of his Power. 20th Thousand. With nine Original Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

Israel: a Prince with God. 17th Thousand. With nine Original Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

Joseph: Beloved — Hated — Exalted. 8th Thousand. With nine Original Illustrations. Cloth, 2s. 6d. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

DEVOTIONAL VOLUMES.

"Mr. Meyer writes not in a stiff theological style and speculative manner, but with all the freedom and warmth of one who tastes, handles, and feels the Word of Life."—Footsteps of Truth.

The Shepherd Psalm. Meditations on the 23rd Psalm. 30th Thousand. Cloth, 1s. Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

DOCTORS RECOMMEND REAST'S PATENT INVIGORATOR CORSET.
FOR Ladies, Maids, Girls, & Boys.

THE LANCET, July 23rd, 1892, says:—"We have had submitted to us a specimen of 'Reast's Patent Invigorator Corset.' It claims two important qualifications. First, that it tends to prevent tight lacing, so common and so injurious, and, secondly, that it lends support to the shoulders by means of straps which cross over the shoulders and thus afford valuable assistance to persons who are weak in the chest, or who have a tendency to stoop. We have submitted the truth of these statements to practical test, and the corsets have been found to be a great comfort."

PRICES: Boys & Girls', 4s.6d.; Maids', 5s.6d.; Ladies', 5s.6d., 6s.11d., 7s.11d., 8s.6d., 12s.9d.; Specialite Long Waist, 9s.11d., 12s. 9d.; High Bosom, 7s. 11d.

Don't be put off with old shapes, insist upon having our New Long Waist. If any difficulty in obtaining from the Drapers, write to the PATENTEE, who will send them carriage paid and on approval.

The Prince of Preachers.
NEW LIFE of MR. SPURGEON by REV. JAS. DOUGLAS, M.A.
A Sketch, A Portraiture, and A Tribute,
WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT.
Cloth boards, 2s. 6d. Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

The Rev. THOMAS SPURGEON says of this book:—
"I have been happily conscious that the book is not a mere narration of oft-told facts (with some fiction) and worn-out anecdotes. The 'Sketch' is good; the 'Portraiture' is better; the 'Tribute' is best of all. Right glad am I that Mr. Douglas has succeeded so eminently in his difficult but congenial task."

A Review from THE ROCK:—
"The information is original, the author having exceptional opportunities of 'a personal and private' nature of knowing Mr. Spurgeon. Mr. Douglas has in this memoir given some interesting matters. We have no doubt the book will command a wide popularity."

A Review from WORD AND WORK:—
"In its own way it is quite unique, as it deals with Mr. Spurgeon not from the outside, is not a hash-up of stale incidents with which most religious persons are perfectly familiar, but is a keen, loving, sympathetic analysis and exposition of the powers, purposes, and achievements of the great modern apostle."

A Review from the SWORD AND TROWEL:—
"Since the 'Prince of Preachers' has been promoted to glory, many tributes of love and esteem have been rendered to his memory; but the one before us far excels all others that we have seen at present. Mr. Douglas knew Mr. Spurgeon, loved him, reverenced him, and fought by his side in his great battle for the faith; it was meet that he should sketch his portrait, and he has done it perfectly. We could scarcely wish to have a word altered from the first page to the last."

A Review from THE RECORD:
"It is written with a good deal of skill, and is much more than a bare recital of familar facts."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving a sketch of the Rev. Oscar Michelsen, evangelist of the Island of Tongoa, New Hebrides, South Seas.

The third article upon the Christian Endeavour Movement, by Rev. J. B. Morgan, of Chester, is unavoidably held over this week.

Mr. Moody's Missions at Manchester and Bradford last week were marked by all the tokens of strong interest that we have come to associate with his work. The attendance in Manchester throughout the closing day was estimated at over 20,000. At the conclusion of the Tabernacle Mission the evangelist will go to Norwich for a brief visit, and will afterwards proceed to Dublin to enter on a fortnight's work there.

We are glad to find that at a church meeting of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, held on Friday evening last, and presided over by Mr. Thomas Olney, a basis of agreement was arrived at which we trust will tend to restore general harmony. By an almost unanimous resolution, it was decided that the arrangement with Dr. Pierson be adhered to, and that he serve the church as preacher from November till the end of June next. Coupled with this resolution was a vote of thanks to Mr. Thomas Spurgeon for his services, and also an expression of sympathy with Mr. James Spurgeon in his affliction. It was felt that to take up the question of filling the pastorate at the present juncture was premature. This, without prejudice to the claims of any, would be considered in due course some six months hence. Meanwhile, it was urged that the matter might be dismissed from their minds. It ought also to be said that there was an emphatic pronouncement to the effect that no one was eligible to the pastorate who was not by conviction and practice a Baptist. We think had this pronouncement been given earlier much of the misunderstanding and unpleasantness would not have occurred. Meanwhile, may the Great Head of the Church hold the helm and steer this barque into peaceful waters!

On page 13 we give the portion of an important letter by Capt. Lugard to The Times of Saturday which refers to the missionary and the slavery questions in Uganda. Coming straight from the centre of action and interest, the views of Capt. Lugard must be allowed to have great weight in any final decision as to our national relations with this great Central African territory. We have been taunted with being "a nation of shopkeepers," but surely our commercial instincts do not rest on so selfish a basis that we can afford to disregard altogether questions of national honour, and of the responsibilities we have incurred through our countrymen. If it be at all probable, as Capt. Lugard and other impartial authorities seem to hold, that withdrawal would mean "general war and the inevitable massacre of Christians," a rich nation like Great Britain ought not to grudge some outlay in money to prevent such a horrible catastrophe.

It is a pleasant surprise to read in a morning paper of a Missionary Society in America two hundred and forty-three years old, built upon the successes of John Eliot, and instituted by Oliver Cromwell, Lord Protector of England. The Act of Incorporation passed Parliament on July 27, 1649. It recites that the Commons of England in Parliament assembled had received "certain intelligence that divers the heathen natives of New England had, through the blessing of God upon the pious care and pains of some godly English, who preached the Gospel unto them in their own Indian language, not only of barbarous become civil, but many of them forsaking their accustomed charms and sorceries, and other Satanical delusions, did then call upon the name of the Lord." A general collection was ordered to be made in all the parishes in England and Wales, and by it nearly £12,000 were raised. A new charter was obtained from Charles II. in 1662. From that day to this the "New England Company" has carried on its work among the "Red Men."

The fund also maintains a number of churches on the Indian reserves with English and native ministers, and day schools are supported, taught by native teachers. The seal of the company is an Indian holding a Bible in his hand, with a motto proceeding from his mouth, "Come over and help us." While thankful hearts are rejoicing at the centenary of Carey's advent in India, a note of thankfulness should be struck because John Eliot's noble work continues and prospers.

At the recent annual meeting of the Regent's Park College, an effective address was given to the students by the Rev. J. R. Wood, of Holloway, on the "Minister's Work outside the Pulpit." The first point struck us as of especial value, namely, the importance of standing clear from engagements which do not directly bear on the spiritual objects with which the ministry of the Gospel is immediately concerned. The tendency in the present day is to multiply those calls and claims, which, however excellent of their kind, defraud the minister of the time and strength, all little enough, for his own specific work. We commend Mr. Wood's counsel on this point. For effective ministry concentration is demanded. The minister of Christ should be intensely occupied on the one thing needful—the saving and building up of souls.

Another point emphasised in Mr. Wood's timely address was the need of an individual knowledge of the congregation. Pulpit work should be supplemented by direct personal dealing outside its bounds. It was thus the Apostles laboured who went about from house to house. Human need is the same as ever; and the true way to herald Apostolic Christianity is by the revival of Apostolic practice.

The references which appeared in these columns last week in regard to the unhappy condition of things in Russia are forcibly illustrated by some of the narratives which appear in a recently-published volume upon the Czar's country, Queer Scenes from Russia (James Clarke & Co.). The writer shows forcibly what penalties await those who in Russia venture, or even propose, to separate themselves from the Orthodox Church and join the Protestant Dissenters. Alluding to the publication of the book, The Daily Telegraph, October 7, remarks:—"It is needless to say that most roads in Russia lead to Siberia, and a tendency to Stundism (Protestant Dissent) is usually corrected by ten years in the mines or a period of typhus in a filthy gaol."

The closing of the gambling houses of Ostend by the Procureur-Général is an official act which denotes a healthy under-current of opinion in the highest circles. The scandal was obtrusive and rampant. It was known that many well-to-do residents and visitors had been reduced to beggary through attendance at these places. It is said the police received certain instructions which left them no choice. The moral effect of the proceedings will, we hope, be widely felt.

The Church Congress at Folkestone was an influential assemblage, and many of the subjects discussed were of great importance. There was, however, a one-sidedness about the proceedings which has disappointed Evangelical members of the Church of England. Not only were many extreme positions maintained by Ritualistic speakers, but some utterances were of such a character as to reflect little credit upon their authors. As for instance when, in referring to unsectarian work in seaside places, the Dean of Windsor deprecated the leaving of young people "to the care of amateur religionists on the sands!"

The following remarks by the Archbishop of Canterbury are quite in accordance with convictions which have been more than once urged in these columns. We commend them to the thought and prayer of all our readers who are interested in missions, and we hope that means all without exception:—

> Regard missions as students of history or of Church polity, and we must own that our present organisations and the necessity of pleasing our religious masses are leading us into thin extensions, and are not kindling those white-hot foci which wrought the establishment of Christianity and the Church in the past. Our present methods make us extremely distrustful alike of our own leaders and of our own disciples, afraid to trust the former with power, and to brace the latter with responsibility. And yet it was by such confidence in converts, and such reliance in emissaries, that the Apostolic Churches, and the Churches which Christianised ourselves, did all their work. The ancient ways evoked genius, originality, entire sacrifice. Have we found these powers spring in the track of our methods? Have we given them freedom when they appeared? Consequently, do the really great religions of the world give any sign of surrender?

Some of the papers arrogated great authority to the Church, and others equally underestimated Holy Scripture. Diverse views were expressed on the Old Testament, but the following simple sentences by Professor Ince, of Oxford, are, in our judgment, as eloquent as they are incontrovertible:—

> The Church accepts as canonical those same books which Israel, the chosen people of God, accepted at the time of Christ. It is beyond contradiction that Christ Himself stamped these sacred books as a whole with his authority, as containing revelations of the will of God and records of his providential guidance of the history of his people. He constantly appealed to the ancient Scriptures. He declared explicitly that He came not to destroy but to fulfil the law and the prophets. His Apostles, trained by Himself to be the propagators of his teaching, appealed to these same Scriptures in proof of their proclamation that their Master, Jesus, was the Messiah to whom all the hopes of the Jewish nation were directed. In all the assemblies of the early Christian Churches for worship and instruction, in the period immediately following the Apostolic age, lessons from the Old Testament were read co-ordinately with selections from the Apostolic Epistles and from the Gospels.

This should be sufficient for devout and unsophisticated Christians. The Professor showed a wise judgment in concluding in these terms:—

I desire to give emphatic expression to the conviction that no one is in a position to estimate the permanent value of the Old Testament, as an instrument of education, who does not approach the study of it in a religious spirit. A cold, unsympathetic critic, whose only motive is to dissect and analyse and refer to their respective dates and authors, real or imaginary, a series of books which have formed, in whole or in part, the sacred literature of the Jewish and the early Christian religion, will be so absorbed in his linguistic and historical and archæological researches, that he will miss or fail to appreciate the spirit which animates and gives meaning to the literature. A purely naturalistic point of view which denies the very possibility of Divine guidance of human affairs and Divine revelation of spiritual truth, will misinterpret Old Testament history, and attribute Old Testament theology to the external influences of other civilisations. He who holds the faith of Christ, while he recognises the value of sober criticism, will have the obscuring veil taken away from his heart in the reading of the Old Testament, for he will confess that these Holy Scriptures have been "able to make him wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus."

One interesting discussion was that upon the preaching of the Church of England clergy, which, it was freely admitted, is not what it should be. Canon Twells complained that,

While the average standard of preaching had materially improved of late years, the habit of listening had diminished.

The Dean of Rochester declared his experience that

The English clergy wrote better sermons than any other, but they were the worst preachers in Christendom, [and that] inferior preaching without book answered far better than the sermon of superior merit written and read.

When men preach, or write as the Apostle John did, of "that which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life," their preaching will carry conviction with it, because it is itself the result of conviction. Mr. Justice Grantham was right when he said that but where conviction is lacking (in Church of England and Nonconformist pulpits alike) there the preaching will fall upon inattentive ears, and fail in its purpose. It is only God's Word "that proceedeth out of his mouth" that He has promised "shall not return unto Him void."

Introducing the important topic of the prevalence of drinking among the women of the middle and upper classes, Lady Frederick Cavendish boldly unveiled the growing tendency for ladies to take stimulants at all hours of the day. The habit may be disguised under euphonious names, but it is none the less pernicious and dangerous in its effects. The Duchess of Bedford also emphatically urged total abstinence upon Christian workers, without which, she contended, they were "disqualified from aggressive attack on the main source of crime and misery in the people among whom they worked." It is gratifying indeed to find ladies of title such as these speakers, and Lady Henry Somerset, Lady Sebright, and others, coming forward to grapple with a deadly evil, whether it exist in East-end slums or in the mansions of Belgravia.

The discussion on vivisection was characterised by undignified warmth on the part of those who favour the practice. Bishops Barry and Moorhouse vigorously denounced the system, declaring it immoral, and therefore un-Christian. While there were many medical pleas for vivisection, there were not wanting medical protests, and Dr. J. H. Clarke pronounced the use of anæsthetics nothing less than a fraud upon animals. It is astonishing to us that so many should fail to see that vivisection is this, and much besides. We do not believe that God will bless it to any human good, for it is not only demoralising in itself, but an abuse of his handiwork.

The Late Lord Tennyson.

Full of years and of honours, Lord Tennyson has passed away from earth. During their lifetime few have seen so many of their lines pass into the common currency of literature. Certainly no poet of the present century has made himself so familiar to all sorts and conditions of men. Perhaps it is too soon to weigh with scrupulous care the worth of his writings. Nevertheless, it may be allowable to make a few extracts from his poems which breathe a Christian spirit.

In the "Morte D'Arthur," speaking of prayer, he says:—

Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore, let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats,
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer,
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

Throughout "In Memoriam," with its plaintiveness tending sometimes to degenerate into doubt, there are numerous verses of exquisite melody. Here is one allusion to a well-known Gospel story:—

And home to Mary's house returned,
Was this demanded—if he yearned
To hear her weeping by his grave?

"Where wert thou, brother, those four days?"
There lives no record of reply,
Which, telling what it is to die,
Had surely added praise to praise.

From every house the neighbours met,
The streets were filled with joyful sound,
A solemn gladness even crown'd
The purple brows of Olivet.

Behold a man raised up by Christ!
The rest remaineth unreveal'd;
He told it not; or something seal'd
The lips of the Evangelist.

Her eyes are homes of silent prayer,
Nor other thought her mind admits,
But he was dead, and there he sits,
And He that brought him back is there.

The one deep love doth supersede
All other, when her ardent gaze
Roves from the living brother's face,
And rests upon the Life indeed.

All subtle thought, all curious fears,
Borne down by gladness so complete,
She bows, she bathes the Saviour's feet
With costly spikenard and with tears.

Thrice blest whose lives are faithful prayers,
Whose loves in higher love endure;
What souls possess themselves so pure,
Or is there blessedness like theirs?

One other quotation from his latest volume may suffice. Its reference to "crossing that bourne from which no traveller returns" lends it special significance:—

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

For many reasons the name of Lord Tennyson will live as long as the English language. No line of his is inconsistent with the great and pure ideals he taught us to love. We are far, however, from being able to endorse all his sentiments. There are speculations and suggestions in some of his poems to which we could not for a moment consent. The speculations about "the larger hope," which is his phrase, have been greatly fostered by his teaching, though the disciples have gone far beyond the suggestions of their teacher. What he did but "faintly trust," some of them have taught as a certainty.

We devoutly trust that his hope has been fulfilled, and that having "crost the bar," and seen his "Pilot face to face," he has learned the opened mystery of things within the veil.

IN MEMORIAM.

'Tis life of which our nerves are scant;
'Tis life, more life, for which we pant;
More life, and fuller, that I want.
—Tennyson.

"He asked life of Thee, and Thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever."—Ps. xxi. 11.

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John x. 10.

The moon's sweet light shines on the darkened bed,
And flits across the dying poet's head.
No struggle here—he gently yields his breath,
And falls into the long calm sleep of death.
His work is done, he lays his armour down,
And earth's poor fame is changed for heaven's crown.

How oft, sweet friend, thy words have cheered my way
And turned its long dark shadows into day.
How oft thy God-born gifts of truest gladness,
Come strongly to my soul in times of sadness.
Dear Tennyson—thy words have brought me nearer
To Jesus' cross, and made his service dearer.

A. Stephenson.

'Twas "Life—more Life"—thou cravedst, in the time
Of dawn, how long ere death thy pulse did stay,
O rare sweet poet! herald of a clime
All golden, where the sun doth rule the day.
And thou art gone from earth, thou whom from youth
My soul had loved and ardently revered;
Remembering the reverence and the ruth,
The well-set music that thy lore endeared.
Thou walkedst, as a Seer and Singer must,
Amid and yet apart from other men.
To God and his great love soared strong thy trust
When Earth's dark mysteries shadowed all thy ken.
Oh! hadst thou, through the opened heavens, beheld
The glorious Son of God and Son of man,
Thou hadst, for Him, foregone those scenes of eld:
Thou hadst been merged in God's supremest plan.
But now his mercy takes thee to a realm
Where never king but One is named or known;
Thy storm-tossed barque, Life's Pilot at the helm.
Lands thee, belov'd, where Jesus has "his own,"
Where all adore the Lamb, and thus surround the throne.

The Congregational Union.

The autumnal meetings of the Union are being held in Bradford. At the opening meeting on Monday Rev. J. Morgan Gibbon preached on "The Mission of Christianity." In the evening an enthusiastic temperance meeting was held, at which good progress was reported in connection with the Congregational Total Abstinence Association.

"DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES."—In connection with the departure of 125 trained girls from "Dr Barnardo's Homes" to Canada, a farewell meeting took place yesterday afternoon in Lower Exeter Hall.

Apostolic Speeches.

Acts xxvi.

In this chapter we see how the examination of the Apostle Paul, now a prisoner, became the means of bringing the Gospel before persons high in station, who otherwise might never have heard it.

The Gospel, as opened in the 1st Cor., chap. xv., is based upon two facts; (1) the death and burial of Christ; (2) the resurrection of Christ. The blessings of salvation from sin and its consequences, and the glories of the new creation, are a sequence of these two facts. It is the second of them that is now in question. To use the words of the perplexed Roman Governor Festus, there was "one Jesus who was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive." He had thought that Paul's accusers would have had some evil deeds to charge him with; and with matters of that character he knew how to deal. But some religious superstition seems to be mixed up with this question, stirring up sanguinary hatred to a degree quite beyond the governor's comprehension; and he wishes to receive from the prisoner a full account of himself, and of his doctrines, in order that the case might be properly reported to the Roman Emperor, to whom Paul had felt compelled to appeal.

It was judged incredible "if God doth raise the dead." And arguments and difficulties may easily be started if human reasoning is substituted for facts. But Paul does not theorise. He simply affirms that the resurrection is already a fact. He who had been crucified, and certified by the Centurion to be dead, and laid in a sealed sepulchre, had subsequently appeared in glory to Paul, had spoken to him, and had appointed to him, as his life work, to make known the unsearchable riches of Christ.

Passing beyond the personal circumstances, the defence embraces the whole scheme of Christian Evangelization, and becomes another model of instruction for all time; affording a simple yet comprehensive and grand view of the truth in its entirety. For the Apostles did not isolate points of truth, but linked one with another and another, so that a thoughtful hearer might perceive the whole outline intelligently.

The details are as follows:—

(a) The prisoner, Paul, gives an account of himself, sorrowfully relating his former active opposition to Jesus of Nazareth, and how his conversion was effected by Divine action. Occasionally those who speak for the Lord do well to be stewards, not only of their knowledge of truth, but of their personal experience of the Lord's dealings with themselves. He was at that time at the height of his opposition—as he expressed it "being exceedingly mad" against the disciples, and was travelling to Damascus for the purpose of bringing any he could find there bound to Jerusalem.

It was mid-day, but there shone a greater light of marvellous glory. This light came from heaven, and Paul heard a voice speaking in the Hebrew tongue; it addressed him by the name he then bore, and in words showing the speaker's perfect acquaintance with his career, and this speaker said, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest."

These things being true, the doctrine that God raises the dead is established—Jesus had been raised.

(b) Besides Paul's conversion there were other objects in view, for none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. Paul was made a "minister" and a "witness" of a two-fold revelation, "both of the things wherein thou hast seen me, and of the things wherein I will appear unto thee." And he was sent to the people (Israel) and to the nations generally for these definite purposes:—

1. To open their eyes,
2. That they may turn from darkness to light,
3. And from the power of Satan unto God;
4. To receive certain specified blessings, namely, remission of sins, and an inheritance among them that have been sanctified to the faith of Jesus Christ.

(c) The Apostle then states his mode of procedure, namely: he exhorted men to return as contrite sinners to their God, and he made known God's provision for their salvation.

He declared to all on every hand—

1. That they should repent,
2. And turn to God,
3. And live an outward practical life, appropriate to the internal change.

Thus John Wesley and other reformers fulfilled their mission also. Let the reader consider whether there is need in current days to return to this simplicity and to preach more closely to this model. If he himself is a speaker to others, does he himself speak like that? Has he ever spoken like that?

(d) Paul's preaching respecting Christ was according to the Old Testament Scriptures, which foretold the very things that had now become the foundation of Christianity, namely, the death and resurrection of Christ. Paul laid no other foundation than these two truths:—

1. That Christ must suffer.
2. And that He first from his resurrection should proclaim light, both to Israel and to all nations. The sun of righteousness has arisen from the darkness of death with healing in his wings. The Saviour Jesus Christ hath abolished death and brought to light through the Gospel two things, life and incorruption.

(e) Stirring admonitions may be made, and of course most properly, to those who are hesitating—almost persuaded. But the verse in this chapter on which such exhortations are usually based seems rather to express the derisive thought, "he is thinking to convert me into a Christian." However this may have been, there shines forth in the Apostle's reply the tender yearning of a true preacher, and herein is another example for all who labour. He would to God not only that the king, but also all that heard him that day might become such as he was, except (perhaps raising significantly the chained hand)—except these bonds.

With this affectionate wish, I conclude these papers on the Apostolic speeches. What was embraced in Paul's prayerful desire? What had he been? Once, he says, a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious. Now he was being saved by the grace of God in Jesus Christ; at peace with God; accepted in Christ's righteousness; cleansed in the efficacy of his blood; in loving fellowship with Him to whom he owed all; and serving Him in every way, at every open door, lovingly, zealously, faithfully, gratefully; a temple of the Holy Spirit; a child of God; a man of love, holy and true; growing into conformity to the likeness of his master; in full assurance that any evil he might experience was but for a passing time, and would really be made to work for his good; and that, however he might be misunderstood and wrongly treated by his present judge or others, he would receive from the Lord, the righteous Judge, a crown of righteousness in the day of his appearing. Happy is he who is experiencing the joys of this faith; and all praise to Him for whose sake and through whom they come, are still coming, and will for ever endure!

MANCHESTER CITY MISSION.

Ever since its foundation the managers of this mission have considered their most important work to be door-to-door visitation by devoted and skilled men and women. They have steadily pursued this kind of effort for fifty-four years, and they believe that the visits, instruction, and prayers of their agents have been an unfailing source of comfort and blessing to the poor, cheering many a hard lot, sustaining sinking hearts, soothing dying pillows, and comforting mourners.

But who shall tell all about meetings in workshops, factories, hospitals, railway-sheds, low lodging-houses, tramp wards, the visitation of police-courts, the watchings at prison gates, the prayers in dens of licentiousness, thieves' haunts and shebeens, the preachings at wakes, fairs, races, and on public thoroughfares? Who shall estimate the value of the work which has been done by those who, Bible in hand, have been so long saturating the minds of Manchester's lapsed and lapsing population with Christian hopes and moral ideas, counteracting the influence of political incendiaries and infidel so-called iconoclasts?

Among the ninety-four busy workers of various kinds now in the employ of the Mission are old men who have spent many years of their life amid the sorrows, sufferings, and temptations of the poor. It does one good to hear them say, looking back on near half a century's labour, that, if they had to begin life afresh, they would still choose to be missionaries; for the work is so interesting, the variety of character met with so great, the love and gratitude elicited so touching, the fortitude and endurance witnessed so splendid, that the work is a kaleidoscope of fascinating pictures which no eyes ever see but theirs and God's.

Every week the Mission reaches by visitation and Gospel meetings 50,000 adults, while its 1000 volunteer workers come into daily contact with large numbers of godless persons in public works and factories. There are about 3000 children in the Bands of Hope, and 2000 cottage meetings were held during 1891. The Mission, which began last year with an adverse balance, which at the close had been increased by £500. This amount might have been easily met by a large reduction in the staff, but that the board of management believed such a course would not be satisfactory to their supporters. There is a most interesting item in the accounts, namely £600 from district associations, which is to a large extent the contribution of the poor. The son of a converted widow, the mainstay of her home, got a rise of two shillings in his weekly wages. After a little thought the widow said, "We have hitherto managed without this two shillings, and I would like to do so still to the end of the quarter, for though I cannot preach the Gospel myself, I would like to help those who can." The secretary is Mr. J. Wakefield Macgill, 100, Corporation-street.

CAMBRIDGE HEATH.—The programme of the Parmiter-street Mission for the first winter quarter shows that this mission is doing a quiet but good work in this part of East London. Besides a large Sunday-school there are a number of meetings, classes, etc., suited to the locality, whilst a course of fortnightly Protestant Lectures in connection with the Protestant Alliance has been commenced. To assist in raising funds for the work, and especially to meet the cost of some very necessary repairs, a four days' sale of work is to be held at the beginning of December. Contributions of work may be sent to Miss Beck, 40, Groombridge-road, N.E.

Missionary Money.

It is not from the poor rich, who so hardly enter the Kingdom, but from the rich poor, "rich in faith and heirs of the Kingdom," that the money which is needed for carrying the Gospel to the ends of the earth is to be obtained. The Missionary Prayer Union, which we mentioned last week, is an indication of one way in which not only all that is needed may easily be raised, but at the same time the young people in our churches may be daily informed and interested concerning Gospel missions to the heathen; habituated to daily prayer for them; and educated in daily giving; and this daily training will inculcate and cultivate in not a few the desire to become missionaries themselves.

There is not a church, however rich and great, or however poor and small, to which the Missionary Prayer Union would not be a double benediction, blessing those who give and those who receive. There is not a church in which there is any difficulty in its immediate initiation; and if it be everywhere begun at once, before the new year sets in we shall hear of thousands of pounds rained into the Lord's treasury, by a multitude of praying, joyous, generous saints of God.

There are many large and gracious families where the same principle and method may be adopted. The tiny rills of individual prayer, when the door is shut and the child prays to the Father who sees in secret, will become a rivulet in social worship, a stream in each of the churches, and a river of living water flowing from the universal Church.

We shall then see realised before our eyes Ezekiel's vision of the waters that flowed eastward. A thousand measured cubits, and the waters were to the ankles; another, to the knees; another, to the loins; and then, says the prophet, "a river (a torrent), that I could not pass over; for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river (a torrent) that could not be passed over."

Hast thou seen this? At the brink of the river very many trees, on the one side and on the other. These waters issue out from the temple toward the east circle, and go down into the desert, and go into the sea. And every living soul wherewith it swarmeth, whithersoever the twin torrents (of God's love and his people's proclamation of that love) shall come, shall live; and there shall be a very great multitude of fish (of which the net full of great fishes—a hundred and fifty and three—was the initial promise), because these waters shall come thither; for they shall be healed and everything shall live whither the river (the torrent) cometh. And it shall come to pass that the fishers shall stand upon it, from Engedi to En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the Great Sea, exceeding many.

("I WILL MAKE YOU FISHERS OF MEN")

The Great Sea is the Mediterranean, in the midst of the earth, out of which rose the four great beasts of Daniel's vision of the world-rulers of this darkness; and so the fishes of the Great Sea, exceeding many, according to their kinds, may well represent to us the thousand millions of the nations lying in darkness and the shadow of death.

The Septuagint version of the soul-stirring and soul-elevating passage (Ezek. xlvii. 1-12), quoted above, with various renderings and readings from the Variorum Bible, is of much interest, and our space is well occupied in reproducing it:—

And he brought me to the entrance of the house; and behold, water issued from under the porch eastward, for the front of the house looked eastward; and the water came down from the right side, from the south to the altar. And he brought me out by the way of the northern gate, and he led me round by the way outside to the gate of the court that looks eastward; and, behold, water came down from the right side, in the direction in which a man went forth opposite; and there was a measuring line in his hand, and he measured a thousand cubits with the measure; and he passed through the water, it was water of a fountain; and again he measured a thousand, and passed through the water; and the water was up to his thighs; and again he measured a thousand; and he passed through water up to the loins. And again he measured a thousand; and he could not pass through, for the water rose as of a torrent which men cannot pass over.

And he said to me, hast thou seen this, son of man? Then he brought me and led me back to the brink of the river as I returned; and, behold, on the brink of the river there were very many trees on this side and on that side. And he said to me, this is the water that goeth forth to Galilee that lies eastward, and it is gone down to Arabia, and has reached as far as to the sea, to the outlet of the water; and it shall heal the waters. And it shall come to pass, that every animal of living and moving creatures, all on which the river shall come, shall live; and there shall be there very many fish; for this water shall go thither, and it shall heal them, and they shall live; everything on which the river shall come, shall live.

And fishers shall stand there from Ingadin to Enagallim; it shall be a place to spread out nets upon; it shall be distinct; and the fishes thereof shall be as the fishes of the Great Sea, a very great multitude. But at the outlet of the water, and the turn of it, and where it overflows its banks, they shall not heal at all; they are given to salt. And every fruit tree shall grow by the river, even on the bank of it, on this side and on that side, they shall not decay upon it, neither shall their fruit fail; they shall bring forth the first-fruit of their early crop, for these their waters come forth of the sanctuary; and their fruit shall be for meat, and their foliage for health.

Has not Ezekiel been dreaming? Is not all this mere poetry, imaginative and unreal? No; it is the sober truth of God. It is we who have been dreaming; and now that our sister Ireland is waking up as never before; and the continent of Europe is casting off the false god which Rome has foisted upon it in the name of God; and India's varied populations are being set free from faith in their idols; and the land is being flooded with agnostic, infidel, and obscene literature: now surely is the time for the torrent of God's love to find its twin torrent of Christian enthusiasm, and flood the world with the water of life.

The children of the Sunday-schools, the Young Endeavourers, the daily praying and the daily giving members of Jesus Christ—these in halfpence and pence and small silver will supply the sinews of the holy war; and this generation of his people shall accomplish its God-given obligation, to evangelise the present generation of the world. "For HIS workmanship are we, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before prepared, that we should walk in them."

MISSIONARY PRAYER UNION.

REV. GEORGE WAINWRIGHT, with whom the idea of this Union originated, writes as follows in explanation:—

The working of the union is simple. Each member is supplied with a box and a card of membership. On one side of the card is an illuminated diagram, which presents at a glance a view of the population of the world and the relative number of adherents of every form of religion, and the millions of unevangelised heathen. The following is a copy of the other side:—

NAME OF CHURCH OR MEETING.
MISSIONARY PRAYER UNION.
Member's Card.—No....

Name.....
Date.....

AGREEMENT.

"Recognising that I am called to fellowship with Christ in the work of making known his Gospel to all the world, I will endeavour, unless hindered by some excuse which He can accept as valid, to pray daily, and give not less than .....each day for missionary work."

SUGGESTED PLAN FOR DAILY PRAYER.

Sunday.—For a deepening interest among all Christians in missionary work, for more spiritual power to rest upon all missionaries, for their preservation in the midst of danger, and for the conversion of the heathen.

Monday.—India and Ceylon. Population over 287,000,000.

Tuesday.—China and Japan. Population, 400,000,000.

Wednesday.—Africa. Population about 250,000,000.

Thursday.—Jamaica and West Indies. Population about 4,000,000.

Friday.—Roman Catholics and Jews everywhere.

Saturday.—Missionary societies and their committees.

Quarterly meetings in January, April, July, and October.

We have at present only two officers, president and secretary. The secretary keeps a record of the names of the members in a book, ruled to admit each of the four quarterly amounts received, and another column for the year's total. Each name is numbered, and the number transferred to the card of membership. The amounts are either collected or brought in before the quarterly meeting, when the amount received from each member is announced.

MR. T. SPURGEON'S FAREWELL.

A REMARKABLE and affecting scene was witnessed at the Metropolitan Tabernacle on Sunday morning when Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, who has conducted the services there for the past three months, preached for the last time. In concluding his sermon, Mr. Spurgeon, addressing his audience as "Christian friends," said that he wanted them to clear the decks for action. Let all grudges be forgotten, let all disappointments be remitted to the past, let all of what they sometimes called feeling be buried and obliterated, and let not one single thought concerning either the past or the future interfere with the work they had to do for God. They should let this go by, and be ready for every good work.

Prayer was then offered up, at the conclusion of which Mr. Spurgeon continued:—"I will try to express just some of my feelings this morning. First of all, I would like to say that I am greatly gratified by the kindness which has been shown me. I would like to say, if I can only choose the words, something to express my gratitude—first, that you have asked me to the old country at all, and so conferred upon me a privilege I could not else have had, to stand in this sacred place, to see my dear mother again, to stand in my father's place, and to behold the place where you laid him. These are privileges, though some of them are sad, which I do from my heart appreciate, and I have to offer my thanks here for it being made possible for me to do this. I thank you also for hearing me so attentively, for coming to hear me in such numbers, for supporting the offertory so liberally, and for very many acts of kindness which have been shown to me during my sojourn here. I came at your call, and, as I thought—and as I still think—at the Master's call. I have tried to serve you under circumstances which, I confess, have been most trying, for I had hardly recovered from what was to me the shock of returning to stand here when sorrow of another sort possessed my heart. I seem to have been unwillingly in the midst of strife. Well, dear friends, I have tried to serve you, or perhaps I might say tried rather to serve my Master, and I am glad to know that many of the Lord's people have been helped by my poor words. I thought when I went away last that I might never come here again, for my dear father said to me, 'Good bye, son Tom, but you must not come back, for I could not say "good-bye" to you again, for I shall never see you in the flesh,' and so it was. The hope of seeing Jesus makes our hearts one. In my heart the flag flies half-mast high, but it is still the flag of the Master whom we all serve."

Mr. Spurgeon, who was visibly affected, then resumed his seat, and immediately afterwards there was a remarkable demonstration on the part of the congregation. Women were to be seen everywhere weeping and sobbing aloud, and even men were carried away by the influence of the moment. From the body of the hall and from the upper and lower galleries were heard loud cries of "God bless you," "Good-bye," and "Come back again." In a few minutes, however, this emotion subsided, and the service concluded in the usual manner.

AN OPPORTUNITY.—Rev. C. Parkhurst Baxter, chaplain of the Hospital for Women, Soho Square, W., will be thankful for the services of a lady to play the harmonium at a service held on Sundays, from 4.30 to 6.30 p.m., also on Saturday mornings at 10.30

The Revival in Ireland.

It might be well, before Mr. Moody and Mr. Neill resume in Dublin their mission, to view the results, so far as they are visible, and can be tabulated by man. I think, if questioned, both would, with thanksgiving, gladly testify that, for number and spiritual fluence, these meetings far exceeded their pectations. Mr. Moody has had long and ge experience, in many parts of England d America, of the doings of the Lord, yet I ubt not his testimony would be that his uth was filled with laughter and his tongue h singing, because of the great things which d hath wrought.

Mr. M'Neill, fresh from an extended mis- n through Scotland, greatly blessed of God, uld gladly testify that these meetings in lfast have filled him with wonder and aise.

The scenes witnessed in the Convention ilding, Belfast, will never pass from the emories of those present. Some 10,000 ople hung nightly upon the words of the eaker, while outside the building crowds ited for admission. The hush that fell on the spirits of men when the Spirit of d was hovering over all, and working in ousands of hearts, was at times oppressive. see young men in tens, and twenties, and ies, rising up to confess Christ, moved all esent; shall I not add also Heaven and Hell? rhaps more soul-moving still it was to see e grey-haired and the aged rising as seeking er God. On one occasion some twenty en, the youngest about sixty years, rose as together, confessing that they were still vithout Christ." Need I add, the sight ew prayers and tears from those beholding ?

While it was so daily under Mr. Moody, e meetings under Mr. M'Neill were equally owded. Perhaps from his Scotch connec- n, his meetings were attended by crowds om the shipyards that had not assembled herto. The sweet singing by Mr. Burke of My Ain Countrie" seemed to lift many of em in a flood-tide of feeling over the bar of ejudice and unbelief, into the haven of rest Christ. As the result, the churches have en quickened, backsliders reclaimed, and God ne, who counts up the people, can record ncerning how many it may be said: "This an and that man was born there." Politicians y they built the Convention Building for a litical end. But I believe God built it for e conversion of a multitude of souls.

But the work of God, through his servant r. Moody, in Dundalk, Cork, Limerick, Water- rd, Tralee, Galway, Sligo, Enniskillen, and ewry, is, in my judgment, still more gnificant and hopeful. It cries aloud all friends of Christ in Ireland and else- here to hearken and hear and defer not, if ey have ears to hear what God is saying, this movement, to the churches. It may t be prudent to enter into local details; let suffice to say that the readiness to receive e word, and the blessing given in all these aces, proclaim with emphasis and assurance at Ireland is open to the Gospel as it has t been for generations. Men of all denomi- tions, men whom we would naturally ppose to be most unlikely to attend, came crowds, and gladly received the truth. If e Protestants of Ireland would consider and ow the times and what Israel ought to do, they would cordially unite in prayer and fort, they would, under God, do a work at hich statesmen have laboured in vain.

The mission, as your readers may know, is be resumed in Dublin in the course of the month. I would most earnestly invite all who are longing for the salvation of men and for the spread of the Gospel in Ireland, to unite in special prayer for the coming meetings. I would say to many of your readers, Come over and help us. Their presence, their prayers, and their friendly co-operation would greatly aid us. A work may be wrought in Dublin by the Holy Ghost through these meetings that shall be as life from the dead to the city, and may influence the whole land.

H. M. Williamson, D.D.

Belfast, Oct. 6.

MR. MOODY IN NEWRY.

It was feared that Newry would not be favoured by a visit from this evangelist. However, Mr. Moody, at the request of a local committee, arranged that his fortieth day in Ireland should be devoted to the frontier town. Such was the desire to hear him that visitors from Lurgan, Portadown, Armagh, Warrenpoint, and Dundalk, poured into Newry from an early hour. Mr. Moody preached a powerful discourse in the afternoon. At half-past seven also, to a large audience, he preached from the words "God is Love." The representative of The Newry Telegraph interviewed Mr. Moody in the course of the evening. The evangelist said that this was the last of his forty days' mission in Ireland, and they had been among the best days in all his life. He thought that if the Christian men and women of Ireland took the opportunity of the flood tide, they never had a better opportunity of continuing a great and blessed work in the country. During the forty days he had been here, he had experienced the best treatment from the Press, the Roman Catholics, and the Protestants of all denominations. Everyone was very kind and interested. This was his third visit to Ireland, and the results far excelled anything he had experienced in Ireland previously. He had never known anything like the interest which had been manifested in his mission—he had seen men standing for three hours to listen to the message of the Gospel. From Londonderry all through the country it had been the same—north, south, east, and west. He was now going to Manchester, and expected to be back in Ireland in three weeks, when he would be assisted by Rev. John M'Neill and Mr. Whittle.

MAJOR WHITTLE'S MEETINGS.

WATERFORD.

Mr. D. W. Whittle (writes a correspondent) held a mission in the skating rink, Waterford, from Monday, September 26, to Friday, September 30. The building is capable of holding about 1400 people. The interest increased each day, and the closing meeting was one of the most solemn and impressive ever held here. A large number attended of those who never hear the Gospel in its fulness; they listened attentively, and many were afterwards spoken to. All the Protestant ministers of the city attended, and sympathised with the work. The after meetings were well attended, and very many professed to have found peace in believing. The spiritual results give cause for great thankfulness.

GALWAY.

The interest excited by the visit of Mr. D. L. Moody induced a number of Christian friends to send an urgent appeal to Major Whittle inviting him to undertake a four days' mission in Galway. He arrived on October 1, accompanied by Miss Boardman, Miss Whittle, and Captain Mandeville, R.N. Meetings for prayer and the practice of hymns had been held during the week, and such preparation made as the short notice permitted.

The first service was held on Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock, and the spirit that pervaded it gave promise of a successful mission. In the afternoon and evening the hall was crowded; indeed, in the evening standing room could not be found for all the people who desired to be present, and this is true of all the evening meetings. At the closing meeting many had to be turned away for lack of room.

It is unnecessary to attempt to characterise Major Whittle's gifts as an evangelist, but we may say he is pre-eminent for earnestness, persuasiveness, and downright simplicity. The beginning, the middle, the end is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, not an elaborated Gospel, but a plain, simple Gospel given to and fitted for a sin-burdened and sin-troubled world. Very many were deeply impressed, and many made public profession of their acceptance of Jesus Christ as their Saviour. Special interest attaches to this series of meetings from the number of Roman Catholics who attended. In that respect this effort and its result represents a new era in modern evangelistic effort in Galway. At the closing meeting there could not have been less than two hundred Roman Catholics present. In the first instance there was an attempt on the part of a number to cause some disturbance, and interrupt the meetings. This spirit, however, gradually died away, and the meetings closed in a spirit of kindness and goodwill.

Much might be said on the subject of this mission, for it was full of interest at every point. A word or two may be permitted on the closing scenes. After the general meeting Major Whittle said he would like to meet with any of the men who desired to hear a few parting words on the subject that had engaged them during the mission. Over two hundred gathered into a side room; He spoke plainly and affectionately, and all listened with the deepest attention. In the course of his address he said the people of Ireland were making progress in the matter of education; nearly all could read, and in his opinion—an opinion founded on a somewhat wide experience—they could not be kept in touch with the things of the Kingdom of God by authority. They could think for themselves and judge for themselves, and he urged upon them that if they would form a right judgment upon those matters that are unspeakably precious, they should read God's message to men—to sinful men, to poor men, to unlearned men. It was the birthright of every man, and if any there desired a New Testament he would be happy to provide one. Many applied for the Book. All joined in an invitation to Major Whittle to return to Galway, and wished him God speed in his mission in the South and West.

The last scene was on this wise—the parting had been delayed through the desire of many to have a few words of personal conversation. It was thought all had passed out, when it was noticed that Miss Boardman was absent, and a member of the party returned to seek her. She was found in one of the side rooms kneeling and leading in prayer, and kneeling round and reverently taking part in the supplications were three young men who had requested such an interview ere she left.

A few friends saw the mission party off next morning, and as the train steamed out of the station, those around heard the sweet strains of "God be with you till we meet again." Prayer is asked on behalf of God's work and God's workers in Galway.

MR. MERTON SMITH IN NEWRY.

A correspondent writes:—"The tide has been rising all the week, until last night (Friday) we had the 'floods.' It was the largest meeting we have had yet and very many anxious ones were present. The children's services are packed each day, and there has been a very blessed work amongst the older children."

The good work goes on at Dundalk. The weekly meeting there last Tuesday was crowded out.

A local paper says:—"There can be no doubt that Mr. Smith's ministrations have proved particularly acceptable to large numbers of the community, and that much good has been done, especially amongst the masses. Last night there was a very large number of people present, all of whom seemed deeply impressed." Four great meetings were held on Sabbath. Mr. Smith continued the work in Newry till yesterday (Wednesday).

Possibly never before were evangelistic services being held over a wider area of Ireland than at present. Last week most encouraging Gospel missions were held in Lisburn by Rev. W. E. Burroughs, of Kingstown; in Carlisle Memorial Church, Belfast, by Rev. Jas. Robertson and others; in Percy-street Hall, Belfast, by Rev. Henry Montgomery and others; and in Armagh, by Mr. John Brandon, of Canada. In each instance several decided for Christ.

OPEN DOORS IN FRANCE.—The Mission Intérieure urges seizing the opportunity of all open doors, and gives the interesting fact of a place, Crausac, completely stirred up to attention by a Protestant burial; Testaments have been eagerly bought and read; meetings regularly overflowing the small room in the hotel where they are held, and encouraging house-to-house visitation goes on.

Mr. Moody in London.

Mission at the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

When it was understood that the American evangelists were not likely to have any extended work in London during this third visit to our country, there was grievous and general disappointment. All who remembered the blessed and happy gatherings of bygone years, and who realised the overwhelming spiritual needs of our vast population, could not but wish that London should have a share in the labours of those whom God has so greatly honoured in the past, both in uniting the Christians and leading the careless to a better life. There was therefore corresponding joy when it was publicly announced a short while ago that the way had been opened for the holding of a week's mission at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. Mr. Sankey's absence is a decided diminution of the evangelistic force in the ministry of song, but many rejoiced to learn that a gifted substitute was to be found in the person of Mr. G. C. Stebbins.

The mission began on Sabbath afternoon, Messrs. Moody and Stebbins having arrived from Bradford the preceding day. The crowd began to gather at an early hour, and though there was no great rush of people—owing partly, no doubt, to the wet morning—there were few vacant seats in the auditorium of the Tabernacle when Mr. Moody rose to address the congregation. For half-an-hour a strong and well-trained choir, under the sway of Mr. J. W. Godfrey's leading, had sung a selection of the Gospel hymns. As the throng gathered it was very interesting to note the presence of not a few of those who had taken a leading part in Mr. Moody's former missions. Among others may be mentioned Lord and Lady Kinnaird, Mr. T. A. Denny, Mr. J. E. Mathieson, Mr. George Williams, Mr. Jas. Balfour, of Edinburgh, Mr. Edward Trotter, Mr. J. F. Deacon, Mr. John McCall, besides many of the prominent officials at the Tabernacle. Among those to be seen on or near the platform were also Lady Edward Cavendish, and Lord Bennet.

The Hundredth Psalm was grandly rolled out in a great volume of song, and prayer was offered by Rev. V. J. Charlesworth. Mr. Moody then stepped to the front, and stated with regret that Mr. Stebbins was suffering from severe cold and could not be present that day. He had also to crave the patience of his hearers on his own behalf; he had contracted a cold through open-air work in Ireland, and was suffering from hoarseness, but he would do the best he could to make himself heard. Mr. Mayers was fortunately present, and Mr. Moody asked him to give as a solo his favourite tune, "Then shall my heart keep singing." The song was skilfully rendered, amid the hushed attention of he vast and reverent throng. Earnest petition again followed by Rev. W. W. Clark, of New Jersey, whose Bible readings were a notable feature in Mr. Moody's Northfield Conferences a few years ago.

The unexpected often happens in Mr. Moody's meetings, and probably few anticipated that the evangelist's first message to London at this time would not be evangelistic, but one based on the importance of prayer as an agent in bringing down the blessing of heaven on this special week of effort. In commencing his address Mr. Moody pathetically recalled the time whan he first entered the Tabernacle, twenty-five years ago. He had come four thousand miles to hear Mr. Spurgeon. What impressed him most was not the praise, though he thought he had never heard such grand congregational singing; it was not Mr. Spurgeon's exposition, fine though it was, nor even his sermon; it was his prayer. He seemed to have such access to God that he could bring down the power from heaven; that was the great secret of his influence and his success. This power in prayer is what England and America sorely need at the present time. There are, perhaps, more preachers to-day who are intellectually great than ever before, but what we want is more of the power of the Holy Ghost to carry conviction to human hearts; and that will come in answer to believing, prevailing prayer. All the great worthies of Scripture history were men of faith and prayer, and such men are the need of the Church to-day.

With this preamble Mr. Moody went on to say that he thought he could not better begin his testimony in this mission than by setting forth some of the ELEMENTS OF TRUE PRAYER.

His address was intensely pointed and practical, as all his utterances are, and the huskiness of voice, by which he was evidently being incommoded in delivery, did not seem to lessen the attentive stillness of the audience, that was only broken now and then by a ripple of pleasurable assent as he related some striking illustrative incident or gave utterance to some more than usually telling phrase.

The first element of true prayer given by the speaker was Adoration; with that in its due proportion there would be no flippant and familiar speech tripping glibly off the tongue. Another element is Confession; and on this head there was a scathing exposure of the formal, lifeless, prayerless prayers that kill so many of our church prayer meetings. We need to search our hearts to see why it is that God does not answer us—why it is that so many of the sons and daughters of professed Christians go off into the world or come under the influence of the drink devil, or some other devil that we are powerless to cast out.

Then comes the important element of Forgiveness, which Mr. Moody desired all note-takers to write down in large letters. The unforgiving spirit shown towards fellow Christians is a cause of much spiritual leanness and withholding of God's blessing. Mr. Moody told of two men, fellow officers in the same church, who had quarrelled, and were not on speaking terms. One of them met the other and confessed his wrong; and they had a good time in mutually extending forgiveness for the past, and getting a present blessing to their souls. A good deal of this sort of thing will have to take place in many a church before there is much blessing in the Lord's work. A kindred point, mentioned as another element in prevailing prayer, was willingness to make Restitution. Here came in the telling illustration of a woman before whom five bottles of stolen wine always rose up when she essayed to kneel in prayer. It was not till she had made the matter good, so far as it was in her power, that the burden rolled away, and she came back so light-hearted that she felt as if she were "kind of floating through the air."

The cultivation of the spirit of Unity among Christians was next insisted on as an essential to answered prayer. Mr. Moody said he thought we were making real advances in this direction within recent years, compared with the state of things a quarter of a century ago. There must be the spirit of Thankfulness, and that cheerfulnes of spirit that comes from the assured conviction that we are on the winning side, and that Christ is to come off victorious in the great fight with Sin and the devil. Other elements of prayer touched on were perseverance, faith, submission and petition. Let us not go all round the world in our prayers without asking God for anything definite. The final thought urged was that there should be a concentration of prayer at this juncture for a great blessing on the great effort put forth the present week at the Tabernacle. The address, though delivered under some disadvantage, so far as physical comfort was concerned, proved highly stimulating, and doubtless the preacher was well and wisely guided in his choice of a theme.

A large prayer-meeting followed the address, when earnest outpourings of confession and petition were made by Mr. Balfour, Mr. W. Olney, and Mr. George Williams. The last-named made special entreaty on behalf of all the members of the reigning house; and also prayed that some of London's noblemen and members of Parliament might be drawn to the meetings and get a blessing to their souls.

SUNDAY EVENING MEETING.

Needless to say the crowd in the evening was immense. The great building, when crammed in every nook, could not hold all, and an overflow meeting was held in the Pastor's College building. This was addressed by Dr. Barnardo and Lord Bennet. In the Tabernacle Mr. Moody was again surrounded by many old friends as well as new ones. Near by sat Mr. Thomas Spurgeon, who offered the opening prayer, his rich clear voice sounding through the building as he besought a great blessing on the meetings of the week. Prayer was also made by Dr. Barnardo, whose fervid soulful utterances moved the assembly greatly. Mr. Stebbins was still absent, and Mr. Moody's voice had not recovered its tone, but he bravely went through the address, which was upon calling on God for salvation. He rung out the changes on some of the brief scriptural prayers for mercy. The touching incidents interspersed with the Gospel appeals softened the hearts of the hearers, and the preacher's weakness of voice seemed no obstacle to the impressiveness of the occasion.

In a closing prayer Mr. Moody made heartfelt reference to the departure of Mr. Thomas Spurgeon. He entreated that the abundant blessing of the Lord might rest on him as he went back to a distant land to tell out the Gospel message. Prayer was also made for the late Mr. Spurgeon's widow, and for her interesting work for God.

The regular service concluded early, and an after-meeting was held in the lecture-room below, while many remained in the main building to pray for blessing. The lecture hall was well-filled up with seeking souls, and to these in the mass Mr. Moody spoke some very tender words by way of encouragement to call on the Lord for salvation. When he came to ask for audible responses to his question, "Who has the courage to say, 'I will trust and not be afraid?'" these came thick and fast from all corners of the room. A season of personal dealing followed, and it really seemed as if many golden sheaves had been gathered as the first fruits of the week's work.

MONDAY'S MEETINGS.

The attendance at the 11 o'clock meeting for ministers and workers was quite encouraging. Area and first gallery were both well filled up. Praise and prayer occupied the first half hour. Mr. Stebbins was able to be at his post and delighted all with his singing. Mr. Moody's voice was clearer, and he spoke with less effort than on the previous day. In his opening remarks he said he had not seen so much religious interest in this country since 1875 as there is now. All through the length and breadth of Ireland there appears to be a great desire to hear the Gospel, and the same is true of the provincial towns of England. If the Church of Christ will only rise to the occasion we shall see signs and wonders wrought by God among the people. But in order to this we shall have to lay aside our differences, to draw closer to each other, and to have done with criticising one another. Mr. Moody then said he would take up at a few of these morning meetings some of the emblems of the Holy Spirit given in Scripture—e.g., water, fire, the dove, etc. On this first occasion he dealt with the truths shadowed forth under the figure of water—cleansing, refreshing, and fertilising. What the Church of to-day needs is more of the Spirit of God in all its members. Various degrees of spirit possession were referred to, and all were counselled to covet the highest of all—rivers of living water flowing out for the blessing of the world around. As striking examples of this degree of endowment, Mr. Moody referred to the widespread and blessed influence exercised by such men as the late Mr. Spurgeon and Dr. Barnardo. If all Christians were full to overflowing of the Spirit of God there would be no room for jealousies and backbitings in the Church. In closing, Mr. Moody invited all who desired a personal lift in the Christian life to rally round these morning gatherings, and bring as many as possible of their fellow-Christians—dead or alive.

MR. MOODY ON THE ATONEMENT.

A splendid congregation assembled on Monday afternoon; only a few seats in the upper gallery were without occupants. Mr. Moody spoke to an audience that was all attention, on the vital subject of Atonement. He premised that if Christians were to select some dozen of the leading Bible doctrines, and spend a month in getting well grounded on each, there would not be so many going astray and being driven about by every wind of false teaching. Mr. Moody traced through the old dispensation the golden thread of blood-shedding for the remission of sins. Mount Moriah, on which Abraham was ready to offer up his son Isaac, was a background for Calvary. The blood sprinkled on the lintels and doorposts in Egypt as a sign of the safety of the Israelites in the hour of judgment, was a picture of the deliverance of man from God's judgment of sin through the sprinkling of the blood of Christ, by faith, on the guilty conscience. Isaiah sang of redemption through the shed blood of the Saviour. Men cavil at God's demand that there should be atonement for sin, but the lawgiver has a perfect right to say what shall be the penalty for a broken law, and how that penalty may be escaped. Away with the pernicious doctrine that Christ died simply as a martyr to his principles. He laid down his life as a ransom for many. Christ's own teaching was plain and unmistakable on this point. The Gospels are full of references to atonement. So are the Epistles. Peter speaks of Christ's blood as "precious." It represents the life of the Son of God—nothing so precious in the sight of the Father. We do not know that it was shed for the dwellers in any other world, and, therefore, it ought to be precious to us. The blood redeems us and brings us nigh to God and to one another. It brings peace to the troubled guilty soul, and no true peace can be had apart from it. No need to try and make peace with God; it has been made for us. The war is over; peace is declared by the blood of the Cross. We are justified by the blood. One cannot fathom the deep meaning of that word justification—it seems almost too good to be true. But let us accept of the glorious fact that in the sight of God we who believe are made even as Jesus Christ Himself. We shall have boldness in the day of judgment, through the blood of God's dear Son. People say this old doctrine is out of date; thank God it is as full of power as ever it was. Let us go out in the power of it, and conquer sin and Satan through the blood of the slain Lamb.

Such is a mere outline of an address that seemed to put new fire into the very bones of the speaker, and enthused the eager and sympathetic audience.

In the course of the service prayer was offered by Rev. Marcus Rainsford, Pastor D. M. Cameron, Rev. E. H. Hopkins, and Mr. Robert Paton. Mr. Stebbins sang "Hallelujah, what a Saviour!" and that exquisite song of his own composition, "When I shall wake in that fair morn of morns."

More than two-thirds of the audience remained for a prayer meeting. The earnest breathings of the bowed company were voiced by Mr. W. R. Lane, Mr. M. H. Hodder, and Mr. Robert Burn, in thanksgiving and longing desire that many young men might be brought to the evening meeting and saved through the atoning sacrifice of Christ. Mr. Moody told of the conversion of a Southerner in St. Louis through the apprehension of his truth.

The Tabernacle at night presented at once an inspiring and solemnizing spectacle. Area and galleries were almost a solid mass of men; a few female figures here and there relieving somewhat the sombre aspect of the striking scene. Mr. Stebbins sang the now well-worn, "Throw out the Lifeline," and with the aid of a lady's voice gave later, "Though your sins be as scarlet." Prayer was offered by Lord Kinnaird, and a young clergyman. Mr. Moody's sermon was on another fundamental doctrine—Regeneration. On this topic he had plenty of room to move to and fro, descanting first on what the new birth is not and then on what it is, and how it may be expected to prove itself. The sermon was full of illustrative incidents from the preacher's unique experience in dealing with different sorts of sinners—all of them needing the new heart that will produce the new life.

Again there was a very gratifying readiness to enter the inquiry room, where much business was done for eternity, and many, it is believed, made the great decision. Monday is a testing time as to attendance at such services. The experience of this first week day of the mission, both as to attendance and interest, was such as to encourage the belief that this season of Gospel effort will be a memorable one in the history of London missions.

To a large concourse on Tuesday morning Mr. Moody spoke on the searching, refining attributes of the Holy Spirit. A great proportion of the audience adjourned to the lecture hall for a season of prayer and consecration, this part of the meeting being led by Rev. F. B. Meyer.

Mrs. Baeyertz in Dundee.

A very successful evangelistic mission is being held at present in Dundee by Mrs. Baeyertz. The objects chosen by her are ever of a practical character, and in treating them she speaks most fluently and with an eloquence born of an earnest and undivided heart. She seeks to woo and win her hearers to the side of Christ and his Gospel; at times gentle and persuasive as is her tongue, at times she can utter words of dread import calculated to awaken dormant spiritual powers and stir sleeping energies. With many a quaint and quiet touch she brings home the truth she wishes to enforce to the hearts of her hearers, and uses, too, experiences in her own life to point a remark or illustrate an allusion.

The mission, which was to be for a fortnight, is still being conducted, and it is hoped that many of those who have listened to Mrs. Baeyertz and heard her earnest appeals will be won, ere its close, to join the ranks of the great Captain of Salvation, and to march henceforward under his banner.

CAPTAIN LUGARD ON UGANDA.

In a letter to The Times of Saturday, Captain Lugard deals with the Uganda problem, taking up three aspects of it — commercial, political, and philanthropic. On the last point he says;—

The third section of interests I have called the philanthropic. They are represented by the missions, the anti-slavery societies, and the largest section of the public who would deplore any action which would directly entail anarchy, massacre, and bloodshed. The missions state that they will remain in the country whatever eventuates, and therefore the question of their lives is one which must be considered. Supposing evacuation were carried out, the Protestant political faction would either leave the country, in which case they must fight and kill the natives of the country in which they propose to settle (the missionaries thereby being in a very anomalous position) or they would remain behind. In the latter case they would be compelled to unite with the Mohammedans (coalition with the Catholics being now out of the question), and these two factions, being both bitterly hostile to the Catholics, would immediately prepare to exterminate them. Finally, it is absolutely certain they would quarrel between themselves, and what the ultimate result of the ensuing anarchy and chaos would be it is hard to determine.

Meanwhile the position of the French Fathers would be more than precarious; and surely, since we declared before Europe our intention of including Uganda within our effective occupation, we cannot shelve the responsibility we have incurred for them as well as for our own missionaries. Whichever of the factions were defeated, they would fly from the country, carrying war and destruction whither they went. The mass of Soudanese refugees "rescued" by me (some 8,200 souls) must similarly be abandoned in spite of their loyalty, or provided with a new country at the expense of the aborigines. It is unnecessary to enlarge on a picture so disastrous, and so fraught with misery and disgrace. In such a case the Soudanese would probably throw in their lot with their co-religionists. What would become of both Christian missions it is impossible to say; not improbably the Mohammedans would finally remain in the ascendant.

As regards the slave trade, captives in war in Africa are sold as slaves. Such a state of war and anarchy as I have indicated would undoubtedly furnish large numbers for the slave markets, more especially if the Mohammedans finally remained in the ascendant. Meanwhile Kabarega of Unyoro would resume possession of the Toru and Ruwenzori districts, and the wretched natives of those countries, who have no guns to oppose to his armies, and who, relying on the company's pledges of protection, have come from the countries of their exile (to which return is not now open to them), would be massacred, I think, without doubt; since Kabarega, who pours out human blood like water, is bitterly incensed against them for accepting the company's rule. Lastly, the hordes of Manyema from the Congo State frontier, who have already raided across the Semliki, and whose profession is slave-raiding, would have no longer any boundary placed to their incursions, and would be able to gain a footing in Usongola, from which it would be hard to dislodge them.

The further question of the recrudescence of the slave trade in the intermediate country between Uganda and the coast is one on which the Anti-Slavery Society are more competent than myself to speak, as their information is presumably fuller and more complete than my own, since I have been residing in Uganda beyond the countries in question. Convinced as I am of the literal truth of the picture of anarchy and misery I have painted, I appeal to your powerful influence to give publicity to these facts, supported as they are by such weight as my experience on the spot and my knowledge of the situation in Uganda may give them.

CHRISTIAN LIFEBOAT CREW.—Two new branches were opened on Tuesday last at Cardiff and New Brighton. Much interest was evinced, and prayer asked for them at the muster held at the Welcome Home, Ratcliff Highway. Miss Child gave the text for the month, "It is I, be not afraid." The Allan Gardiner, her captain and crew, about shortly to cruise along the coast of South America, were specially remembered in prayer, as well as the needs for the coming winter.

A NEW CHILDREN'S HALL.

The successful work carried on at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, is well known to all friends of East End Mission service. For many years the Hall has been open every night of the week for the preaching of the Gospel, temperance, and similar efforts, to reach the masses. While, however, this fine hall affords ample accommodation for all kinds of meetings for adults, the workers among the children have been seriously hampered for lack of suitable accommodation and class rooms.

Hence, all who know anything of the vantage post occupied by the Tower Hamlets Mission will rejoice to learn that a large chapel standing but a few yards from the hall has been secured—the freehold having been arranged for at a comparatively small cost. This hall, when adapted for its new purpose, will hold some 1500 children, while there will be at least six serviceable class-rooms. There is already in connection with the mission a Sunday-school with some 1200 children in attendance, but the new Young People's Hall is intended to become the centre of a fresh and bold effort on behalf of the poor little waifs and strays of the East-end.

There is ample scope for such service, as notwithstanding all that has been done by this and other good missions there are yet many little ones who are cared for by none. We trust the plea on this page will awaken sympathy and call forth aid. The address of Mr. F. N. Charrington is Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, London, E.

A Children's Guild.

The desire to be helpful to children in these days seems to be abundant, but the work is very far yet from being overdone. A welcome auxiliary to this end has just been instituted at Liverpool, which gives promise of wide usefulness and most effective and well-directed help. It is entitled The Children's National Guild of Courtesy. It aim is to encourage a spirit of chivalry amongst children; to stimulate them to be courteous; and to promote habits of neatness and cleanliness, and purity of action and speech.

Mr. Norton, New Ferry, Birkenhead, will be glad to give particulars about the new organisation to any who send him a stamped postal wrapper.

Bringing in the Sheaves.

Harvest Festivals were held by Miss Weston on Sunday, September 25, at Portsmouth, and October 2 at Devonport. Many bright testimonies were given by stalwart blue jackets of the blessing that they had gained at the Sailors' Rest, it seemed verily like a bringing in the sheaves. Mr. Galbraith, late of H.M.S. Cambridge, at Devonport, now in command of a battery at Falmouth, broke down as he spoke of the old days, when the Sailors' Rest was first built, and he had found Christ, and what a Saviour he had been to him ever since.

The work for the winter promises well. Ten mission bands of blue jackets go out, taking services, speaking in the open air, etc., and on board their ships they are bright shining lights. Scarcely a ship commissions without taking numbers of the R.N. Christian Union on board. One of H.M. ships, just commissioned, carries as members of this union her captain, gunnery lieutenant, and several men. To God be all the glory!

Miss Weston herself brought in a sheaf by telling of a young seaman lost in an African jungle; how as he lay on the ground in the darkness, the wild beasts prowled and snuffed around him, and in the midst of that dark night some words that he had heard years before in the Sailors' Rest came to his remembrance: "Jesus is a Saviour to all that trust in Him." The young fellow kneeled on the sand, and asked deliverance from the lions and salvation from sin, and both were granted him. He died afterwards from malarial fever, and his last words were: "I'm going aloft, and I shall be looking out for all the ship's company as they sail into port."

A NEW AFRICAN RAILWAY is in contemplation to run from the most northern mouth of the Zambesi river to Lake Nyassa. The difficulties will be stupendous, not only in view of the distance to be traversed (nearly 400 miles), but also on account of the malarious districts through which it would pass. If carried out, the scheme would not only be of great commercial advantage, but would, it may be hoped, prove a valuable aid to missionary enterprise.

The Evangelical Alliance.

CONFERENCE AT DUNDEE.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

THURSDAY'S MEETINGS.

By a happy arrangement the closing day was almost wholly missionary, preluded, however, in the morning by a very useful address on commercial matters as ruled by Christian principles. Mr. A. H. Moncur, who presided, pointed out that man regarded Christianity as good enough for Sunday, but out of place in everyday life. Business, politics, and amusements were presumed to be regulated by a different code. Such Christianity we must characterise plainly as a counterfeit and fraud. A true Christian must see to it that his business conduct is such as can stand the test of Christian principles.

Pastor F. E. Marsh gave an address on "Christianity and Commerce." (1) Christ should influence commercial relations in such a way that no complaint can come from those with whom the Christian commercial man has dealings. The name of Alexander Balfour, of Liverpool, is of sweet savour, and all who knew him in the commercial world speak of him in the highest terms. This may be gathered from what a merchant who had dealt with him for many years stated:—"When an order was given it was carried out exactly as if he were acting for himself. Of course, I could but stick to him." A well-known writer, in referring to the above quotation, says:—"The difficulty seemed to be not to get him to treat others as he treated himself, but to get him to treat himself as he treated others." There was nothing on which he looked with greater scorn than the principle that there is one code of conduct in business, and another code of conduct for ordinary Christian life. He believed it to be imperative on the man of business to be upright and fair under all competition and in all circumstances. Every business man who is consecrated to God will seek to do as Alexander Balfour did, not because he did it, but because it is the common mark of a follower of Christ to act as his Lord did in all things. As the Apostle John says:—"He that saith, he abideth in Him, ought himself also so to walk, even as He walked" (1 John ii. 6).

(2) Christ should influence commercial relations in such a way that the Christian should have a good conscience in all his transactions. We may lose from a worldly standpoint, but better the loss than the want of a good conscience. Is there any business man here to whom the Lord is speaking of some past unrighteous action? For the Lord's sake, as well as your own, put the matter right at once. Is there a commercial man who is causing his employés to do things that are not right? Are you making your servants tell lies by selling an article for what it is not? Have done with the practices as you value your eternal interests. Is there a tradesman here who has two prices to one article? Be done with the dishonest action.

(3) Christ should influence commercial relations to such a degree that the Christian commercial man shall act as in the presence of God, according to his Word, and for his glory. Christian men of business, let your honest action, your true-hearted behaviour, your resolute determination to be true to Christ, be the fixed principle of your life, so that all that is mean, selfish, and dishonourable shall flee from your presence. More than that, as Christ is in all your business intercourse, your influence shall be the magic wand to transform others, and the electric wire to transmit the power to make others follow your example.

THE MISSIONARY GATHERINGS.

Rev. James Johnston, at the morning meeting, gave a statistical and comprehensive address in the form of a survey of the field in foreign missions. He said that having in his pamphlet, "A Century of Christian Missions," given the darker side of the question, he wished now to turn and show the great and encouraging progress made in Protestant missions.

THE OBVERSE SIDE OF THE SHIELD

As to the agents now in the field, there are all over the world about 3,500 ordained missionaries, with 900 other workers, including medical missionaries. Then there are about 4,000 women—the statistics being here incomplete. Turning to native agency, there are about 4,700 native pastors of all nationalities, with 45,000 men employed as evangelists, colporteurs, etc. Thus there were about 58,000 labourers preaching the Gospel in the foreign field. The communicants returned by various missions and societies number 885,000, but some forty societies make no return of these, so that it may be safely taken that there are at present in heathen lands about 1,000,000 converts in communion with the Church of God, and each one of these is taught to be a means of spreading the Gospel among his or her countrymen. We thank God for these—yet are they but drops in the ocean of heathenism. Drops! no! Seeds rather, for they have the power of life and reproduction. Moreover, these converts can not only preach like our own ancestors who laid down their lives for the faith—and in heathen lands as at home this has proved the most potent means of spreading the Gospel.

A great deal is said about apostolic success, but this was achieved in the power of the Holy Spirit, who is willing to work through consecrated men and women now even as then. But it must be remembered that during the first century of the Christian era the converts did not number more than half a million, whereas during the past century missionaries have been the means of converting three to four million souls. The Protestant Church has increased in one way and another during the century by a hundred million, and, roughly speaking, Protestants are now in the proportion of one in ten in the world's population.

Now, while all this is encouraging, there are at least a thousand million human beings outside of Christianity in any form. If these are to be helped we need a baptism of power. The danger of the day is in the apostasy of the Christian Church. The devil knows our power, and does his best to divert it. There are two popes in the world—the Pope of Rome and the pope of science—and men are running after these. Yet see our resources in the numbers who might become messengers of the Gospel—in the Word of God translated into 340 tongues, and in the vast wealth in the hands of Christians. There are no less than £650,000,000 lying idle in our banks, much of which must be devoted to the cause of Christ among the heathen.

THE WORLD'S DARKNESS.

Dr. Baedeker followed with weighty statistics from another point of view. We have heard, he said, of the success God has granted; but I wonder how many do fully realise their responsibility before God in the matter of the evangelisation of the world? Have we only the right to the Gospel? Have the heathen, have the Mohammedans no right to it? Consider the state of the case. There are about 135 million professed Protestants in the world; these have at least heard the Gospel. But there are eighty-five million Greek Catholics—plenty of religion, but no power to save; there are 195 million Roman Catholics—again plenty of religion, but no Christ and no power of life; and there are about eight million Jews needing to know of the Messiah. Then there are 173 million Mohammedans—a fine sober people, but no Gospel; while there are 874 million heathen, hopelessly sunk unless we go to bring them light, perishing for lack of the Bread of Life, while our Lord has said, "Give ye them to eat."

The speaker concluded with a brief reference to his work and observations in Holland, Germany, Bohemia, Austria, Hungary, Russia, and the Siberian prisons, closing in these touching words:—I have but one little candle of life to burn, and it may soon flicker out; but I would rather burn it out where men die in darkness than burn it in a land flooded with light.

Mr. W. Henderson, of Devanha, presided in the afternoon, and opened the proceedings with a review of the way in which obstacles to the Gospel had been removed and doors opened to the Gospel since the formation of the first missionary society. He believed that the fields are ripe unto harvest and waiting for the reapers; yet no one should enter the mission field without the assurance that he had received a call from God.

MISSIONS IN INDIA.

Rev. John Fordyce said: I intend giving my own experiences and observations in India; first as a missionary and subsequently as an evangelist to our own countrymen. I have visited missions carried on by more than twenty different societies; and I know that besides the professed converts there are many who believe in Christ, but hold back from open profession at a cost needing more grace than our own martyrs of the Grassmarket or of Smithfield. Thus I maintain that the success of missions has been greater than anyone imagines. As to methods, the greatest and most blessed is the preaching of the simple Gospel in bazaars and in the villages, the preaching of the Gospel to educated natives by gifted and honoured evangelists, the Christian colleges and schools which have borne good fruit, the Zenana Missions, and the Medical Missions. Another department I regard as most important, and that is the work of the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society among our own scattered countrymen all over India. As Sir William Muir said, "Every European is either a missionary of Christ or a missionary of the devil." Hence the importance of winning our fellow-countrymen and turning them into lights among the natives.

THE JEWS AND THE CONGO.

Mr. Hermann Warszawiak advanced many reasons why we should evangelise the Jews, and gave some particulars of his work in New York, where a great awakening has taken place and 4,000 Israelites have accepted Christ, and where he is now anxious to build a Christian synagogue.

Mr. P. Whytock, who, as a Dundonian, received a warm welcome, described the work of the Congo-Balolo Mission amongst the teeming Balolo tribes of the Upper Congo, for whose sake Mr. M'Kittrick laid down his life. Soon he (the speaker) hoped to return with, he trusted, some additional workers.

A MISSIONARY TEA MEETING.

As has been customary at the Dundee Christian Convention, a missionary tea meeting was held in the afternoon in the fine hall of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. A. J. Arnold, who presided, spoke earnest words on prayer and personal service in connection with missions. Rev. D. B. Spence followed with encouraging details of work in Constantinople. Mrs. McVickar told of evangelical work at Bari in Italy: while Mrs. Lethaby described her work among the Mohammedan children at Kerak, Moab. Mr. Keay spoke on behalf of the China Inland Mission, and Messrs. Warszawiak and Whytock added a few details to their afternoon address.

MOAB AND DAMASCUS.

In the evening, after a few words of courtesy and thanks between visitors and the local committee, Rev. W. M. Shepherd gave an earnest address, aiming at bringing to decision any who might be halting between two opinions, and at leading into fuller and deeper life those who, while believers, knew not the highest privileges of spiritual power.

Lord Kinnaird, who presided in the continued and regretted absence through illness of the beloved president, Lord Polwarth, spoke a few fitting words on the high tone and practical aims of this successful Conference. He trusted its influence and outcome would be felt by many missionaries working afar to spread the knowledge of salvation.

Mr. W. Lethaby told how the Lord had led him to Moab, where the door was open as it is nowhere else among Mohammedans, how he and his wife had settled, with many difficulties and drawbacks, at Kerak, the ancient Kir of Moab; how God had been with them, and very specially in teaching the children and treating in a simple way the sicknesses and wounds of the people. He held that yet Moab would prove the back door into Arabia.

Dr. M'Kinnon gave an animated account of the oldest city in the world and the fairest; a city which the Arabs call "a pearl set among emeralds." The Medical Mission is proving the most effective means of gaining a hearing amongst the prejudiced Mohammedans; and day after day a motley crowd of Mohammedans, Jews, and Eastern Christians may be seen at the dispensary listening to the Word of God. He (the speaker) had come to this land to plead for £5,000 for an hospital, and already £2,000 had been promised. He is seeking also another medical missionary and a devoted nurse.

THE EVENING GATHERINGS.

These have been of remarkable interest in many ways. Working Dundee has turned out well, crowding the great hall in every part. Evangelistic addresses of great fervour and plainness have been delivered by Revs. G. Wilson, John Urquhart, John Smith, and H. E. Fox. These, however, need not be reported; while the address by Dr. Clement Clemance on Rest appeared in a recent number, and that by Rev. Isaiah Parker on "The Constant Use of the Bible" we reserve for a future issue.

It should be noted that a fine choir, led by Mr Meek, added brightness to the service of song. Indeed, Christian Dundee appears to have thrown itself into the Conference, consequently it has been, as one of the leaders of it remarked in parting, "a capital and successful Conference."

For the Young.

THE REFUGE.

By the Rev. J. Reid Howatt.

"In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and his children shall have a place of refuge."—Prov. xiv. 26.

Away on the coast of Northumberland there is a piece of land which twice in a day is an island, and twice in the day is a continent. That sounds odd, does it not? Not like the definition you find in your geography books? No, but it is quite a right description all the same, for this land I am speaking of—it is called Holy Island—is twice a day completely surrounded by the sea, and then of course it is an island; and twice a day the sea goes back and leaves three miles of good, firm, dry sand joining the island to what is the shore when the sea is up. You can then walk to the island on dry ground.

When I was there, as we drove across the flat sand it was like driving over a desert. Here and there we passed strange-looking structures, something like sentry-boxes perched upon poles, and with steps leading up to them. These were placed all the way between the island and the shore, about two hundred yards apart, and the driver always kept near to them.

"What are these for?" I asked him.

"These, sir," he said, "are refuges."

"What do you want refuges for?" I asked again. "Is there any danger?"

"No, sir," he replied, "none just now, but there might be soon. When the tide comes in it comes very rapidly, and if anybody is caught by it he is likely to be drowned unless he can make for one of these refuges."

Then he told me a sad story of some who had been drowned not long ago because they had taken a road all their own from the island, rather than keep to the track where the refuges were; and the sea came rushing up, and they were lost because they could not reach a refuge in time.

When I heard this I thought about Jesus Christ, and this thought came into my mind, "In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence." So long as we kept near to a refuge we had nothing to fear—we had strong confidence—but if we wandered away, at the very time we thought we were safest the danger might be nearest. Yes, children, there are times when we think we don't need Jesus—we can be safe enough without Him. That is a great, great mistake; there is never a time when we can afford to forget Him or wander away from his side. It is only when we are keeping near Him, when we are remembering Him and loving Him, that we can have a strong confidence, for it is only when we are near to Him that we are really safe.

It isn't enough to know where the refuge is—everything depends on whether we are keeping near or not. Those poor people who perished knew where they might have been safe, but yet they were lost because they had gone so far away. And there are people who know a great deal about Jesus Christ, the only refuge our souls can have, but they don't keep near to Jesus; they wander away—away into sin, away into forgetfulness of the Lord; but then and often when most they think they are safe, the danger is upon them and they are lost. Be you wiser, children dear, keep near, near to Jesus. Keep near to Him when everything seems safe, and then you will never have to fear when the floods of temptation come rushing in or when the dark waters of death come stealing around.—Children's Messenger.

HOEING AND PRAYING.

"Faith without works is dead."

Said Farmer Jones, in a whining tone,
To his good old neighbour Gray:—
"I've worn my knees thro' to the bone.
But it ain't no use to pray.

Your corn looks twice as good as mine,
Though you don't pretend to be
A shinin' light in the church to shine
An' tell salvation's free.

I've prayed the Lord a thousand times
For to make that 'ere corn grow,
And why yourn beats it so and climbs
I'd gin a deal to know."

Said Farmer Gray to his neighbour Jones,
In his easy, quiet way:
"When prayers get mixed with lazy bones
They don't make farmin' pay.

Your weeds, I notice, are good and tall,
In spite of all your prayers;
You may pray for corn till the heavens fall
If you don't dig up the tares.

I mix my prayers with a little toil
Along in every row,
An' I work this mixture into the soil
Quite vig'rous with a hoe.

An' I've discovered, though still in my
As sure as you are born,
This kind of compost, well worked in,
Makes pretty decent corn.

So while I'm praying I use my hoe,
An' do my level best
To keep down the weeds along each row,
An' the Lord He does the rest.

It's well for to pray both night and morn,
As every farmer knows;
But the place to pray for thrifty corn
Is right between the rows.

You must use your hands while praying, though,
If an answer you would get;
For prayer-worn knees and a rusty hoe
Never raised a big crop yet.

An' so, I believe, my good old friend,
If you mean to win the day,
From ploughing clean to the harvest's end
You must hoe as well as pray."

WEST NORWOOD.

We have been favoured during the past week with a visit from Mr. Geo. Goodman, of the C.S.S.M. Notwithstanding the unfavourable weather the results have been most cheering. The interest deepened as the week advanced. The "object lesson service" on Friday was most instructive, profitable, and enjoyable. A very marked feature was the eager interest manifested in the half-hour services for young Christians which preceded the public meeting. The room was crowded each evening. Several Sunday scholars and others give evidence of real change. Mr. Goodman, by his earnestness, skill, and spiritual tact, has won the esteem and affection of all, James L. Stanley, Pastor.

GLEANINGS.

Young people may make mistakes in working for Christ; they make greater mistakes in not working for Him. No failure in making the attempt is so bad as to fail to make it.

"How soon," asked a teacher, "should a child give its heart to God?" One girl said thirteen years, another six. At last a little girl rose and said, "Just as soon as we know who God is."

In the British Empire Division of the Universal Band of Mercy, there are 118,000 life members. The pledge is to try hourly and daily to be kind, just, and merciful to all human and dumb creatures.

"Please do take little baby," said a Japanese woman who had found a little living girl-baby in a ditch, to Miss Carter, of Japan. "Your God is the only God that teaches to be good to little children."

The Morning Star, the fourth ship of that name built by the Sunday-school children of America, has just been built and equipped for missionary work in the South Seas. The subscription was limited to ten cents apiece.

For twenty-five years Miss Rye, Peckham, has been engaged in rescue work for gutter children, and during that time she has placed out 4,000 boys and girls in comfortable healthy homes in "Britain Beyond the Seas."

WALTON-ON-THE-NAZE.—Services on the sands here were well attended by adults as well as children. Many children decided for Christ, and a great impetus was given to Bible study. We had morning and evening meetings in our Home of Rest. On wet days the Methodist Chapel was kindly thrown open to us.—C. M.

WESLEYAN EAST END MISSION.

Some hearty gatherings were held on Wednesday last week, in celebration of the anniversary of the Mission in East London superintended by Rev. Peter Thompson. After a devotional meeting in Stepney Temple, there was a luncheon in the new room in the same block of buildings. Rev. Walford Green presided, and an interesting statement was made by Mr. Thompson. The Mission has secured the leases of all the houses composing the block in which the Temple stands. He hoped that they would ultimately become a centre of Christian work second to none in the world. He believed it was the best site for such a centre in the East of London. The work at the Old Mahogany Bar had been very successful. Four years ago they had not a member; now there are over 200 meeting in class, and a Sunday-school with an average attendance of 200. Conversions take place almost daily. The work at St. George's is increasing; several new branches have been begun, and the people are full of enthusiasm. At the Stepney Temple the work has been a signal success. It has a large congregation, though it is not full. In a year or two, he ventured to say, the place will become self-supporting.

Mr. Henry Heap, who resides at the Mahogany Bar, gave an account of part of his work. The Men's Class has done a noble work for some time past. One Sunday afternoon a strange-looking man followed them about. He was an Armenian, without a single friend in London, and he was brought to Christ through the Men's Class. Now he had emigrated to America. Mr. Heap told several similar cases, and asked for the earnest help of all who were able. Among the other speakers was Mr. J. Williams Benn, who said that he had been familiar with the neighbourhood ever since he could walk. He could bear witness to the influence of the mission in improving the condition of the neighbourhood.

Two public meetings followed, with a tea-party intervening. At the first of these, presided over by Mr. W. Pearce, M.P., several workers bore testimony to the working of Divine grace among the people. Mr. R. W. Perks, M.P., was chairman of a meeting in St. George's Chapel in the evening, at which Mr. Thompson made another very encouraging statement. He said that he entered upon his eighth year in the mission work with much joy. There are now over 1,100 members; but this does not represent the amount of blessing which God has given upon the work, for last year one-sixth of the entire membership removed to other places. Further, the many seamen who are converted through the preaching of the Gospel cannot be enrolled as members, for they leave for distant places; but from time to time letters are received from them saying that they remain steadfast in the Christian life. Mr. Thompson added that though with sorrow he gave notes of removal to some converts who had proved to be valued helpers, he was not disappointed at this, for it was quite natural that those who rise from the life of the slums should want to quit the district for suburban residence with its greater comfort. In connection with the Stepney Temple, he had arranged to open a book saloon whence pure literature may be disseminated. This is an important undertaking, in which all Christian people will wish him a success equal to that which has attended his other efforts. Where vile books are eagerly bought and sold, those which are wholesome and elevating should at least be offered to the reading public. In conclusion, Mr. Thompson expressed joy at the good work which Mr. Jameson had done among the young. New work is opening up among the girls, Mrs. Ashton Cross, of Banstead, having engaged a skilled laundress to train them in an occupation which may enable them to earn a livelihood.

Addresses of warm sympathy were delivered by the Chairman, and Revs. J. E. Wakerley and Hugh Price Hughes.

EPERNAY.—About five miles from the well-known vineyards of Ay, whose grapes are used in making champagne, the river Marne bends, and on its banks is the pretty little town of Epernay. Here for a month past the mission-boat Le Bon Messager has been stationed. Scarcely had it come to its moorings before a crowd gathered round it, and the following day, without any attempt at advertising, the boat was filled with an attentive and quiet audience. Each evening this little floating chapel was filled by those who came to listen to the preaching of God's Word.

Lights and Shadows of Mission Work.

No. VIII.

Few were the shadows to begloom one's feelings at St. E——, and yet I had expected little else than difficulties. The church was in one of the worst parts of London. A large proportion of the people would be foreigners, while atheistical Socialists swarmed around us. Indeed circumstances, generally, sent one's thoughts to that Asian church of old, in speaking of which the Lord Jesus says "Where Satan's seat is." But the Lord had a work and a people there, as one saw at a glance when going to the first meeting on the Saturday night.

I shall never forget that meeting. I have frequently, on such occasions, given an address on that wonderful "Whatsoever" of John xvi. 23. I did so now; and, at its close, a young man who had the appearance of an artisan came up to me and asked if I thought he might successfully plead the promise with reference to his aged father and mother. I advised him to put God's faithfulness to the test. He did so; and, in the first place, the old people were induced to come to the services; after this, they were among those who, as enquirers after the way of salvation, sought the vicar's instruction in the vestry; but still, though I had marked the joy that hope had given the son, I could see, as the nights went by, that he was far from being satisfied.

I believe it was on the Thursday night, a sergeant on the staff of the East London Militia requested permission to speak a few words. I rather shrank from the idea. Always, through my evangelistic career, I have striven to regard myself as "a bird of passage," and to remember that the resident clergy, rather than myself, would have to bear any odium drawn upon the church by the introduction of novelties during the mission. My friend the vicar was away in the vestry, but while I remained undecided as to whether I should indulge the soldier's wish or not, I suppose he took it for granted that I did not forbid him to speak, and so went on. I was indeed glad that he did so, for the good fellow was only wanting to give me a word of cheer for myself.

He told us that he had been a wild youth, spending some twelve years with the colours in India. At last the way of transgressors had proved so wearisome that, on his return to his native land, he had determined to turn over a new leaf. The new one, however, was found to be no improvement on the old, and he became more miserable than ever. In the providence of God he was then led to a town where I had a curacy: I was conducting some farewell services at the time, which he attended, and at these it had pleased God to use me in his conversion.

Encouraged by the fact that another person had spoken, an old man rose to his feet in another part of the church, an old lady following his example, and rising at his side. They were the father and the mother of the praying son. The old man, in a few words of great power, gave glory to God for having saved him, and the old lady, with a beaming face, gave her testimony to a like fact in the ejaculated words, "Praise Him."

Perhaps one of the Sabbath afternoon gatherings was the most remarkable of the whole series. Knowing my past experience, my friend asked me to let him advertise me as "A converted sceptic." I didn't like the thought at all, but as he urged the probability of such means proving successful in bringing under sound of the Gospel some of the many around the church who were glorying in their infidelity, I consented. It is seldom, thank God, that I am permitted to lose nerve; but the sight of the congregation thus drawn together sent a tremor right through me. There may be many exceptions to the rule, but students of physiognomy generally find that as is the soul, so is the face.

Readers must imagine, then, the effect of so many faces of men who, for the greater part, were regular attendants at a notorious "Infidel Hall" in the neighbourhood. The question was, "How would the service end?" I committed the matter to God, and then determined to use what tact He might have given me for his work. Standing on the chancel steps, I announced that our meeting would be begun with that grandest of all hymns, "Rock of Ages"; "and," said I, "as I hope it is going to remind many of us of old times, we will sing it to that old tune that our mothers used, when rocking us to sleep in 'the days of Auld Lang Syne.'" With that I started "Rousseau's Dream"; and didn't they sing it!

My address, based on the words, "Come, ye that fear the Lord, and I will tell you what He hath done for my soul," was a recital of the Lord's dealings with me, in bringing my own soul out of the horrible pit of infidelity. It was listened to with great attention, and at the close we sang, "Tell me the Old, Old Story," the chorister boys taking each verse, and the congregation joining in the chorus. This again was like a roll of thunder. We had afterwards good reason to believe that the effort was owned of God.

One case of conversion at St. E——'s was most interesting. It was that of a gentleman who had seen better days. He was very ritualistic when we first met; but very open in his remarks. The idea of a present salvation had seemingly never occurred to him, and it was hard to make him believe that the condensed doctrine of John v. 24 was the doctrine of the New Testament at large. As the days went by, however, his prejudices wore away; and one could believe that the entrance of God's Word had conveyed light to his heretofore darkened soul.

But it was not till the mission was over, and I had taken my seat in the train, that I knew how far the truth had been blessed to him. Then he acknowledged what the Lord had done for him, though his new joy had been strangely (to him) blended with sorrow. He had taken home what he had found at church, to divide the home against itself, and to realise that a believer's foes could be they of his own household. Most cruel, exceptionally so, had suddenly become the treatment dealt out to him by a member of the family. Deeply did I sympathise with him when the tears gathered in his eyes as he talked; but yet the look of settled, though chastened, peace one beheld on his face, told me that he would have a Strong One with him to bear his burden for him.

It is mysterious, on the human side of the question (and I suppose other evangelists have often noticed the same thing), that where expectation is but small, result is often most gratifying, while disappointment, on the other hand, frequently answers the greatest expectations. At my next mission, St. P——'s, I had promised myself that it would be all harvest work; the vicar was a personal friend, the parish had been worked up by Christian deaconesses, we had also experienced outdoor workers to help us; but I always think of it with sadness.

Two or three remarkable things happened in connection with it. Among those who remained at one of the after-meetings, I found a woman from my native village, with whom I had often played as a child, some thirty years before. In speaking to another, I discovered a young woman who had come out for Christ after an address I had given in one of Mrs. Wilkes' "refuges," and who was now engaged in "rescue" work herself. Then an artisan who told us that he had not been in a place of worship for years, but who had been induced to enter the church by some of the workers who had taken their stand on the pavement to give tracts to the passers-by, was converted through the hymn, "Are you coming home to-night?"

But the most interesting case of all was that of an old gentleman. I was preaching, on the Sunday evening, from the words "Wilt thou be made whole?" but I was stopped in what would probably have been the middle of my sermon by rather peculiar circumstances. At the moment these arose I was just saying, "When God gives a question He demands an answer; this is his question, but what is to be your answer. I must leave the matter entirely with Him and you." The next day, as my friend the vicar and I went into the vestry together, the old gentleman in question followed us. "Sir," said he, "when you stopped preaching last night, you gave us one of God's questions!" "I did," said I. "And for my own part I gave Him answer," he replied. "I will now give you my waking words of this morning," he continued; "they were addressed to my wife, and were these—'Thank God, I have received the Holy Ghost.'"

Some have doubtless blamed me for having referred in these sketches to the unpleasantnesses in mission work. I can only say that I have striven to move on Biblical lines, and to give things just as they have happened; though, as far as possible, without wounding the minds of persons. Had some friends who have written to me been the writers of "The New Testament," they would never have given (unless compelled by the Holy Spirit) the things recorded there. The ambitious request of Zebedee's sons; the unbelief of the apostle Thomas; the fall of Peter; the quarrel between Paul and Barnabas; the weakness of Peter at Antioch, and a number of other like occurrences, would have been altogether omitted from their writings.

But whether I am right or wrong, I always feel that in speaking, or writing one's experience, if that which is painful is suppressed, that which is given is only a part of the truth.

An Evangelist.

A BULGARIAN MISSION.

Through the kindness of a friend in England, I have been enabled for the last three years to read The Christian, from which I have derived great spiritual profit.

For the last thirteen years I have been labouring as a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Mission in Bulgaria. This mission was opened in 1857. It has from the beginning had to contend with many difficulties, but is now established on a permanent basis. The central station of the mission is Sistov, on the Danube, where the Superintendent of the Mission at present resides, and where the Literary and Theological School is located. The mission has commodious churches in Varna and Rustchuk, and preaching halls in Sistov and Shumla. It owns property in Sistov, Shumla, Rustchuk, Varna Tirnova, Loftche, and Orchanieh.

The annual meeting of the mission was held this year in Sistov, September 8 to 13. Bishop Joyce, from America, presided, and addressed the brethren through an interpreter. The report of the Superintendent showed a slight increase in the membership, though the good done by the missionaries and native preachers can never be tabulated. The largest congregations were shown to be in those places where the mission has churches, the Bulgarians being averse to attending preaching services in halls or private houses. The Bishop's earnest addresses to the brethren of the Conference gave a new inspiration to all. At the close of the Bishop's rousing sermon on Sunday, September 11, about eight persons rose for prayer. This was in every respect the best annual meeting we have ever had.

A new departure was made this year by the Bishop's appointing a pastor to Sofia, the capital of the Principality. The Bulgarian Evangelical Association has hitherto laboured in Sofia. It has succeeded in putting up at one end of the town a chapel, and is doing a good work. The congregation has called for their pastor a young Bulgarian, who has completed his theological studies in America, and who arrived in Sofia about September 1 last. Our mission, in appointing a preacher to Sofia, does not propose to compete with the Congregational brethren, who, as was stated, are doing a good work. It proposes to open up a new work by labouring among a different class of people. In this way more people will be reached by the preaching of the Gospel. The Bishop appointed the writer to fill the important position of pastor of Sofia. He realised the great responsibility he assumed, and relies upon God for his guidance and blessing. We ask all Christians to pray for the success of God's work in Bulgaria, as represented by the Methodist Episcopal Mission and the Mission of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

THE CHRISTIAN BLIND RELIEF SOCIETY was started nearly fifty years ago. It seems to be growing and extending its influence far and wide, to the great delight of those who are blind and poor, as many letters testify. In its last yearly record we read of pensions granted to 400 persons, seventy-six candidates elected pensioners, and pensions doubled in twenty-one cases. To many of the despairing and wretched blind an unexpected helping hand is bringing extreme delight. The society does not confine its benefits to the blind of London, but its pensions are scattered over all parts of the country, without favour or distinction of creed. The simple qualifications are need and moral character, but at the same time every effort is used to bring Christian influence to bear upon all pensioners. Rev. J. Pullein Thompson, St. Stephen's Vicarage, North Bow, E., is hon. secretary.

THE LATE MR. JOSEPH WEATHERLEY.

THE late JOSEPH WEATHERLEY, whose portrait we present to our readers, and who has but recently passed into the presence of the Lord, has been for many years prominently identified with several evangelical enterprises and movements, in connection with which he ill be deeply missed; and it may well seem mysterious indeed that he has been removed at a time when his ripe experience would have been peculiarly valuable, not only in the practical direction of Christian institutions, but in the counsel that he could have given to large numbers in all parts of England who owed to his words their first knowledge of Christ, and looked to him as their spiritual father.

He was born June 7, 1832, in the City of London. His father was carried off by cholera within a month of his birth, leaving the widow with four children. At the age of fifteen he commenced his business life, and, not being then decided for Christ, was led by the evident hand of God to take rooms in the West Branch of the Y.M.C.A., through which he became associated with the late Mr. Henry Bowker, in whose house he afterwards found a home, and who was the means of his religious decision. It was at this time of his life that he was brought in contact with the Rev. Samuel Garratt, who largely moulded his religious opinions, and with whom he maintained relations of intimate fellowship to the end.

His first Christian work was found, as with so many others, in the Sunday School. There he first developed his marvellous aptitude for individual dealing with souls, which became afterwards so marked a characteristic of his influence. He was in the habit of receiving his scholars in his own rooms, and inducing them by personal solicitation to give their hearts to Christ. Whilst thus engaged he was led to organise work in Newport Market, where an old Welsh Calvinistic chapel was adapted for the purposes of a mission, entitled "Working Men's Christian Association." This enterprise speedily assumed importance, and from it many have gone forth as City missionaries, Scripture-readers, and Christian workers in other directions. Such as now survive are still banded together under the title of "Old Graftonians," borrowed from the name of the hall in which the meetings were held.

The key to his success was in his facility of discovering what each man could do best, and appointing him to a post, so that even the bill-sticking and cleaning was done by voluntary help. This work continued until the premises were required for other purposes, and then he threw himself into other activities especially in connection with the Evangelisation Society, of which he was one of the founders. Few were the Sundays, over a course of twenty years, that did not see him engaged in some part of England conducting mission services; and seeking, by the public presentation of Christ, as well as by personal entreaty, to win souls. His preaching was characterised by its full presentation of the offices and work of the Lord Jesus, especially of his Atonement, and by the directness of his appeals to take God at his word irrespective of emotional experience. It was to efforts of this nature that may be attributed the conversion of such men as the three brothers Studd, Captain Burroughs, Rev. T. H. Harvey, and James Redman, who have lately laid down their lives for the Lord in the mission field. He was greatly gifted in dealing with young men of the upper classes, and took a special interest in the drawing-room meetings intended for their benefit.

(From a Photograph by Mr. E. D. Percival, 5, High-street, Ilfracombe.

Amongst the societies in which he took a prominent part we may mention Miss Mittendorff's Home for Destitute Children, Mons. Barbier's Mission to the French in Soho, Religious Tract Society (on the committee of which he served for eleven years), Open Air Mission, London Medical Mission, Zenana Bible and Medical Mission, and the Homes for Little Boys at Farningham and Swanley. It was in connection with these last named that his tender sympathy with young life found its fittest expression. He moved amongst them, on his periodical visits, as a father, calling them by their names, enquiring after their spiritual welfare, assisting them to situations, and following their course in after life with keen interest. His last public address was delivered to them on the occasion of his birthday in the present year, when in great physical weakness he visited Farningham.

The presence of several telegraph messengers and postmen in their uniforms at his funeral, was a token of the affectionate regard in which he was held by many of the junior employés of H.M. Post Office, for whom he conducted a weekly Bible class in the West Central District, and assisted the formation of similar classes in various parts of London. When Mr. Moody held his mission at the Midland Terminus Hall, Mr. WEATHERLEY acted as secretary, and his house practically became the office of movement. He also visited America to give an account of the great religious movement which was at that time passing over England, and often referred in after life to the generous welcome extended to him by American Christians.

He was keenly interested in all Missionary enterprise. Mr. Hudson Taylor writes:—"Before I had the pleasure of his personal acquaintance, he took a fatherly interest in our dear children. When leaving them in England, it was a comfort to me to feel that his advice and kindly services were always available. In our work in China, too, he was ready to help, and at my request he joined the Council of the China Inland Mission, acting on it as long as the pressure of other duties permitted; his interest remaining undiminished to the end. It was a painful surprise on reaching England to hear how low he was, but I am thankful that I was permitted to have one interview with him, and to find him resting in his weakness in perfect peace on that Saviour whom he had commended to so many."

These various interests were sustained in addition to the responsibilities of large mercantile engagements, and in the midst of them all he did not forget the claims of wife and children and home, where quick sympathy was always welling forth in the channels through which he was working. In this connection we may cite an extract from a letter received from one who is now working for God amongst the heathen: "I am so glad I had the joy and privilege of seeing Mr. WEATHERLEY'S beautiful home-life, his calm quiet ways. And then how I enjoyed the daily morning family prayers; he was so thoughtful, and prayed so earnestly for those in sorrow and joy."

We do not attempt to characterise the qualities of his mind, or to estimate the results of his work, but we feel that the warm after-glow of his influence will linger in many hearts "until the day dawn, and the shadows flee away."

CONFERENCES IN JAPAN.

In August a little over a hundred missionaries from various parts of Japan and China were gathered, for rest and refreshment, to a village called Arima, in the mountains of Japan, there also to meet with their Lord and listen to his voice. Some of us who knew Him as a crucified Saviour, have learned to know Him as a risen Lord and an indwelling Christ.

The conference, which lasted from August 7 to 14 inclusive, was opened on the Monday by Archdeacon Warren (C.M.S.) and Bishop Maleliеu (American M.E.M.). Each gave a sweetly suitable address, specially pointing out what God is able and willing to do for his believing people. Two papers were read on "The Position and Prospects of Mission Work in China and Japan," in which some of the wondrous works God has recently wrought in these two empires were well stated. In the evening a prayer-meeting was held for the two empires.

On Tuesday a paper was read on, "With what object did St. John write his Gospel?" This elicited much warm but happy discussion. In the evening a Bible reading on "Steps of faith in the life of Abraham." On other evenings readings were given on "The New Jerusalem" and other subjects.

On Wednesday we considered the "Dangers peculiar to the spiritual life during study of the language," a most important subject. There was also a paper on "Fasting." Thursday was given to papers by ladies on "Woman's Work," including training of Biblewomen, schools, and evangelistic work. The Scriptural grounds for the freedom of women to pray, prophesy, or teach, were also fully set forth.

On Friday the subject was "The teaching of Holy Scripture with regard to a clean or pure heart." This was freely but lovingly discussed. Judging from the fact that many testified to having about this time received "the blessing of a pure heart," and various smaller meetings continuing to be held after the Conference was over to seek from God this blessing, we think that this day's meetings brought direct and indirect results which exceeded the most sanguine hopes. Many who came to Arima with broken spirits and sad hearts went back to work with beaming faces and happy hearts.

On Saturday the theme of our study was "The Premillennial Advent."

Sunday was another precious season, and at a meeting in the evening testimonies to blessings flowed apace.

It is impossible to estimate the immense benefits of such a Conference, where the warmest love was so clearly seen among those of various denominations and different lines of training. So deeply were hearts moved that tears and emotion at times hindered the speakers from saying all the heart felt. Those who have known the intense drain upon the minds and bodies, as well as on the spiritual life, of the labourers in the interior of China and Japan, will hail such gatherings with joy. A similar Conference, but more especially on the subject of Holiness, was held on another mountain near the ancient city of Kyoto, in which also several persons testified to happy and useful results. Mr. George Clarke in Dundee.

In St. Clement's Church, Dundee—commonly and familiarly spoken of as "the Steeple," and of which the Rev. James E. Houston, B.D., is minister—special mission services are at present being conducted by Mr. George Clarke. The mission, which began on Sunday, October 2, is to be continued until the 15th inst. Meetings are held in the afternoon and evening in the Steeple, an open-air service preceding the former; while at noon, on several days, he has also conducted a service in the Y.M.C.A. The neighbourhood is a poor one, and the audience is chiefly composed of the working class and the "common people," who, as in the days of the Master Himself, hear the Gospel "gladly."

THE SALVATION ARMY.

GERMAN SWITZERLAND.

Dear Sir,—I had an invitation from Commissioner Booth-Clibborn to spend last Thursday with him and his wife at Zurich. This day was almost entirely devoted to meetings held for the S.A. officers of the German Cantons. I was so much struck by what I saw at these meetings, that I am writing these few lines to you in the train during my return journey to St. Gall, as I think some of your readers may care to hear what impression a glimpse "behind the scenes" has left with an outsider.

I left St. Gall at 8.30 yesterday morning, and reached the Army's quarters about 12.20. When I asked for Mrs. Clibborn (La Maréchale), I was told that she was in the hall at a meeting for officers only. I found the entrance, and slipping in quietly, sat down on a form at the back of the hall. In front of me sat between 300 and 400 Swiss officers, all in full uniform, the men sitting on the right, the women on the left, according to the custom in all Swiss places of worship.

Mrs. Booth-Clibborn was addressing them in French as I entered, and her heart-searching words were ably translated into German by an intelligent-looking woman in uniform

She was urging on all present the importance of self-sacrifice and whole-heartedness in service; that this was the one thing needful before God could use them to the salvation of others. In a few touching words she related how she herself had to make one very difficult sacrifice for Christ's sake with reference to her children; but how in this case, as in every other, Jesus made up to her for everything foregone for his sake.

She asked those present, if any of them were making any reservation in their hearts, to give it up at once, and consecrate themselves afresh, laying their all on the altar. Then she could promise them that the mighty power of God's Spirit would be theirs, a power that would enable them to speak words that would go direct to the hearts of sinners to convince them of sin—a power that would enable them to wage successful warfare against the strongholds of Satan—a power that would make them instruments for saving the lost and comforting the sorrowful.

Then all knelt during the singing of a hymn and prayer. Silently, one by one, the greater number of the officers left their seats and passed up to the penitent forms. There they knelt sobbing and praying for fully half-an-hour. It was an extraordinary sight to me, as I had never been at an officers' meeting before. No one took the slightest notice of me as I knelt at my form, straining my ears to catch the broken words that came now and then from one of those kneeling in self-abasement before God. For several minutes I could only hear subdued sobs. Then would begin an earnest prayer "for a heart more like thine," "for more love for souls," "less self-pleasing and self-seeking," etc.

It was during the mid-day dinner hour, the hall was well-lighted by good-sized windows, several of which were wide open. I don't know how this sight would have struck another, but to me it seemed a key to the secret of the success of the work done by many of these simple unlearned men and women. It is no easy thing for a young Swiss woman to lead meetings and speak from a public platform. Frequent visits to Swiss friends have given me an insight into their home life. I know their prejudices and customs as well as I know those of my native land, and can, therefore, confidently say that for a Swiss woman to break through all these social customs must mean for her a life of daily self-renunciation and sacrifice, that it is impossible for most English and Americans to realise. Yes, in these lives there is plenty of that "room to deny ourselves, a road to bring us daily nearer God."

Just as certainly as the powerful electric light reveals to my intellect the unseen force that passes through the negative and positive wires, so at the evening meeting last night my soul felt the presence of a mighty spiritual power flashing down into the hearts of the audience, convincing of sin and of judgment to come. I sat on the platform at the crowded evening meeting, and watched the faces of those who sat before me, and they were as visibly moved as a field of corn when the wind sweeps over it. On how many of those hearts a lasting impression was made I cannot tell; the "fowls of the air" are often waiting as near as the hall doors to catch away the good seed that is sown; but I saw eighteen men and women come out to the penitent form to be prayed with. Down from the platform passed the officers, mingling with the audience; here pleading personally with one to decide for Christ; there kneeling beside a broken-hearted sinner. The very same men and women who at that never-to-be-forgotten morning meeting had been pleading with God for a blessing, even as Jacob wrestled while realising his own weakness.

As I have said already, that morning meeting prepared me to expect results would follow the Gospel preached at night. Pentecostal experiences are still possible where there is the spirit of love and self-sacrifice. One other thing I must mention ere I close this letter. During the course of the evening meeting, a child was dedicated by La Maréchale. It was the first time I had seen this done, and, as a churchwoman, I had a distinct aversion to the idea of "dedicating a child to God and the Army," as they call it. But I have seldom heard anything more touching and reverent. When the infant of four months old was brought on to the platform the whole assembly (accompanied by a piano and some wind instrument) were singing. Any but a S. A. soldier's baby would have been terrified out of its senses; but this one smiled the whole time. Commissioner Clibborn earnestly addressed the parents, reminding them of their responsibilities and asking if they were both willing to train this child up not only as a good servant, but also a good soldier of Christ; not seeking for him worldly prosperity, ease, and comfort, but that he might live for God's glory and the salvation of a lost world. After their answer La Maréchale took the child in her arms and prayed for him. Then the Major and his wife spoke a few words, that evidently came straight from their hearts to the audience; and one could not but feel that their solemn promise would not be so lightly made and forgotten as that, alas! so often made by the baptismal font, when the child that was to "renounce the pomps and vanities of the world" is taught to desire them as the summum bonum from its very cradle.

I have often found fault with the strange methods and practices of the Salvation Army. I have no doubt I shall be tempted to do so again some day; but when that day comes one backward glance at that morning meeting at Zurich will, I expect, shut my lips; and I shall say to myself: "Wait, before you dare criticise these people until you also are ready to sacrifice yourself to the same extent for the needs of a sinning and suffering humanity."

Yours truly,

A. M. C.

"I've Done Refusin'.

These were the words of an aged Christian who had been unexpectedly asked by his pastor to lead the special meeting for the evening. In commencing the services he stated that he had not expected to take charge of the meeting, and so was unprepared to make remarks on the topic before them. "But," said he, "I have made up my mind that when I am asked to do anything in Christian work by one whom I have confidence in, if he thinks that it is my duty, even if I do not feel that I am prepared, I will try to do it. I've done refusin'." No better opening for the prayer-meeting that night was needed. What better keynote could be found? What a difference would be found at once in our social meetings and every branch of church work, if only each professing Christian could say: "I've done refusin' I"—Congregationalist.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY CENTENARY.

During last week a number of very interesting gatherings were held in London, in commemoration of the centenary of the Baptist Missionary Society. The centenary sermon was preached in Exeter Hall on Tuesday morning by Rev. Dr. Maclaren, from 3 John 6, "Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church, whom if thou bring forward on their journey after a godly sort, thou shalt do well. Because that for His name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles. We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth."

In conclusion, he said: "The century of work that begins to-day will need to be far in advance of its predecessor if it is not to be far behind it. It is no use our building the monuments of the Dauntless Three of Serampore and of others, unless we take up and better their unfinished work. There must be far deeper consideration, if these Centenary Services are not to be mere spasmodic excitement, which will pay the penalty in languor and exhaustion. The work is greater: let not the consecration be, as alas! I fear it often is, far less! Dear friends, forget, if you like, everything else that I have said this morning, but let me beseech you professing Christians to lay on your mouths, consciences, hearts, and wills, the three great words of our text—'For the sake of the Name,' 'Worthily of God,' 'Fellow-workers with the truth.'"

The Earl of Harrowby presided over an Evangelical Missionary Centenary Alliance Thanksgiving Meeting in Exeter Hall on Tuesday afternoon. At the outset of the proceedings Mr. A. H. Baynes read a letter from Mr. Robert Artlington, of Leeds, who said: "I should greatly rejoice with you if this celebration were made in faith and love—with intense concern—the occasion of a great extension of Gospel diffusion in the dark places of the earth, a marked revival-period of renewed activity of Christian missionary enterprise, so that all Evangelical Christians should unite in a wise division of the field of the world where the Word of Life has not yet been published, either by voice or by book. All other parts where Arabic can be read, and where John, Luke, and the Acts have been translated into the languages, we might leave for the present, I think, to the great Bible Societies. If we have fervent hearts to do this great work, accommodation might be found for all willing evangelical missionaries. I should be glad and thankful beyond measure to expend, in helping in passage and supporting such missionaries, £30,000 at least. Do not, on any account, let this Centenary pass without some definite arrangement for such wise division of the world." Mr. Baynes added:—I have the conviction that if there could be a great conference between the united evangelical missionary associations, not only of Great Britain but of America, we might together so arrange the great missionary army as to occupy many of the districts at present vacant, and avoid overlapping.

In the course of his address, the Chairman, who is President of the British and Foreign Bible Society, said:—Let us put the Bible in the hands of everybody, and try to saturate our people with the Bible teaching, and we may be perfectly sure that no Church will fail. So I rejoice that at the beginning of your proceedings you show a strong token of your devotion in the first instance to the Bible.

Rev. F. E. Wigram, hon. sec. of the Church Missionary Society, described the work of that great organisation. He asked:—Are we satisfied? No, no; indeed, we are not! We are humbled to the dust, as we realise how in answer to our prayers God has set before us open doors and we are not able to enter in. In spite of the supply of men, our committee are asking me to find no less than 122 missionaries now whom they are desiring to send out if we can only get them.

Mr. Albert Spicer, treasurer of the London Missionary Society, concluded a vigorous address: We in these sea-girt islands, in touch with all the world, have been entrusted with the Gospel of Christ. I ask you that we should see to it, that entrusted as we have been we should accept the responsibility joyfully and lovingly to do what we can to pass on that Gospel to our fellow-creatures throughout all the world.

The Wesleyan Missionary Society was represented by Rev. C. H. Kelly, who reminded his hearers of the all-embracing character of Christ's commission: "Go ye into all the world." He said: The best wish that we can have for you is that you will be as good as they were, as earnest as they were. You will never be better, but you may be as good. You will never have higher aims, nobler spirits, more self-devotion; but you can have as much. And if you pray for the blessing of the Lord of Hosts, the God of Carey, and Marshman, and Ward, the blessing of the Lord which was upon them and has been upon the Baptist churches for these hundred years, will still be upon you and upon yours.

Dr. Oswald Dykes, representing the missions of the Presbyterian Church, pointed out that there are ten Presbyterian churches at work in China. The outstanding need of the country is a native Church which shall be sure enough of its own footing, and sufficiently organised in itself to stand alone; and not only to stand in a day of trial, but to work, to live, to grow even were European support and European encouragement withdrawn. And hence the 670 agents all told, whom American and British Presbyterians are employing in the Empire, are busy laying the foundations of a native Church.

Rev. Benjamin La Trobe, secretary of the Moravian Missions, described the work of that body in the foreign field. When Carey was studying the "Periodical Accounts" of the Moravians, there were twenty-five stations and about 15,000 converts. Those stations were scattered amongst the negro heathen of the West Indies and the heathen of South America, among the heathen Esquimaux of Greenland and Labrador, and every one of those missions is still carried on, though under very different circumstances. He had traversed the north-west coast of Labrador, but he had scarcely seen any heathen there. He had visited one of the North-American Indian stations, and he certainly saw no savages there. The west coast of Greenland is equally Christian, and now that emancipation has rendered development possible in the churches of the West Indies, they have become almost self-supporting, and have made very great progress towards self-supply in the establishment of a native ministry.

Dr. E. B. Underhill, hon. sec. Baptist Missionary Society, speaking of Carey's day, said: There were not more than 300 Baptist churches in the whole of the British Islands. There are now nearly 3,000. The members of the Baptist churches in the year 1791 did not exceed 23,000 in number; they now exceed 300,000. If one hundred years had elapsed, surely a hundredfold should be the boldness, and the liberality, and the generosity of the churches to which we belong. You cannot send out one hundred missionaries without making provision for their future well-being and support, and that involves during the next fifteen or twenty years having our income raised to £140,000 or £150,000 a year, to maintain the whole of its present progress, and to carry on the useful and aggressive work you are about to enter upon.

Sir Charles U. Aitcheson, late Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjaub, presided over a large public meeting on Tuesday evening. Referring to the Bible translation work of Carey and his comrades, he said:—It was David Brown, I think, who called the Bible the great missionary that speaks the wonderful works of God. It is also the chiefest of missionaries. The missionaries die, the printed Bible remains for ever. It finds its access through doors that are closed to the human foot, and into countries where missionaries have not yet ventured to go; and above all, it speaks to the consciences of men with a power that no human voice can exert. It is the living seed of God, and soon it springs up, men know not how, and bears fruit unto everlasting life. I can tell you from my own personal knowledge that there is no book that is more studied in India now by the native population of all parties than the Christian Bible. An old Hindu servant of my own I used to see sitting hour after hour absorbed in a well-thumbed volume. I had the curiosity to take it up one day, and I found it was the Hindi New Testament. One of the ruling chiefs of India, when on a visit to me when I was Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjaub, asked me for a private interview, and he told me, though he did not want his people to know it, that he read the Christian Bible every day of his life. To thousands who are not Christians, but who are seeking after God, the Bible in the vernaculars of India is an exceedingly precious book. The leader of the Brahmo-Somaj, which represents the highest phase of educated Hindoo thought, in a recent lecture to the students of the Punjaub University, exhorted them seriously to study the Scriptures as the best guide to purity of heart and life. With all this I can tell you that the Christian missionary is more needed in India now than even in Carey's time. Ought not that fact alone to stir up the Christian Church in England to redouble its efforts."

Rev. Dr. G. H. Rouse, of Calcutta, told the story of the work of the Indian Mission, Referring to the simple faith of the people he said: In Orissa a candidate for baptism said with tears, "I know but little. I am a poor, ignorant man; how can I be expected to answer? If you asked a question about my loom, how I prepare my cotton, how I weave, I could explain it all; but in religion, all that I know is that I am a sinner without salvation or any hope of it in myself, that Jesus has died for me, that He is willing and waiting to save me, and that I have given Him my heart; this I know, and nothing more." Another story: A poor woman in Bengal, when dying, said, "My keeper for eternity is Christ. I have laid all my load upon Him." There is the simple faith that many of these people exercise. And as well as having this simple faith, they often have, also, to suffer a great deal because of their faith. There is a Christian man that I know. He was a Brahmin. His mother was a widow and he felt it his duty to confess Christ by baptism. He went home and said to his mother, "I have become a Christian." She would far rather have heard that he had been dead. She wept over him, but she could not let him remain there. He said, "Mother, won't you let me stay here?" "No, you cannot; if you have become a Christian you cannot eat with me!" "Yes, but, mother, let me eat in a separate place. Give me food there." "No." "Well, but, mother, look at your dog; he does not belong to your caste, but you give him food. Why cannot you give it to me?" "No." A dog may be tolerated at home, but the Christian son never. That is what a man often has to suffer when he becomes a Christian. Dr. Rouse appealed for the hundred new workers to come forward.

Rev. Joshua J. Turner, of Shansi, North China, adduced evidence of the blessedness of the work in China. He told of a man who declared to him, "I had not smiled for more than twenty years." When that man came to us, two years before, his face was cast in the very image of despair. He sat in the back of the room and spoke to nobody, and he seemed to be really crushed. He narrated to me his story. He told me that he had been a student, and had studied for his degree. He had a friend, a bosom companion, to whom he told every thought, and they went together to the examinations, attained their degree, and went back to their village home together to take part in the festivities that were got up by their friends. Before these festivities were over, Mr. Doong found that his friend was false, and had brought shame into his home. A terrible scene ensued. The wife committed suicide by jumping down a well. Doong went out of his mind, fled from his native home, and wandered about the district for days and nights in the frenzy of hatred and despair. At last he returned to the place. His hair had grown grey and his face was changed. He took up his abode in a deserted temple. He fasted for days and days until he nearly died. He shunned his fellow men. He feared them, and his diseased imagination at last peopled the whole district with malicious beings until he was afraid to move, afraid even of the summer breeze as it rustled in and out of his broken paper windows. But he met one of our evangelists. He heard the Gospel of Christ; he learned to pray; he gave himself up to Jesus Christ and he said, "Now I can smile," and he leaned back and laughed a bright holy laugh which showed how perfectly his heart was at peace. Some months after, that same man was in a meeting when we were discussing what should be done in reference to certain persecutions. The rowdies in one of our outstations had made up their minds to crush the new religion. Sticks had been used. One man had been threatened with his life, and only escaped by dashing through the window and fleeing from the town. Inquirers were panic stricken. The evangelists were afraid, and they wanted us to appeal to the magistrate and make an example of the ringleader. At last I asked Mr. Doong what he thought of the matter. He got up and said, "Sir, you have come here to show forth the benevolence of God, I think we had better try to convert the man." "Will you do it?" I asked. "Yes." "When will you go?" He said, "I will go now." He got up, and a few minutes after with his bundle on his back he passed out of the mission gates, going alone to face the rowdies on their own ground. A few hours afterwards when we arrived there, Mr. Doong was standing in the midst of a huge crowd of people; the rowdies were there, the ringleader was there, and they all listened with wonder as he told them how for thirty years he had been cowed by the fear of the devil, and how he had been an outcast, afraid of his fellow men; but Jesus Christ had given him peace, and hope through his death.

Rev. Wm. Forfeitt, of Bopoto, Central Africa, having spoken, Rev. J. E. Greenhough, M.A., of Leicester, described Gospel progress in Jamaica.

Mr. George Williams presided over the public breakfast on Wednesday, at which addresses were delivered by Rev. R. H. Lovell, of Bromley, Mr. Hugh Matheson, Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, M.A., Mr. R. V. Barrow, M.P., and Professor Legge, D.D.

A ladies' gathering was held in the afternoon The concluding meeting of the celebration was held on Wednesday evening under the presidency of Mr. W. R. Rickett, treasurer of the society. It was the young people's gathering, and was very largely attended. Addresses were delivered by Mr. F. F. Belsey, J.P., Rev. Charles Jordon, of Calcutta, Rev. T. M. Morris, of Ipswich, Rev. W. H. White, from Bopoto, Upper Congo River; and Rev. J. Jackson Fuller, of the Cameroons.

THE CLIFTON CONFERENCE.

The autumnal gathering of Christian brethren in the Victoria Rooms, Clifton, which took place last week, had a certain tinge of melancholy attaching to it, owing to the regretted absence, through severe indisposition, of its esteemed governor, Rev. James Ormiston, rector of St. Mary-le-Port, Bristol. Although in very weak health, he had left nothing undone in the way of arrangement to make the thirtieth annual conference a most efficient one, and then had to relinquish the privilege of taking part in it himself. The topic selected was "The Truth of God," and on Monday evening last week a special prayer meeting was held to implore the Divine blessing upon the engagements of the week.

On Tuesday morning there was a great attendance. The chairman, Rev. Nevile Sherbrooke, opened the subject, "Christ, the Truth." He pointed out that the promise of the Word is, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." The truth is knowable, and it does produce spiritual liberty.

Rev. A. A. Isaacs (Bath) remarked that it is nothing new for the truth to be assailed as at present; it has been so from the beginning. When it is said Christ, the Truth, it is not that He points it out, or teaches it, but that the person, the character, and attributes of the Lord Jesus Christ, stand before us in all their glorious proportions as the truth of God. In order to complete the work of Redemption it was absolutely necessary that Christ should be sinless, holy, harmless, and undefiled, and it is nothing short of deadly error to affirm, as some now do, that in his human capacity Christ was liable to error, and that inasmuch as his knowledge was limited, his conception of the truth was also limited. Christ is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Rev. W. Frith gave a vigorous address in answer to the query, Why Christ is called the Word? It is a most expressive term, inasmuch as a word, whether spoken or written, implies something unseen which it makes visible or audible. He is the Father's word or message, and out of his fulness have we all received grace and truth. The Living Personal Word has now gone into the glory, and it has been left to believers to be his witnesses.

Rev. T. Davies, of St. John's, Harborne, followed, remarking that he never remembered a time when so many books were issued against the Truth of God and the Person of Jesus Christ. Much was being said to-day to preachers about Christ being wanted and not doctrine, but for himself he could not see how he could preach the Atonement of Christ and leave Him out, and the great fact of his being God and man.

In the afternoon there was an excellent meeting of the Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society, and its claims were well brought out by Colonel Saville, who presided. Mr. J. E. Hazelton was down as usual, and must have been much encouraged by the hearty addresses of several friends.

In the evening "The Written Word of Truth" was the subject, Mr. James Wright presiding. Rev. Edgar N. Thwaites directed attention to the sanctifying power of the Word. "Sanctify them through thy Truth, thy Word is Truth." Rev. Talbot Greaves spoke of the Bible as the written Word of Truth. It was not left to the uncertainty of tradition; it is the photograph, so to speak, of the Divine mind and will; or a better illustration still, perhaps, would be that of the telephone, which enables us to hear and to distinguish the voices of our friends far, far away; and not only so, but to register the voice so that it may be heard again in all its freshness and exactness hundreds of years hence. And so "for ever, O Lord, thy Word is settled in heaven."

On Wednesday the topic was "The Church of God, the Pillar and Ground of the Truth." In the afternoon Rev. J. Urquhart spoke on "The Bible League." Dr. Baedeker followed, and Mr. Mackenzie had an opportunity of saying a word on behalf of the Monthly Tract Society. Rev. A. J. Wilcox decribed the work of the Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland. Our forty-nine faithful readers, he said, as they go from house to house in district after district, have found out that the true secret for healing poor Ireland's woes is to give them the Blessed Word. Dr. Barnardo told the story of his work, with the sympathetic attention of the meeting.

In the evening the subject was "Testifying the Truth," and Mr. James Inskip, who presided, delivered an address on the importance of honestly giving out the Bible teaching. Other speakers of the evening were Mr. Bishop, Mr. G. Mallet (Gloucester), Major Porchelli, Rev. J. C. Martin, and Rev. E. N. Thwaites.

"Obeying the Truth" was the last topic, and occupied Thursday morning. Colonel Molesworth presided, and at the commencement of the meeting it was announced that Mr. Ormiston was "somewhat better." The President, in connection with John xiv. 5, said the position which it was intended believers should occupy in the world was that of witnessing. "Ye are my witnesses" was what the Lord said unto them.

"What will be the practical result of these days of conference?" was the question asked by Mr. G. Thomas; and Mr. Moore, in a few words of earnest prayer, asked help to answer it by "obeying the Truth."

Rev. W. Elliott (Plymouth) brought the meeting to a close by an address upon 1 Timothy iv. 14—17, in connection with which he urged that the Bible, and not "unwritten tradition," as had been said elsewhere in the course of the week, was the believer's complete directory.

In the evening there was the usual Communion Service, and the Conference sermon was preached by Rev. Nevile Sherbrooke, his text being 1 Cor. x. 17.

BORDERLAND.

"If we say that we have fellowship with Him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth."—1 John i. 6.

So blest at night before we sleep,
We smile at grief, for gladness weep—
This happiness we think to keep.

But when the morn its light has shed,
The feelings of the night have fled;
The cares of earth are ours instead.

We oft essay with will and might
To pass the day in cloudless light;
But darkness gathers ere the night.

If God is light, he who abides
In Him, has light whate'er betides—
There is no night where God resides.

Has Christ the love, the will, the power
To bless and keep us every hour?
Then why do clouds so often lower?

Because alone we climb the steep,
We trust not in the deepest deep,
Our Lord alone to lead and keep.

Death marks the verge of Christ's domain;
With Him we die, his life to gain—
Jesus, apply Thy blood and reign!

MR. JOHN M. SCROGGIE IN PERTH.

Under the auspices of "The Perth Evangelistic Association," Mr. Scroggie conducted a mission of two weeks immediately after and following up the meetings of the Annual Christian Conference in September last. At such a season a deep spiritual interest is awakened, which proved favourable to the mission in a marked degree. The meetings were largely attended both on Sabbaths and on week nights. A spirit of earnest and importunate prayer prevailed, and large numbers met for half-an-hour before the Gospel meetings for prayer every night. These were seasons of joy and strengthening to God's people, specially to the preacher himself, and brought much blessing upon the word spoken.

The addresses were characterised by great faithfulness and spiritual power. The large numbers attending every meeting were stirred in heart and conscience as sin and the Saviour were faithfully presented. Christians received fresh quickening of Spiritual life, and not a few were led to confess faith in Christ for the first time.

On Sabbath afternoon Mr. Scroggie preached in St. Leonard's Free Church (Rev. Dr. Bannerman's), and in the North U.P. Church (Rev. Robert Lyon's). He also gave addresses to Christians on Sabbath mornings in connection with the Young Women's Christian Association, which were very highly appreciated, and found to be a word in season to everyone.

The mission has been productive of much present good and also the means of awakening deeper interest in Christian work for the future. Many leading Christians, professional and business men, as well as Christians in common life and of all denominations, helped in the work, and have received blessing in return.

Mr. Scroggie's engagements for the rest of the year are in Leith, Birkenhead, London, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Hull.

MISSION TO THE JEWS IN THE EAST-END.—The eight days' mission which commenced last Thursday in Christ Church Hall, Hanbury-street, made quite a stir among the Jews of Spitalfields and Whitechapel. Three meetings were held daily, and at each of them large numbers of restless Jews eagerly listened to the Gospel message, and inquired after the way of peace. The mission was arranged by Mr. J. Greenberg, of the London City Mission.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

The Ealing Y.M.C.A. has started pleasant Sunday afternoons for young men.

A new departure in the work of the Plymouth Association was a holiday camp.

The Leeds Association have issued an attractive programme of lectures for the winter.

A junior branch of the Y.M.C.A. has been formed at Burton-on-Trent with sixty-three members.

Several members were admitted to the Aberdeen branch at the annual business meeting last week.

A branch of the Liverpool Association has been opened at the Christian Institute at West Kirby.

Rev. F. B. Meyer will resume his "Bible Talks to Young Men" at the Aldersgate-street branch this month.

Mr. W. A. Boyd, of Cork, has been appointed organising secretary for the midland district of Ireland.

A series of special services for the people has been commenced in the gymnasium at Rochester on Sunday evenings after the close of the places of worship.

A conference of delegates representing branch associations in the north midland district, was held at Wakefield last week. The Mayor entertained the delegates at luncheon.

The Norwich Association presents a gratifying annual report, the chief features being an increase in membership and the removal of a debt of about £100 on the current account.

The Birmingham Association has opened a special branch for youths engaged in shops and warehouses who are too young to join the Association itself, and a reading and recreation room has been fitted up for their use.

A branch has recently been formed in Harlesden, N.W. Already twenty-nine members have joined and a smaller number of associates. The hon. secretary is Mr. C. T. Rogers, 5, Bolton-road, Harlesden, N.W.

The new buildings at Ipswich were recently opened by Mr. G. Williams. The premises afford every facility for social intercourse, culture, and recreation; and a gymnasium is in course of erection. The total outlay was £3,020.

Mr. F. A. Bevan presided last week at the inauguration of the winter session of the City branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, 59 and 60, Cornhill, when addresses were delivered by Mr. R. M'Cann and Mr. Holmes.

Bishop Tucker, of Uganda, is an old Y.M.C.A. man, and so is Rev. J. S. Hill, Bishop-designate of the Niger; he was president for some time of the Auckland Association, and one of the most indefatigable workers in the Colonies.

Messrs. M'Cann and Holmes spoke at Aldersgate-street Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening. They addressed the noon-prayer meeting the following day, and later on the same day they sailed for their new posts of service in Egypt and Bombay.

Judging from the persevering way in which the young men in front of Exeter Hall and Aldersgate-street Associations distribute to passers-by, and press home, their invitations to the meetings, one would conclude that the letters "Y.M.C.A." stand for You Must Come Along.

The current issue of the Aldersgate-street Association News is full of attractive items. Chief among them there is a picturesque account of the recent excursion to the Norwegian fjords, with some fine illustrations. Association secretaries should not overlook the "tonic" given on page 9. The News, we think, is the liveliest and best paper of its kind in the country.

The Literary Society of the Belfast Association had a big and bright inaugural on a recent evening. The parlours of the Association were crowded on Wednesday evening last week with young men for the secretary's first "at home" of the season. The Association has secured a new gymnasium. A large number of new members are about to join the Association as a result of Mr. Moody's recent mission.

The winter session of the Finsbury Park Y.M.C.A. was inaugurated last week by a public meeting in Finsbury Park Hall. Mr. R. C. Morgan, who presided, urged the young men to undertake some particular work in the coming winter. The Rev. A. J. Ard and Rev. W. J. Dawson addressed the meeting. The latter dwelt upon the importance of using rightly leisure time. He believed the Y.M.C.A. was teaching young men how to fill up those hours which too often were perilous ones.

A very attractive educational and lecturing programme for winter service is put forth by our Aldersgate-street friends. Dr. Agar Beet will give four lectures on "The New Testament; its Source, its Writers, its Aims." Mr. McClure, the able headmaster of Mill Hill School, is down for a course of lectures on "Astronomy," and there is to be a photographic class, besides the usual classes. Our City young men have plenty of chances in these days of acquiring knowledge—which is power.

SALISBURY CONFERENCE.

Gleanings by a Volunteer Reporter.

His love did not find us lovely; it made us so.

Conquered Sin.—Place your sins on Jesu's head for pardon, and under his feet for victory.

Are we Real? — We sing "More of Thee," whilst the Lord is waiting and saying, "More of thee."

The True Servant.—It is not said "Well done, good and successful servant," but "Well done, good and faithful servant."

The Church and the World.—If the Church were more free from the influence of the world, it would exercise more influence upon it.

Discipline.—As the waters which destroyed the earth lifted up the ark toward heaven, so earth's discipline raises up the soul to God.

The Beloved.—The Son, loveable in Himself, is essentially the Beloved. We, unloveable in ourselves, are accepted because God sees us in Him.

The Source of Fruitfulness.—"Joseph is a fruitful bough," should be rendered, Joseph is the son of a fruitful tree. From Me is thy fruit found.

Idols.—Have we Christians given up the idols of our heart? How can we tell the heathen to give up their idols till we have given up our own?

Daily Death.—The apostle says, "I die daily." Consecration is not one act, but a continuous act. The crucifixion of to-day will not do for to-morrow.

Worldliness.—The ship is on the water, but woe to the ship which has the water within herself. We are in the world, but woe to us if the world be in us.

Lot chose for himself, and chose the place of ruin. Abraham let God choose for him, and God blessed him, and He Himself was his great reward. Let God choose for you.

Encouragement to Parents.—Don't take half a promise. Don't accept "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved," without claiming what follows, "and thy house."

Christian Unity.—Christians cannot be independent of one another. They are "builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit," —they are not separate loose stones.

More than Pleasure.—The world thinks that to be a Christian is to give up pleasure; but the Christian has more than pleasure, he has joy unspeakable. "I sat under his shadow with great delight."

Experience.—We should not endeavour to work up an experience. This would be like beginning to build a house at the chimney-pot; we must build up an experience from the foundation of a belief in our position in Christ.

Christian Life.—We speak of life from the cradle to the grave. Christian life is an inversion of this:—From the grave, buried with Christ in his death, to the cradle where, childlike, we rest for ever in his everlasting arms.

The Purpose of Life.—In John xvii. "in the world" occurs twice, "These are in the world," v. 11, and again "As Thou hast sent me into the world, so have I sent them into the world." We are sent for a purpose; do we fulfil it?

Lights, not Stumbling Blocks.—A blind man carried a lantern with him in the dark, "Why," said one, "do you carry a light, when you cannot see?" The blind man replied, "That others may not stumble against me in the dark."

Lighthouses serve a twofold purpose, to guide the ship into the harbour, and to warn the mariner to avoid the rock upon which they are placed. Christians should lead to heaven, and warn the unwary sinner lest he make shipwreck of his soul.

Not Alone.—The diver seems to be alone in the dark, cold, o'erwhelming flood. But above him are men pumping down air for his benefit, holding a tube for its conveyance, communicating with him by a rope. Our help is above. We are not forgotten or alone.

Safe though in the World.—Noah was on the water, but in the ark, and therefore safe. The ark is a type of Christ. We are in the world, but safe in it because also in Christ. As God shut Noah within the ark, so the Christian in the world is a Christ-enclosed man.

A Powerful Escort.—John xvii. 18, reads: "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." The sending of the Son by the Father is couched in language which implies that the sender remained behind the messenger. The sending of the disciples by Jesus is conveyed in terms which suggest that the sender accompanies the messenger as an escort, "Go, and lo, I am with you."

Why she found Him not.—"I sought Him whom my soul loveth. I sought Him but I found Him not" (S. S. iii. 1). Why did she not find Him? Perhaps because she obeyed not the command in chapter ii. 10, "Rise up, my love, my fair one, come away." Unless we "come away" we "find Him not." Or because she sought Him in the "broad ways." (v. 3.) There are "broad ways" in this present day in which we would seek in vain to find the beloved.

God's Jewels (Mal. iii. 17).—Jewels are the most precious of all things, much more precious than gold. One could not grasp more than fifty sovereigns in the hand, but could hold jewels to the value of a million of money or more. We talk of priceless jewels. God's jewels are indeed the only priceless jewels, bought with the precious blood of Christ. Jewels are materially imperishable. Christ's jewels "never perish." Jewels are dug out of the depths of the earth. Christ's jewels are taken out the "horrible pit and the miry clay." The great use of jewels is to shine. Christ's jewels should let "their light shine before men to the glory of their Father which is in heaven." Jewels are of varied hues. So Christ's jewels have heavenly kindness, earthly sympathy, fiery zeal, and holiness which contains within it every other grace. To be visible they must be brought into the light. If we would shine it can only be in the light of his presence.

LONDON ADULT SCHOOL UNION.

The fourth autumn meeting of the Council of Delegates of the London Schools was held on Saturday, October 8, at the Friends' Hall, Hart's-lane, Bethnal Green-road, E. The chair was occupied by Mr. T. Greenhill, of Hampstead Adult School. The following papers were read:—(1) "How to Obtain and Retain New Members," by Mr. George Montford, of Bunhill School. (2) "Some Helps and Hindrances to Bible Discussion in Our Schools," by Mr. Bone, of Wandsworth School. (3) "The Prize System," by Mr. John H. Date, of Stratford School. A discussion followed the reading of each paper, in which many delegates took part. Tea was provided for the delegates in a very efficient manner by the Friends of Bethnal-green School.

At the evening meeting, held in the same building Mr. J. B. Braithwaite, junior, occupied the chair. Among the speakers was Mr. Yoxall, of Birmingham (leader of a class of 1,000 young men), who dilated on the subject of Birmingham schools, his own in particular, showing what had been done by combined action in creating many agencies for the welfare of young men in Birmingham. Mr. F. J. Gillman, of the Southern District Council, in the course of a very brief and pointed speech, spoke of the necessity of fitting every man into his right place, and of finding work in the movement for all. Mr. T. Bremner, of the North-Western District, referred to his connection with the movement, and how he had been greatly interested in it, because it was not hampered with sects or dogmas. Miss Gertrude Beck, of Stoke Newington, spoke on behalf of Women's Adult Schools, and appealed to the mothers present to take care of their children, whose early training was almost entirely left in their hands, and to take care to use their best efforts to brighten up and make cheerful their own homes. They could do so if it consisted of one room or a large house. Mr. J. A. Baker spoke on behalf of the North-Eastern District, and urged all present to be manly and brave in their duty to the movement, and to the cause of Christ. Mr. Edwin Smith sang several solos during the evening.

Deaconesses in Mile End.

We hear with much regret that the work centring in the Deaconess House, Mile End-road, a branch of Dr. Barnardo's work, is passing through a crisis. For many years Dr. Barnardo has found increasing difficulty in raising funds to sustain this important part of his work. He feels compelled, unless special help is at this time sent in, to relinquish at the close of the year much, if not all, of this part of his operations.

Within the limits of a brief notice it would be impossible to sketch the work of the Deaconess House. During last year the workers paid 11,684 visits, conducted 1,500 meetings (aggregate attendance at same 47,210), supplied milk, meat, grocery, coal, and soup to 9,552 sick cases. Such is the bare statement of facts, but all that lies behind these figures—the cheerless homes, the pinching poverty, the sinful and degraded lives—is known only, perhaps, to those whose days are spent in seeking to carry into dark homes and darker hearts the sunshine of the love of Jesus.

MORE INTOLERANCE IN RUSSIA.—The Russian authorities intend to direct the Jewish Rabbis to curtail the services in the Synagogues, alleging that owing to the crowds frequenting these places of worship there is every likelihood of cholera infection. It is not, however, proposed to interfere with the tedious liturgical services in the Russian Churches, where the crowds are quite as dense and quite as dirty. The Jews are justly indignant.

AMERICAN NOTES.

The Methodist Episcopal Church of America has observed a "self-denial week" for missions.

Boston Y.W.C.A. is about to establish a department for the training of Christian workers.

Dr. Parkhurst, of New York, has returned from a European tour to his pulpit and his post of observation on civic misrule.

The new Bethesda Church in Chicago incorporates into its covenant a pledge of proportionate giving to the cause of Christ.

Professor H. P. Smith, of Lane Theological Seminary, is to be tried for heresy by the Cincinnati Presbytery this month.

October 23 is "Prisoners' Sunday"; in some of the United States, ministers are wont on that day to preach on prison reform.

Mr. John P. Quinn, a converted gambler and a natural orator, is doing much good by bearing testimony against the evils of the gambling hells.

From April to the end of August, 930 new Sabbath schools have been organised in remote parts of the United States by the Presbyterian S.S. Association.

Chicago Christians have organised a South End Gospel Association, which is to hold daily prayer meetings and gospel services during the coming exhibition.

Some estimate may be formed of the universal interest shown in the Chicago World's Fair by the fact that accommodation has to be made for 1500 Pressmen on Dedication Day.

The late poet Whittier bequeathed the residue of his estate, after private bequests, to a home for aged women, a hospital, and the institute for coloured and Indian pupils at Hampden, Pa.

The Brooklyn Training Institute for Christian Workers will be in session the closing three months of the year. Dr. N. West will give three lectures on "The Pentateuch and the Critics,"

Dr. L. W. Munhall has had a fruitful Gospel Mission at Flemington, N.Y., where have been many hopeful cases of conversion. Mr. C. Birch now accompanies Dr. Munhall as gospel singer.

A rescue mission home has been one outcome of the recent revival in San Francisco under Rev. B. Fay Mills. About 6,400 persons signed covenant cards during the six weeks' mission.

The venerable Dr. J. G. Paton recently passed through San Francisco en route for the Toronto Council of the Presbyterian Alliance. He was accompanied by Mrs. Paton and two daughters.

A remarkable mass meeting in New York, under the auspices of the American Sabbath Union, has warmly endorsed the action of the State in reference to the closing of the World's Fair on Sundays.

The "Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip" an association whose members are pledged to labour unremittingly for salvation of young men, lately held its fourth annual convention at Bethlehem, Pa.

Mr. G. R. Scott, of The Witness, New York, says that if the same energy were shown in prohibiting the drink evil as the authorities have shown in protecting their country against cholera, it would soon be stamped out.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Fulton-street, New York, daily prayer-meeting was recently held. Many testimonies were borne to the value of the gatherings. Mr. Lamphier, who originated the meeting, still has it in charge.

Rev. J. W. Chapman, D.D., pastor of Bethany Church, Philadelphia, has resigned his charge to become an evangelist. For a long time (writes Rev. B. Fay Mills) Dr. Chapman has felt an inclination towards the work of an evangelist, and in all his ministry has been exceedingly successful as an evangelistic pastor. In fact, it is probable that the church records of the country show no parallel to his success in this respect, as in two years there were added to the Bethany Church about 1,000 members under his ministry. He has been my associate in the conduct of meetings in Jersey City, N.J., Providence, R.I., Philadelphia, Pa., and in Cincinnati, Ohio. I could scarcely imagine a man better qualified as an evangelistic preacher, or who would be more acceptable to the church in what is to be from this time his chosen work. His address is 2,206, Trinity-place, Philadelphia, Pa., and I would advise all cities and churches that are thinking of engaging an evangelistic preacher to correspond with Dr. Chapman.

REIGATE Y.M.C.A.—In the annual report of this Association it is stated that one of the most important features of the year's work has been the evangelistic services on Sunday evening. The majority of the services have been conducted by Y.M.C.A. members, and the committee are thankful to record that the Lord has manifested his presence with them not only in strengthening believers, but in the conversion of souls. The Association consists of sixty-five members, forty-nine having been added during the year.

ANTI-OPIUM CONVENTION.

An all-day conference in connection with the anti-opium movement was held on Thursday in Devonshire House, Bishopsgate. The first hour of the morning meeting was devoted to prayer and humiliation.

Dr. J. L. Maxwell, in the course of a paper on China and the traffic, maintained that public attention should be concentrated on the main pillar of the opium iniquity, which he thus stated:—"The heart of the opium question as it affects the whole Eastern world lies in this, that for the sake of a revenue from the vice of China and other lands, the Government of India licences, encourages, and directs the huge cultivation among its own people of a dangerous drug. It is the enormous cultivation of the poppy for the sake of export to China, Malaysia, and Netherlands India that really constitutes the opium question. It is by this cultivation for China that the Government monopoly stands or falls."

Mr. Marcus Wood, of the China Inland Mission, who has travelled almost constantly for eight years in China, said that a stay-at-home Englishman does not know what opium is. A single day in Inland China, spent in investigation of the question, would bring any real Christian strongly on the side of righteousness in this matter.

Mr. B. Broomhall dwelt upon the evil example of the Government of India upon the people of India, in that they were doing evil to other nations to increase their revenue. But the evil did not stop there. He questioned whether a great deal of the gin trade with Africa might not be laid to this evil example, as African gin-traders would naturally point to the enormous Government opium traffic as an excuse for their own evil deeds.

Rev. George Piercy said that he knew cases where opium slaves had not only sold their wives and children, but even themselves, as slaves to buy opium.

M. Leon Cachet, a Dutch missionary from Java, said that the Chinese were the great propagators of the vice amongst the Javanese. Indian Government opium was the drug sold. It had been proposed that the Dutch Government should manage the shops, but it was felt too disgraceful that the arms of the King of Holland should be over such a disgraceful business. The Dutch Government, however, levied a heavy duty on the Indian drug imported, but M. Cachet assured the audience that they would gladly follow suit if the English Government would give up the traffic.

The afternoon meeting was, like the morning sitting, devoted to prayer for an hour. In opening the second part of the afternoon meeting the Chairman said there were two nations in England, one part loving God and striving to bring all things into accord with his laws, and the other section as yet untouched by Christianity.

Rev. W. L. Watkinson warmly expressed his sympathies with the anti-opium movement, not only as representing his own opinion, but that of his Church. 1,500 Wesleyan ministers and over a quarter of a million of Wesleyan members had memorialised the Government against the traffic. We must take care that we are not in the least degree blinded to the enormity of this traffic by the misleading statements that are now being made. Some defend the opium traffic by the statement that it is not universally destructive. One might make the same plea for cholera. Do we encourage cholera because 10 per cent. or so of the patients are not destroyed by it?

Deputy Surgeon-General Partridge, from the standpoint of his thirty years in the Indian Medical Service, reviewed and refuted the statements of the half-dozen Indian medical officers who supported the traffic.

Rev. F. A. Steven, who was stationed at Bhamo, in northern Upper Burmah, on the borders of China, at the time of the annexation, translated the proclamation issued by the English Government just after the annexation, to the effect that the Queen Empress would, in accordance with Burmese law and religion, never sanction the sale nor receive a revenue from the sale of opium in Upper Burmah. Mr. Steven went on to relate the manner in which the Kachins in Upper Burmah were being ruined by the drug as well as the Shans. Thirty years ago there was scarcely an opium smoker amongst their young men. Now things were as bad amongst them as amongst the Chinese.

A well-attended public meeting was held in the evening, the chair being taken by Mr. George Gillett.

Rev. J. Hudson Taylor said that the question to a simple, plain mind was so very transparent that one cannot understand there being two questions about it. In Shanghai, lately, the Tao Tai, the highest Chinese official, had sent a memorial to the English Municipality, asking them to suppress the opium dens licensed by the English, as it was ruining their young men. Such places were not allowed in the Chinese city. This appeal was simply laughed at and rejected. Mr. Taylor said that the statements of some of the pro-opiumists as to the harmlessness of opium were enough to make one's hair stand on end, when all medical men know the terrible effects of the drug when taken as a vice. When he first went to Swatow in 1856, opium smoking was comparatively rare, but when he was there lately, himself and his companion were kept awake at night by the screams of women who were being tortured to force them into a life abhorrent to them. They had been sold by their opium-smoking husbands for immoral purposes, and their keepers had closely to watch them to prevent their committing suicide. This sort of thing is going on to-night. Poor creatures are committing suicide to-night. All is done in the name of Christian England, and the Chinese call the English opium "Jesus" opium. All the efforts of the missionaries to save a few does not prevent the name of the Lord Jesus Christ being dragged in the mire.

Miss Geraldine Guinness dwelt upon the promise that "when He (the Spirit) is come He will reprove the world of sin." When we are filled with the power of the Holy Ghost, then the world will feel the iniquity of this and all other sin. Are our lives clean? God can only fill cleansed vessels. Let each worker ask, "Am I filled with the Holy Ghost?" Let us see to it first of all that our lives are energised with the Divine Spirit. Miss Guinness then made a thrilling appeal to the women present to help. It was the women who suffered most. She also gave a terrible account of the condition of the British Settlement of Shanghai.

Mr. Hira Singh Puri, of Lahore, moved a strong resolution calling for the immediate abolition of the traffic in opium for purposes of debauchery.

Rev. W. F. Armstrong, of Lower Burmah, in seconding the resolution, told of the havoc that opium was making amongst some of the Karen churches. They had begged him to use all means in his power to get the Goverment to stop the traffic.

Miss Mason's House of Rest.

The first of the monthly meetings for the autumn and winter session was inaugurated on Friday last by an address by Rev. F. B. Meyer, minister of Christ Church, Westminster Bridge-road. A month earlier the house was opened for visitors, and at the present time a large number of workers are enjoying its hospitality preparatory to undertaking labour in various parts of the great harvest field.

The aged workers' home, during the holiday season, has been making headway, and is now in process of being covered in. The first instalment for the building has already been paid, and another will soon be due, towards which £300 is needed to make up the required sum. Applications are coming in for the shelter of the new home. Mr. Meyer spoke on the conditions of spiritual power with the object of pointing out to Christians the way to get hold of God's power. He illustrated his address by the story of Jacob, pointing out the experiences through which he passed ere he become a "prince" and had "power with men."

In the evening Rev. C. G. Moore gave a very helpful address, confining his remarks specially to God's dealing with his obedient children illustrated by his guidance of the Israelites during the building of the temple by Jerubbabel. Between these two addresses came a prayer meeting, in which great spiritual blessings were invoked upon all who came into the house.

Medical Missions in London.

Dr. A. C. Hall, of the St. Pancras Medical Mission, has passed to Islington and begun his work there, in place of Dr. Soltau, who is leaving for India. Dr. Alfred Hogg, of Aberdeen, has entered on the superintendency of the St. Pancras Medical Mission, and Dr. Fred M. Graham, of Edinburgh, has begun similar duty at Canning Town. Dr. Horace Smith, of Edinburgh, has followed Dr. Pennell in the charge of Walworth Medical Mission, and Dr. Fells, of Edinburgh, has succeeded Dr. Neatby at Old Ford. Dr. T. C. Paterson, of the Cable-street Medical Mission, is about to proceed to China, but his successor is not yet appointed. Mr. Sidney R. Nicholls, of the London Hospital, will take Dr. Walton's place as resident surgeon at the Mildmay Mission Hospital, Bethnal Green.

SOUTHPORT.—The British and Foreign Bible Society's van was on the shore of Southport during this summer. Mr. Clements by his wonderful energy put the visitors in possession of the Word of God, and scattered the good seed all over the land. It was an interesting sight to see the crowds gather round the van listening to the words of praise of the good old Book, and then to watch them press eagerly forward with their shilling for a copy to take home. He sold on the shore 8,016 Bibles, 5,407 New Testaments, and 7,447 Gospels—P. A. Vann.

GARSCUBE MISSION, GLASGOW.

The usual autumn conference of workers was held in connection with the closing up of the tent work at St. George's Cross, Glasgow. Under the genial control of Mr. D. J. Findlay, this conclave of Christian friends is always an enjoyable and profitable time. This year the assemblage was greater than ever. The tent was much too small for the crowds. The chief speakers, besides the chairman, were Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, Mr. Fanstone, of Brazil, Mr. Carr, of Carlisle, Miss Gertrude Broomhall, Mr. Lethaby, of Kerak, and the evangelist, W. D. Dunn. Much attention was naturally directed to work in foreign fields. The mission element is always strong in this conference, and not a few have gone forth from it in past years to the regions beyond. This year there were those who felt drawn towards foreign work, and it is hoped some will in due time offer themselves.

The Gospel work in the tent during the past summer has been well sustained. Mr. Findlay gets the co-operation of tried helpers. This season he has had in turn Mr. and Mrs. Webster, Mr. Brown, of Chicago, and Mr. John Currie, from Brooklyn. The last-named brother is now having a mission in the East-end of Glasgow among the gutta-percha workers. Mr. Currie was in that line of work before he emigrated to America, and his desire to labour for the good of his old industrial chums had much to do with bringing him across the Atlantic at this time. He is a fully consecrated and zealous evangelist.

The regular mission work at Garscube Hall goes on as before. Mr. Findlay feels more than ever the want of elbow room in the mission premises, and is waiting on God for the opportunity of lengthening his stakes. The district is one of the worst and neediest in the city of Glasgow.

BE STILL.

Be still, O heart! Why fear and tremble?
What harm, what evil, can betide?
Though foes in mighty hosts assemble,
Fear not, for God is on thy side.

Be still, O heart! The Lord of Glory
Was once a man acquaint with grief
He bends to hear—tell all thy story—
He loves, He cares, He'll send relief.

Be still, O heart! Cease fearing, fretting
About the future, all unknown.
Ne'er think the Master is forgetting
About his own—his purchased one.

Be still, O heart! Thy King will send thee
The clouds or sunshine as is best;
His own right hand shall e'er defend thee.
Then trust his love, and know his rest.

Jean H. Watson.

Soul Winning and Prayer Union.

The thirteenth year of this union has now commenced. The membership at present is upwards of 6,000. Many missionaries, ministers, and evangelists are members of it in different parts of the world. The monthly magazine, "The Soulwinner," contains requests for prayer and thanksgiving, missionary news, and texts for daily Bible reading and meditation, which are sent in by the members. Articles on soul-winning, prayer, and love and fidelity to Jesus and his Holy Inspired Word are given as protests against the scepticism, infidelity, and unscriptural views and practices of the present day.

The report says:—"The great need of our time seems to be a baptism of the Holy Ghost. This will come to individuals and districts in answer to earnest believing prayer, when faith and means are used for the blessing. God is waiting to be gracious, and will pour down his Spirit upon us. In answer to prayer and faith, the Lord graciously supplies the needs of the union. He has also sent in means to provide for the maintenance of several native Bible-women, Scripture-readers, and native evangelists in heathen lands, who are engaged in winning souls to Christ."

A promise for each month is given to be pleaded at the Throne of Grace. Many heavenly blessings and answers to prayer have been granted to members. They are invited to pray in their own retirement, on the 10th of each month, for a fresh enduement of power from on high, to bring souls to Christ for the glory of God. Besides this private prayer, about one hundred and fifty meetings are arranged as to be held in different places over the world each month to pray for this much-needed power from on high, and God hears prayer.

J. C. Smith.
Newport-on-Tay. Hon. Sec.

Personalia.

Mr. George Hatton's address is now Newport Lodge, Beulah-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Dr. James A. Spurgeon continues, we rejoice to hear, making steady and satisfactory progress towards recovery.

Mr. Eugene Stock has been unwell at Sydney. Latest intelligence speaks of him as progressing towards recovery.

Rev. Dr. Jenkins, the well-known Wesleyan minister, has for some days been very unwell. Sir Andrew Clark was called in, and forbade the patient to fulfill, any of his public engagements.

Mr. Henry Varley writes from on board the s.s. Ophir, off Colombo, telling of a rapid and pleasant passage so far, and asking special prayer for his contemplated visit to India during the coming winter.

Mr. B. Broomhall, the much-esteemed secretary of the China Inland Mission, is portrayed in this month's Footsteps of Truth. He has given two sons and two daughters to mission work in China.

Mr. J. Conacher, General Manager of the North British Railway, has for years been a hearty supporter of the Railway Mission. He presided at a public meeting in connection with it in Glasgow last Saturday.

Mrs. Tresidder has accepted the presidency of a Ladies' "Extension Committee" of the Sunday-school Union. A Ladies' Conference, in connection with the anniversary of the Union, will be held for the first time in May next.

Rev. George Shaw, Presbyterian pastor, Belfast, is to have a colleague and successor. Mr. Shaw, who is now grown quite venerable in the ministry, was a very active helper in Mr. Moody's recent mission. The young men's meetings were held in his church.

The Duchess of Teck has promised to open the first exhibition and sale held by the companions of the Young Helpers' League (founded by Dr. Barnardo last year, and now having a membership of 11,000 children) in St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, and has named December 28 as most suitable.

The late Dr. Kirton.—A biography of this well-known worker is in course of preparation, and will be issued at an early date. Friends who have letters, or who can furnish any anecdotes illustrating Dr. Kirton's life and work, will greatly oblige by sending to Mrs. Kirton, 17, Duckett-road, Haringay, N.

Rev. J. Guinness Rogers, owing to continued weakness, has had to cancel his engagement to deliver an address at Bradford this week, in connection with the Congregational Union Assembly. He hopes, however, to be able to fulfil an engagement next month in Manchester in connection with the Free Church Congress.

Miss Frances Willard.—Temperance workers will hear with regret that Lady Henry Somerset has had to cancel her engagements for the next six weeks. She left on Saturday for the United States. Her friend, Miss Willard, is so ill that the doctors have ordered her immediately to return home, and Lady Henry is accompanying her.

Miss Bowyer, who left London on May 27 and reached Jerusalem on June 19, has arrived at the ancient city of Kerak to assist in Mr. Lethaby's interesting mission in Moab. She was escorted from Jerusalem by Miss Arnold, and cordially welcomed by the natives, many of whom sent complimentary presents to the mission house.

Dr. Henry Soltau, who has left for Ootacamund, has gone with the cordial recognition of the directors of the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society. He is not an agent of the society, but it is hoped that he may be able, in addition to Medical Mission and other Christian work, to visit occasionally the tea and coffee planters of the district.

Mr. W. Rogers, of the London City Mission, after close upon forty years' service, the chief of which have been spent in East London, having been placed by the committee on their valued Disabled Fund, takes farewell of many old and tried friends and fellow-workers, from any of whom he would be pleased to hear at 4, Tyne-terrace, Ilford, Essex.

Mr. Robert Caldwell has resigned the secretaryship of the Missionary Bureau. It is requested that all communications should for the present be addressed to the honorary secretary, The Missionary Bureau, 1, Gresham-street, E.C. We are desired to state that the committee of the Bureau wish to disclaim all connection with the Zambesi Industrial Mission lately inaugurated from the same address.

Rev. J. H. Horsburgh writes from the province of Sz-chuan on June 27 of his safe arrival at his destination:—"God has been most gracious to us—for we have all of us been brought up the river in safety, and with a degree of comfort and freedom from trouble and anxiety which we could hardly have expected. No harm or accident has happened to any one of us, and the journey has done everybody good."

Mr. Krikor Behesnilian, of Tarsus, in Cilicia, who has completed a course of study at New College, was set apart to the ministry of the Gospel at a meeting held in Whitefield's Tabernacle on Tuesday last week. In the course of a brief charge, Dr. Kennedy spoke sympathetically of the work upon which Mr. Behesnilian is entering, and advised him to take as his instructions the letters of Paul to Titus and Timothy. Scripture was read by Professor W. F. Adeney, the ordination prayer being offered by Professor J. Radford Thomson.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. Rowland Sturt has recently concluded a fortnight's mission at Swathling, Hants.

Woodfalls, Reading.—Mrs. Tanser Dawson has just held special services here with tokens of considerable interest.

Mr. Samuel Mackenzie has been experiencing much of God's blessing in connection with a Gospel mission at Dykehead, Shotts, N.B.

Haswell.—Miss Wilson, of Carlisle, is conducting an evangelistic mission at Haswell. Miss Wilson's last visit proved very beneficial, many persons professing conversion.

Bodmin.—The members of the newly-formed Y.M.C.A. at Bodmin have commenced a series of Sunday evening evangelistic services for men after the close of the various places of worship.

Boston.—A convention for the promotion of practical holiness, organised mainly by workers in connection with the Boston Open-air Mission, has been held in Shodfriars Hall, under the presidency of Mr. Wilson, president of the Keswick Convention.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith are now holding an evangelistic campaign in Liverpool intended to last till the end of the year. The missions are to include Kensington Baptist Chapel, Norwood Congregational, Richmond Baptist, Stanley Congregational, Prince's-gate Baptist, and Great George-street Congregational. Prayer is desired for much blessing.

Rev. Z. B. Woffendale, of Somers Town Presbyterian Church, Ossulston-street, N.W., has been conducting a most successful mission at the King's Cross Theatre, King's Cross. As a result the minister and session had the pleasure of receiving on Sunday, October 9, the large number of fifty-nine new members into the fellowship of the Somers Town Church.

Hawick, N.B.—Mr. Henry Thorne has conducted special services here for two weeks, with considerable interest and acceptance. The town has been well worked by all kinds of agencies, and is not at present easily moved. But Mr. Thorne's vigorous address, and his whole bearing in conducting the mission, commanded devout attention, and besides recently in cases of known blessing, have left deep and healthful impressions behind, which may yet bear fruit.

Banbridge, co. Down.—A successful mission has just been held in this town by Mr. T. M. Carleton, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, and Mr. G. Jackson Shea, of Guildford, in a large tent. The tent, which seated about 600, was full every night, and on Sundays overflow meetings were held in neighbouring churches. All through the power and presence of God was felt, and many have professed conversion. The work is still going on, and prayer is asked for those engaged in it.

Bath Y.M.C.A.—We have been greatly cheered by a short visit from our valued friend, Mr. W. R. Lane. He was only able to be with us one week. He commenced on Sunday and continued daily with afternoon Bible readings and Gospel meetings in the evening until Friday, when he concluded with incidents from his past life, which told with great power on the many young men whom we were glad to see present. We feel very thankful for this visit at the commencement of our winter's work. Many stood up at the after meetings to testify their desire to accept Christ as their Saviour, and we feel sure that many weak ones have received a divine impulse which will be memorable in their future history.—G. E. Thomas.

Rev. Thomas Cook.—A correspondent writes from Grahamstown, South Africa:—"God has wonderfully blessed the connexional evangelist in all his missions in South Africa. At Grahamstown, night after night, the Word was with great power, and it seemed well-nigh impossible to resist the earnest pleadings of the evangelist. First the young people were gathered in, then the elders, fathers and mothers, and old men of sixty and seventy years. Sometimes a whole family, father and mother and children, were found together in the inquiry-room. The requests for prayer were few at first, but became very numerous towards the close of the mission. Mr. Cook's success in conducting services among the natives has been even greater than among the Europeans; but he has only held one full mission among the natives. Many of us cherish a hope that he may return at no distant date and devote his labours mainly to evangelising the vast native populations of these lands."

Obituary.

REV. EDWARD BICKERSTETH, D.D.

Many will have heard with deep regret of the sudden death on Saturday of Very Rev. E. Bickersteth, D,D., brother of the late Bishop of Ripon, and cousin of the present Bishop of Exeter. Only a few days ago he resigned the deanery of Lichfield, and retired to Leamington. Dr. Bickersteth was born in 1814, and was educated at Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, taking his degree with honours in mathematics in 1836. He spent some time at the University of Durham, where he gained a prize for a theological essay, and was ordained in 1837 to the curacy of Chetton, in the diocese of Hereford. Subsequently removing to Shrewsbury, he was presented in 1849 to the incumbency of Penn Street, Bucks, and in 1853 became vicar of Aylesbury and archdeacon of Buckingham. He was select preacher at Cambridge in 1861, 1864, 1873, and 1878, and at Oxford in 1875. He took an active share in the work of the New Testament Revision Company, and from 1864 to 1880 presided as Prolocutor over the Lower House of the Convocation of Canterbury. It was in the latter capacity that he was best known to the clergy and to the general public. He had remarkable gifts as the chairman of a deliberative body, and his tact and conciliatory disposition made deep impression upon the proceedings of Convocation at a time when ecclesiastical party spirit ran very high.

THE SHOREDITCH TABERNACLE.

Mr. Cuff this week celebrates the twentieth anniversary of Christian service in one of the most crowded parts of East London. The Tabernacle is one of the best examples to be found of a working mission church; for, in addition to all that is carried on at headquarters, there are several stations with their schools and congregations; and in connection with the mission work no less than 300 members of the church are engaged as Christian workers. The Tabernacle itself stands at the junction of Shoreditch and Bethnal Green, two of the largest and most overcrowded parishes in the whole area of London. Here are found many thousands of the working classes and of the poorest of the people.

Having laboured among them for so long a period, Mr. Cuff and his helpers rejoice in having a strong hold upon them. Some thousands have been converted, and have had their whole lives changed; while large numbers of the very poor have been fed, clothed, and assisted in a variety of ways. Hitherto, the comprehensive evangelistic work, which is never allowed to flag, has been somewhat hampered by a heavy debt; indeed, this has been the one hindrance to both pastor and people, and a strenuous endeavour is now being made to get this removed. The evangelistic work itself could not possibly be carried on without outside help; and hence friends who have assisted the pastor in one direction are now helping him in this matter also. Many generous offers have been made conditionally on the whole sum being raised. A few days before his death the late C. H. Spurgeon sent £50 to the fund.

The anniversary services commenced on Wednesday, October 4, when Dr. Maclaren preached to a large congregation; they were continued on Sunday, when Mr. Cuff preached morning and evening, and on Monday there was a great public meeting, at which Mr. C. Ackland presided. Mr. Cuff made a statement showing that the last difficulty to be removed was the debt. Years ago they owed £8000, but that being reduced to £3000, they were within sight of the end. Besides the Tabernacle itself, they had put up and paid for a school and classrooms, to seat 1500 persons, which was a credit to any congregation. They had been helped as they had been, because they had so well helped themselves.

The Chairman pointed out that in this, an age of education, it is necessary for the influence of the Christian Church to be felt, so that when great national questions have to be dealt with, it might be in a spirit of honesty and justice. Rev. J. T. Wigner, after fifty-three years in the pastorate, thanked God for such a ministry as that of Mr. Cuff. They could not tabulate the effects of a successful pastorate; they could not tell where the influence would end. Mr. Wigner pictured the old times, and when contrasting them with the present, could not see that the former days were better than these. Rev. H. E. Stone, of St. John's Wood, spoke of Mr. Cuff's ministry as a phenomenon; it was twenty years' service in one of the most difficult spheres of London. They had a pastor who believed in the Bible, and thus he had built up the church

The Book World.

Talks about Holiness, by Rev. W. E. Sellers, is now in its third edition. It is a handy compend of clear teaching. (6d. Partridge.)

Stumbling-blocks Removed: or, the way of the Prophetic Student made Plain. By E. McHardie, (1s. Partridge.) Objections against the study of prophecy are admirably met, and many portions of Scripture opened up in simple language.

The Bible: is it a Revelation from God? and is it Inspired of God? is a valuable essay by J. N. Darby, edited in a small volume by Alfred H. Burton. Forcible in argument, it is emphatically a book for the present time. (Elliot Stock.)

Morning Thoughts for our Daughters is a little volume of counsels and reflections by Mrs. G. S. Reaney, who says in the preface that in preparing it she had very much at heart her own longings and experience as a girl. (John Haddon & Co.)

A Guide to English Composition, with progressive exercises, by Rev. J. H. Bacon, rector of Great Gonerby. (1s. Pitman & Sons.) The arrangement of this manual is very good. The contents will prove of real service to young people desirous of learning how to write correctly.

After Hours; or the Religion of our Leisure Time. By Rev. J. Reid Howatt. (1s. Nisbet.) Here are wholesome counsels on spare time, self-education, conversation, reading, and other important sides of life. An appendix contains instructions how to form a library for twenty shillings. We commend the book to the special notice of young people.

The Practical Treatment of Cholera. By G. Sherman Bigg, A.M.S. (1s. The Record Press, 376, Strand.) A very readable little book, conveying information of undoubted value, by a medical practitioner who has faced the cholera scourge in India, and, while watching skilled native treatment, has applied the measures of Western medical science.

Satan: The Prince of the Power of the Air. A sermon. (John Kensit, 18, Paternoster-row.) A brief but Scriptural and practical exposition of a much-neglected subject. The remarkable incident which led to the preparation of the sermon adds considerably to its interest and value. The author emphasises the personality of the great adversary, and warns against his many subtle devices.

A Treasure-house of Fables, instructive and entertaining. Collected and edited by G. Moir Bussey. (4s. 6d. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton & Co.) In this goodly volume, amply illustrated, we have fables by Æsop, La Fontaine, Dodsley, Florian, Lessing, Goldsmith, and a dozen other writers. About six hundred in number, the selections include old acquaintances in fabular literature, and pieces less well known, both in prose and verse.

The Art of Feeding the Invalid. By a Medical Practitioner and a Lady Professor of Cookery. (3s. 6d. Scientific Press, 140, Strand.) This volume gives valuable information on the nature of certain prevalent diseases, with recipes for the preparation of food for such as are ill and weak. It should be within the reach of matrons of institutions and nurses. Heads of households will find its pages of great service in times when sickness invades the home.

Christus Magister: Some teachings from the Sermon on the Mount. By Alfred Pearson, M.A. (5s. Nisbet.) Here are twenty thoughtful, fresh, and vigorous discourses by one who does not seem to be an extreme type of Churchman, although he frequently reminds one that he is a Churchman. The pages are eminently practical, and the bearing of our Lord's teaching upon present-day relations is continually pointed out, although with very humiliating consequences.

High Church; or, Audi Alteram Partem. This little book, by Rev. Hely H. A. Smith, has reached its tenth edition. Showing himself loyal to the formularies of the Reformed Church of England, the author claims that he is in the true sense of the term a "High Churchman." He exposes the treachery of Romanisers, and on the various controverted positions maintains the Protestant and Evangelical attitude with singular force. Canon Tristram introduces the book in words of hearty sympathy. (1s. 6d. Remrose & Sons.)

Silent Times. by Dr. J. R. Miller (3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton), is emphatically a book for these busy, bustling days. Like a well-instructed scribe, the author puts his finger on many a weak spot in the average Christian life, and points out the remedy. The varied aspects of spiritual experience, and the workings of the inner life are unfolded in a most practical and helpful way. There are also wise counsels as to profitable methods of Bible study. The earnest Christian who desires to grow daily in grace and in fitness for service will find in these pages much stimulus and direction.

Messrs. Pitman & Sons have inaugurated the season of winter study by the issue of some interesting phonographic books. A prettily got up Shorthand Birthday Book (2s. 6d.) with poetic selections printed in the mystic symbols will be a welcome addition to the library of many a young stenographer. There are three additions to the National Phonographic Library—"Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice," and "Selections from American Authors" (1s. each), all written in the beautiful and facile phonography of Mr. Butterworth, of South Shields. Pitman's Shorthand Primer, prepared expressly to meet the requirements of the New Code, is in three books (6d. each), which present the elements of the system in graduated lessons.

Entire Sanctification. By Rev. W. Jones, M.D., D.D., LL.D. (Charles H. Kelly.) This is an attempt to teach holiness in the extremest possible view. It is a thoughtful, interesting book, and calculated to be helpful to a certain class of minds, but is marred by such statements as the following:—"If anyone is dreaming of entering a holy heaven to dwell with the holy angels in the presence of a holy God, with inbred sin in his heart, even though it be held in a state of 'repression' by the Holy Ghost, his dream will prove a delusion and a snare."—Page 144. Since the author admits that such persons are regenerated, it would be interesting to know to what place he would assign them. Assuming that there is no alternative between "a holy heaven" and an unholy hell, are regenerate persons, in whom the Holy Ghost represses inbred sin, to have their portion with the unregenerate? We would not teach, nor encourage others to teach, any standard of holiness less than that of the New Testament, but statements such as this are consistent neither with the author's own argument nor with Scripture.

Two charming books for the younger folk are before us. Twilight and Dawn, by Caroline Pridham (2s. 6d. Partridge & Co.), has for its secondary title "Simple Talks on the Six Days of Creation." It is not an easy task to bring down to the level of a child's understanding those great mountain peaks of divine history that are set forth in the opening verses of Genesis. Some of Miss Pridham's general statements might be objected to by the matter-of-fact critic, but in these chapters she has gathered together an amazing amount of valuable and varied information, all of which grows naturally out of the particular topic under consideration. For thoughtful, studious children this would be an excellent reward book. The other book, The Angel of Love, by L. J. Meade (3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton), is more suited for those in the nursery just beginning to read or to listen. It relates in a fascinating way some experiences of three little sisters and a baby brother, and how "the angel of love" was discovered looking out of their eyes. Miss Meade has a perfect command of natural baby prattle, and her pretty allegorical teaching is served up in such an attractive dress that the small people will assuredly be in love with it. Every nurse should have a copy of this book to read to her young charges at suitable seasons. T. Pym's illustrations are beyond praise.

STORY BOOKS.

For older readers, we would mention Martin Redfern's Oath, by E. F. Heddle (1s. 6d. Partridge & Co.) which tells in thirteen winning and well-illustrated chapters how the course of true love ran anything but smoothly for a time, but the rash oath that dispossessed a daughter was annulled through the gentle agency of a grandchild.

The shortening days bring their customary tale of story books for the young. Some that come to us we can heartily recommend. Una Bruce's Troubles, by Alice Price (1s. Partridge & Co.) is the story of a governess who, like many others in her station, had sorrows to bear not of her own making, but she was not without compensation, and in the end all came out well. Tamsin Rosewarne and her Burdens, by Nellie Cornwall (1s. 6d. Partridge & Co.), is a bright Cornish tale, illustrating the mutual helpfulness of rich and poor, and showing how seeming calamity bears precious fruit. A Brighton Bairnie (2s. Religious Tract Society), is a delightful exposition in narrative form of the famous charity chapter, 1 Cor. xiii., from the well-guided pen of Margaret Haycraft.

Messrs. Cassell and Co. have published the first number of a new weekly paper entitled Cottage Gardening. It is a wonderful halfpenny-worth, illustrated, and sets forth, in clear and simple English, how gardening, bee-keeping, poultry-keeping, and other important cottage industries may be carried on in the most approved manner and to the greatest profit.

A NOTABLE EVENT.

An old Hussite Church in Bohemia was reopened for Protestant worship on Sept. 28, after having been in Romish hands for more than 250 years. For a long time past the little congregation forming in Laun under the auspices of the Evangelical Continental Society, have cherished the desire to secure this old church, built by their Protestant ancestors in the fifteenth century. At length the town council was approached, and the building—not used for many years—was ceded to them, and after the necessary repairs, it was, as we have said, opened at the end of last month in presence of the town authorities, of representatives of the Jewish community, and of a large number of Protestants from the surrounding districts, and not a few Roman Catholics.

The first sermon was preached by the superintendent (Bishop) of the district. Then the two pastors of the parish in which Laun is situated, delivered discourses, one inside and the other outside the building. A very favourable impression was produced, and it is hoped that a new impulse will thus have been given to the Protestant movement.

Rev. John McNeill.

On Friday night Mr. M'Neill brought a week's work at Largs to an end by addressing an audience that packed every available inch of the very commodious new United Presbyterian Church. To the services the townspeople of all sorts and conditions turned out night after night in hundreds, whilst a goodly number came from Inverkip, Wemyss Bay, Skelmorlie, Fairlie, Millport, and other neighbouring quarters to some of the meetings also. At the close of the service on Friday night, Rev. Dr. Watson, of the Free Church, went into the pulpit beside Mr. M'Neill, and thanked him in the name of the people and on his own behalf for his sojourn and efforts amongst them. The time and place, Dr. Watson remarked, were not for noisy demonstrations of gratitude or approval, but the people might kindly stand up for a moment or two in simple silence, and in that way express their thanks. This was done, and the sight of the great congregation standing thus in respectful silence had a strikingly impressive effect.

Mr. McNeill is holding meetings this week at Ayr.

British and Foreign Bible Society.

A conversazione on behalf of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held on Thursday at the Mansion House. A selection of old and rare Bibles from the society's library and specimens of Bibles and Testaments in upwards of 300 languages and dialects were on view. Presiding over a meeting, the Lord Mayor welcomed the society to the Mansion House. Lord Kinnaird referred with regret to the fact that within two or three years the society had got a deficit of £67,000. This was due to the fact that it was going ahead so fast. The annual subscriptions had not fallen off, but the legacies had, and he recommended people to give money at once instead of waiting to give it by will. He claimed that the British and Foreign Bible Society had been the pioneer of true education, progress, and civilisation throughout the world.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16.—DEUTERONOMY XXVII.

Our redemption is by an act of God's mighty grace and strength. We cannot add to it or detract from it, we must simply accept it. But our enjoyment of the land of blessedness is dependent on our obedience. The milk and honey of that land will only flow for those who not only write the laws out plainly, but who obey and do all the commandments and statutes of the Lord. There must be the altar and whole stones for burnt offering, setting forth our entire surrender, and there must be the feeding on the peace-offering for satisfaction and strength. What a marvellous moment that is in the history of the soul, when it first awakes to realise that it has become the Lord's, not only by the purchase of his blood, but of its own voluntary choice. There is at first the deep silence, and then the intense listening for the voice of the Lord, and then the diligent obedience. In every heart there are the mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, which echo back the blessings and curses of conscience. Conscience is the judgment seal of God, the great white throne in miniature. But there is no likelihood of the consecrated heart infringing any of the commands of God with which it is familiar, because it is armed with a jealous fear, and it is kept by the grace of the Holy Ghost. However it is well to bring our consciences to the test of God's truth, as a chronometer to be synchronised by Greenwich time, that we may not unknowingly be contravening our Father's will.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 17.—DEUTERONOMY XXVIII.

This chapter anticipates, in its earlier portion, the Beatitudes. To hearken, to observe, and to do, these are the conditions of the blessed life. Fruitfulness, security, victory, prosperity, an established life, plentifulness, the opened treasure of God, leadership among men, these are included in the promise of blessedness. Ah! my soul, is there not enough in this inventory of blessing to make thee willing to ignore the solicitations of the flesh and of sense? Gird thyself to obey that thou mayest know for thyself the possibilities that await thee. But what a reverse picture is that which is presented of the results of disobedience! Everything which may be an avenue of blessing will become then a source of suffering and anguish. Even though the disasters predicted here may not come to us in precisely this form, yet they will come in dread spiritual guise. There is a consumption, a fever, and a mildew of the soul. There are plagues that vex the inner life. There is a banishment and a scattering, which are the exile of the soul from the land of rest and peace. We cannot but marvel at the accuracy with which the spirit of inspiration depicted the invasion of Rome and the disasters that befell Jerusalem in her fall. The condition of the Jewish people to-day is an exact fulfilment of these words.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 18.—DEUTERONOMY XXIX.

We may see the Lord's doings with our eyes, and yet we may not be able to see them with an inner perception until the Lord gives us a heart to know, and eyes to see, and ears to hear. When God leads He finds shoe leather. We only get to know his watchful, loving care when we have travelled with Him; then we come to know Him, whom at first we only believed. It is the obedient soul which incorporates the Word of God into memory and life that prospers in all to which it puts the hand. Our religious life should include in its influence the stranger and sojourner, the hewer of wood and drawer of water, and him that stands with us. What a striking unveiling is given of the boast of many ungodly men. We shall have peace though we walk in the stubbornness of our hearts. Alas! they soon discover that there is no peace to the wicked, and that men reap precisely what they sow. But these are among the secret things. God does not give his reasons to every questioner. Rich and wicked men fade away in their ways. No one knows the precise reason why their schemes miscarry and only their stump is left, but the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. Oh, Spirit of God, reveal to us, we beseech Thee, the secret of the Lord, what eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, but which Thou revealest.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 19.—DEUTERONOMY XXX.

How precious are the suggestions with which this chapter opens. Even when we are suffering the curse our sins have caused, and have been driven forth as outcasts from the enjoyment of God's blessed presence, yet if we return and confess and do the first works, the Lord will turn again to us in blessing; our captivity shall be reversed, and we shall be gathered back to Him. Nor is this promise only good for a nation, it is equally so for individuals, "any of thine outcasts." Some readers of these lines may feel that they are deservedly outcast, yet there is a heaven of blue about them, let them lift up their hearts in confession to the untiring lover of souls, and from the very uttermost part to which they have been driven they shall be fetched back. He is able to save unto the uttermost all those who have gone astray as lost sheep. Nor is that all. God is willing to circumcise us, putting away the filthiness of flesh and spirit so that we may love Him. This is one of the chief requisites of love. Then, prompted by the love which He shall instil, we shall find it pleasant to keep his commands, and we shall become plenteous. What bliss can compare with that which is summed up in the words, "The Lord will rejoice over thee for good"? The Word of God, equally with his words, is very nigh. Let us choose life in choosing Him who asks our love, and let us cleave unto Him as the branch cleaves to its parent stem; yea, let us anew yield ourselves to obey his least admonition, so shall we dwell ever in the land of victory and rest and plenty.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20.—DEUTERONOMY XXXI.

Let timid souls take courage! When the Good Shepherd puts forth his own sheep, He ever goes before them, leaving them to follow. And though the land of promise be infested with foes, if He has promised it, it is for Him to drive them out. The soul that dares to go forward believing in him will find that the Esaus meet them disarmed, that the iron gates all stand open, and that the stones are rolled from the door of the sepulchre. "The Lord thy God, He will go over before thee. He will go before thee all this day." Joshua must take the place of Moses, because he represents the Lord Jesus, who will effect what the law must fail in. If we would only look at God, and not at circumstances, we should not be so fearful, and we should almost enjoy the excitement of the perils through which He leads us, because so sure that He has a resource for every emergency. How certainly God foresees our wanderings and sins. Nothing is hidden from him. How wonderful that He should still love us. His love to us is because of the covenant, because He sees us in Jesus, and anticipates what we may yet become. Ah! there is nothing in us that can surprise Him. He loved us knowing all, and He will love in spite of all. Moses had a clear prevision of coming apostasy, though he could not see the reign of a David, or the days of a Hezekiah. We all have stiff necks which find it so difficult to stoop to the yoke. We require very special grace that we may not resist the blessed spirit as young oxen unaccustomed to the plough, but may take the yoke of Jesus.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 21.—DEUTERONOMY XXXII.

This is probably the noblest ode in the compass of the Bible, and the quarry from which many of the Psalmists derived materials for their grandest outbursts. We can say the greatest things of God in whispers, like the distilling of the dew, and they will refresh souls as the small rain on the tender grass. As we review life, we shall be compelled to own that God's way has been perfect, but we shall be full of regret at the way in which we requited him. Our portion is in God, and God's in us. How graphic is the picture of his dealings with us, from the time when He found us in the waste howling wilderness of this world. We owe everything to his encompassing care (R.V.) and to his keeping grace. And though sometimes He has stirred up our nest, and driven us into the unwelcome air, yet we have learnt there powers of flight which have been a sacred possession for all after-days. How rich is the provision that God makes for his saints, and yet they forget Him and become unmindful of Him! Then in the very order of his love, He is compelled to act as though He were their enemy, until they return from their backslidings. This song is so full of references to the Rock; think, oh my soul, of the unchangeableness and steadfastness of thy God, and build on Him, as on a foundation that cannot fail. Let us set our hearts on this marvellous ode. It is no vain thing for us. It is our life. But he who composed it died on the further side of Jordan. The vehicle and channel of truth which, alas! he had on one disastrous occasion, failed to realise. We may sing like Moses did, in this his swansong, and yet miss the land of promise.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22.—DEUTERONOMY XXXIII.

How these jewels glisten! God's love to his people is the theme wrought out in many different forms, adapted to the several characteristics of the individuals whom Moses blessed. God's love, like water, takes up the shape of the vessel into which it is formed. For Reuben it is help against adversaries. For Levi it endows with sacred privilege. For Benjamin it is covering protection. For Joseph it is a dowry of precious things. For Zebulun it is joy in out-going. For Issachar joy in incoming. For Gad power in executing justice. For Dan royalty and strength. For Naphtali satisfaction and blessedness. For Asher a wealth of spiritual children. Such awaiting as shall make the service of God delightful, and such strength as shall make the labour of each day a luxury. Ah, souls of men, what bliss is ours when God rides on the heavens for our help, when the eternal God is our dwelling-place, and when the everlasting arms cradle us. Hide in Him, so shall you be in safety, and be feasted at a royal banqueting table of corn and wine. Language seems exhausted in the attempt to describe what God can be to those that trust Him. Now He is a dwelling-place, the home and refuge of the soul. Again, he is a sword and shield. And yet again He is a mother cradling her child. But, after all, the soul that loves, and is love, cannot find words to tell the whole story of what God is and can be. Its enemies become its footstool, and its pathway is from star to star into the heavenly places where Jesus sits.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 23.

PETER AT CÆSAREA.

Acts x. 30—48.

GOLDEN TEXT: VERSE 43.

In the connection between the last lesson and this there are many things worthy of note. Here are some:—Peter's prompt obedience to a command he did not fully understand (23); the respect which Cornelius paid, in his mistaken manner, to the message of God (25); his efforts to gather others to hear the word of God (27); and the refusal of anything like Divine honour by Peter (26), in striking contrast to those who have claimed to be his successors.

The first Gentile Congregation (30—33).—They were miraculously gathered. Two miracles were performed in order to bring these Gentile hearers under the sound of the Gospel. It is God's work, not only to give the word and to provide the messenger, but also to prepare the hearers. This is explained in the words of Cornelius (30—32). Their number is not known. But Cornelius was not willing to hear the message alone. We impoverish ourselves by sharing our earthly possessions with others; but the opposite is true in heavenly things. "Only while we share we keep that blessed thing from above."

Their attitude (33) was what we could desire in every class and congregation. They were there as earnest inquirers, reverent as before God, willing to hear God in his servant, and ready to obey his command. If such was the spirit of the hearers the teacher could make every lesson interesting.

The first sermon to the Gentiles (34—43), Peter's opening words (35), must not be misunderstood. They do not declare all religions to be equally right if sincerely observed, nor that morality may be divorced from faith, for the "righteousness" is declared to be connected with, and resulting from, the fear of God. "Not all religions but all nations are here placed upon the same level." The lesson which God was teaching Peter, and which Peter was learning with some surprise, was that God would not accept a Jew because he was a Jew, nor reject a Gentile because he was a Gentile, but that for Jew and Gentile alike the way of salvation was open (see xi. 18). The theme of Peter's sermon was Jesus Christ (36), the same glad tidings of peace which had been declared to Israel. Concerning Jesus he declares certain historical facts, including his anointing, and ministry of mercy (38), his death and resurrection (39, 40), the satisfactory evidence on which these facts rest (41), and the appointment of the apostles as competent witnesses (42). The Gospel does not rest upon fancies or assumptions, but upon a solid basis of historical fact. Peter declares also the significance of these facts. They make certain the future judgment (42). See John v. 20-24. And they secure remission of sins (43). This is the message all need, for all have sinned; and this, it was necessary should be preached (Luke xxiv. 46-48). This is our first need. To a guilty condemned man in his cell, awaiting the day of his execution, nothing is valuable except pardon. The sweetest music, the richest banquet, the costliest treasures are without attraction to him. A message declaring his pardon, and opening for him his prison doors, is what he needs. That is our condition; to us remission is declared; and it is ours not by purchase nor by effort, but by faith. "Whosoever believeth"—the words bring the blessing within reach of all.

The remarkable result (44—48).—It is not often that all the hearers are saved. Here, however, the "Holy Ghost fell upon all." If our hearers gathered in the same spirit would not the same result follow? The presence of the Holy Ghost was known by their speaking with tongues (46). This miracle was frequent in those days (ii. 4; 1 Cor. xiv.) It was not the evidence of the Spirit's presence which Paul valued most highly. The fruit of the Spirit in Gal. v. 22, 23, is of greater importance. Baptism, in this case, followed the gift of the Spirit. It is not the usual order, but was adopted in order to lead Peter to receive these Gentiles. Whom God had manifestly received, could he reject? Remission, baptism, and the gift of the Spirit are connected here (43—48) as in ii. 38. All three are for us. Have we personal acquaintance with all?

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

At a town's meeting, convened by the Mayor, held last week at Burnley, a resolution was passed asking the magistrates to refuse all the music licences to public-houses.

The United Kingdom Band of Hope Conference in Dublin attracted the presence of several distinguished medical men, who bore valuable testimony to the temperance cause and the baneful effects of drink.

The Liverpool Diocesan Church of England Temperance Society have appointed four additional police-court missionaries, who will prosecute their work respectively in Liverpool, Southport, St. Helens, and Warrington.

Every year hundreds of little children in Christian England alone are overlaid by their drunken mothers, most of them on Saturday night, when the worst work is done by the vile god of our national faithlessness.

At the Autumnal Council meeting, which is to be held at Shrewsbury on October 17 and 18, the Lord Bishop of London presiding, the proposals of the Lord Bishop of Chester as to licensing reform will be fully discussed, his Lordship himself attending to introduce the subject.

The opening of headquarters by the World's Christian Temperance Union at 47, Victoria-street, Westminster, has marked several new departures in temperance work. Not the least interesting is the issue by the Union of various publications, most of which have hitherto been inaccessible to the English temperance public. A dozen or so new pamphlets have just been issued, together with a number of leaflets, all bearing on women's work for temperance.

Wings (with which is incorporated The British Women's Temperance Journal) is among the new monthlies for October. It is a paper devoted to "Woman's Work in Temperance Reform," and is the official organ of the British Women's Temperance Association. The October number contains a portrait of Madame Antoinette Sterling, together with an interesting interview with the famous singer, who is a vice-president of the association.

The Bishop of London, himself a total abstainer of many years' standing, was the principal speaker at the first general meeting, held in St. Pancras Vestry Hall, of a ruridecanal Adult Temperance Union in connection with the Church of England Temperance Society. His lordship expressed the somewhat alarming opinion that the tide of intemperance is getting steadier, stronger, and swifter. The result, he considered, was mainly due to the conditions of the liquor traffic and to our social customs, according to which many Englishmen could not meet to transact business without drinking.

The Metropolitan magistrate who remarked the other day that women were fonder of intoxicating liquor than men, would seem (says a contemporary) to have been not so very wide of the mark. Day after day scores of cases in which women are proved to have been picked up intoxicated come before the Courts, and inquiries leave no room for doubt that the evil is increasing to an alarming extent. Some idea of the widespread nature of the evil is presented by the statement that no less than 8,373 women were arrested in the streets of London last year for being, in police parlance, "drunk and disorderly."

Speaking at Edinburgh last week, Mr. John Lockie advocated liquor prohibition, a policy which has been such a success in the State of Maine, U.S.A. Manufacture and sale must, he said, stand or fall together in the discussion of the drink question. It looked as if there were to be a betrayal of the principles for which they had been contending for so many years. There was no progress, because principle had been departed from, because Parliamentarians who had sought to advance the cause had not been actuated by the same earnest spirit as those men and women who had been labouring throughout the country to advance the settlement of this question.

At the annual conference of the National Temperance League at Lincoln last week, Mr. J. Louis Fenn, of London, in an address on "Temperance Work in Villages," said:—"Was it not a scandal to religion that while the public-houses were open every day, churches and chapels were only open for two or three hours a week? The village that is to be must have a room bright and warm, where men can meet without the temptation of drink." Speaking on temperance in relation to Local Government authorities, Alderman White, of Norwich, said that to justify School Boards in dealing with the subject of alcoholic drink as part of educational work, their duty was plain but not easy; because, while many Board teachers and parents were all agreed the drunkard might be denounced, the drink which brought him to that condition was practically left alone. They should permeate the child's mind with the knowledge that drink was bad and injurious.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Bishop of Beverley has opened a new mission church at Woodhouse Mill, in the parish of Handsworth, near Sheffield.

The Vestry of St. John's Episcopal Church, Perth, have appointed the Rev. Armstrong Hall, Isleworth, London, to be their minister.

It is reported that the late Mr. Spurrell, of Brighton, has left £50,000 to the Church Missionary Society and £20,000 to the Church Pastoral Aid Society.

Lord Herschell has appointed Rev. Mr. Gardiner, who spent seven years in Whitechapel, to the Rectory of St. George's, Southwark, as successor to the late Rev. Burman Cassin.

There was a large congregation on Sunday week, when the Temple Church was reopened after the usual vacation. The pulpit was occupied by Dr. Vaughan, Master of the Temple.

A quiet day by the clergy and laity in the rural deanery of Otley will be held on Friday, the 14th inst., at 8 a.m., at the Church of St. Mary, Burley-in-Wharfedale, under the direction of the Bishop of Ripon.

The Peterborough Diocesan Committee for the Rescue of Fallen Women have purchased a house and three acres of land at Ketton, near Stamford, for a Rescue Home, at a cost of £1,200, and other expenses raise the total to £2,000.

It has been found needful, for business purposes, to register the Church Army as a limited liability company. The company, of which the Earl of Meath is chairman, is declared to consist of 100 members, with an individual liability, in the event of winding-up, of £100 each.

Rev. G. S. Reaney, in a letter to The Church Times on "Parochial Sermons," confesses that, having seen what a power preaching has become amongst Nonconformists, he feels that "up to the present time the Church of England has not assured herself to the full of the great influence of the pulpit as a means of exhortation, teaching, and comfort." He adds that "the priesthood of the Church has splendidly advanced since he was a boy: but the preaching has not kept in line with the priestly revival!" This is not to be wondered at; for the preaching of the Gospel was the great means which God used to put down priestly pretension in the days of Latimer.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Dr. Joseph Parker has issued a private circular announcing his retirement, for a time at least, from the Congregational Union.

The London Congregational Union proposes to set apart Monday and Tuesday, November 7 and 8, as days of special prayer for London.

A short liturgical service, introduced some time ago at Tolmers-square Church (Rev. H. Elwyn Thomas), is to be permanently retained.

Upwards of 1,100 delegates intimated their intention of being present at the Congregational Union meetings, which commenced on Monday at Bradford.

The Leeds Auxiliary of the London Missionary Society has received a legacy of £2,500 from the executors of the late Mr. James Dodgshun, and also a legacy of £200 left by the late Miss Brooke, of Headingley.

Rev. J. C. Harrison, who will shortly enter on his eightieth year, took part in the annual congregational meeting of Park Chapel, Camden-town, where he concluded, in March, 1891, a ministry of forty-five years.

Some young men in connection with North Adelaide Church have formed themselves into a band for the purpose of assisting the pastor, Rev. F. Hastings, in his work. They conduct the week-evening service once a month.

An encouraging eight days' mission has been conducted by Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes, of Birmingham, at Hertford, in the church of which his brother, Rev. B. T. Hallowes, is pastor. The attendance was good, and several were led to decision.

Sir Henry James, M.P., last week, in opening a bazaar in the Athenæum Hall, Bury, in connection with the Bury New-road Congregational Church, having the object of raising close on £2,000 to clear off the debt on the church, said it was more than absurd to think that any difference in the form of faith should stop the recollection of that great brotherhood which must affect the Protestant community of this country.

Rev. Stanley Rogers, speaking at the missionary exhibition at Great George-street Chapel, Liverpool, a few days ago, said more serious trouble than had ever been known now threatens the Central African Missions. The society has contemplated selling the steamer on Lake Tanganyika. At this crisis the vessel would provide the only means of escape for the missionaries in case of trouble. They could put off into the middle of the lake, where none could reach them.

At the autumnal meeting of the Metropolitan Auxiliary Council of the London Missionary Society, Rev. A. N. Johnson, M.A., reported that during the last financial year the income had totalled £30,000, excluding legacies and dividends, more than the previous year, £18,000 larger than ever before. Since July, 1891, the directors had accepted thirty-nine men and thirty-two women. Of these eighteen men and nineteen women, thirty-seven in all, belonged to the "One Hundred" band of new workers.

Not only has the Lancashire Congregational Union lost its chairman by Rev. R. J. Ward entering the foreign missionary service; the Shropshire Union has also had a similar experience. In the meetings held last week at Newport, the chairman of the Union, Rev. E. W. Watson, B.A., of Wollerton, not only delivered his "inaugural" address from the chair, but subsequently took farewell of his brethren on his being designated for mission work in India. Mr. Watson is one of the fruits of the visit some years ago of Mr. D. L. Moody to Birmingham. He is a man of considerable ability, and is deservedly held in high esteem by his brethren.

BAPTIST.

Rev. W. B. Haynes (late of Stafford) commenced his ministry at Clarendon Chapel, Camberwell New-road, on Sunday last.

Services in connection with the fourth anniversary of the Bromley Baptist Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour, were held last week. Encouraging reports were presented by the officers of the society.

Mr. Marcus Wood, of the China Inland Mission, will conduct the services at Highbury-hill Chapel, on Sunday, October 16, at 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. Several other missionaries, shortly leaving for China, will take part in the evening service.

Rev. Dr. Maclaren preached on Wednesday evening last week to a large congregation at Shoreditch Tabernacle on the occasion of Pastor W. Cuff's twentieth anniversary. He took as his text two verses, the first in Acts viii. 39, "And the eunuch saw him no more, and he went on his way rejoicing"; and the second in Acts viii. 52, "And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost."

At the Carey Baptist Chapel, Moulton, Northampton (Pastor F. C. Watts), on Thursday, September 29, special services were held in celebration of the centenary of the Baptist Missionary Society. Rev. F. B. Meyer preached in the afternoon to a good congregation from Hebrews viii. 5. A public meeting was held in the evening, when the chair was taken by Mr. R. Brice, and a telling address was delivered by Mr. A. H. Baynes.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Sunday next, October 16, is "Children's Day," when collections will be taken for the "instruction of youth" scheme.

The week beginning November 24 has been set apart by the English Synod as a season of special prayer for Foreign Missions.

At the meeting last week of the Presbytery of London South, Mr. George Ede, missionary teacher at Formosa, was ordained as an elder of the church.

METHODIST.

It is arranged that a Primitive Methodist Memorial window shall be placed in the historic City-road Wesleyan Chapel. The subject will be "Peter Preaching on the Day of Pentecost."

Dr. Stephenson opened on Tuesday the new chapel at Elland, which takes the place of the old one in Eastgate. The cost has been over £6,000, of which about £3,000 has been subscribed. The seating capacity is 750, as against 350 in the old chapel. Rev. J. H. Hopkins was the evening preacher.

Rev. J. Travis, President of the Primitive Methodist Conference, has thrown himself into the jubilee missionary movement so heartily that its success may well be regarded as assured. He is trying to convince 50,000 Primitive Methodists that their duty is to give not less than 4s. a year each for five years to the Jubilee Fund.

Lady Henry Somerset recently erected in Chalton-street, about two minutes' walk from St. Pancras Church, a little mission-hall, which she has handed over to the West London Mission. There is also a house in which several Sisters of the People can reside, and in the front street a coffee bar. The hall, which was opened last week, is in a densely-crowded neighbourhood, and as it is conspicuously situate will doutless be the centre of much good work.

The London Council met at the Centenary Hall on Monday afternoon, the attendance being very large. Rev. Walford Green was appointed president for the year. The Council now consists of 328 ministerial and lay members. The report showed that various social and religious questions had been considered during the year, notably the relation of London artisans to public worship. Various matters affecting the licensing question will next receive attention.

SALVATION ARMY.

The statistical returns, dated October 1, the beginning of the twenty-eighth year of the Army's existence, gives the following figures:—Corps and outposts, 4,341; officers, 11,109; training garrisons 83; cadets in training, 1,001; homes of rest, 27; rescue homes, 45; slum posts, 71; prison gate homes, 15; food depots, 14; shelters, 29; factories, 12; labour bureaus, 20; *War Cry*s, 32, in seventeen languages, with a weekly circulation of 758,780; magazines, 6, with a monthly circulation of 174,220; little soldiers' corps, 1,452; farm colonies, one in England and one for Maories, in New Zealand.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The centenary celebration of the Association for Discountenancing Vice and Promoting the Knowledge and Practice of Christian Religion, was observed last Sunday in various churches in Dublin. This society has been a great help to the cause of education and circulation of the Scriptures in Ireland.

The Ladies' Industrial School, Frederick-street, Belfast, which aims at training the children of the very poorest in habits of thrift and cleanliness is extending its usefulness, and has now 140 children in attendance. The school has been forty-five years in existence, and has been the means of doing a great amount of good.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

Mr. William Robertson, teacher, Relugas, N.B., Session-clerk and elder in the parish church, and a very enthusiastic and successful Sunday-school teacher. Rev. Edward Cross, aged 73, for forty-five years Free Church minister at Monifieth. Mrs. Young, for more than half a century a consistent member of the Baptist Church at Lyndhurst. Mr. William Sugden, for many years a deacon of Leek Congregational Church, and widely known as an architect and a Christian worker. Mr. Henry Gadsby, for nine years a deacon of Newland Church, Lincoln, and twenty-five years superintendent of Newland Mission Sunday-school. At Dublin, Rev. Stirling Tomlinson, dean's vicar and resident preacher in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin.

MEDICAL MISSIONARIES IN CHINA have their share of trouble. Dr. Greig (happily restored and returning to Manchuria) found the opening of such an advanced post as Kirin a hazardous thing to the flesh, and Dr. Rigg in his pioneering work in the Fuh-kien province has just escaped a horrible death:—"I was closely followed and pressed upon, struck, and my clothes torn off me, my watch and chain were torn away, my hat went, and everything in my pockets taken, and I was thrown on the ground. When I was thrown down a second and a third time, I was dragged to a large filthy pit, and they tried to pitch me in. After being thrown down once or twice more, I got free and ran along the road away from these horrible pits."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR SOCIETY AT TOTTENHAM.—Our society at Brooke-street Chapel was formed in September, 1891, and commenced work with a membership of twenty-nine. We have now eighty-three active and associate. The society has been found to be means of much blessing to the place, and also to be a link between our Sunday-school and the church. We are hoping to form two new committees this quarter, namely Missionary and Button-Hole Committees. Our first annual meeting was held last Wednesday. Addresses were given by Mr. Anderson, of Birmingham, Mr. Alex Grant, M.A., from Singapore, and Mr. Marcus Wood, of the China Inland Mission.—A. H. Gates, Secretary.

THE NATIONAL REFUGES
FOR HOMELESS & DESTITUTE CHILDREN, AND "ARETHUSA" AND "CHICHESTER" TRAINING SHIPS.

London Home and Offices:

164, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C.,

To the Readers of "The Christian." October 8th, 1892.

"It is not the will of your Heavenly Father that one of these little ones should perish."

Dear Friends,

I shall be glad if you will allow me to say that I fear the work which has been accomplished by this Society for the last fifty years among Homeless and Destitute Children is apt to be overlooked and forgotten amidst the ever-increasing numbers of new societies. On reflection, I am confident you will feel that this should not be the case, but that the older Institutions have a legitimate and special claim upon the Christian public. I therefore trust the following brief particulars will elicit your practical sympathy and support:—

I. This Institution was founded by the late Mr. William Williams, who only passed away to his rest in January of this year, and who for half a century occupied the position of Secretary.

II. At this present moment these Homes and Ships contain nearly One Thousand Boys and Girls; who are being fed, clothed, and technically educated to become useful men and women.

III. Since their establishment in 1843, 10,425 Boys and 2,150 Girls have been admitted to the various Homes.

IV The work is essentially religious, but unsectarian, and a keen interest is taken in the children's spiritual welfare.

V. No votes are required, and there is no delay in the admission of destitute cases.

We are very much exercised just now for want of funds, as quite £10,000 will be needed to close the year free of debt, and our Banker's account is considerably overdrawn. Will you very kindly remember our needs at this time, and send us a Donation, in order that this work may be as vigorously sustained in the future as it has been in the past? Cheques or Postal Orders, crossed London and Westminster Bank, will thankfully be received by our Treasurer, W. E. Hubbard, Esq.; by Henry G. Copeland, Esq., Finance and Deputation Secretary; or by

Yours faithfully,

BEDFORD CONVENTION.

A convention was held October 3-5 in the Memorial Hall, St. Cuthbert's, Bedford. Rev. A. C. Downer gave the keynote of what followed in an address on "heavenly places in Christ" (Eph. i. 2). This means the position which God sees us now occupying as believers. Our faith must call up our feelings and practical life into the full realisation of this grand position; otherwise our Christian life will be shadowy and unreal. Hindrances to progress in the Divine life are ever to be found in ourselves. We must give diligence to find out these, and we must be willing to be set free for a life of testimony and service.

Mr. Price said that Christians who are not filled with the Holy Spirit were at the mercy of circumstances. At conversion we had the Holy Spirit as our life; but if we were to live the life God required us to live, and the life we longed to live, we must receive the Holy Spirit in a measure that would enable us to rise above our circumstances.

Rev. W. Haslam, quoting Acts xviii. 25-28, said, It is the Holy Ghost, "since we believed" for pardon, that is so important for us. What a change it wrought in the twelve men on whom Paul laid his hands! They believed, for this added power, and the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on the disciples at Pentecost, and immediately they "spake with tongues and prophesied," and doubtless went forth in all directions giving witness of Jesus with great power. It is useless to send people to the mission field unless they are filled with the Spirit in this fashion; it is useless to preach saving and sanctifying doctrines unless you have the Holy Ghost in power; it is not natural talent that is so needed, but the Holy Ghost to use all, or any powers we possess.

Col. Sladen remarked that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written to show the perfection of Christ. The Hebrew Christians knew their own imperfections by the law, which could make nothing perfect. God's purpose is to make us perfect in Christ Jesus. Sanctification is letting Christ by his Spirit fill us; then the Holy Ghost will glorify Jesus by taking of his and showing Him to us.

The Convention closed on Wednesday evening with a thanksgiving service in St. Cuthbert's Church, when Mr. Haslam preached from Ps. cvii. 8. Over a hundred remained for the Communion service.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1892.

* Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders not by stamps.

* Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank"; this will effectually prevent loss.

Extension of the Work of the Tower Hamlets Mission.

A MISSION HALL FOR CHILDREN.

Dear Friends,

As you are probably aware, we have the largest Mission Hall in the World, known as the Great Assembly Hall, in which a most successful work has been carried on every night for many years, but while we have had plenty of accommodation for adults, we have been sadly in want of more room for the children,

Within a few doors of our Great Hall stands a large chapel with a spacious courtyard in front. Recently the trustees arranged to sell the chapel, and move into the suburbs. We immediately decided that this would be the very place for our Children's Hall, but feared that the price would be beyond our means. However, when nothing came of the public sale, we ventured to make a bid for the property, and, after some negotiations, we were able to arrange for the purchase of the freehold of this noble building for the comparatively small sum of

When we say that this Hall (which was valued at £8,000) will hold about 1,500 children, besides the six Almshouses (in the Courtyard), which will be used as Class Rooms, it will be seen at once what a

WONDERFUL INVESTMENT

this will make for God's work among the little ones.

We give our readers a picture of the Hall (see Illustration front page), with the great tower of the old brewery looming in the distance (which I left twenty years ago to devote myself to this work). We propose to make it as bright and attractive as possible—something after the American plan. There will be plenty of flowers in the summer time, and a fountain playing in the courtyard, making it a centre of attraction for the young folk. It will be used exclusively for work amongst children, Gospel Services, Bands of Hope, Meetings, and Classes of all kinds for their benefit. We already have a Sunday School of over supposed to be the largest in the East End; but in this Hall we shall specially arrange to gather in the poor little waifs and strays who wander about the streets, and those who are too old for the Sunday School, and not old enough to go to Church or Chapel, and for whom we fear little provision is made.

To avoid offending the older boys and girls, we have called it the

and shall only admit the young, and those who shall give their time to labour amongst them, of whom we have a devoted band of young men and young women who have proved themselves capable of interesting and instructing children.

I am sure our readers will agree with me that this is a

MOST ATTRACTIVE SCHEME

for bringing those to Christ whom He Himself specially invited; but although the purchase money is so very small compared to the property to be acquired, still we do not want to run into debt, and we shall require another thousand pounds besides to adapt it to our purpose, so that altogether we have to appeal to our readers for £3,000.

Considering the great need of reaching the young, and too often the utter hopelessness of reaching the older people, I am sure we shall not appeal to our readers in vain to help us to raise the money.

Mr. John Cory, of Cardiff, with his usual generosity, has kindly given £100; Mr. John Cunliffe, £50; Mr. Richard Cory, £20; the Dowager Countess of Aberdeen, £2. Hoping that others will come forward with similar amounts, we earnestly appeal to our readers for special donations, which will be most thankfully received by

Yours most faithfully,

To the Editor of "THE CHRISTIAN."

Sir,—In a letter, influentially signed, which recently appeared in the public Press, the "remarkable diminution of crime and gradual closing of our prisons" was stated to be due in great measure to the rescue and care, by various agencies, of destitute and outcast children.

If this be a correct inference (and we do not doubt that it is), then the operations of the Forty-nine Institutions known as "Dr. Barnardo's Homes" may fairly claim to have had no inconsiderable share in the attainment of so excellent a result; for, although doubtless many other useful agencies have combined to produce this effect, it is probably also true that no set of institutions under one management has ever existed which, for width of scope, far-reaching ability to aid, diversity and thoroughness of industrial training, and general results, has equalled these for which we ask you to allow us to plead.

Since the year 1866, when in the humblest way the work of "Dr. Barnardo's Homes" began, the actual number of waif children rescued from the streets, from the common lodging-houses, the custody of persons of degraded, criminal or vicious life, or from the perils of orphanhood, has been 20,170. The greater part of these have been carefully trained in some one or other of fourteen industrial occupations taught by skilled tradesmen, while nearly all the girls are brought up as domestic servants. Each year our output of the manufactured article has been considerable, 1,200 boys and girls being on an average placed out annually to fill positions of respectable independence at home or abroad, of which a number, varying from 300 to 500, have regularly been emigrated each year to the Colonies.

The family under the charge of the institutions at present numbers 4,480. These are of all ages, of both sexes, from every denomination, and represent many nationalities. Not a few of them have come to us incurably diseased, cripples, deaf and dumb, or blind. Large numbers have been swept into our nets through regular systematic visitation by night of the worst parts of London and other great towns. Very many have been taken from the possession of beggars and tramps of the lowest order through the agency of our night refuges. Others have come to us as the result of direct applications made by magistrates, clergy, the police and private persons from all over the kingdom. It would be almost true to say that scarcely a city, town, or large village throughout the country but has at some time or other contributed its quota to the ever-increasing family in the Homes.

The domestic system employed in training is as diverse as the industrial, or as are the candidates for admission. There are large Industrial Homes upon the barrack system, conducted under principles of strict discipline, for older lads. There are smaller Homes of a very different type, under women's care, for younger boys. The girls are all brought up either in small family groups in separate cottages in our Village Home at Ilford, or are boarded out in healthy rural homes among the industrious and well-conducted peasantry. The Boarding-out System carried on by the Homes is in some respects unique. Already some 1,700 are placed out under the supervision of Local Committees, to which the clergyman of the parish, or the Nonconformist minister of the district, and some of the neighbouring ladies, belong. In addition, the boarding-out is supervised by two medical women, whose time is largely devoted to paying surprise visits to these children all over the country, and whose reports attest the excellence of this method for all children to whom it is applicable. By this means we are steadily sending back into the depopulated rural districts children whose parents have gravitated to the towns; and, moreover, the money we pay—on an average 5s. per week—for the maintenance of a child boarded out, aids the foster-parents, who are all of the decent, industrious, labouring class, and who would perhaps themselves be attracted to towns, to continue their country life. We will not dwell upon the great advantages which this system of boarding-out so thoroughly carried on by these Homes confers upon all alike. We will only add that the system is being developed more and more daily, and that, in the view of the Founder and Committee of the Homes, it will eventually supplant, for certain classes of waif or orphan children, all other methods of training.

The emigration enterprise carried on by these institutions is as satisfactory as has been the boarding-out. Up to Dec. 31, 1891, 5,009 boys and girls had been placed out, under a system of the most thorough inspection and control, in Australia, South Africa, and New Zealand, but principally in Canada.

As regards the Canadian part of it, the Charity Organisation Society, which last year sent out two gentlemen to report upon emigration to Canada, thus refer, at page 28 of their last report, to that which came under their observation:—

"Of Dr. Barnardo's arrangements and success in dealing with boys he (Mr. Gage Gardiner) speaks highly. He says:—

"'The records kept of the boys are almost as nearly perfection as I can imagine records to be. They contain a succinct account of each boy, with notes of all the communications held with him after his arrival in the colony. When the boys are old enough to earn money, careful stipulations are made with the employers. . . . Dr. Barnardo appears, as I have gathered by many inquiries, to have created a very good impression by his work, and his agent is conspicuous for vigilance and sagacity. . . .

"'Perhaps the most remarkable development of Dr. Barnardo's work at present is a farm of 8,000 acres in Manitoba, 200 miles N.W. of Winnipeg, with probably 500 acres under cultivation. Here there is accommodation for seventy-five boys between the ages of eighteen and twenty-two. They have almost all of them been sent out direct from this country, and a rougher and more unpromising set in appearance I never saw. But with three paid adults, they do all the work of the farm, where among other objects of interest are a large stock of cattle, a creamery, and twenty-five acres of productive kitchen garden. These lads are left on the farm for about twelve or eighteen months. Then they are drafted off as labourers to other farms, and the demand for them is much greater than the supply. , . . So long as the services of the present highly skilled and most efficient manager are retained, I am certain that this farm affords a very good opening for the rough and poor class of lads with whom in London it is often extremely difficult to deal.' In this view Captain Gretton concurs."

The weighty words of Lord Brassey, recently uttered at St. Leonards-on-Sea, confirm this view. The rescue of young people from the certainty of degraded lives, their careful training and education here, and the eventual emigration of those only who give proof of forming good citizens in the future, are the only panacea for some of our gravest social ills; and Lord Brassey considered that in doing this work our success has been phenomenal.

This year three fresh parties of young emigrants have left us, bringing the number for the year up to 601, and the total up to 5,610. A further party of 130 girls will, we hope, follow this week, bringing up our total number of emigrants for the year to 731, and the total from the beginning of our Emigration work to 5,739.

It goes without saying that to carry on this truly national work effectively, to maintain, educate, and thoroughly train so large a family, to place out the trained children under proper supervision at home and abroad, and to keep the doors of the Homes ever open for the admission of the right class, who are thus lifted for ever out of the slums of Darkest England, and given (before degraded habits are formed, and before character has been fixed in evil ways and utterly lost in the fierce struggle for existence) a start in life under conditions so hopeful for the future, a large sum is needed; and hitherto the confidence of the public in the real merits of the work has been evinced by the liberal gifts which have reached our hands, resulting in a steadily increasing yearly income.

But the present season is one of great and peculiar depression in things charitable. As a rule during the months of August, September, and October the difficulties of supplying the daily wants of so great an organisation are more keenly felt than at any other period of our year; but this is accentuated this year owing to a deficiency which occurred in May and June, and which has not yet been made up.

We venture to believe that if only the great mass of benevolent people, who have probably just been enjoying a necessary holiday, were but to know of the needs of our work, of which we have only sketched the outline of a very small part, immediate and generous support would be forthcoming. Gifts in response will be gratefully received and acknowledged by the Treasurer, Mr. William Fowler, 35, Cornhill, E.C.; by the Bankers, Messrs. Prescott, Dimsdale, Cave, Tugwell and Co., 62, Threadneedle-street, E.C., and London and South-Western Bank (Bow Branch); by the Founder and Director, Dr. Thos. J. Barnardo; or by your obedient servants,

KINNAIRD, President for 1892-93.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING

FEMALE EDUCATION IN THE EAST.

Treasurer:—Sir W. R. FARQUHAR, Bart.

This Society, established fifty-eight years ago, has lived to see its work, once considered Utopian, not only recognised as possible, but regarded as an indispensable part of Gospel Missions.

It is the oldest Society established in the Western Hemisphere for the spiritual benefit of women and girls in Asia and in Africa; the pioneer of all subsequent Zenana work among them, and the first to send out a Missionary teacher for Hindu and Mahommedan Zenanas, and for Turkish Harems.

Its object is to lead all under its influence to "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world"; and to enable every Eastern woman and girl to read the Holy Scriptures for herself, in her own tongue; and it will not give Education without the Bible.

The sphere of the Society's work embraces China, Japan, India, Persia, Africa, and the Levant, and it includes the Establishment of Orphanages, Boarding, Day, and Infant Schools, Bible and Sewing Classes, Mothers' Meetings, Zenana Visiting, and Medical Work.

This important work is now crippled by want of Funds. HELP is therefore URGENTLY NEEDED for its support and extension, and will be most gratefully received by the SECRETARY, Miss Webb, 267, Vauxhall Bridge-road, London, S.W.; or by the BANKERS, Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co., 16, St. James's-street, S.W.

COLDS.

The Rev. CANON FLEMING, B.D., writes from The Residence, York, September 7, 1892:—"Canon Fleming has pleasure in stating that he has used the Carbolic Smoke Ball with great success. Its use not only checked the progress of a heavy cold in its earlier stages, and removed it, but has prevented it from going down into the chest, and preserved his voice for his public duties."

CATARRH.

Rev. HENRY S LUNN, M.D., writes from 5, Endsleigh-gardens, London, N.W., November 16th, 1891:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

ASTHMA.

CHARLES MOORE, Esq., writes from Sunnysides, Birchington, Westgate-on-Sea, October 9, 1891:—"Your Carbolic Smoke Ball has afforded immense relief to my wife, who has suffered severely from Bronchial Asthma. When I bought the ball she was unusually bad, and it acted like magic."

BRONCHITIS.

Dr H G DARLING, M.D., Linden Cottage, Shepherd's Well, Kent, writes, 18th April, 1892:—"I had used the Carbolic Smoke Ball only a few times when it gave me immediate relief—although I am 83 years of age and have suffered more than one-third of that time from Bronchitis complicated with Asthma."

DEAFNESS.

J. HARGREAVES, Esq., of Manchester, writes, August 28, 1891:—"Since using the Carbolic Smoke Ball I can hear my watch tick three or four inches away, which I have not done for months."

The Originals of these Testimonials may be seen at our Consulting Rooms.

One CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL will last a family several months, making it the cheapest remedy in the world at the price—10/- post free.

The CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL can be refilled, when empty, at a cost of 5/- post free. Address:—

THE FORTY-FIRST SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

DISEASED LUNGS—A SEQUEL TO INFLUENZA.

Mr. L., of LLANDUDNO, North Wales, applied to me for advice and medicine in January of this year.

Writing me three months after commencing my treatment, he expressed a desire that his case should be published, but with his initials only in print, and without his address, for special reasons, which he names.

His first ailment arose three years ago from lying in a damp bed, which brought on a severe cold and cough, which continued until his health became seriously affected. An attack of influenza then thoroughly prostrated him.

The cough was now very harassing, with thick, yellow phlegm being expectorated, and spitting of blood. The least uphill movement accelerated the pulse to alarming speed. There was constant dyspnœa and aching in the chest and side—lost flesh of late, and weaker since the influenza. "I have a very dear one depending upon me" (he says), "and shall be thankful indeed if you can do me good."

In a month he wrote me:—"I have greatly benefited by your medicine and advice. My cough had nearly ceased, but an unfortunate exposure to damp brought it on, though not so bad as before. It is now improving again. Your prescription for liniment has relieved the pain and breathing. The heart is better—more regular in action. I have the fullest confidence in your treatment."

After this his letters showed a continued improvement. At the end of April, four months after commencement, he writes:—"I am delighted to tell you that I have fully recovered, and have not the slightest symptom of any complaint, and am as well as ever I was in my life. I have regained my flesh, and am strong now. Nothing else would have done for me what your treatment has. Publish my case, but kindly omit the name.—Yours, ever gratefully, ———."

Now Ready. Price, 2/6, Post free, 2/9.

FRENCH DRESSES.

JAQUES & JAQUES

THE FRENCH DRESS SPECIALISTS,

Respectfully notify to the Ladies of England that their Autumn Novelties are now ready, and amongst many others would call particular attention to the subjoined. All Double Width Fabrics

THE SHILLING SUITING, 1s. per yard. One of the smartest dresses ever offered at the price.

NEW AUTUMN SERGES. All fast dyes, Stabilis, 1s. per yard; Diagonal, 1s. 3d.; French Cheviot, 1s. 6½d.

FOUR FEET-FOUR SERGES. The name is derived from their magnificent width—52 inches. Fast dye, all wool, and lacking neither warmth nor weight; they are the realisation of a perfect Autumn dress. 2s. 9d. and 3s. 3d. per yard.

ENGLISH HOMESPUNS, in six lovely heather mixtures, 1s. 6½d. per yard. These are practically untearable, and are 60 inches wide.

THE COMPETITION REPP, 1s. 6½d. per yard. This dress is a clever copy of our French Silk Repps, at about half the cost.

FRENCH DIAGONAL TWEEDS, 1s. 11½d. per yard. Colouring mixtures. Quite uncommon. A great novelty.

BON MARCHE HABIT CLOTH, 1s. 3d. per yard. This is presented to our patrons as being the cheapest ever offered. It is all wool, has great strength, and is dyed with all the perfection of the highest priced French Habit Cloths.

FRENCH REPPS, 2s. 6d. per yard. The dyers of this cloth are Coget and Lotar, and each piece is stamped "Teinture Solide"—i.e., fast colour. They are made from fine wools, and their good body ensures their draping well.

THE FOUR-FEET-FOUR HABIT CLOTH, 2s. 6d. per yard. The name is derived from the magnificent width—52 inches. We met with it in Paris, and were charmed not only with the width, but with the splendid tone of colouring in which it is dyed. We pronounce the value unrivalled; we know not of its equal in England.

PARISIAN COSTUME COUTILLES, 3s. 3d. per yard. These charming costume Coutilles are very different from the ordinary make of Coutilles in being natural dyes, hence their beautiful soft touch and splendid draping. By virtue of our large purchase we are able to offer them on very advantageous terms.

DRAP PARAME, 3s. 9d. per yard. The style is in thorough accordance with the coming season's developments. The Repp groundwork gives the necessary weight for Autumn wear, and the silk imparts the rich effect.

RUSSIAN VELVOUR REPP, 4s. 6d per yard. We have here one of the most pronounced novelties of the season. The quality is splendid, the groundwork being pure wool, on which is thrown the silken cord repp, imparting a rich and luxurious effect.

LADIES WANTING A DRESS kindly write and see our Specialties for the Autumn Season. The Queen says our goods are characterised by the best French taste. We send all PATTERNS Post Free on Approval, and pay Carriage on every Order. Please mention the Christian when writing.

POOR CHILD

and the entire fault lies with the parents. The trouble is, however, nine-tenths of the parents do not know how and when to feed their little ones. We have a charming illustrated booklet, brimful of valuable information. We ask the privilege of sending it, post free, to the mother, of any child, that has never used DR. LANGEN'S SUGAR OF MILK, a pure and delicately refined preparation, which added to baby's food, keeps the well baby strong and makes the sick baby well. Send a post card to-day to BURROUGHS BROTHERS, 66 Basinghall Street, London, E.C.

WORKS BY REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.—TWO NEW VOLUMES.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A New Volume in the BIOGRAPHICAL Series.

Moses:
The Servant of God.

With Nine Original Illustrations.

"It will be our contention throughout our study of this remarkable life before us, that though Moses may have had commanding features of mind and body, and have been versed in all the learning of his time, yet the marvellous outcome of his life-work was not due to any of these qualities, but to the faith which knit his soul to God.

"We hope to go further and show that all the blessings which God bestowed upon Israel came to that people through the channel of Moses' faith. It is God's purpose to seek the co-operation of man in the execution of his purposes, and in this case it was Moses who was called into partnership with Jehovah, and it was through his faith that God fulfilled the promise made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob."

READY IN A FEW DAYS.

A New Volume in the DEVOTIONAL Series.

The Future Tenses of the Blessed Life.

"The eye gets strained with peering into the unknown. We cannot penetrate the vail which the Father hangs over coming days, as the light gauze of mist over the gaunt hills or the smiling pasture-lands.

"It is better not to know. The joy hidden in the years would unfit us for common tasks; whilst the dread, apart from the sight of his all-sufficient grace, that awaits to succour us would paralyse. It is his mercy that puts its hands over our eyes.

"But if by the constitution of our minds we must anticipate the future, then let us believe that it is radiant with his presence, filling each moment to its outermost rim. No day, whatever it takes, can deprive us of Him. Each day will utter to the next some speech of his love. All the days linked together and entwined with His present grace will make a golden chain of holy and blessed living."—PREFACE.

MRS. MEREDITH'S INSTITUTIONS,

CHIEF OFFICE, 143 CLAPHAM ROAD, S.W.

AR FRIENDS,

This season brings the usual prayerful consideration of the rk to which we are called, and the calculation of the means by ich it is to be done. As usual, the summer months leave us niless in autumn. This year the loss by death of large donors, depreciation in value of property which we have to sell, and the at extensions of our missionary and industrial work at home and oad for the sick and the sinning, have created a heavy deficit in our ounts.

The funds of all our branches of service are overdrawn, and se balances must be paid immediately.

Will you help us to do so, and thus manifest your love to our ster and your desire to carry on His work and enable us to tinue labours which are not in vain in the Lord? Trusting that Holy Spirit will dispose you to respond liberally to this appeal,

We remain, dear friends,
Your Servants in the Gospel,
SUSANNA MEREDITH,
CAROLINE G. CAVENDISH,
M. A. LLOYD,
ELIZABETH PENROSE,

BRISTOL, LONDON, and SYDNEY.

BE CAREFUL TO ASK FOR FRY'S PURE CONCENTRATED COC

Does what you eat distress you?

When a feeling of discomfort or uneasiness arises almost immediately after taking a meal, we recognise the fact that our food has disagreed with us. It will be found to sit heavily on the stomach. In a short time it will take the form of weight and oppression about the chest. Flatulency during and soon after the meal will be experienced, followed by a disinclination for exertion, a dull headache, fits of depression, and melancholy preoccupations.

This short description of Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, is the common experience of many thousands living around us. We wish to call the attention of all such sufferers to a simple and safe remedy, which it is our pleasure, as well as our business, to supply. We refer to the well-tried and reliable medicine called Guy's Tonic. This palatable preparation was discovered by a distinguished London Physician. It contains simple vegetable tinctures which gently stimulate the walls of the Stomach, regulating the Liver, and giving tone to the Nervous System. After a few doses all unpleasant symptoms will commence to disappear, and the patient will experience a real sense of personal comfort and increasing strength.

Our statement proved.

MR. F. LAKE, of High Street, Brixham, Devon, writes: "I feel it my duty to "send you word that I am very much better for taking your wonderful Tonic. "It is what I call life-giving, therefore I shall not forget to recommend it where-"ever I may go. I have been a long sufferer from Dyspepsia, but Guy's Tonic has "given me great relief, and while I am so well, should be much obliged if you "would send me along a copy of 'Guy's Guide to Digestion,' as I fancy it must be "a good thing to know how to avoid the dreadful burden. I have brothers now "undergoing a course of Guy's Tonic, and they are progressing favourably."

NOTE.—We are willing to send the book referred to by Mr. F. LAKE, gratis and post paid, to anyone in search of health. Write for it to-day, it will give you comfort and hope.

Guy's Tonic is sold by all Chemists at 2s. 9d. per bottle, or it will be forwarded at this price by the Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving a portrait and sketch of the late COL. G. R. CLARKE, of the Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago.

With our next issue will be given a copy of THE CHRISTIAN ALMANACK, containing, in addition to the usual daily texts and other information, a number of illustrations in the life of Joshua. In the same issue there will commence a series of articles, by Rev. F. B. Meyer, on the teaching of Joshua's life and work. The price of the paper (with Almanack will be TWOPENCE

Incidentally, in one of his addresses on the Bible last week, Mr. Moody remarked that he was always on the look-out for nuggets of thought on any Bible subject, and would be most grateful to all who would send him these from whatever source. He has a number of large-print interleaved Bibles into which he is constantly having these gems transferred. The Bibles are lent to the students at the Northfield Summer School, who will often sit up late into the night copying out the choice gifts and laying them by for future use in study or in Christian work. Any friends, therefore, who will furnish Mr. Moody with thoughts, suggestions, interpretations, or revelations, which have been given to themselves, or which they have received from others, will be doing good service to their own and also to the coming generation. Communications for Mr. Moody may be sent to our care.

Among those who cannot distribute tracts are some who are glad to supply them to distributors; and we rejoice that our columns have been largely used in bringing the two into communication. A lady who has for several years sent to applicants given in our list, informs us that she has uniformly sent her name and address with the tracts. She writes:

> Anonymous senders lose a great deal, for they never know the result of their interest. With some persons to whom I have sent tracts, I have kept up a correspondence for years, and heard of much fruit.

Our correspondent's method is not only encouraging to herself, but a good means of learning something of the extent to which God has owned and blessed tract distribution.

A correspondent, who feels with us that the maintenance of the Christian schools in Madrid is a very serious and important matter, suggests that a committee should be formed in England to supply this pressing need. Seeing, however, that the schools are in thorough working order, and only lack the supply of funds, a committee scarcely seems so necessary as a secretary, who should keep the Christians in Great Britain informed and interested concerning them. Indeed, both in London and in the provinces a few friends might be thus engaged in a most useful work; and a lady or gentleman might do it.

It has been thought that £600 a year is a large amount for 600 children, but it must be remembered that these schools are not in England but in Spain, not in proprietary but in rented buildings; and also that it is not a mere school work, but a most important evangelistic and missionary agency.

The proceedings of the Congregational Union at Bradford last week were marked by much living and present-day interest. Dr. Herber Evans' address from the chair on "A Living Church" was not only full of Welsh fire, but of practical suggestion. The passage of arms on the question of the churches and labour between Dr. Leach and Mr. Keir Hardie was unfortunate, and showed the need of cultivating a spirit of calm forbearance, even in Christian convocations. The manner in which social topics are coming to the front in all our ecclesiastical assemblies is a striking and hopeful sign of the times; provided that the movement is not watered down to mere humanitarianism.

The charge brought by a representative of the working classes, that the churches had cultivated the rich people and neglected the poor was very warmly contradicted by the thousand pastors and delegates present. Whatever the faults of past days, this is not true now, either of the Established Church of England or of the Free Churches. Special services have been arranged, pews thrown open, most of the objections to attending churches met, addresses and lectures delivered on topics of popular interest, and charitable operations organised. The cause of temperance, at the root of all social reformation, has been zealously promoted, and justice and philanthropy towards the working classes have been frequent themes of the pulpit.

The special work of the churches, as such, is not to provide amusements for the people, nor to advocate class claims, but to teach the great principles of the Gospel, which should be carried out by all Christians in their individual lives, and according to their several convictions and circumstances. The work done by the churches must not be estimated simply by church organisations, but also, and chiefly, by inspiring their members to carry out practically in business, politics, and social life, the Sermon on the Mount. The great advance in later years of consideration for the poor, of protection to children, of righteous legislation, of sanitary improvements, of disapproval of needless war, etc., etc., is mainly to be attributed to the influence of the churches, not so much by church organisation, as by the influence exhibited in the conduct of Christians.

The denominational element was tolerably prominent at the Bradford gatherings, though not offensively so. The treatment of Biblical criticism was on sound orthodox lines. One of the most interesting of the gatherings was a farewell to foreign missionaries, at which it was stated that the London Mission Society would be sending out forty new recruits to the mission field this year. Nothing will keep a denomination fast to its old moorings in this age of flux and unrest better than increasing obedience to the Saviour's last command.

On the authority of a trusted correspondent we noted in our last issue that at the recent Church Congress in Folkestone the Dean of Windsor "deprecated the leaving of young people to the care of amateur religionists on the sands." One of our readers having communicated with the Dean on the subject, has received the following reply, which we gladly publish:—

> Dear Sir,—I am obliged by your letter. I never made use of the silly and offensive expression "amateur religionists." So far from saying anything unkind of voluntary religious efforts for the benefit of the young at the seaside, I expressed my admiration of them, and urged the Church, as a Church, to imitate them. My paper was a written one, and the MS. is in the hands of the officials of the Church Congress, by whom it will be officially published in their Congress report. You will then be able to see my exact words.
> Perhaps the editor of THE CHRISTIAN would be kind enough to publish this letter, for I should be sorry that anyone should be wounded by words attributed to me, and which I never uttered.—Yours very truly,
> P. F. ELIOT, Dean of Windsor.

An artificial distinction is made between Christians and Christian workers. We do not speak of bees and working bees, but rather of bees and drones. If we see a bee at work on a flower, we think of it simply as a bee, but if we see a large, fat, clumsy fellow buzzing on the window, we call him a drone, and we know that he has been excommunicated, put out of fellowship, driven out of the hive.

No church that we are aware of has so drastic a discipline as prevails in a community of bees, yet the non-working Christian, the drone, is really out of fellowship, even though outwardly in fully recognised church membership. Of course, included among the workers are those whose service consists in suffering, perhaps the most acceptable of all forms of service. "They also serve who only stand and wait." And they who tarry by the stuff, justly share equally with those who go to the battle. But Reuben abiding in his sheepfolds, and Gilead beyond Jordan, and Dan in his ships, and Asher at his creeks, are all suggestive of those who on their farms, or mountaineering, or engaged in merchandise, or yachting, or any other form of business or pleasure, do not come to the battle. Zebulun and Naphtali were a people that jeopardised their lives unto the death in the high places of the field. But Meroz! Think of the doom of Meroz; and its cause.

In connection with the question of the reclamation of women who are victims to intemperate habits, there are hopeful words in the Report of the chief of a licensed Retreat for Inebriates, to the Government Inspector, which we gladly quote:—

> The reclamation of a female drunkard is often spoken of as beyond hope, and the Committee began their task with a keen sense of its difficulty. But they ventured to hope in the grace of God, and not wholly to despair of human nature. They have been surprised to discover, by practical experience, how erroneous is the popular view. They have ample proof that their hope was well grounded, and that the plan of the Retreat was well judged. The methods adopted are entire abstinence from strong drink, strict regularity of life, personal sympathy with the weak, constant and cheerful employment, and a religious influence always present, and often directly urged.

There is one point upon which there is entire unanimity among the committees of retreats. They agree in saying that the vexatious formalities that have to be undergone even by voluntary patients, are a serious deterrent to applications for admission.

A recent visitor to Ireland describes the control which the Romish priesthood exercise. Domestic servants are chiefly Romanists. It was noticed in several families that conversation was checked on the entrance of the waitress, and altogether stopped when the subject was religious. A recent pamphlet describing the conversion of a Romanist had been condemned by the priests. A copy mysteriously disappeared from the drawing-room; another was obtained; this also disappeared. No doubt was entertained as to the cause. The wife of the resident manager of a principal bank had spoken to her maid on religious subjects. The Bishop wrote to the directors threatening to withdraw "Catholic" deposits unless the manager was dismissed. The directors declined, saying they were responsible for the manager, but not for his wife. A farmer was ordered to dismiss two of his men for attending Mr. Moody's services. It is the prevailing conviction that all which is said and done in the household is known to the priest through the confessional. The servant has two masters, and the paramount authority is not that of the head of the house.

A correspondent who has become acquainted with the National Home Reading Union, for the promotion of various secular studies, writes to us:

I should much like to see courses of Bible study established. The lack of solid knowledge of Scripture is really surprising.

The need is, in truth, quite saddening; and any movement calculated to direct Christian attention and thought to the Word of God, whether by inciting to individual or combined study, has our hearty sympathy and support.

The recently-issued annual report of the Howard Association contains much valuable and suggestive matter. Amongst other things of interest to the social reformer and the philanthropist, attention is called to the too frequent forgetting or ignoring by magistrates of the First Offenders Act, which this society has done much to bring into prominence. More than half the persons, we are told, proceeded against summarily in England and Wales, are persons returned as "of previous good character," and a further larger proportion had nothing known to their discredit beyond the offence with which they were charged. The influence which the method of dealing with a first offence has upon the development of crime cannot be overrated. That the working of the Act has been satisfactory is abundantly proved by the fact that of 2530 persons dealt with under it in the course of three years only 169 have after their release been called upon to receive judgment.

Another important point upon which the report has some very just comments is the very great inequality in the sentences passed by judges and magistrates. The committee urges that a decided distinction ought to be drawn between petty thefts and brutal offences against women or children. Under the present system, which seems to reckon property as more sacred than the person, a man may be let off with what is, to him, no punishment at all. The committee suggest, that occasional conferences of magistrates might be beneficial. At any rate, public opinion is ripe for a change in this respect.

Among other weighty matters in this report the more frequent holding of assizes and sessions is advocated as a means of lessening the hardships of innocent persons awaiting trial. The more extended visitation of prisoners by benevolent persons is urged, and the separation of offenders is very earnestly insisted upon. In this last respect our prison managers may take a lesson from Holland, where confinement in separate cells has been found most effective in repressing crime and leading to reformation. In a letter to The Times of October 13, Mr. Tallack, the secretary of the Association, pleads the superiority of this method "both for reformatory and deterrent results."

One of Dr. Morley Punshon's most telling lectures was a record of passages of Scripture effectively used by secular writers. Tennyson's oft-quoted and beautiful couplet in "The Song of the Brook,"

> Men may come and men may go,
> But I go on for ever!

was anticipated, and possibly suggested, by the words of the Preacher, "One generation passeth away and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth for ever."

Tennyson's beautiful simile—

> As effortless as woodland nooks
> Send violets up and paint them blue, is a lovely picture of the quiet and sweet-savoured life of God's saintly hidden ones. It brings to remembrance the prophet's vision of the myrtle-trees in the valley—emblems of those who looked for redemption in Jerusalem, and to whom Anna brought the glad tidings that the Redeemer was in their midst.

The subject of another of Tennyson's exquisite similitudes—

> Music, which on the spirit softlier lies,
> Than tirèd eyelids upon tirèd eyes, must surely have been learned from David's harp by which Saul was refreshed; and from the minstrel whose music calmed the ruffled spirit of Elisha. (1 Sam. xvi.; 2 Kings iii.)

Shakespeare drank often if not deep of the wells of Scripture. The following is not so obviously obtained from thence as are some other references, but it throws an interesting side light upon an incident in the Gospel narrative:—

> Now is the winter of our discontent
> Made glorious summer by this sun of York.

Those who perceive the spirit within the letter will have seen a moral as well as a physical winter in the words of John (x. 19—23):—

> And many of them said, He hath a devil and is mad; why hear ye him? . . . And it was at Jerusalem the Feast of the Dedication, and it was winter. And Jesus walked in the Temple, in Solomon's porch.

It was outwardly the aniversary of Israel's golden age, when "the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord, and the glory of the Lord filled the house of God." But inwardly and morally it was winter. The hearts of the priests and leaders of the people were frozen hard in disobedient unbelief. And He who was the living Temple, in whom dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, walked unrecognised and rejected in Solomon's porch, before the Temple whose later glory was greater than the former, because He was there. "The priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth," but these priests knew not that "the winter of their discontent" could be "made glorious summer" only by this Sun of Righteousness which they were trying to extinguish; this Son of God whom they were about to crucify.

STAFFORD ROOMS Y.M.C.A.—A reception of members and friends was recently held, Dr. Gladstone presiding. Brief addresses were given by Revs. H. L. C. de Candole and G. D. Macgregor. The attendance was very encouraging, and should stimulate the workers to renewed efforts to reach the young men of the neighbourhood. The new secretary, Mr. Basil Hewer, was introduced, and made an earnest appeal for united, whole-hearted support.

Mr. Moody and London.

Before Mr. Moody left London on Monday to enter on a week's work in Boston and Norwich, he was entertained at luncheon in the Holborn Restaurant by Mr. T. A. Denny and Mr. George Williams, about fifty gentlemen, active in evangelistic work, having been invited to meet him. Among those who briefly spoke on the occasion, besides the hosts, were Mr. William Olney, Dr. Monro Gibson, Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, Rev. F. B. Meyer, Mr. Robert Paton, Rev. E. W. Moore, Rev. J. F. Kitto, Dr. Harry Grattan Guinness, etc. Many expressions of gratitude to God and to the evangelist were uttered in connection with the mission at the Metropolitan Tabernacle during the past week, and a strong and enthusiastic desire was expressed that Mr. Moody should be earnestly invited to give some further time to special Gospel work in London before he returns to America.

It was urged in support of this that no other man possesses so largely the ear of the people of London belonging to all classes of society; or commands so widely the confidence and esteem of all sections of the Christian Church. As the capital of the British Empire, and the centre of the world's civilisation and enterprise, no city is able to wield such a far-reaching influence on other lands, and there is a commensurate need that its deep spiritual necessities should be met. The claims of the West End received special prominence, and very earnest were the words addressed to Mr. Moody to consider the proposal favourably.

In replying, Mr. Moody cordially thanked the friends for all the kind expressions they had used towards him. While he felt unable on the spur of the moment to give any answer to the proposition that he should revisit London at this time, he dwelt on the desirability of forming a permanent Evangelistic Committee for London, such as exists in Glasgow, and which would make itself responsible for undertaking any large and concerted movement of evangelisation among the masses.

The nucleus of a committee, as suggested by Mr. Moody, was formed on the spot, and arrangements were made to prosecute immediate inquiries as to what suitable and neutral building in London could be secured for a mission. An urgent requisition to Mr. Moody, asking him to come and conduct a series of services about the close of the year, is already on foot, and will be made as large and as representative in its character as possible. As the time is short, those friends who desire to join in the requisition should communicate without delay with the Honorary Secretaries of the London Mission, Exeter Hall, Strand.

THE LATE MR. GAWIN KIRKHAM.—A biography of this well-known worker is in course of preparation, and will be issued at an early date. Friends who have letters, or who can furnish any anecdotes or reminiscences illustrating Mr. Gawin Kirkham's life and work, will greatly oblige by sending them to Mr. Frank Cockrem, Open Air Mission, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C.

JEWISH MISSION IN EAST LONDON.—An eight days' convocation for Jews has been recently held under the management of Mr. J. Greenberg, L.C.M., in Christ Church Hall, Spitalfields, lent for the purpose by the kindness of the Rector, Rev. J. H. Scott, M.A. The meetings were, on the whole, well attended, and many earnest and faithful addresses were given by Hebrew converts and other Christian workers. Opposition was frequently manifested by the unconverted Jews present, but, notwithstanding this, many of the addresses were heard to the end. It is the desire of many Christians engaged in this work that earnest prayer should be offered to Almighty God throughout all the churches for the conversion of the many thousands of Jews in this neighbourhood, and throughout the world.—V. G. Z.

The Fever of "Doing!"

As there are various epidemics in the physical life, so there are epidemics in the spiritual sphere. Amongst them, not the least injurious to the soul is the "Fever of Doing." Perhaps those most affected by it are earnest, successful workers; and if it remains unchecked, it eats into the very heart of their service, till some crash in their experience, some blast or blight on their efforts, brings them to their spiritual senses: Disappointed and wounded, they sit down during the inertia of failure, and come to themselves again.

One often wonders why so many workers are laid aside by illness, just when everyone deems it impossible to do without them, and when even they may begin to consider themselves indispensable. Perhaps this "Fever of Doing" has been consuming the Master's share of their heart. Their work has become their idol, receiving a great portion of their affections. Though the Lord has been waiting to talk with his child, and to manifest his presence, there has been no time to rest at his feet; no time to sit down under his shadow and realise his love; no time to study his Word, therein to learn his will. The whirr of all the machinery they are keeping in motion prevents them hearing the sweet accents of the "still, small voice," once so prominent and so dear. Therefore the heavenly Father, seeing the inevitable bankruptcy that must follow, wisely cripples the springs of all this fevered doing, and sends his invalid child into some desert place apart to "rest awhile"; perhaps also to learn the bitter but wholesome lesson, that his place can be well filled by another; that he is not so much missed as he expected; and that God prefers the first place in the heart to any amount of service!

One symptom of this malady may be entitled "too much to do." How many Christians there are who are not Christ-like; and were we to search out the cause we should find that the perfect work of God has been hindered by the fever of "Do and go." This has become a sort of perpetuum mobile in the life, that not only raises the physical pulse to irritation point in brain and nerve, but too often destroys the good we are seeking to do. "I can't stop to listen to you now, I'm so hurried"; or, "A committee or meeting is waiting for me, and I must go." How often have we not thus hindered some troubled or anxious soul, some tempted and tried one, who came to pour it all out into our heart, who chose us in their hour of need as the one most likely to help them!

The pernicious effect of this fever in the home-life is sadly apparent; father or mother, or both, are so much away from their children, so absorbed in the outside life, that their family grow up with a grudge against that which makes their own life so dreary, or they get accustomed to do without the parental friend and counsellor, appointed of God for their instruction and happiness. By-and-by, when illness comes into the schoolroom or nursery, or the cold pale reaper with the scythe removes some sweet bud, some blooming flower, the mother is pained and wounded to the quick to find that the presence of governess or nurse is more welcome beside the bed of suffering than her own. Those "fever-stricken" parents know less of their own hearth and home, of their children's lives and characters, than of any others. Such people wake up some day in startled surprise to find their children undutiful, ungodly, self-willed, resenting an authority which has not been established by loving intercourse and respect.

It may be that this "doing" fever is raging, not in the parents, but in some bright young girl, whose idea of serving the Lord takes root anywhere except in the home circle. A tired or delicate mother longs for her companionship of an evening, when, the younger members having retired for the night, there is opportunity for quiet intercourse. But the sewing-class, or singing-class, or club makes it impossible to remain at home. If by chance she can do so, the sudden rebound from fever point to normal tranquillity produces physical depression and not-to-be-restrained yawns, which prove how necessary this stimulant of "Do and go" has become to her existence.

What antidote is there for this disease? Let us strive to "be" more and "do" less. "Being" implies rest, yet not idleness; life, yet not all activity; steady growth rootwards, not profuse ramifications which constantly need the pruning knife. Being and abiding are twin sisters, dearly loved of the Lord. "I am" was God's first declared revelation of himself, not "I do!" Let us pray for this blessed spirit of quietness and calm, so that the "doing fever" may be cast out of our life, leaving us time to sit down at his feet, whose yoke is easy, whose burden is light; there to find rest for our souls.

OUR SAILORS IN FOREIGN PORTS.

BY THE HON. LADY BEAUCHAMP.

Eight years ago, when the need of a Sailors' Home in the port of Havre was put before us, the only available house for the purpose was situated in the midst of the lowest part of the sailors' quarter. It was necessary to take it on a seven years' lease, and each year our sailors are learning increasingly to appreciate and avail themselves of the comfort and safety of the Home; consequently, our boarders have considerably augmented in number. This influx has induced proprietors of houses close to the Home to let them at fabulous prices to sellers of strong drink, who count upon our poor sailors to enable them to make it a good paying business, and this they succeed in doing. Eighteen of these houses can be counted in the street, close to our Home, so that, go which way they will, it is impossible for our boarders to escape the apparently friendly greetings of café girls and café keepers, all of whom know English, and thus draw many of our men into their deadly grasp the first day they come under our roof.

Our hearts ache, when seeing respectable men come into the Home, to know that the moment they go out they are compelled to pass the open doors of these enemies of their bodies and souls. Are we to allow them to enter during another year exposed to such temptation? We have put the matter before the heavenly Father, and, after careful consideration, no other course seems open to us except to build. A piece of ground can now be had in a most advantageous position, close to the largest docks, and free from the possibility of drink-houses being built either in front or in immediate proximity, much of the ground being taken up by the enormous warehouses, docks, and workshops. But we have determined neither to purchase the ground, nor to begin to build, until we have the required sum for these purposes.

During the eight years of our stewardship of the Sailors' Home, our heavenly Father has never permitted us to be in debt, and, acting on the Divine command, "to owe no man anything," we are resolved to adhere to this rule—the observance of which, we believe, has, with God's blessing, been the cause of so much of the success of the Home during the past few years. We put forth this appeal with the earnest desire that the needed sum of £5000 may be sent to carry out the construction of this much-needed Home in the right place, and that thus we may have the token that the same hand that has hitherto helped us gives us the word to "go forward" in this new work.

We have read with thankfulness of the noble gifts lately given for the shelter and well-being of our merchant seamen in London; but is the care of our sailors to end there? Unless good sheltering Homes can be established in foreign ports (especially where the sailors are paid off, as in Havre, Rouen, Antwerp, &c.), the kind care and money expended on our seamen during the few weeks they are in the splendid institutions in England seem almost lost, or, at all events, greatly counteracted, unless the same Christian service is extended to them in a similar way when toiling for our commerce away on foreign shores.

During the year 1891 1213 British vessels came into Havre, and of their crews 3200 seamen were paid off. Some captains are now allowing their men to stay aboard the ship till paid off, and some avail themselves of this offer; but many prefer coming to the Home. Thus, 1530 men passed through the Home during the last year, depositing 186,059fr. (£7440). Most of this money they took back to England themselves, but they gave 15,212fr. to the superintendent to forward to their homes. Others gave large sums to the British Consul for him to forward by consular orders. Had it not been for the Home, the chief part of these hardly-earned wages must have fallen into the clutches of boarding masters and café keepers.

Again we would ask all who take an interest in those to whom we are so immensely indebted for the bringing of our every daily want, to come, if possible, and see for themselves what a sailor has to contend with when paid off in such a port as Havre. Here, unless they come to the Home, these men, who have escaped the perils of hurricanes and shipwrecks, and have endured every sort of hardship, while toiling to bring money to the shipowners, and the needful necessaries of life to the thousands of their fellow-countrymen, fall in a few hours a prey to those who only live to plunder. Our Home has been the means of rescuing thousands of our fellow-countrymen, but its influence is now sadly hindered by all that has grown up around it. Should the required sum come in, we propose, at a small expense, to put up a coffee bar and sailors' rest under the same roof as the prospective sailors' home. We hope also to be able to fit up a mission room, which in the daytime can be used also for recreation by the sailors. This would be fitted up and carried on by a special fund promised by a friend who visited Havre a short time ago.

It remains now for us to see who will come to the help of this much-needed work. If we are helped, and so the work of building be commenced, it must be done at once, as our present lease of the old Home, with its fearful surroundings, ends in September, 1893.

[Further information can be supplied by the superintendent, Mr. J. A. Home, or the Hon. Lady Beauchamp, Sailors' Rest, Havre.]

Soldiers' Home, Belfast.

Since the opening of this Home a year ago it has been carried on under the supervision of Miss Sandes and Miss Wright, assisted by other ladies whose hearts are in the good work. Everyone, from the old soldier down to the last-joined recruit, is made thoroughly at home. There is a good refreshment-room, and comfortable beds can be obtained by soldiers on leave or furlough.

There is a meeting-room where religious and temperance meetings are held every evening. The members of the Soldiers' Christian Association meet every evening to ask God's blessing and guidance in the work.

NORTH LONDON DOORSTEP GIRLS.—Mrs. R. Brown writes from 123, Wilberforce-road, Finsbury-park:—"It is time I began my winter's work amongst the doorstep girls. Having done my best to get seven clothed and sent out to service, besides helping many others, I have nothing in hand to start with. Last year 205 garments were given away. I must hire a room for the meetings, which the girls are asking me to resume without delay."

MDLLE. MAUBERT writes from 9, Rue de la Saunerie, Parthenay, Deux Sèvres, France—"I have the joy of teaching a medley company of 186 youngsters, in various stages of rags, who are by no means regular attendants. We meet where we can. It is no use having a class-room; for most of the children the current of opposition is too strong. Were we in a room I should never get the attendance of many a stray passer-by. The Lord has granted hitherto wonderful readiness to fall in with my one aim, which is the learning of Holy Scripture."

Daily Bible Study.

BY REV. ISAIAH PARKER.*

My subject is "The Constant Use of the Bible." Some may say it is very much as if we were to talk about the constant use of the air we breathe, of the sunshine we enjoy, of the bread we eat, or of the water we drink. Yet, while it may seem a truism to say that the Bible must be in constant use, it is, I verily believe, a truism that demands utterance. Indeed, if there be a crying need of the day, it is that the Bible should be read and studied, and that some one should stir Christians generally in the matter. We hear about the literature of the Bible. It is, we are told, the finest and highest literature. If there be anything finer than that book, its enemies would soon tell us of it. We have heard of Romanising and rationalising tendencies, but the one cure is the constant use of the Bible. We hear people talk about differences between the revised and authorised version, but the truth is the one is a valuable help in reading the other, and I would recommend the systematic study of the two versions.

Now, I wish to offer a few simple hints as to how to use the Bible constantly. First, there is great profit in taking simple single words and following them out through the Bible. If we paid more attention to this word-study, we might find many of our difficulties vanish at once in the fresh flood of light thrown upon them.

Take the word "God"—inscribed on the first page of the Book, and running right through the Book on to the very last. It is the very Book of God; and in the whole range of human thought, feeling, and destiny, there is nothing to approach that one word. Is there anyone who can fathom the depth of it, in the sublimity of the ideal, in the love and righteousness of the Being manifested? How many of us have really done our best to grasp that one word, and to make it our own in some sense?

Take again the word "Sin"—short, simple, plain enough. Practically millions of men have known for untold centuries the horrible thing sin, with all its atrocious outcome. Yet, in all the philosophies and treatises in the world, there is no book that tells one tithe so much about it as this one Book does. See how sin is revealed in all its evil nature, and see also how the remedy is set forth alongside of the disease, in all its hatefulness to God, and injuriousness to man.

So you may take the word "Love." The marvellous unspeakable character of love is set forth here as nowhere else. Here in this Book we find love in its highest form, its loftiest manifestation and purest expression. The tenderest, purest, and most affectionate woman will not profess she knows all about love. In this book we have the fullest teaching; yet how strangely few study it.

Or, again, passing from single words to short sentences, such as may be found by the score scattered throughout the Book, so simple, brilliant, and precious as to be compared to nothing less than diamonds. Take such as these: "Blessed are the pure in heart," "Pray without ceasing," "Rejoice evermore," "God is a Spirit," "God is Light," "God is Love." How marvellously full of depth and meaning! and how many such are to be discovered in this Book!

But if diamonds are to be found, they must be bought or sought; and this brings me to the good old-fashioned method of beginning at the first chapter of Genesis and going steadily on to the last chapter of Revelation. I glory in the fact that our fathers did that faithfully and well, and that they taught some of us so to read.

I recall three Bibles which have deeply interested me. The first, an old family Bible, with its middle pages worn and thumbmarked. It is a grand sign to see a Bible bearing the thumb marks of earnest souls who have fed on the Psalms, the Gospels, and the Prophets. The second was an old Hebrew Bible, the precious property of an English clergyman. Never have I seen any other book so beautifully thumbed. The owner knew chapter after chapter in the original, and even some of the books by heart, and could repeat many of them. It was a glorious thing to know a man who knew and loved his Bible like that.

The third Bible I am thinking of belonged to an English minister. It was plain enough; but he told me he had just finished reading it right through for the fourteenth time. Long after, I saw his son, who told me that his father lived to read that Bible right through thirty-two times. What a glorious thing! How far short we come. We make a rush and start well, but when we get to a few hard names in Genesis there is a great collapse; when we reach the ceremonies of Leviticus the great majority drop off, while of the remainder but few survive the chronologies of the historical books. Few, few, indeed are those who read on to the end.

Now there may be those who fear they cannot promise to read the book right through, and are yet anxious to read some portion. May I ask such to make a beginning with one short book—say the book of Ruth? Read and ponder this beautiful pastoral story of the time of the Judges; perhaps it will lead some of you on to read David's stirring life, and then to David's Greater Son. Or, turning to the New Testament, can you not make a beginning by reading Paul's letter to the first church planted in Europe? Read his epistle to the Philippians, and see what a church ought to be and to do. How they loved and laboured with their minister! I ask you to make this beginning—you who have never systematically read your Bible—for I know that so beginning you will want to go on; as you discover treasures of which you have never dreamt.

But some may say: "We have little time; we work early and late; we cannot read whole books." Very well, for a beginning, let me ask you to read portions. Let me indicate a selection. Will you read for a month or so the following short Psalms: The 1st, 16th, 19th, 23rd, 27th, 32nd, 42nd, 51st, 91st, 103rd, 107th, 116th, and 121st? I cannot tell you all the vast treasures that have been found in these Psalms already, but this I know, if you read them looking to their great author for light, no one can tell the wondrous treasures you may find. Three months will be well spent over these Psalms.

Coming to the New Testament, and still by way of suggestion to those who have little time, and possibly little inclination, for reading; let me ask you to read the 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters of St. Matthew's Gospel. Spend three months over them, if you will, and you will be amply repaid. Then give three months to John xiv., xv., xvi., and xvii., and another three months to Rom. v., vi., vii. and viii.

There is a year's reading for you, and, learning as you will do that "The Lord is my shepherd," "The Lord is my light and my salvation," "The Lord is my strength," you will surely cry, "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." Then will "The Lord command his loving kindness in the daytime," and you will burst forth, "Bless the Lord, O my soul," "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men." And passing on to the beauties of the Gospel narrative, the precious sweetness of our Lord's closing words and prayer, and Paul's wondrous treatise on pardon, renewal, and no condemnation, till, in conclusion, we find ourselves folded in the inseparable and changeless love of God. Thus we reach the glory land on earth below; and to enjoy such communion and fellowship we must learn the constant use of the Bible.

* An Address delivered at the Evangelical Alliance Conference, Dundee.

Mr. Merton Smith in Newry.

The closing meetings in connection with Mr. Merton Smith's mission in Newry were the best, both as to numbers in attendance and results. On Monday evening he told the story of his life and conversion to a most earnest and deeply-interested crowd. We have never before had such a meeting on a Monday night. The last evening—Wednesday—was apparently the most fruitful in results. Large numbers stood up, declaring that they accepted Christ as their Saviour, and many anxious ones waited to be spoken to by Christian workers.

God has given us a great blessing on these special services, and his servant, Mr. Smith, has secured a high place in the love and prayers of believers here. He now goes to Bessbrook for a week of meetings. William Wylie.

Newry, Oct. 15.

MADAME RILLIET, who recently drew attention to the needs of the Geneva Railway Mission, writes:—"We have found an evangelist. Now we want a lady of independent means, willing to work with us, for the schools and visiting. She must be well acquainted with French and be earnest and energetic." Madame Rilliet's present address is Hotel Roth, Clarens, Vaud, Switzerland.

SOUTH LONDON MISSION.

The third anniversary of this vigorous Wesleyan Mission was held on Tuesday week. Mr. Richard Cory presided at the public meeting held in the Southwark Chapel.

Rev. J. H. Hopkins made a statement summarising the work of the year. Special attention had been given to the work of the sisterhood, and great encouragement had been derived from the prosperity of the work amongst the young. There were three foes whom they were bracing themselves to fight more strenuously than ever—pauperism, gambling, and strong drink. A few months ago he spoke to a young woman, once a worker, who had lost her hold of God. He pressed her to seek the Lord again, and she found peace that night. A Sunday or two after her young man came and said, "I don't want to be spoken to." He found that young man was bound by the fetters of the gambling vice, and was in financial straits. His promised wife offered to lend all her savings, amounting to £20, but it was of no avail. He committed suicide, and so lost his own life and blighted that of another. Their fiercest enemy was strong drink. They were toiling to make dark London light and drunken London sober. Three years ago, when that mission was established, there were 415 names on the class-books; to-day there were over a thousand meeting in class. He thanked God for the prosperity that had been vouchsafed to them.

The Chairman said that he was glad to find they were devoting some attention to the work of the sisterhood. He was associated with work of that kind in various places. He did not see why the apostasy of Rome should have the monopoly of women's work. He was also glad to hear that their Sunday school teachers were godly; what a blessing to the nation it would be if that were so everywhere. The longer he lived the more he was convinced that the only panacea for the regeneration of the people was the Gospel of the grace of God.

Rev. Walford Green said the history of the mission during the past year had not been written by mortal pen; it was registered on high. There had been answers to prayer in connection with the mission as distinct and unmistakable as the answer that was given to Elijah's prayer on Mount Carmel. Their people were coming to see clearly that in connection with all their agencies, whether social, religious, or philanthropic, they must have the power of the Holy Ghost if they were to succeed. While money was needed, he cared less about that than about the presence in their midst of the Divine Spirit, for if they had that, their wants would in every way be supplied.

Rev. H. P. Hughes reviewed many encouraging features in the work, while Rev. W. D. Walters warmly supported the claims of the South London Mission.

Mrs. Baeyertz in Dundee.

Mrs. Baeyertz came to Dundee an entire stranger, but she soon began to get hold of the people. As the work went on, the interest deepened, until towards the close of the mission, Free St. Andrew's Church, one of the largest in the city, was crowded to excess.

In the afternoon she held Bible readings in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. They were chiefly for Christians, and were intended for the deepening of the spiritual life, and for leading them into a fuller knowledge of the Lord's ability and willingness to deliver from sin. In the evening she gave Gospel addresses and also spoke on the Lord's second coming. Her subject one evening was the Jewish Passover, when the crowd was so large that many were unable to obtain admission, and it had to be repeated another night. The interest was still so great that numbers were again disappointed. Her addresses were remarkable for their clearness and vigour, and she never leaves her hearers in doubt as to her meaning. The evangelist deals with the anxious herself. She gathers them into a room, and by bringing suitable portions of Scripture before them, seeks to lead them step by step to decision. A considerable number have professed conversion. Her success will appear all the more remarkable when we state that there were other six evangelists working in the city at the same time. J. H. S.

THE NORWEGIAN MISSION in Madagascar is in very active operation. There are 400 congregations with 28,000 members, also 500 schools with 1000 teachers and 30,000 scholars.

The Tabernacle Mission.

The week's campaign has come and gone; but o that bore any part in the fight can ever forget It has been a Gospel Waterloo. In years to ne many will look back to October 9-16, 1892, and h quickening pulse and glistening eye recall the t that they were there. In the great London ssion of seventeen years ago one of the songs st frequently sung by Mr. Sankey was that which the questions:—

What means this eager, anxious throng
Which moves with busy haste along?
These wondrous gatherings day by day—
What means this strange commotion, pray?

We seldom hear that song now; newer melodies e come to the front. It might well have had a urrection last week at the Tabernacle; for of a th it could have been said "day by day" that—

Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

But how is one to write about it? Merely to sit ind the platform and see the throngs pressing o every corner of the great double-galleried urch; to hear the volume of sound that went out m six or seven thousand throats; to note the centrated gaze of twice as many eyes on the ly figure of the preacher, and the solemn hush t settled on the crowd as he poured forth a red- stream of speech; to see the marvellous way which the spirits of the audience were yed as the heart of one man; to listen to the ponsive answers that came in obedience to Moody's call for tokens of decision and cern; to mingle with the crowd of anxious uirers in the lecture-hall below—all these things bined to produce a sense of bewilderment in the nd, as well as joy in the heart, that the ordinary guage of ordinary mortals is quite inadequate to press. The meetings can scarcely be described in satisfactory way, even if one were in possession he whole of the facts. To any who came under spell of the services, and partook of the spiritual ver which they engendered, these notes will seem saic enough. God the Holy Ghost was present a fashion that was unmistakable, and his work- s can no more be photographed with pen and than the winds of heaven can be imprisoned in ure.

The meetings were three per day, and each was erse from the other. In the morning Mr. Moody ght to reach Christian workers. The afternoon liences were more mixed, and in the addresses re were messages suited both to believers and believers. The evening seasons were strictly ngelistic. In the great audiences, chiefly of men, re were no doubt many Christians, but the "out- ers"—the careless, the sceptical, the sin-bound, the backsliding—were those whom Mr. Moody ned to influence.

THE MORNING MEETINGS.

Wednesday morning was one the memories of ich can never fade; it is devoutly to be hoped I believed that its impulses and impressions will end in ever-widening circles far beyond the nds of time. Mr. Moody gave his rd and last address on Emblems of the ly Spirit. The emblem specially considered s the Oil—healing, comforting, consecrating. We r (said the evangelist) of Christians breaking vn from over-work; it is more likely to be over- ry—the running of the machinery without the ricating oil. Let us all determine to-day to get anointing of the Spirit for service. In the vitical code the priest had to anoint with oil ferent parts of the body of the one to be cleansed m leprosy. So with believers. The oil of con- ration is to be put on the ear that we may hear voice of God; on the hand, that we may do his vice; on the foot, that we may speed on his ands. Then the anointing with the oil of con- ration signifies separation from the world to high d holy service. A Christian in the world is all ht, but the world in the Christian is all wrong. A ristian given to worldliness loses spiritual power; der Christians get cuffed and kicked by both es, and have no happiness in either. To live victorious, fruitful life we must get away from that savours of the world. Billy Bray, when ed once how the world was getting on, said he not know; he had not been down there for twelve rs! What we need is such a love for spiritual ngs as shall lift us above what is worldly.

After pointing out how the anointing of Christ service at the Jordan was followed by great wer and success, Mr. Moody went on to observe that this consecration will create in Christian hearts more love for each other. He greatly deprecated the tendency to get split up into little factions, each given to criticising the other. When the tide of the Holy Ghost's power comes in, and the churches are anointed with the Spirit, these things will be swept away. Someone had asked him why he went to Keswick this year. In reply he said he had lately been invited to spend a day or two out in the country, in a place where all the Churches, Established and Nonconformist, were working together harmoniously. He was entertained by the Rector, whose right-hand man he found to be an Independent minister. The Rector said that for years he thought there was nothing good outside the Church of England—that the sun rose and set on it; he could hardly recognise a Dissenter at all. He went to Keswick, and got such a blessing there that the first thing he did when he returned home was to call on every Nonconformist minister in his parish and pray with him. He found that they were men of as lovely character as any he had ever met, and now an Independent preacher was perhaps nearer to him than any other of his fellow Christians. Mr. Moody said he thought any Conference that would bring forth fruit like that must be a good place to go to, and so he went. What a grand thing it is to have the denominations all mixed up, so that we do not know which is which. When we are anointed with the Spirit and get to love each other, all our party differences are as the dust in the balance. Oh for a baptism of love this morning!

After developing the thoughts that Spirit-filled men are full of liberty in service and of hope for the future, Mr. Moody drew attention to the repeated bestowals of the Holy Ghost on the first disciples—not only at Pentecost, which he regarded as the inauguration day—but afterwards, under Peter's preaching, at Jerusalem and Cæsarea. If these early disciples needed to be filled with the Spirit again and again, do not we need in these days to be filled once in a while? Some personal cases were noted where those who got the endowment of the Spirit for service had been far more largely owned of God than they were before this experience.

A CONSECRATION MEETING

followed, led by Rev. F. B. Meyer. Nearly all remained. The proceedings were of an almost too solemn nature to be reported, and can only be indicated in outline. The company was gently led on by Mr. Meyer to the point of confessing past failures and grieving of the Holy Spirit. Those who felt the need of an access of the Divine power, and were willing to put away from them all known sin, that their souls might be open to the incoming of the Spirit, were invited to testify the same by rising. A great throng stood on their feet, and remained standing while prayer and confession were made by the leader. Then the privileges and possibilities of the Spirit-possessed life were unfolded, and it was shown that these are to be claimed and laid hold of by faith, apart altogether from conscious feeling. Again the call was made for an open expression of desire and readiness to claim the promised blessing, and again a great company silently rose and stood with bowed heads. Some further exhortations were given by Mr. Meyer as to going forth in the assurance that God would make good his word to his trusting children, and would enable the worker to draw upon his resources in Christ as they were needed, and the solemn assembly broke up. It is not for anyone to say how far the transactions between God and the individual souls who composed the meeting were thoroughly honest and real. The day when the secrets of all hearts are revealed will alone declare that. But the hope and trust remain that the Spirit of a truth came on those disciples as at the first, and that the fruits thereof will be found in days, and weeks, and years to come.

THE BIBLE AND HOW TO STUDY IT was the theme of the two morning addresses of Thursday and Friday. In the former Mr. Moody powerfully combated the notion that the Bible, or any part of it, has become effete. On the contrary, the Book is more than ever vindicating itself as a revelation of the mind of God to the sinful children of men. At no period of its history has it been so widely scattered about or translated into so many languages. The intimate relation between the Old and New Testaments is a strong point with Mr. Moody in this lecture, and he shows his own close acquaintance with the Scripture by citing the many quotations from the Old that appear in different parts of the New. Mr. Moody remains undisturbed and unaffected by the researches and speculative conclusions of the critics, higher and lower. What he does not understand he accepts and believes.

The address of Friday was in the line of hints as to private Bible study. No hard and fast rules, he said, could be laid down: the same methods might not be the most profitable to all.

For young converts he strongly commended the plan of taking, say, a dozen of the leading doctrines of the Scripture, such as faith, atonement, sanctification, the Second Advent, and so forth, giving a month to close research and study of the various passages bearing on each subject; at the end of the year the student would have grounded himself fairly well on twelve foundation truths. In the course of his disquisition he found opportunity to utter many plain exhortations on such topics as immediate conversion, revivals, the Old Testament types, etc. He advocated both the telescopic and microscopic methods—looking at a book or a doctrine in its main outlines, or going into a minute study of verses, phrases, and even letters. The closing part of his interesting address was taken up with an account of the way in which he was able to stimulate Bible study in his schools at Northfield by taking up the Gospels and going through them a chapter at a time. Each student was expected, from previous reading, to give the leading idea of the chapter as it had struck him, and also to quote what he regarded as the key-verse in the chapter. The results of this method were intensely interesting, and his commendation of it is worth the attention of all heads of households, for adoption in family worship.

Another consecration meeting was held on Friday morning, under the guidance of Mr. Meyer. Prayer was made for Mr. Moody's approaching mission in Dublin. Many workers who had grown cold and fruitless gave expression to the desire to come back to the enjoyment of their first love and to rededicate themselves for service. It was a solemn season, and a fitting crown to these most profitable morning gatherings.

THE AFTERNOON MEETINGS.

These were all very largely attended. Towards the end of the week hundreds had to go away without gaining admission to the Tabernacle. On Tuesday and Wednesday Mr. Moody expounded the doctrines of Divine Grace, as shown in the three aspects of pardon for the past, keeping power for the present, and the promise of a glorious future. The subject of grace is one after the evangelist's own heart, and his glowing periods, as he expatiated on the boundlessness and freeness of God's mercy to the penitent soul, fell on ears that seemed ready to receive the sublime message. To some in the audience, at any rate, the preacher appeared to impart his own overflowing enthusiasm; their feelings could only find vent in frequent exclamations of warm assent and even in paroxysms of weeping. It was a striking feature of the whole mission, it may be remarked, that free play was given to the audience in the utterance of their emotions. Mr. Moody's pleasantries and sarcasms evoked much seemly mirth, succeeded in many instances by spirit movings of an entirely different kind, so near akin are the founts of laughter and of tears. "Hallelujah" and "Praise the Lord" were frequent interjections, but they in no way disconcerted the speaker, who seemed rather to welcome audible responses, and turned them sometimes to capital account.

As noted in the daily papers of Thursday, the Duchess of Teck, her daughter Princess May, and a number of attendants, were present on Wednesday afternoon. As Mr. Moody spoke out of a full heart, in his own simple, earnest fashion, on grace for daily living, the Royal visitors were all attention. They entered heartily into the song service, and stayed throughout the prayer-meeting that followed the address. Their intended coming had been made known to one of the secretaries, and a front seat in the first gallery was allotted to them. One of the ladies-in-waiting came back to the meeting next afternoon and brought a number of lady friends with her. It was stated that the Duchess had greatly enjoyed the Thursday service, and was only prevented from returning by a standing public engagement.

On Thursday afternoon the subject was "Rest," one that Mr. Moody handles and applies with singular pathos and effect. His remarks on the foolish way in which professed Christians persist in carrying a burden of cares and troubles are extremely telling. He says that some people seem to rake up all the sorrows of the past; to these they add the burdens of the present; then they look ahead, and anticipate a great many more trials than they will ever experience in the future; they tie them all together, swing them across their shoulder, and go reeling and staggering through the world with the accumulated load. If they should come to a warm religious meeting, they lay their burdens down for the moment and say to themselves: "What a refreshing time we have had"; but no sooner do they leave the pew than the old load of trouble is shouldered and they are as downcast as before.

The subject on Friday afternoon was "Faith." The endeavour of the speaker was to show the reasonableness of trust in the unchanging Word of the Almighty and Living One, and to bring all waverers to the point of a definite committal of themselves to God for pardon, purity, and power. After each afternoon meeting there was either a prayer meeting or an after-meeting—generally both. The Christians remained in the Church to pray, while the anxious seekers passed to the lecture hall below for further exhortation and for personal dealing.

THE EVENING MEETINGS.

There were, of course, the great seasons of Gospel sowing and reaping. The audiences were mainly of men. After 7.30 the church was opened to all and sundry, but by that hour little room was left. Night after night the great auditorium presented a grand and impressive array of eager faces. On several evenings there was an overflow, held in the rooms of the Pastor's College. In his evening addresses Mr. Moody seemed to excel himself in point of vigour and earnestness. On Tuesday he dwelt on the peril of being near the Kingdom of God and yet not entering in. His theme was illustrated by the recorded account of Herod, of whom it is said that he did many things and heard John the Baptist gladly; yet because of one cherished sin, he deferred decision, and at last he compassed the death of the great wilderness preacher. In none of his discourses does Mr. Moody give a more loose rein to his imaginative faculty. He pictures in glowing and fervid language the popularity and preaching of the great forerunner of the Saviour; his power over Herod, and the workings of the stricken conscience of the Roman governor. The application, of course, was plain, and it was pressed home with great power. The other evening subjects were "Sowing and Reaping," "Let the wicked forsake his way," and "Confession of Christ." The great point Mr. Moody aimed at in these discourses was to bring his hearers to the deciding point. This was made specially clear on the closing evening, when, after his very telling appeals for courageous decision for Christ, he gave his hearers an opportunity of making public confession of their desire to lead a Christian life. Many indicated, by rising or speaking boldly out, that they were ready to bear the cross of open confession. During this part of the meeting a manly voice came from under one of the side galleries, declaring that the owner of it desired deliverance from the thraldom of alcohol, and asking that he might be prayed for. Always sympathetic towards such a request, and quick to seize any opportunity for riveting the truth, Mr. Moody broke out into earnest prayer for this victim of the drink. A little later on a man in the opposite gallery rose and said he purposed going home that night to erect the family altar in his home. This gave an opening for further calls to decision and to confession, and on Mr. Moody's invitation others throughout the building followed the example of the brother who had resolved to commence family prayer. It was a very solemn season, and the powers of the unseen world were patently at work in the hearts of the vast company that faced the preacher.

The After Meetings.

These are always the most difficult parts of such a movement to write about. When one has said that crowds filled up the lecture-hall night by night and sometimes in the afternoons, that singular readiness was shown in giving audible expression to resolves to close with the offer of salvation, and that personal dealing was carried on with every apparent token of real result, one has said all that the public may fairly claim to know. There was a good muster of willing workers; many of the most active being those converted through Mr. Moody's former London missions.

If the real inner history of these inquiry meetings could be told in completeness of detail, the story would throw into the shade for tragic and eternal interest all the romances ever spun by the inventive brain of poet or novelist. The secrets of many hearts are laid bare, and one gets glimpses into the strange mysteries of the unceasing warfare that goes on in Mansoul between the powers of good and evil. One hears occasionally of persons who have gone into the inquiry-room to argue and discuss; but there seemed to be little if any of this at the Tabernacle meetings. There was an all-pervasive air of dead earnestness and downright sincerity that gave good promise of deep and lasting work. It was noteworthy to find so many cases of backsliders anxious to arise and go to their Heavenly Father. If young men beginning to sow their wild oats could have heard some of these sorrowful stories it would have made them pause before plunging with a light heart into sinful ways. At every turn the fell power of "the drink" as an agent in leading souls astray could be traced. While the devil has alcohol for an ally he can afford to dispense with many other baits to sin. If it be true that the Christian Churches have the power, if they choose, to banish this curse from the land, how awful is the responsibility that rests on them!

The Gospel in Song

has been a delightful feature of the week. The choir brought together at short notice has done good service. Mr. Stebbins recovered his voice before the meetings had proceeded far, and was able to exercise his special gift in comparative comfort. Again and again he moved the multitude by his heartfelt and skilful rendering of the hymns, many of them being those of his own composing. He was happy in having the very competent assistance of Miss Rose, whose rich, full, and cultured voice blended beautifully with his own; so that the listeners had not only the charms of tuneful melody but those of perfect harmony. Concerted song is not usually very successful in Gospel work, because of less clearness in the enunciation of the words than in solo singing; and the truth is, after all, more important than its musical setting. So admirable has been the rendering of the duets by Mr. Stebbins and Miss Rose, that little has been lost in this respect, and the added effect in harmony has been at once pleasing to the ear and moving to the receptive heart. Miss Rose, we believe, was not long ago exercising her abilities in light opera. Since she was led to a saving knowledge of Gospel truth she has placed her gifts at the feet of the Master, glad to sing the message of salvation into the minds and hearts of any who will hear. Among the songs that have been of special acceptance were "The Land Afar," "The Morning Land," "Though your Sins be as Scarlet," "When I shall wake in that fair Morn of Morns," and "Some Time we'll Understand." This last song was sung by Mr. Stebbins on Wednesday afternoon, when the Duchess of Teck and Princess May were present. It will be remembered that when the Duke of Clarence died early in the year, this song was being sung by Mr. Sankey at the meetings in Scotland. A verse of it was telegraphed from Edinburgh to the Princess of Wales and Princess May of Teck, with accompanying expressions of sympathy. The singing of the consolatory stanzas must have recalled to the Princess very mingled memories of the past.

A CHOIR OF THE ORPHANAGE BOYS

was in attendance at many of the meetings, and Mr. Moody designated them "My choir." They sang very sweetly indeed. Altogether, "the music of the Gospel" has pervaded the gatherings in a way that none will forget. Considering that Mr. Moody himself possesses no gifts in that direction, the enthusiasm he shows and can evoke in others in learning these sweet songs of Zion is truly remarkable.

A very pleasant diversion from the ordinary routine of the mission was the contributions made by those attending Thursday's meetings to the funds of the Stockwell Orphanage. On the Wednesday Mr. Moody stated from the platform that the use of the Tabernacle had been freely given for this mission by Dr. James Spurgeon and the officers of the church. That, he thought, was a very kind and generous act, and he desired spontaneously to suggest that the friends who had received benefit through the services should express gratitude in the shape of a special collection for the orphanage. It was heartily agreed that this collection should take place at all the three services of Thursday. These collections, we are glad to say, totalled up the very respectable sum of £320. Seeing, however, that the institutions need some £10,000 a year to sustain them in efficiency, there is ample scope for the gifts of any who were not able to be at the Tabernacle on Thursday. Mr. Moody suggested that any who could not give their contribution then should send it to the Superintendent, Rev. V. J. Charlesworth, at the Stockwell Orphanage, Clapham-road, London, S.W. We are sure those boys and girls from the Orphanage who shared in the great gatherings will not soon forget them, so that it is hoped a double blessing will accrue to that admirable charity with which Mr. Spurgeon was so closely associated.

It may be of interest to note here that one of those found in the inquiry room on one of the first days of the mission was a youth who was at one time an inmate of the Orphanage. He had backslidden in heart and life since leaving the shelter of the institution to carve his way in the world; but he seemed to have sincerely returned to the fold and enlisted again in the service of the God of the widow and the fatherless.

The Overflow Meetings, held on a good many evenings during the week in the Pastor's College, were marked by undoubted blessing. Mr. E. J. Kennedy, of Exeter Hall, who addressed them on several occasions, testifies to the ready spirit of hearing that prevailed. Overflows are too often made up of disappointed and restless people, but at these meetings the people seemed to come prepared to listen to the message of salvation through whatever voice, and also to close with that message. In the solo singing at the overflows Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Bennet, besides Mr. Stebbins, have borne a share, so that there was no lack. Lord Bennet's singing is spoken of enthusiastically by those who have heard it. Inquiry meetings were held, and every night souls entered into rest.

of deep interest in connection with the mission were numerous enough to fill columns of this paper. Here is one that has come to our knowledge, and it will serve as typical of many more. One day early in the week a man, well on in life, called at the offices of the National Temperance League in Paternoster-row, and said to Mr. Leng, the manager, that he desired to sign the pledge. He was greeted very heartily. When asked if he had ever abstained before, he said he had not; then he told his story. He said he had led a very careless, indifferent life, and had given way to the allurements of the intoxicating cup. On Monday he was passing through the City, and happened to see it announced in a shop window that tickets could be had for Mr. Moody's meeting in the Tabernacle. He was impelled, largely out of curiosity, to get a ticket and to go to the meeting. During the evening Mr. Moody, noticing some of his auditors to be very warm, remarked that he saw they were perspiring; would to God it were the perspiration of the soul. That remark, said the man, went home to him. He sought and found mercy, and was converted that night. Of course, he desired now to abstain from the hurtful alcohol, and he had come to take that step. The pledge was taken. The man called again on a subsequent day, and reported himself as progressing in the new-found life. He had not only been back to the meetings every night, but had taken others with him.

So the influence of the mission has spread. Those attending have come from all parts of London, as well as from the suburbs and the country. A noticeable and gratifying circumstance was the presence of so large a proportion of young men at the evening meetings. A large number of those who stood up to testify their desire for salvation were from this class. Mr. Moody's heart always warms up at the sight of youths confessing Christ. On one occasion he asked a young man who rose what his age was. The lad replied that he was seventeen; this drew forth from the evangelist the remark that that was his own age when he entered on the Christian life, and he felt a special interest in any converted at that age.

Mr. J. G. Woolley, a well-known American speaker on temperance questions, happening to be passing through London last week, was asked by Mr. Moody to address the gathering in the Tabernacle on Wednesday evening, while the after-meeting was proceeding down in the lecture-room. Mr. Woolley has a chequered story to tell, and he tells it with great oratorical effect. He said that between four and five years ago he was "a Gadarene," a man found among the tombs, cutting himself with stones, and incapable of being bound, through the power of strong drink. In language at once choice and impressive he described the depths of degradation to which he fell, till he was a lawyer without a client, a husband without his wife, a father without his children, a man without a friend, and a wanderer on the face of the earth. Even solemn vows taken at the dying bedside of his revered mother were powerless to free him from the slavery of alcohol. In this dire extremity he called on God, who heard him and took him in without investigating his past. Since then he had gone from city to city and State to State, wherever men and women were willing to hear him tell how the blood of Jesus Christ had cleansed him from drunkenness and set him free.

LAST SUNDAY'S SERVICES.

Sabbath last was the closing day of the special effort. Mr. Moody preached at the regular morning service to a congregation that crowded every corne of the great church. His subject was the favouriter one of "Assurance," and he handled it with all the freshness, impressiveness, and cogency of one who himself lives in the clear light, and desires all his fellow-Christians to move out of Doubting Castle.

At three o'clock another monster audience came together. The hymns sung were mostly those bearing on the Divine love, and thus the congregation was prepared to hear one of the most moving and melting sermons in all the evangelist's extended repertory—that on the text "God is Love." Here are waters to swim in, and Mr. Moody positively revels in the transcendent theme, as he expatiates on the unchanging and unfailing love of the Father towards lost sinners. In this discourse there are many very touching illustrations. The story of the prodigal son, and how the thought of his father's love brought him back to his home, is used with great effect. The old time parable receives a new and modern interpretation so vivid that each turn in the narrative stands out before the mind's eye with crystalline clearness. Many flocked downstairs to the inquiry meeting, and the workers had a busy and interesting time, after Mr. Moody had briefly clenched the exhortations of the sermon.

The evening hour brought together for the final meeting a crowd that overflowed the Tabernacle into the streets around. Two overflows had to be arranged for in the rooms of the Pastor's College to accommodate the people. These were taken charge of by Mr. W. R. Lane and Mr. E. J. Kennedy. After singing their songs in the great assembly, "The Morning Land" and "Then shall my heart keep singing," Mr. Stebbins and Miss Rose adjourned to the overflows. Mr. Moody preached on "Repentance." As he reasoned of temperance and righteousness and judgment to come, and entreated waverers to turn to the Lord on this last night of the mission, the power of God was present to wound and to heal. The inquiry meeting was large, and to all human seeming many resolved to break away from the evil or callous past, and start on the heavenly pathway. The workers had a happy time in giving counsel to those who still lingered, or in cheering those who had stepped out on the promises that Mr. Moody had repeated in his closing hortatory words.

Soldiers' Home, Caterham.

A Soldiers' Home is being opened here to take the place as far as possible of the homes which many soldier lads leave for the first time when they enlist. The recruits for the Brigade of Guards (who are recruited from all parts of the United Kingdom) are trained at Caterham, where they spend the first three or four months of their soldier's life; the need is therefore urgent that some bright, homelike institute should be opened in the village, where these lads can spend their spare time.

The Home will be open to all soldiers irrespective of religious denomination, and will consist of coffee bar, reading and smoking room, a room where the various chaplains may see their men at stated times, bedrooms for the use of soldiers on leave and soldiers' relatives. To complete this scheme (including furnishing) £1,100 is required, and it is proposed to add as soon as possible a lecture-room, where all kinds of meetings may be held, for which a further sum of £200 is needed.

MR. MOODY'S DUBLIN MISSION.

The United Services Committee in Dublin, which is arranging Mr. Moody's mission, consists of over eighty representative ministers and laymen of all the Evangelical Churches, which since Mr. Moody's visit to Dublin in 1874 has been harmoniously and successfully carrying on united religious work in the Irish metropolis. They have, for the purposes of this mission, enlarged their number and added many names of Christian workers in city and county for the purpose of drawing into the present effort all the evangelical life available. This enlarged committee has divided itself into a number of sub-committees, to whom are entrusted all the departments of work which must be attended to in order that Mr. Moody's visit may be productive of the largest results.

No building in Dublin suited the idea of either Mr. Moody or the committee. A new building was undertaken, and is now completed. The site chosen, the Rotunda Gardens, is the most central for evangelistic work. The building is of wood. Seats will be provided for 5500 persons, the platform accommodation for choir and speakers being for 300 persons. The cost of the building and seating will be £800 or £900. It has been estimated that an additional £500 or £600 will be required for incidental expenses.

One of the sub-committees has charge of the work of visiting the people. The whole city and suburbs have been carefully mapped out and divided into manageable districts. Volunteers have gone out with handbills to leave an invitation to the meetings in every house and in every household in Dublin. This has been an enormous undertaking, but it has been energetically carried out.

All the railway companies have agreed to run excursion trains for the opening of the mission, thus enabling persons to come from Belfast, Cork, Galway, and other places. On some of the lines daily return tickets at single fares are to be issued from stations near Dublin.

The United Services Committee have invited Rev. John McNeill to come to Dublin and take up the work after Mr. Moody leaves. Mr. McNeill has been able to accept the invitation, and it is the desire of large numbers that he may make his stay a long one.

Prayer meetings in preparation for the work have been organised in various centres—one each day in the Christian Union Buildings, and others in city churches. The interest aroused in Dublin is very widespread, as is evidenced by the great variety of sums contributed to the cost of the mission.

Mr. Moody will remain in Dublin a fortnight. A religious movement on a large scale there will directly affect the whole life of Ireland. There are no limits set to the possibilities for good in the present effort. It is on a scale of effort and of hopeful expectation unprecedented in the history of Ireland. The need of the hour is prayer for the presence and power of the Holy Ghost. The friends of Ireland in England, Scotland, and throughout the world should unite at this time in earnest prayer for this blessing. A fire of evangelism kindled in the Rotunda Gardens might spread over the whole city and over the whole land.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN AYR.

This greatly honoured evangelist has completed the first week of a mission in the "auld toon." Much interest has been manifested by a large portion of the community and by many from the towns and district around. Some have been met with who have come a distance of over thirty miles to be present at the meetings.

The mission commenced on Sabbath, October 9, when, besides a well-attended general meeting in the morning, the Town Hall was filled twice—in the afternoon with women only, and in the evening with men only. It was an inspiring sight to see the mass of men stand up to sing one of the Psalms of David to a well-known tune. Mr. McNeill shows a decided preference for the old Hebrew hymn book, as he calls the Psalter.

Afternoon and evening meetings have been held daily, and the attendance steadily increased, until on the Thursday evening the Town Hall was packed with an audience in such solemnised attention as might gladden the heart of any preacher. Mr. McNeill's fearless proclamation of the truth has aroused the usual opposition, chiefly among "dry-as-dust" religionists, and those mere professors to whom Christianity, if they are to touch it at all, must include the theatre, the ballroom, the hunt, and the racecourse. The Gospel has prevailed, however, amid criticism and opposition, and many have been deeply impressed, while some have passed into the liberty and peace of believing.

One illustration of how the truth tells. A young fellow left the Sabbath-evening meeting in a rage, saying to one of the workers as he passed out, "That is the worst I ever heard. I'll not come back here again." But he did come back, and he is now a seeker after salvation.

One outstanding feature in Mr. McNeill's preaching is the presence of a living, loving, personal Saviour. He is there, felt and recognised—whether it be knocking at the heart's door of a Laodicean Church; in all his majesty speaking the word of power to wind and waves; or in tender and loving sympathy laying his hand upon the blind eyes of a beggar. It is the presence that is the power of Mr. McNeill's preaching; its charm is in his gift of voice and heart, and his keen insight into human nature. He demands attention to eternal verities as a reasonable thing, and demonstrates in a reasonable way that the man is a fool who is alert to the interests of this life to the neglect and disregard of the next. His scathing denunciations of mere long-faced religiousness without Christ, but in alliance with absorbing interest and excitement in worldliness and frivolity, will not quickly pass from the memories of those who have heard him. Equally faithful have been his loving presentations of the grand old foundation truths of substitution and atonement.

It is matter for great thankfulness that circumstances have made it possible for Mr. McNeill to prolong his stay at Ayr. Mr. J. H. Burke, who has been resting since the close of the ever-memorable Moody-McNeill mission in Belfast, was expected to join him on Sabbath last for the second week; after that they proceed to Kilmarnock for a mission there.

G.

BOSTON CONVENTION.

A correspondent thus describes the recent convention: "It was a most blessed season, and will, we trust, prove a good preparation for the visit of Mr. Moody." The first gathering was on Oct. 3, when Mr. Robert Wilson, the Keswick chairman, presided, and at the outset pointed out that the meetings were for such as knew the Lord.

Rev. A. G. Whaley followed with an address, "We would see Jesus." He well remembered the day a few friends sent in a petition at Keswick, that God would open the way for a convention in Boston, and after waiting for two years, with much prayer, the way had been opened. He urged the importance of the life being examined in the light of the face of Jesus.

Rev. J. J. Luce spoke of confession. It was a question of getting low enough before God, and being willing to be searched and to learn of God.

On Tuesday Rev. Gelson Gregson gave the Bible reading, showing that man cannot know God by his own intellectual powers; that spiritual interests, spiritual truths, and spiritual work can only be known and advanced by the Christian being baptized with the Holy Ghost and fire. Rev. F. Webster gave the first address in the evening on "How to walk so as to please God," and Mr. Gregson dwelt upon "Holy Ghost power."

On Wednesday the same speakers delivered addresses, and Rev. C. G. Moore gave a Bible reading. In the evening there was an after-meeting held, and it was a time of heart-searching with many. On the following day, Rev. W. Searle was among the speakers. The Word of God prevailed over many, bonds were loosed, wills subdued, and there was a gracious yielding to God on the part of Christian people.

At the praise-meeting on Friday morning many testified to having Christ as Master and King, and the Holy Ghost for sanctification and power for service. Two clergymen joined in this testimony. At the missionary meeting, Rev. C. G. Moore spoke on China, and the words of Rev. W. Searle, who had heard the voice of God the Holy Ghost saying "Separate me Saul and Barnabas for the work in South Africa," were very solemn. Other friends also spoke on mission work.

On Saturday and Sunday evangelistic services were held in the town. Several who attended the convention have offered for mission work in the foreign field.

SABBATH BREAKING COMPANIES

AND THE UNLIMITED LIABILITY OF THE SHAREHOLDERS.—I.

By Rev. George Wallace, D.D., Hamilton, N.B.*

"But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication."—Rev. ii. 14.

"It is impossible," said our Lord on one occasion to his disciples, "but that occasions of stumbling should come; but woe unto him through whom they come! It were well for him if a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were thrown into the sea, rather than that he should cause one of these little ones to stumble." Balaam incurred that woe when he advised Balak, the King of Moab, to put a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, causing them to sin. The story of their sin is told in the 25th chapter of Numbers; and Balaam's share in the transaction is stated in Numbers xxxi. 16. It was a dastardly act, and it was severely punished upon Balaam as well as others, who did not sin as the Israelites sinned, but who tempted them to sin. And in punishing the tempters with so great severity, God gave a warning to all who stand aloof from the sin into which they lead others, hoping to escape punishment because they are not open partakers in the sin.

It is a form of transgression into which shareholders in "companies" may very readily fall. The number of persons, even of members of Christian churches, who are in the position of shareholders, must be very large. For the future historians of our nation, in comparing the different centuries, will have to note as one marked feature of the nineteenth century, the large development of "companies." The extensive employment of costly machinery, the great amount of preparatory outlay on buildings and "plant," required to start most businesses, prevent any one person from assuming the position of master. Hence persons having money to invest are invited to become shareholders in large businesses; and what one could not do by his own means is accomplished by the combined help of many.

We need not ask whether the system is advantageous or not. It is an absolute necessity, which must be accepted with all its advantages and disadvantages. It is not without disadvantages, especially as regards the relations between the company and its servants. These are apt to become almost entirely pecuniary. The shareholders are chiefly concerned to obtain a good dividend on their investments. They are not brought into personal contact with the workers employed by the company. In fact they scarcely feel themselves in the position of employers. They scarcely regard themselves as subject to the laws laid down in the Word of God relating to the duties of master and servant; and their consciences are little exercised when charges are brought against the company of wronging those in their employ. They leave details to the directorate and to the acting managers and overseers. They are only concerned about the profits.

We do not believe that, under the government of a righteous God, responsibilities can be evaded in that easy fashion. The shareholders in a company are really employers of labour; for they supply the means by which the concern is kept going. If they were to withdraw the means, and no others were found willing to take their place, the company would cease to employ labour, and the wrong-doings connected with that employment would cease.

A PRACTICAL QUESTION.

We are not discussing an ethical thesis merely—a theoretical case of casuistry. The question before us is a widely practical one. There are companies in our land that systematically carry on work on the Sabbath—the one day of the week regarding which God has said, "In it thou shalt not do any work, thou nor thy servant." There are shareholders in these companies who would never think of working on that day, but who silently acquiesce in arrangements, made by the directors whom they help to appoint, whereby many of the men employed by the companies work when God says, "Rest."

Railway companies are the chief offenders. The permission, practically unlimited, given to railway companies to carry on their traffic on the Lord's Day, is one of the most prolific sources of the desecration of the day throughout our land. The running of Sabbath trains, at first timidly introduced because it was understood to be contrary to the prevalent Christian sentiment of the people, speedily developed when it was discovered that multitudes were prepared to avail themselves of this opportunity of "finding their own pleasure," and that Christians received this inroad upon their privileges and upon national duty to the Most High with much unconcern. The evil has now grown to a gigantic size. It is believed that there are at least 15,000 railway servants at work every Lord's Day.

The big whale is followed by the smaller fry of steamboat companies, tramway-car and omnibus companies, all encouraging one another in resisting the law of God and tempting their employés into sin. A state of things has thus arisen which calls for great "searchings of heart" among Christians whose money is employed in carrying on this unholy traffic, and who are sharing in the unholy gains. It is surely high time that the Christian conscience were aroused. Can Christian men and women in such a position prove themselves innocent of the charge of casting a stumbling-block before many others, causing them to sin? We think not. We shall endeavour to prove that they cannot.

Every Christian might be expected to acknowledge that it is sinful to exact from workers unnecessary labour on God's Day of Rest. But so perverted have the ideas of some Christians become that we deem it advisable to conduct our argument in such a way as to prove this point, that it is SINFUL TO EXACT UNNECESSARY LABOUR ON THE SABBATH.

1. It robs men of their natural right to a day of rest.

The enjoyment of the Sabbath is the right of every child of Adam, because it was originally given to him as representative of the entire humanity. The whole human race had a better right to the Sabbath than land owners have to their estates, or companies to their property—better, because older and more divine. They have as good a right to it as they have to the air and the light, which God gives to all. For the use men make of the day they are responsible to God alone; but no man is entitled to withhold it from them on any plea except such as can be proved at the bar of the Giver of the Day.

For when the Creator had finished the heaven and the earth in six days, He rested on the seventh day; and "God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it." Does any one object that no command was given to Adam to observe the day of rest? We answer that man in his state of innocence needed no such command. A promise of blessing from his God was a sufficient injunction to keep the day. God blessed the day; i.e., He charged it—filled it—with blessing for men. He sanctified it; i.e., He separated it from an earthly to a divine use. However, there could be no such use of the day without the hearty co-operation of man. Man, as well as God, has a part in determining what is to be done on the earth during any period of time. Man possesses the earth by God's gift; he enjoys earth and its treasures by his own labour. Surely it was very natural that God should claim a recognition of his place as superior over man and his earth, by requiring that for a certain period of time both should be manifestly at his disposal—man set free from earthly employment to seek close and uninterrupted fellowship with God—earth freed from human interference that it might be recognised as his property, and that He might be praised as "the God of the whole earth."

Would man, unfallen, need an imperative command for this? Does a loving child need a command to go to meet his father? He is glad to be allowed to run to meet him. God gave to his son Adam the right to meet Him every seventh day; and so long as Adam loved his Father he would not need to be compelled to cease from work that he might enjoy fellowship with Him. The prospect of the enjoyment would be sufficiently tempting to allure them. It would be sufficient to allure men still if their hearts were right with God.

Who will dare to tell any man, even though he is only a workman, that he has no share in the fellowship with his God to which that God destined man when He created him in his own image?

One special end, no doubt, which the Creator had in view by the appointment of the day, was to raise him to the dignity of being an imitator of God in his work. Man's week is to be a miniature copy of God's week of work. He has so arranged things that six days' work is sufficient to provide for our bodily needs; and to deprive men of their day of rest is to degrade them from being children of God to be slaves of earth.

It has been often remarked that the law of the Sabbath is written even in man's bodily constitution. The rest is required for the preservation of health of body, and the neglect of it makes a heavy drain upon the constitution, which in course of time will make itself felt even in the case of the strongest. That is serious enough. But far more serious is the result produced upon man's higher nature, when by the constant pressure of earthly toil for subsistence he is dragged down to the level of a beast of burden, or, at least, made a slave to earthly circumstances. If it be true, as old Homer says, that the day which makes a man a slave takes half the man away, it makes little difference whether the man is enslaved to a master or enslaved to his work. He is a slave, and those who enslave him, taking from him the badge of freedom given to him by God, will have to answer to God for the wrong done. Man, every man, has a God-given right to the Sabbath.

A TRANSGRESSION OF GOD'S WRITTEN LAW.

2. To deprive men of their Sabbath rest is a direct transgression of one of God's written laws, intended to settle the proper relations between master and servant.

That is one aspect under which the Fourth Commandment presents itself. It is not its only aspect, but it is a very important one, which must not be overlooked. When we regard the Fourth Commandment from this point of view, we see that it was given at a very fit time in the history of Israel. The scattered families were being moulded into a nation: the emancipated slaves had to learn their duties to one another. Slavery makes men thoughtless and selfish. A man must feel himself free before he can honestly endeavour to love his neighbour and treat him with fairness. Their God desired to make them "men of mercy." How could He, who is merciful and gracious, own as his children those who are cruel and unkind? Therefore He gave them a law, the essence of which Jesus Christ has said may be expressed in these two commandments—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," and "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Love to our neighbour in the form of kindness to those in our service is enjoined in the Fourth Commandment. That is clearly brought out in the exposition given by Moses before his death of that part of the Sabbath law bearing upon duty to servants. The life of the Israelites in the wilderness was not well adapted to form and foster habits of regular industry. It accustomed them to a comparatively idle life, their daily bread being supplied to them with very little effort on their part. When they entered upon the possession of Canaan, they would be under a strong temptation to shift the burden of regular toil to other shoulders than their own, and make it press hard upon the unprotected servant or stranger within their gates. Apparently, in anticipation of this danger, their great leader, before he took farewell of them, expounded the meaning of the clause in the Fourth Commandment referring to servants, saying (Deut. v. 14, 15), "That thy manservant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou; and remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched-out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."

SABBATH-KEEPING, TRUE KINDNESS TO SERVANTS.

All true kindness to others must start from the recognition of the common relations of all men to God. Hence the Sabbath formed one of the best tests whether or not they were prepared to deal kindly with their servants. Unless they recognised their servants as equally entitled with themselves to all the privileges of the children of God, any other barrier raised to keep down oppression of workers by their employers would be as flimsy as a wall of paper. It is easy enough to talk of the equality of all men before God. "Prove it," He said, "by giving them the Sabbath, which I have made for man,—for all men of every rank and degree."

Now, what was duty for the masters in Israel is duty for the masters in Great Britain. The God of all the earth has said, "It is my will that thy servants rest on my holy day from the grinding curse of labour."

The question is not whether the servant is willing to work. Usually he is not asked whether or not he is willing. Or he is asked in such a way as leaves him no choice except between working and giving up his employment. If employers of labour, or the overseers appointed by them, request men to work on the Sabbath, however gently the request is expressed, they know well enough what would be the penalty of refusal—dismissal at the moment, or as soon thereafter as convenient. Perhaps those who dismiss them in that way may quiet their consciences by the reflection that the injury is not very great, since the men can find employment elsewhere. But it is the highest injury which it is in their power to inflict, and nothing more than this can be said of the most cruel oppressors—they injured those whom they oppressed as much as they could. Even suppose a workman is willing to work, is it the duty of the master, who ought to show him the better way by refusing to let him work, to put a stumbling-block before him to tempt him to sin?

The main question for the employer of labour is not, what effect will constant unbroken work have upon the worker's bodily health? We believe it to have been proved beyond question, that periodic rest is not only beneficial but absolutely necessary to the preservation both of a healthy body and a healthy mind. But this may be denied, and attempts may be made to prove that, by shortening the hours of labour every day, you could give the needful rest,

* [illegible] Sunday Observance Society, 24, St. [illegible]

and so prevent any evil results from Sabbathless labour. Supposing strong proof to that effect is presented, it does not settle the main question, which is, Have you the right to deprive your fellow-men, equal with you before the Maker of all, of a privilege which He claims for them?

SABBATH LABOUR A FINANCIAL MISTAKE.

Further, we believe that it could be proved that Sabbath labour is, from a pecuniary point of view, a mistake. It destroys the conscience of the worker, and, when a man puts no conscience into his work, the work must be badly done. Moreover, we all know how terribly strained the relations between capital and labour are at present; in fact, it seems as if that strain must sooner or later end in some great national disaster. What is the great cause of the strain? Want of confidence. Everyone believes that his neighbour, whatever his profession may be, is selfishly working for his own profit. Now, if workers saw in their masters a willingness to do justice to them in regard to the Sabbath, they would more readily trust them in other things. The Israelite was trained to deal fairly with his servants by being commanded to grant them rest from labour one day in seven, even in sowing and reaping time, when work was pressing. A beginning was thus secured for the consideration of what is due to others, especially to those employed in our work; and the human mind, like a wagon standing on a railway line, when once started is easily kept moving. The weekly Sabbath rest, requiring all to practise self-denial for the sake of others, is fitted to work into the selfish human heart this lesson, "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." If workmen saw their employers studying their interests in this direction, sacrificing profits to secure for them their day of weekly rest, we believe that would go far to sweeten the relations between them and their employers. It would beget trust. For they would see that the masters are not the entirely selfish beings they supposed them to be, but men prepared "to give unto their servants that which is just and equal, knowing that they have a Master in heaven, and that there is no respect of persons with Him."

But if any should be disposed to question the likelihood of such a result being produced, we shall not stay to argue the point. For even that is not the main question. It is—Has not the great God issued a law to this effect, Masters shall not permit their servants to work for them on the Sabbath? Who, then, will dare to trample that law under foot?

The only way of escape for Christians who are determined to make those in their employ work on the Sabbath is, to deny the binding obligation of the fourth commandment. But in doing so they run against the will of God as expressed in the original institution of the Sabbath. The law of the fourth commandment is only a duty rising out of the condition of things established by the Creator. It says, "Do this,"—"for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it." Whoever works or causes others to work on the Sabbath sets himself against the order established by God in creation.

If some who call themselves Christians, affecting a superior spirituality, speak of the disappearance of legalism under the Christian dispensation, and claim freedom from subjection to commandments, we remind them that the freedom of the Gospel is freedom to do more and not less than the commandment requires. A Christian is free from the letter of the law, if he is under the power of a spirit that will make him run better in the way of God's law than he would with the letter as his spur. If he comes short of the letter, then it binds him; as the laws of Britain permit a debtor to pay to his creditors more than he owes, but if he proposes to pay less the law holds him to the letter of his agreement.

We leave such Christians to settle the matter with their Lord and Master, for He has taken the Sabbath law under his protection, claiming to be Lord of the day (Matt. xii. 8), and claiming it for all men as their birthright from the beginning of the world (Mark ii. 27). We agree with the writer in the "Public Commentary" on this text, who says: "The words 'Man was not made for the Sabbath' would have no meaning in relation to a simply Jewish ordinance."

THE LORD'S TRYST.

Our Lord's claim to the day as his own is urged by Him in a way that leads us to notice,

3. The proper place for men is to be with the Lord of the Sabbath on his own day, and employers who prevent those in their employ from meeting Him in his own appointed way sin both against Him and against them.

When the Pharisees charged his disciples with Sabbath-breaking, because, being hungry, they had rubbed the grains out of some ears of corn and eaten them, He reminded them that by the Divine law some kinds of work were permitted on the Sabbath, because they were required for the due performance of the sacred services of the Temple. Then He added, "But I say unto you that One greater than the Temple is here" (Matt. xii. 6). To serve Him was more important than to serve the Temple. Therefore to prepare a breakfast, even in an unusual way, was lawful, if that was necessary to secure their being with Him. The great point in keeping the Lord's-day is to be with the Lord on the day. "For the Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath"; not, as some tell us, to abolish it, but to invest it with new privileges, and to give it new sanctions.

Specially note this privilege. He has appointed it as the day of intimate fellowship with Himself. His chosen trysting-place for meeting with those who love Him is the assembled church. So He indicated when He met his disciples assembled in the upper room at Jerusalem on the evening of the day of his resurrection, and did not meet them again until seven days after. The particular day of the week, the seventh, was changed by Him to the first, in virtue of his authority as Lord of the Sabbath; but the old arrangement remained—every seventh day a holy day. So the Apostle John was taught when to his eyes, purged from dull sense, the Son of Man was revealed as walking among the churches on the Lord's-day (Rev. i. 10-26).

He claims this day for all men, that all may meet Him in assembly in their church capacity, and receive his blessing. He demands worship from all on this day, such praise as is due unto Him "who loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto his God and Father." And who dare come between Him and any number of those whom He invites to be partakers in all the blessings of his salvation? Who dare close the mouths of any of those who ought to praise Him on this day? Christians such employers of labour, shareholders in Sabbath-breaking companies and others, may call themselves. Can they be Christians who rob Christ of his praise and men of their share in his salvation?

They may be in the House of God themselves, doing their duty, as they think. How can they expect their worship to be acceptable when they prevent others from doing their duty? They may be trying to secure heaven for themselves. How can they expect to reach it while they are hindering others from entering on the way to heaven? Methinks that their prayers and praises can never rise into God's ears, weighed down as they must be by the injustice done to those whom they are robbing of their share in the Divine provision for life and immortality.

Hoxton Market Christian Institute.

Mr. John Birt, and others, have for some six years carried on a good work in this district, beginning with a meeting in a lodging-house and extending into wide-spreading and useful operations. For some time, however, the need for larger and more suitable premises has pressed closely on these earnest workers, and efforts have been made towards the erection of new buildings. These have proved successful, and on Saturday afternoon a new Institute was opened by Lady Jeune, who referred to the erection of the new building raised by willing and loving hearts and hands. They had made it seem as if some fairy had been in Hoxton since she was last there, in the temporary hall, three years ago. She had on that occasion left with a sad heart. Now she came and found a beautiful building. She attached great importance to the work among the young people and children. Lady Jeune then handed the key of the institution to the treasurer, Mr. A. E. Roby, who stated that contributions had been received to the amount of £50, which had already been spent. The total liabilities were over £300. They had £250 to raise to meet immediate requirements.

Mr. John Kirk, of the Ragged School Union, in the name of the committee, promised £50 on condition that the other £200 was forthcoming. Besides the above amount another £100 was required for fittings. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. Naoroji, M.P., E. H. Pickersgill, M.P., John M'Call, J. Wilson, and several others. In addition to a number of Christian moral and physical agencies in operation, there is a labour bureau, lodgings for the destitute, distribution of clothes to the ragged, and useful classes for elder lads and girls sorely in need of Christian and loving influence to save them wandering far astray.

GRAVESEND.—A conference for the deepening of the spiritual life met at Gravesend last week, when services were held in all Nonconformist places of worship, and most encouraging and profitable times were realised.

HOMES FOR WORKING GIRLS.

The new report of the Homes for Working Girls in London is full of interesting details of a really good work. The homes are ten in number, situate in various parts of the Metropolis, and accommodate 502 young women. The endeavour of the committee is "to help those who help themselves"; at the same time to afford profitable recreation for young women engaged in factories and workrooms, and, above all, to surround them with Christian influences and friendly guidance at the most critical period of their lives.

The report says:—"The West-end Homes meet the requirements of a very large number of working girls and young women employed within a mile radius of Oxford Circus, and what they would do for home accommodation without these Homes is difficult to estimate. A very large number of the business girls employed in the dressmaking and millinery trades in provincial towns make a determined effort to spend a year or two of their early training in the West-end in order to better fit themselves in their trade and occupation. Every year hundreds of young people newly appear on the scene, and we say most reverently and unhesitatingly that God only knows what numbers of them would do were it not for these Homes. To meet the requirements of this class it is desired to open another home in the West-end."

One of the leading characteristics in the development of this home-work is that all the advantages and social benefits of the Homes are administered solely with a view to assisting the truly industrious; thus no lazy, reckless, or idle young person can find a shelter in them. It is no mean fact to mention that very few of the applicants for admission are ever refused, inasmuch as the working girls and young women who know of the Homes, and desire to live in them, are aware that they cannot live on charity, but that they must do their utmost to pay the charges made for board and lodging. The poor and unfortunately circumstanced applicant is never denied admission, provided that she is ready diligently to seek occupation.

During 1891 the residents of the Homes paid no less than £3,022 for rent and bedroom accommodation, and the comforts of home life, and a further sum of £3,363 for their food. It is highly satisfactory to note that the money thus paid for board also covered the cost of the board of the superintendents and domestic helpers. Thus it is clear that there is no element of pauperisation about the work. The report is eminently practical in matter. It says:—"Cities and towns are full of young women who are unadapted for urban life, and it would perhaps be a happy thing for many of them if the law could send them back to their country homes. When it is known that out of every 10,000 persons living in England and Wales 1,452, or rather more than one in seven, dwell in the Metropolis, it is an easy problem to solve the probabilities of many a young workwoman being defeated in her ambitious journey to overstocked London. It would be a great advantage generally if country girls who leave home to better themselves in trade and business would seek their livelihood in domestic service. No occupation is more honourable, notwithstanding that the lexicographers have, unfortunately, given the rendering 'a domestic servant' as one of the definitions of the word 'menial.' We long for better times and ideas on this vexed subject of woman labour, for any one who knows of the difficulties which these country girls have to meet, knows that in the majority of case they are terribly handicapped in their struggle fo subsistence."

The social side of life is not overlooked, and it is suggested that this might be promoted in a healthy manner by a series of soirées to which the young people will be welcomed along with friends and acquaintances.

Any respectable working girl or young woman who can substantiate her character to the satisfaction of the superintendent is eligible for admission into the Homes; but none are admitted who are more than twenty-five years of age. All communications should be addressed to the honorary director, Mr. John Shrimpton, Westminster Chambers, 3, Victoria-street, S.W.

HAMPSTEAD HEATH.—The open-air workers on the Heath assembled in large numbers at the rooms of the Y.M.C.A., Willoughby-road, on Tuesday week to review the work of the past season, and to rejoice together over the results. Mr. Swinburn, representing the Y.M.C.A. Mission Band, and Mr. H. M. Wright, leader of the open-air mission meeting, gave interesting accounts of the efforts put forth on the Heath, and mentioned instances of blessing. Mr. Carleton Baynes, who presided, Rev. J. R. Gillies, Professor H. Langhorne Orchard, and Mr. Frank Cockrem, also delivered addresses, and the open-air mission male choir rendered selections of sacred song.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR SOCIETY.

By Rev. J. B. MORGAN, Chester.

III.—THE ENDEAVOUR PRAYER MEETING.

The weekly prayer meeting is the "beating heart" of the Endeavour Society. As unlikely as living body with dead heart, or strong body with weak heart, is living, strong Christian Endeavour Society without its weekly prayer meeting in healthy working order. Some have doubted of the popularity and success of the movement, of its attractiveness for young people, because of the stress it lays upon the prayer meeting. "Our young people will not come to a prayer meeting," is the pessimistic foreboding, based, perhaps, on experience gained in the ordinary church prayer meeting. The reply is, "Try them and see; they come elsewhere."

Instead of being the weak spot, it is in reality the strength of the movement. There are prayer meetings and prayer meetings. Some, it is to be feared, bear little resemblance in quickened fervour, enthusiasm, expectancy to those of the Upper Room of long ago. If we could catch the Spirit of that Pentecost-ushering time there would be small grounds for complaint of "humdrum routine," "deadly dulness," and so forth. The Christian Endeavour Society aims to restore the prayer meeting to the position it held in the early Church, when they were "with one accord in one place." There will be more power and more blessing when that is accomplished.

BEGINNING THE MEETING.

Humanly speaking, something depends on getting a good start. The formal plan of having the seats in straight rows behind each other is not to be commended. A semi-circular arrangement close around the leader's chair is much to be preferred; better, too, to have a compact meeting than a number of people sparsely scattered over a large area. It does not conduce to the interest for those present to get as far from each other as possible, and especially to hold the front seats in dread and avoidance. The leader does not feel any more comfortable for being left "alone in his glory." Members of the Prayer or Social Committee should see that the front seats are filled. A large board, inscribed with the words, "Please come to the front," facing the entrance, has been found useful. Is it always exceeding modesty and the charity that "in honour prefers one another" that keeps people at the back in church worship? Do the same people never pay a higher price for a front seat at lecture or entertainment? The members themselves should see that the front seats are not left vacant; the social committee, perhaps, being left behind to welcome strangers and speak to them after the meeting. Equally advisable is promptness and punctuality. Begin and close at the appointed times. In his book entitled "Ways and Means" Dr. Clark speaks of "some little foxes that spoil the prayer-meeting vine"; inattention to these details is among the number.

TOPICS FOR PRAYER.

There should be plenty of Bible in a Christian Endeavour prayer-meeting. Perhaps it would be wrong to speak of the Y.P.S.C.E. as "a society of one book," but it is not too much to say that all others are of very minor importance compared with that one. It is the blazing sun beside which the rest are merely twinkling stars. It is desirable, however, that there should be limitations as to the choice of topics and methods of treatment. The Y.P.S.C.E. does not meet for theological discussion, nor, in the first place, for critical examination. If personal doubts are frankly stated, not for the purpose of mental sword-crossing, but to obtain light, they may be admitted and answered, but nothing should be allowed to usurp the place of the personal, experimental, practical nature of the service. Head is not despised, but heart is more valued.

Mischief may easily be wrought by the selection of an unfortunate topic. A good brother recently put down "Election" as the subject for his night as leader. He was an American, and not only did he strongly support his own views, but with equal vigour denounced those of an opposite school of thought. When he sat down the meeting was electric with bustling arguments; a brother of other views asked for the hymn "Grace, 'tis a charming sound." It was a lively meeting, but its spirit was neither prayerful nor workful. A list of topics for six months is issued by the Sunday School Union, and perhaps, generally speaking, it is best to adopt these uniform subjects for consideration.

THE PRAYER CHAIN.

One of the more novel features of a Christian Endeavour prayer-meeting is to be found in what is called "prayer chain" or "one-sentence prayers." Long prayers are not encouraged—very few of them exceed two or three minutes—but what is lost in ornateness is often gained in directness. Prayer rhetoric is surely of little moment in the Divine estimate. But, apart from the more usual custom of asking two or three to offer prayer by the introduction of the prayer chain, a dozen or more can offer a brief earnest petition, just one sentence in length, about as long as that offered by the publican in the Temple, who stood afar off and said, "God, be merciful to me a sinner." On learning that the pledge contains the words, "I promise to take some part, aside from singing, in every meeting, unless hindered by some reason that I can conscientiously give to my Lord and Master Jesus Christ," the question has many times been asked, "How is that possible in a large society?" In a great degree the prayer chain answers it by itself: fifteen or twenty may take part within a minute.

But, in addition to that, the prayer chain affords encouragement to young and timid Christians to take part in public prayer. Many who would be hindered rising for a set effort are quite ready with bended head to speak one little word to God in the hearing of their fellows. There will be fewer "non-paying members" in churches that contain a Christian Endeavour Society.

A PRAYER MEETING PROGRAMME.

There is, of course, room for considerable variety in conducting an Endeavour prayer meeting, and no set order need be observed week after week. "In principles unchanging, in methods variety," is a good standpoint to take. One meeting may be "a promise meeting," another "an invitation meeting" another "a praise service," another "a memoriter meeting"—that is, a meeting in which everything is done without reference to book—and so on as prayerful tact may suggest. As an indication of how an hour may be profitably occupied, it may be well to sketch a programme and time bill for an ordinary weekly meeting of the society;—

Programme.

8.0 Song "Jesus, and shall it ever be."
8.5 Prayer.
8.8 Bible reading, Mark viii. 27-38.
8.13 Solo, duet, or quartet.
8.20 Prayer chain (concluding with the Lord's Prayer).
8.28 Leader's fifteen minutes, subject, "Not ashamed of the Gospel."
8.43 Comments, exhortation, song, and prayer.
8.53 Song, "I'm not ashamed to own my Lord."
8.58 Prayer and Mizpah Benediction.

Some of the larger societies print their programmes week by week.

"JOTS AND TITTLES."

An explanatory word or two may be permitted on such a programme as this. In the hymn singing it is not necessary nor expedient to play over on the instrument the whole verse and long chorus of some well-known hymn, before rising to sing it, a few bars are quite sufficient. Then, if the leader anticipates occupying his full fifteen minutes, it is well to ask one or more other members of the society to take the opening prayer exercises. The Bible reading may be taken in several different ways—by the leader alone, or verse by verse around the meeting, but the method most in favour is for the leader to read the first verse, the meeting in unison the second, and so to the end.

In the solo or part singing, especial care should be taken to avoid the least approach to a performance. The concert element is utterly out of place in an Endeavour prayer meeting. It should be just as much the aim of singers to "sing for Jesus" as of speakers to speak for Him. The leader should avoid lecturing or talking down to those present. Anyone who cannot for that occasion be one of the young people, whether he be eighteen or eighty, had better not speak at all. The after comments may be in the shape of a Scripture verse or scrap of poetry appropriate to the subject, an illustrating incident, or word of experience. For the Mizpah benediction, let all stand and repeat the words, "The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent one from another."

THE CONSECRATION MEETING.

Everybody at all acquainted with the Christian Endeavour Society knows that once a month the prayer meeting takes special form and becomes "The Monthly Consecration meeting." It is no part of the work of the present paper to defend such a service. In reality it needs no defence. As Dr. Clark says, "The Consecration Meeting has proved its right to be by the blessings it has conferred, and the society that refuses to have such a meeting is exceedingly unwise, since it is rejecting not a theory, but a proved blessing." This meeting differs from the rest in that the roll of members is called over, and, in responding, each one solemnly pledges himself to renewed devotion to the Saviour and his cause. A letter is expected from every member who is unavoidably absent from this service.

The consecration meeting should be a quiet, reverent, solemn hour. Before the roll is called a short prayer should be offered, asking that every response may be in truth and earnestness. Then the names should be called over in batches, perhaps of ten or a dozen, with a verse breathing the spirit of consecration, or a minute of silent prayer interspersed. The response should never be made with a simple "here," or "present," but with some word of resolve or desire expressed in verse, or Scripture, or the member's own language. The spirit of the whole meeting should be that expressed in Miss Havergal's beautiful hymn, "Take my life, and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee."

The question is sometimes asked, "Do not meetings so largely in the hands of young people develop a tendency towards frivolity or irreverence?" The answer, so far as all obtained knowledge and experience goes, is NO. No one who is intimately acquainted with the working of a Y.P.S.C.E. would think of asking such a question. The basis on which the society rests, the pledge taken, the whole constitution makes such a development well-nigh impossible. There will be, perhaps, occasionally the ripple of a quiet laughter, such as one used to hear when Spurgeon was preaching; but laughter may be praiseful and even reverent. What wonder, what sin, if the glad new liberty found in Christ fills their "mouths with laughter," and their "tongues with singing"?

Another difficulty with some lies in the active members' promise to take part in every meeting. It has already been shown how a very large number can personally participate in an hour's service. No doubt if a society grew to very large dimensions, some modification of that clause might be desirable, but what it aims at is to bring the responsibility of sustaining the meeting home to each individual member; and to ensure that everybody shall be willing and ready to step in at the least signs of flagging in the meeting. To sum up, the Endeavour prayer-meeting has been made a blessing to many thousands.

For those now pray who never prayed before,
And those who prayed before now pray the more.

A WORK OF GRACE IN GLASGOW.

Bethany Hall, Bridgeton, one of the chief centres of the Glasgow United Evangelistic Association's work, has been the scene of a very remarkable work of grace during the past month. Gospel meetings have been held nightly, and the message of salvation has been proclaimed with the aid of limelight views of scriptural subjects and of the Pilgrim's Progress. The names of between 600 and 700, who professed during the mission to have undergone a saving change, were taken by the workers.

A meeting of these convened was held on Wednesday evening, October 5. It was a remarkable gathering. Including the workers, there must have been about 1000 persons present, and no one accustomed to such gatherings of working-class people could fail to observe the clean and tidy appearance of the people, and the bright, happy faces betokening inward peace and new found joy.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. William Thomson, jun., evangelist, who has been the chief instrument, in God's hand, in this work. After a few short addresses from friends present, testimony was invited from the people, and for half-an-hour it flowed freely. Elderly men and women, and those in their prime, young men and maidens, and boys and girls told how God in his grace had saved them.

This hall, which is in the midst of a large working-class population, has long been a centre of blessing. Much good seed was sown there in former years when first Mr. Hislop and latterly Mr. Ralston (both of whom may be said to have died at their post) were in charge of the work, which is now superintended by Mr. Logan.

REV. OSCAR MICHELSEN,

EVANGELIST OF THE ISLAND OF TONGOA, NEW HEBRIDES.

Our readers have, from time to time, been informed of the wonders and signs that have been wrought in the name of Christ in the islands of the Pacific Ocean. The work of Dr. J. G. Paton, who represents the Presbyterian Church of Victoria, and has the sympathy of friends all the world over, is well known. We now introduce to notice the labours, in the same group of islands, of a representative of the Presbyterian Church of Otago, New Zealand, who has for some years been witnessing for Christ with very remarkable results.

Oscar Michelsen was born in Norway forty-seven years ago, and his childhood was spent in the parish of Ski, where his father was sheriff. He received a general commercial education, and being of an active turn of mind, he determined, as a young man, to seek his fortune in the world. Accordingly in 1867 he left Europe for New Zealand. Though not brought up under decided Christian influences, while yet a boy he made the Thirty-second Psalm the prayer of his heart. Arrived in the Antipodes, he connected himself with the Presbyterian Church, and soon found many avenues of usefulness at Hokitika, on the west coast of the South Island. He entered the employ of a worldly man, and his work was to serve in the shop, which was kept open on Sundays as well as week-days. Holding at the time somewhat lax views regarding the obligations and privileges of the Lord's Day, the young man fell in with the arrangement for a time, until interrogated by the tradesman's wife, who was a decided Christian, as to his disregard of the Sabbath. He then gave notice to leave his situation, but was kept on to work six days only; and at length, through the bold stand he took, his master closed his establishment on the Lord's Day. Later on the man himself became a convinced and converted Christian.

After a time Mr. Michelsen went to Dunedin, and became an agent of the Otago Bible, Tract, and Book Society. He had known what it was to live at the bush and among the gold diggers, so he knew how to make his way through the country; and this he did for eighteen months, popularising colportage work and circulating wholesome publications far and wide. This was the beginning of colportage in New Zealand; now the society has several agents travelling under its auspices. All this time Mr. Michelsen was hoping to engage in mission work abroad; but the way did not seem clear. Colportage was given up through failure of health. At length, on the arrival of the mission ship Dayspring, from the New Hebrides, things took a practicable turn, and facilitated the realisation of his heart's desire. A second missionary was asked for, and Mr. Michelsen offered himself, and was accepted by the Synod. After a period of preparation, in which home mission work and study were combined, he was sent out, in 1878, as the representative of the Presbyterian Church of Otago.

The first year in the group was spent at Nguna, with Rev. Peter Milne, the first missionary sent to the islands by the Otago Church. Here a language was learned which proved useful in future years, such help as was possible being rendered to Mr. Milne in the meantime. After a while Mr. Michelsen fell down with fever, and was momentarily expected to die. It was thought that nothing but speedy transmission to Sydney would save his life. Yet the time was rapidly approaching, when, according to arrangement, two of the missionaries labouring in other islands should come in the mission ship for Mr. Michelsen, with a view to settling him on unevangelised Tongoa! In due course they arrived, and feeling that he might as well die on one island as another, Mr. Michelsen went on board. At Tongoa, with the assistance of natives, the two missionaries built a house for the third, whom they helped ashore, and then left alone among the people. The situation was not reassuring, for although missionaries had occasionally paid visits to the island, the unpleasant fact remained that the population, about 1100 in number, was made up of cannibal heathen!

Though "down" in health, Mr. Michelsen was marvellously sustained in his missionary purpose, and led to pray the Lord to spare him for at least two years, in order that he might preach the Gospel throughout the island. He hoped by this means to do something that might ripen into fruition when he was no more. The Lord has more than answered that prayer, for it is after twelve years' labour in Tongoa that Mr. Michelsen is now taking a brief rest in England, after having visited friends in Norway. Recovering from the fever, which has only attacked him twice from that day to this, he addressed himself with all his heart to the work which he had undertaken, making journeys in all directions to tell the people the good news. Only one impression then prevailed among the natives regarding missions. That was that they were bad, because to become Christians the men would have to give up their polygamous practices. The ninth day after his landing, Mr. Michelsen walked twelve miles and preached five times; not a bad performance for one who had all but given up hope of living to work! On the occasion of his fifth address on that memorable day he was on the point of being clubbed by a hostile chief named Malakaleo. At the village in which his house was situated the people were fairly friendly, and a school for boys was soon commenced. The youngsters rapidly learned to sing and read. The former was a very important feature of instruction, for the melodies soon became popular, and in a very short time Christian airs took the place of infamous songs, and the facts of the Gospel went on before the missionary into the most distant villages of the island.

Quite early in his stay, a chief from along the coast called upon him, and said, "I am so glad you have come. I had a dream years ago. I dreamed I saw a ladder from earth up to heaven, and God sitting at the top! When you come to the island, I knew you were the man belonging to that ladder; and I want you to come to see us as often as you can, and tell us all about it." What an inspiring incident! The dark heathen was satisfied that the missionary had come to teach them the way to God. Need it be said that Mr. Michelsen saw "a great door and effectual" opened to him by the visit of this man? The following Sunday he went to the village, and was very well received. In the meantime the fact that the chief Malakaleo had threatened to club him created parties on the island—friends and enemies. Some who would otherwise have remained indifferent became friendly, and the news of the threat provoked a general inquiry among the people as to why the missionary had gone to live among them.

In the course of time all the chiefs called upon him except two; one of these could not come on account of a war that was raging at the time. Why the other, the most influential chief on the island, did not come was more than Mr. Michelsen could understand, and it was doubtful which side he would take. Several of his men had been working for the missionary, and after they returned home one came back accompanied by some women friends, and asked "to see Jesus." In fact, he wished to look at a picture, which he had seen in the mission house, of Jesus and the woman of Samaria! The Gospel story was explained to the little group, but they hesitated to believe it. Later on, having found out by these visitors all he could about the mission, the tardy chief called and asked for information concerning the new religion. Mr. Michelsen sang to him and talked on Gospel truth, and thus a very pleasant acquaintance was formed. In answer to some boasting men from Malakaleo's village, the chief declared his intention to learn to read. This purpose he carried out, and has been for years a true Christian and a faithful helper in the work of the mission.

After staying in the island for a year, Mr. Michelsen went to New Zealand and married the lady who has since been his helpmeet in the work. When he returned to Tongoa, after a few months' absence, he was well received, the women being delighted to see a lady missionary. It was not to be plain-sailing, however. Three months after resuming work, the missionary and his brave wife had to flee from the village, and were glad to take refuge with the interesting chief who had received instruction in the Christian religion. That was God's way of opening up the other side of the island. The missionary resided in that village for three years. Then work was continued for a time in the old quarters, and the people gave up heathen practices, and attended school and church. This was in the absence of the chief, in connection with the Kanaka traffic, but when he returned, an opponent of the work, the people were scattered. When measures for the future were being pondered, a willing chief from Malakaleo's village agreed to find a centre for the mission. This was done, and most remarkable it is that the work should at length become domiciled in the village of that once hostile man. To-day, however, Malakaleo is a hearty friend of the mission.

After this the important work of consolidation and development in various departments was steadily proceeded with. Now four entire islands and part of a fifth, which constitute the district in which Mr. Michelsen labours, are under regular Christian instruction. Upwards of 2000 people attend in thirty-two villages, and most of the teachers have been trained under Mr. Michelsen. They have been brought from cannibalism to Christ. One of the best of them was on one occasion, whilst a heathen, on the point of shooting the missionary in whose labours he now takes an active interest. Nominally the whole district is Christian, and there are no heathen. As Mr. Michelsen sometimes puts it: "When I came to the island the nearest native Christian was about twenty miles from me; and now I have to go that distance to find a heathen." What hath God wrought!

On one occasion a party of men asked him how many guns he had. They would not dare to go out of their villages unarmed, and were curious to learn the strength or weakness of the missionary's defence. The answer was, "I have one gun, which will silence all others, and one day it will be the only gun in Tongoa." He showed them the Bible, telling them that it told of the Prince of Peace. They hastily declared it without power, but many have since found it both the Sword of the Spirit and the Shield of the Lord.

In view of the great blessing which has attended the labours of Mr. Milne and Mr. Michelsen, the Church at Otago has sent a third missionary to the district, and this has so strained their funds that for the present further development seems out of the question. In distinct excess of orders, and therefore incurring personal responsibilities, Mr Michelsen has himself sent forth fresh teachers. He could not say "No" to the urgent appeal of his islanders. Other teachers are in pressing demand, under his brother missionaries, and the cost is very small—only about £6 a year each.

To the Kanaka traffic, of which we have heard much lately, he is strenuously opposed. It takes away the best helpers of the missionaries, leaving mainly old people to whom to entrust the work of teaching. Some of the Christian natives, when in Queensland, have rendered important assistance to those who have engaged in evangelistic work among the Kanakas. The traffic, however, is ruinous to the population of the islands, and if it does not stop it will come to an inevitable end through the reduction of the population. If it goes on for another thirty years it will probably cost the lives of fifty thousand people. The desire of the natives is that England shall take them under her protection, instead of allowing them to be preyed upon, as in the past, by trade adventurers.

Three different languages are spoken in the district, and in each Mr. Michelsen has written hymns. He is now getting the Gospel of Matthew printed in the Tasiko language by the British and Foreign Bible Society. This tongue he has reduced to a literary form, and it is hoped that the result of his labours will greatly benefit the people of the island of Epi.

Such is the reality of the change which has come over the scene that many of the natives of the New Hebrides have gone forth to carry the Gospel to heathen islands in the group. The people love their pastor, too. For when it became important that he and his devoted wife should take a holiday, and the church at Otago did not see its way to advance the money required to bring them to Europe, the people made arrowroot of the value of £100 to pay the passage!

Mr. Michelsen's story is a wonderful testimony to the operation of Divine Grace in the dark places of the earth. While of necessity remaining in England for a short time, our friend would be glad to address meetings Letters to him may be addressed 57, Pyrland road, Mildmay Park, N.

A BUSY FORTNIGHT.

The London Evangelisation Society deserves the confidence and support of all who delight in aggressive work, though it was for nothing else than this that they take the greatest care in selecting their agents. No one is set apart by them to this important work unless he has given unmistakable evidence of preaching power and spiritual tact in dealing with souls. The consequence is that their agents are welcomed wherever they go, and this hearty reception is generally followed by times of refreshing.

It has been so in Paisley, where one of their agents, Mr. Charles Galletly, has recently conducted a fortnight's aggressive mission in one of the most necessitous districts of the town. Although he has not been many months in the service of the society he has already won for himself a name as a successful evangelist. His recent work in Bethany Hall, Glasgow, roused expectation in Paisley, and his meetings there were preceded and accompanied by much prayer.

The blessing began to fall at his first meeting, and continued in ever-increasing volume until the close of his visit. During the fortnight about seventy persons professed faith in the Lord Jesus at the after meetings, whilst it is known that there were many others who owned to their friends that they experienced deliverance from their doubts and fears and an entrance into peace and joy as they sat listening to the evangelist's address.

Mr. Galletly's closing meetings on the Sabbath afternoon and evening had to be held in two of the largest churches in the town, and both of these were completely filled. He has, by his diligent and successful labours, made many friends in Paisley, who will follow him in his evangelistic career with their sympathy and prayers.

FRENCH PROTESTANTS AT WORK.

The following is extracted from a long letter from Pasteur Delattre, of Matha (Charente Inférieure), and two letters from well-known and accredited witnesses, M. Reveillaud and M. Sainton.

Matha is the centre of a very large district still reported Catholic, but where, forty-five years ago, there was not a Protestant. So long ago as that, a colporteur, travelling to seek out isolated Protestants, and finding none in that region, offered his Bibles to the Catholics. They proved the seed of life to a very few, and then in time an evangelist was sent, who toiled for thirty years with occasional encouragement.

A visit from M. Sainton in 1880 was the means of a powerful awakening. M. Delattre himself was settled there in 1887. He found circles of living Christians in several villages, but all outside those circles was outer darkness. He was thunderstruck at the ignorance and brutishness of the peasants, the neglect and immoral lives of their priests. Yet his message was listened to, and himself welcomed. For two years now the number of localities reached has been sixty-four.

"This little group at Matha," says M. Sainton, "truly understands evangelisation. When all French Christians shall have understood it as they do, we shall have regained the victories of the primitive Church." There is a wide influence upon the Catholics all round; indeed, these seem held to their religion only by custom, or, still more, by dread of the "strict ways" of the Protestants.

M Delattre writes: "In a village where I had held about a dozen of meetings, at the close of one I asked the audience, 'Do you read the New Testament?' Six young women answered affirmatively, and, showing me the good Book, said, 'Oh, Sir, if you could only come and explain it to us oftener.' On all sides they greet us with 'Come oftener.' In one place eighty persons come together to study the Scriptures."

M. Delattre concludes with these thrilling words: "We are ten, we should be thirty. We have full liberty to preach the Gospel to them. We in France are passing through a time which is unique and solemn. Not to carry the Gospel everywhere, even to the most retired hamlet, is to fail in one duty, and to be guilty towards souls."

MR. COOK'S MISSION SHIP.

Pasteur C. H. Winmin writes:—Four weeks of special services, attended with great blessing, have been held in Cherbourg on board Mr. Henry Cook's vessel, the Herald of Mercy. Each night crowds have listened eagerly to the preaching of God's Word, and souls have been truly converted. These persons recently converted are most active in bringing their friends and relations to our meeting, and last Sunday fifteen were publicly received in our church.

Every night services are being held in our hall, and the Spirit of God is working mightily in our midst. What a blessing it would be if the Herald could go in every port of France. The land is open to evangelistic work now, and souls would be converted en masse if this work could be carried on vigorously.

The captain of the Herald, with his mate, have been distributing freely God's Holy Word, and the kindness shown by them to those who attended the meetings will not be forgotten, and have helped much to the success obtained.

Mr. Cook adds:—Several ports of late have been visited, and large numbers of sailors, fishermen, and civilians have come on board to our evangelistic services, where evident tokens of God's rich blessing have been realised.

Thousands of copies of the Word of God, Gospel books, and papers have been circulated freely, but at this time we are greatly in need. Our troops and seamen having lately left Portsmouth harbour have been, as heretofore, largely supplied.

I shall be thankful if your readers will assist us in our arduous work by sending Bibles, Testaments, Gospel books, and papers, also small bags 8in. by 5in., as we wish to finish out this year, if possible, some 20,000. We also need woollen overalls, which serve as a reminder of the welfare of God's children on shore, to be sent to the Seamen's Mission, 47, Stoke-road, Gosport.

Our vessel has now returned to Portsmouth for necessary repairs to her hull, copper, etc., which has been much damaged by the continual rubbing of the quays and the vessels and fishing boats lying thickly around us. A new set of sails is absolutely essential; the old ones are really too much worn to be depended upon this winter, in which we may expect some very heavy weather, and if caught on a lee shore it would likely be attended with great loss.

As soon as possible, if repairs can be accomplished, several Christian fishermen are willing to join us for a month's mission tour round the coast of England for work among their unconverted mates. Who will help us to cast the Gospel net in these last fleeting days before the Lord shall come?

Mission to Village Children.

Last summer Mr. S. J. Hewlett, in company with other workers, went through some villages in the home counties. This year he has made further tours. He writes:—"At the close of the seaside work a young brother in the Lord joined me, and from Herne Bay we visited many villages and hop gardens in Kent. In nearly all cases we were received with much gladness on the part of the grown-up friends, and especially so by the children. The services held round the camp fires of the hoppers were very interesting, and we believe greatly blessed. From Kent I went to Sussex, and on into Hampshire. Many villages in our land are very dark. They are being worked by the Romanists, who are evidently not leaving a stone unturned to further their ends. Then, again, there is the Romanising party in the Church of England. I am hoping to get sufficient funds to build a caravan for next year's work."

A CURIOUS CONTROVERSY has arisen in Hungary. For a quarter of a century an amicable arrangement has existed between the Catholic and non-Catholic clergy, by which those of one persuasion baptized and registered the children of other religious faiths whose pastors were absent, the law only requiring that notification be made to the proper clergyman with a view to the subsequent arranging of the child. This the Vatican has now condemned as contrary to the principles of the Romish Church. As, however, the Hungarian Government will not give way, the question will become a political as well as a religious one, involving serious and important issues.

For the Young

TESSIE.

While canvassing a large tenement in Sullivan-street, New York, we found Tessie, a little half-starved girl of seven years. She was so bright and winsome that we were at once interested, and resolved, if possible, to rescue her from the physical and the moral filth which surrounded her. After listening awhile to the maudlin talk of the drunken mother, we drew the child to us, and told her the "sweet old story of Jesus and his love," the sad little face growing brighter and brighter in its interest and sympathy for a Saviour who could care for poor little children, and before we left a strong desire had been awakened in her heart to go to Sunday-school, where she should learn to sing and hear more about this wonderful Friend.

It was not hard to gain the mother's consent, so Tessie became a member of the Bethlehem Sunday-school. Always present, if possible, but, alas! there were often long breaks in her record of attendance, when the mother, drunk for weeks together, resolutely barred her door against us, shouting through the keyhole in response to our earnest entreaties to see the child, "That her house was all upset, and she could not receive visitors."

When the summer came, with its opportunities to put just such forlorn children into sweet country homes, we desired to send Tessie, but her mother would not let her go, fearing lest she should not get her back again.

She seemed to be somewhat conscious of her unfitness to mother the child, though she clung to her with a passionate love which neither drink nor sin could quench.

Little by little we learned something of Tessie's history. The father had died from the effects of drink. The oldest brother seemed to be given up to his cups, and her home was a constant scene of sin and debauchery, until one day last winter, when the mother's life went out in darkness, and Tessie was left an orphan.

The awful death of the mother seemed to arouse the nobler manhood in the eldest brother, now a young man of twenty-three, and from that day he has led a different life. The two other brothers, also young men, and always sober and industrious, found him anxious to co-operate with them in their efforts to provide a decent home for themselves and the dear little sister. So to our surprise when we called the day after they had laid their mother away in the

with the offer of a home for Tessie, we were kindly but firmly told that they were going to care for her themselves, saying it was their purpose to educate her and give her every possible advantage in life.

Greatly disappointed, we still determined to wait patiently for the opportunity which we still believed would come of putting this child into a home where she should receive the Christian training we longed for her to have, nor did we wait in vain. In response to our first call for children to go to the country came Tessie, with the unexpected announcement that her brothers were willing to let her go. With a glad heart we worked for hours over her, getting her in a condition to pass the doctor. Then the Dorcas-room must be visited for the needed clothing, and there never was a happier little girl than Tessie as she went out of New York ticketed for Warren, Pa. A wealthy farmer and his wife received her, whose hearts the Lord had opened, and who have begged the privilege of keeping her always, at any rate for the summer. And there we love to leave Tessie, tenderly cared for and lovingly ministered to by a King's daughter, who sees in this little one the likeness of her Lord.—New York City Mission Monthly.

LITTLE PREACHERS.

A little girl, eight years of age, who was baptized in Foochow, China, with her mother and sister, seems to have been a most attentive listener during the weekly visits of our Biblewoman to her mother, and so became deeply interested in the Gospel story, so much so that she carried the good news to the day-school she was attending, and persuaded her schoolmaster to come to the College Chapel and hear for himself what Jesus did for mankind. He has now regularly attended the Sunday services for more than a year, and has induced several of the villagers to accompany him; he was baptized with his mother some time since, and his wife will also be shortly admitted into the Church.

The younger sister, aged only four, has learned "Jesus loves me," and has been heard telling her little playmates that they should not worship idols, but pray to the true God.—Missionary Link.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Two splendid meetings, to receive reports from seaside workers, were recently held at the Conference Hall, Mildmay Park. In the afternoon Rev. E. A. Stuart took the chair, and gave a very stirring, helpful address, based upon the first eight miracles of our Lord, as set forth in the earlier chapters of St. Luke's Gospel. Mr. T. B. Bishop (hon. sec.) said a grand work had been done this summer, especially among the boys. Very encouraging detailed reports were given by the following workers: Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Eastbourne; Mr. W. R. Moore, Ilfracombe; Mr. W. H. Roberts, Filey; Rev. Martin J. Hall, Bournemouth.

The evening meeting was presided over by Mr. G. A. Hutchison, editor of The Boys' Own Paper, who regarded himself as a skirmisher, joining in the work here and there, rather than as a settled worker in any place. He felt that the right workers were in the field, working in the right way and in the right spirit, having a very definite aim—namely, to tell of Jesus and bring souls straight to Him, not standing in the way so as to hide and come between them and Him. They believe that as soon as a child can understand what it is to love father and mother he can learn to love Jesus. Rev. C. H. Nash, Scarboro'; Mr. Reginald Naylor, Llandudno; Canon Taylor Smith, University Camp for Public-school Boys, Rustington; Mr. Henry Hutchinson, Bridlington Quay; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, St. Leonards; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Rhyl, followed with accounts of their respective missions. We have not space for details, but the reports were such as to give great cause of thankfulness to God.

Mr. E. Arrowsmith, Presbyterian Church, Lord-street, Southport, to October 26; Mr. H. Hutchinson, Congregational Church Schools, Chelmsford, to October 23; Sale, October 26; Monmouth, November 6 to 13; Clapton Congregational Church, November 20 to 27; Mr. Jas. S. Tyler, Lydbrook, October 22 to 30; Stockwell Green, November 6 to 9; St. Philip's, Maidstone, November 20 to 27; Mr. A. G. Dodderidge, Cambridge, October 20 to 26; Manchester, October 27; Liverpool, October 28; Windsor, October 31 to November 5; Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, Brockley Presbyterian Church, October 31 to November 8; Mr. G. Goodman, Victoria Park Congregational Church, to October 22; Onslow-square Baptist Church, October 30 to November 5; Mr. Ed. Hughes, Battersea-park Tabernacle, October 24, 25, 27, 28; Stockwell Green (with Mr. Tyler), November 6 to 9; Mr. S. J. Hewlett, Ockley, October 22 to 30; Boldre, November 6 and 7; Rev. Martin J. Hall and Rev. W. S. Standen, St. Nicholas Church, Gloucester, October 29 to November 9; St. John's, Boscombe, November 19 to 29; Rev. Martin J. Hall, Jesmond, Newcastle-on-Tyne November 12 to 13.

Annual meetings for seaside reports, at Strangeways Hall, Manchester, October 27, 3.30 and 6.30; at Liverpool Y.M.C.A. Mount Pleasant, October 28, at 3.30 and 7.0.

GLEANINGS.

Boys, many men have gone over the path of life you are now treading! When they warn you of the dangers that beset the way, listen to their advice. It may save you from many unhappy hours.

In Western Africa, Bishop Taylor saw a little girl stabbed to the heart by a medicine man by the side of her suffering mother, because it was believed she had bewitched her mother into a fit of sickness.

When a teacher handed slips of paper to her scholars, on which to write a cause of thankfulness, a little girl, untidy and uncared for, wrote, "I am thankful there are no public-houses in heaven."

A poor little London girl, helped by the Invalid Children's Aid Society, who lay for months strapped down to her bed, and whose only toy was a broken doll, made a wool ball "for the big girl who made me the scrap book."

A very small office-boy was chaffed about his size until he could stand it no longer. "Small as I am," said he, "I can do something no man can do in this office." "What is that, Bobby?" they all shouted, "Keep from swearing," Robert replied.

SUNDAY WORK IN THE NAVY.—The United Service Gazette says:—"There is not much foundation, it is hoped, for the whispers of discontent in the Navy which are heard in certain quarters. A great source of grievance is the unnecessary amount of Sunday work imposed by some commanding officers upon their crews, and certainly there seems no sufficient justification for any ship-painting to be ordered to be done on a Sunday, a day on which the men reasonably consider that they should be relieved of all duty not absolutely necessary. To go against the feelings of the men in this respect can only tend to undermine healthy discipline and to render less hearty the response to a call for extra exertion when the same is required

CAMBRIDGE NOTES.

The Michaelmas term has commenced and brought with it the usual influx of Freshmen, although report says that there is a slight falling off in the total number as compared with last year.

The daily prayer-meeting for undergraduates, held at 2 p.m. in the Henry Martyn Hall, has started with a good attendance, and there is evidence of the help that it is felt to be in the heartiness, both in the singing and in the prayers, of the members who come to it.

The committee of the Inter-Collegiate Christian Union are taking steps to obtain as many signatures as possible to an invitation to Mr. Moody to visit the University and deliver some addresses in November. They are stimulated in their endeavour by the recollection of the great good which resulted from a former visit of that earnest evangelist some years ago.

On Saturday evening, October 15, at 4.45 p.m., a very fair number of members of the University were assembled in the Henry Martyn Hall to listen to an address from Rev. E. W. Moore, of Wimbledon, on the Gift at Pentecost. The speaker dealt with the qualifications necessary for a faithful witness to Christ, and characterised them as knowledge, truthfulness, and courage. Added to these requisites, a witness needed power. This dynamic was granted to the Apostles upon their reception of the Holy Spirit. All may obtain this precious gift upon their prayerful entire surrender of themselves, body, mind, and soul, to Christ.

Mr. Moore was listened to with close attention, and at the conclusion many present were led to offer themselves unreservedly to Christ to be sanctified and endued with power for service.

Mission in St. John's Wood.

Last week's special services at Abbey-road Chapel, St. John's Wood, have been marked by much interest on the part of the many who have attended them, and the meetings are being continued through the present week, when a number of well-known ministers will join in the good work of seeking increased manifestation of the Holy Spirit's power among the residents of this important London district. Written requests for prayer are among the things which have encouraged the hearts of those who are co-operating in this stirring effort. Revs. Hy. Sharpe, Francis Sloper, W. D. Wright, and other neighbouring ministers are taking part in the bright and fruitful services. Short prayer-meetings at noon are followed by afternoon conferences, at which Revs. Archibald G. Brown, H. D. Brown, and G. D. Hooper, and Miss Mason have spoken. The first evening meeting was addressed by Rev. J. Gelson Gregson, upon "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit"; and the subject was continued on succeeding evenings by Revs. W. Fuller Gooch and C. G. Moore.

Sunday evening was an occasion of solemn heart-searching in the congregation listening to Pastor Stone's discourse on the Millennial Kingdom. In an argument based upon Isa. lxv. 17, lxvi. 22, 2 Pet. iii. 13, and numerous other Scriptures, the preacher contended that, as the earth has been allied with man's fall, so it is to be the scene of Israel's restoration and of Christ's kingly reign with his saints of all nations, previous to the final judgment of the unbelieving world.

Mr. W. R. Lane in Essex.

This evangelist has concluded a special mission at South Woodford, Essex. The meetings have been held in various churches, and a spirit of unity and prayer amongst Christians has marked the work. The Spirit of God manifested Himself in definite conversions night by night under the manly but simple-hearted utterances of his servant. Mr. Lane's rebukes against sin, his warnings of coming judgment, and the winning manner in which he urged his hearers to trust Jesus will not soon pass away.

On the last night, almost the whole congregation of the Congregational Church remained to the after-meeting.

THE NORTHFIELD TRAINING SCHOOL has opened for the winter with more students than at any time previous. Mr. Moody has renewed his offer to the Societies of Christian Endeavour throughout the country to take twenty-five members of the Society at thirty-five dollars each, instead of the regular tuition of fifty dollars for the term of twelve weeks. There has been a great demand for the graduates in home mission, city mission, and church temperance work. The Bible Institute in Chicago is also making extensive preparations for the coming year, with special reference to the crowd that will be there to visit the Fair.

LIVERPOOL SHELTERING HOME.

Through the co-operation and gifts of many friends we were enabled last season to admit, train, outfit, and place in service in Canada three fine bands of boys and girls, who, I am glad to say, are all in a fair way to prove satisfactory to their employers. Our hearts were made glad on seeing the success and well-doing of those who had been pining and dying in want. By taking them off in separate parties we were able to fill and refill our beds and desks three times in the year. We have returned cheered that there is such a grand outlet as Canada, with its clear blue skies and sunshine; and as it rapidly grows richer there develops an ever-increasing demand for help that young hands can render, and for which very good wages are paid.

Thousands of Liverpool widows with children can have their bitter burden lightened by the removal of one or two under these inviting prospects for their future; and many a struggling widow can bless God that her young ones have prospered there instead of starving here. This very week a widow is sailing to Canada—her daughter having married and settled out there; a son who has been an industrious lad has sent her a ticket to come out to him. Let our lives be re-consecrated, our gifts re-dedicated, our efforts redoubled, to save the children. The treasurer of the Home is Mr. J. J. Kenna, 18 and 19, Mellor's-buildings.

TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

Satisfy your child; he is as hungry with his eye and his ear as with his mouth.

The purpose of teaching is to bring more out of man than to put more and more into him.

Look out for the lads! Better the fence at the top of the precipice than the ambulance at the bottom. —Ellice Hopkins.

Life is not to be made up of play, and yet play is to be the chief instrument used in preparing children for life.—Miss Minhinnick.

No greater harm is done to Christendom than by the neglect of children; therefore to advance the cause of Christ we must begin with them.—Luther.

There is a Child-redeeming Company in America, consisting of ladies. The bond of union is to deny themselves some luxury so long as there is a child in New York or Brooklyn shoeless and hungry.

In the convict prison at Copenhagen mothers are allowed to have their babies with them till they are one year old, then they are taken to the workhouse until the mother's term of sentence has expired.

The Church, says Mr. G. Downie, Liverpool, will never have fully done its duty until the whole city has been carefully mapped out and a Sunday-school planted in every district where one does not already exist.

While among the non-Christian population of Madras only thirty-eight per cent. of the boys of school-going age are receiving education, the proportion among the native Christian boys is as high as sixty-one per cent.

This is how China is being opened up, on the testimony of a missionary:—"We have fifteen girls, from nine to fourteen years, who four months ago had never seen a book. They can now read the New Testament, and understand what they are reading."

The lads of a village in Surrey who have left school have been provided with plots for cultivation. The work is superintended and explained by professional gardeners, and advice and instruction on the work is given at intervals by one of the County Council's lecturers.

Deaconesses in Mile End.

Dr. Barnardo writes to say with reference to the notice under this heading, which appeared in last week's issue, that the only crisis through which the work of his Deaconess' House is passing is that it is becoming more and more manifest that the workers must be all of them ladies who can contribute in some degree towards their own maintenance. This has not hitherto been the case, but now, owing to the extension of the work among the children, the use of the funds devoted to adult missions is necessarily circumscribed. There is no intention that the work in the House shall cease; it is hoped it will the rather expand and become increasingly useful each year, but Dr. Barnardo is most anxious to communicate as soon as possible with ladies who are prepared to devote themselves to our Lord's service among the poor, and who may be able to contribute, say, £10 or £15 per annum towards the expenses of the household, the rest of the cost being provided from the funds of the institutions.

Communications on this subject may be addressed to Dr. Barnardo at 18 to 26, Stepney-causeway, E.

FAREWELL TO LADY MISSIONARIES.

The friends of the Society for Promoting Female Education in the East met in Morley Hall, Regent-street, on the afternoon of Wednesday week to bid God-speed to three lady missionaries, while also remembering in prayer two others who had already started for the foreign field.

Rev. W. Chapman, who presided, spoke of the value of prayer, individual and definite, on behalf of missionaries. Friends at home little realise how much they may do in this way to support and strengthen those who have gone forth in the Lord's name. Turning to the ladies just going out, the chairman spoke of faithfulness versus success, exhorting them to "think more of doing the will of God than of seeing fruit." In following the example of the Lord Jesus we should observe his singleness of aim, devotion to the will of the Father, separation from sin, and sympathy for sinners.

Rev. A. B. Hutchinson, C.M.S. missionary, spoke of twenty-one years' mission service in South China and Japan. He had seen much of the work of ladies connected with the Society for Promoting Female Education in both these lands, and knew that they were rendering a service of the utmost importance to the cause of missions. After dwelling at some length on the value of the schools carried on by Miss Johnston at Hong Kong, and showing how these had been the means of winning many to the Saviour, the speaker concluded by pleading for larger support for the society, and urging the need for new school buildings in Hong Kong.

Rev. George Tonge, of the C.E.Z.S., followed with a few practical and hearty words, chiefly addressed to the lady missionaries. These are Miss Bushell, returning to Foochow; Miss A. Smith, returning to Nazareth; and Miss H. S. Fletcher, a new missionary going forth to Hong Kong.

The Land of Huss

A valuable acquisition has been made at Hussinec, the birth-place of Huss, the martyr. The premises where Huss was born, consisting of a house and a garden, have been purchased for the sum of about £90.

A brother writes that the Roman Catholic population of Hussinec are quite strangers to the Gospel, but they flock together in large numbers when it is preached, and already some fruit is seen of the seed sown amongst them. He proposes to lay out about £100 to repair the house, which is old and dilapidated, and to have it fitted up for meetings.

The Bohemians have a strong patriotic feeling, and they are enthusiastic about their former leader, Huss; but the Roman Catholics have contrived to separate in the people's minds the patriotism of Huss from his Protestantism, for which he died the martyr's death.

The purchase of the house has been completed, but there is as yet no fund for its restoration. An opportunity is given to any free givers for the supply of this sum of £100.

Communications may be sent to Dr. Baedeker, Wart-Eck, Weston-super-Mare; or direct to Mr. Alois Adlof, 23, Petersgasse, Prague, Bohemia.

The Garenganze Mission.

Mr. F. S. Arnot writes:—We have been cheered beyond measure with letters from the Garenganze. Our three brethren have been sustained in the midst of war and famine. Mr. Thomson writes:—"Concerning the future of this unhappy country one cannot predict with any certitude at present. The people are not to be found. . . The capital is now a cemetery, war and famine having done their work." Hundreds have died, it seems, of starvation. All the white members of Captain Stairs' expedition were reduced to the extremity of eating leaves, the Zanzibari soldiers dying at the rate of two a day. In the midst of all this Mr. Thomson is compelled to say, "Thank the Lord, we are all well and strong and have no lack."

Letters from Nana Kundunah and Bikè also full of cheering news.

BRIMSCOMBE, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—For several years an annual fellowship tea-meeting has been held here for Christians of all denominations, followed by an open meeting. This was held on Thursday week, and proved to be a season of refreshing. While others have been meeting and discussing how union is to be brought about, here, in quiet little Brimscombe, believers met and realised the union by speaking of "Jesus only." Amongst the speakers were Mr. James Wright and Dr. Neatby, whose addresses on "The Lord's Return" were felt to be full of power.

CHICAGO NOTES.

THE fight with Sabbath-breakers is going on in Chicago with much earnestness. Efforts have been made on the west side of the city to close the clothing stores, so that over seven thousand clerks can have a day of rest. Last Sunday afternoon a monster meeting was held in a large hall, Bishop Samuel Fallows presiding. The audience came to the conclusion that it was time to do something definite.

Despite the Act of Congress ordering that the gates of the Columbian Exposition shall be closed on Sunday, one of the great daily papers is flooding the land with petitions asking Congress to repeal the law. And, strange to say, multitudes of people have signed the appeal.

A mass meeting has accordingly been called under the auspices of the Sabbath Observance Committee, and the Christian sentiment of the city will be voiced far and wide in unmistakable terms. Dr. Herrick Johnson has given his powerful influence to this cause, and the friends of truth and righteousness believe the cause will win, yet Satan will not yield the field without repeated conflicts.

A feeling of deep solicitude is abroad for the spiritual interests of the people in Chicago next year. Calls will be issued for the strong workers to come over and help us. Forces must be massed; the best appliances called out; and a strong battle waged for God and the right. Farwell Hall, the home of the original Y.M.C.A., is rising. The work will soon go on day and night. It will be an immense and commodious structure of stone, brick, steel, and terra-cotta. It will be a centre of sacred influences for many years to come.

Willard Hall, in the Temple, is fast approaching completion, and will be the place for daily Gospel temperance meetings. No one can see the beautiful Temple and its surroundings without thanking God and taking courage. About three-fourths of the great building is now rented, and the income is sufficient to ensure safety to the faith and works of the women, in their immense risk.

From many conferences, assemblies, and annual meetings comes the report of advance in collections for missions and a general awakening on the subject. Some churches have doubled their former gifts, but the greatest general movement is seen in the princely gifts for the cause of education. The American University at Washington is receiving contributions even from far-off lands. Five million dollars must be raised before the doors are thrown open to students who may come to pursue post graduate courses of study. Preparations are nearly completed for the preliminary opening of the World's Fair. Tickets are being issued to the specially invited guests, and the 40,000 or 60,000 persons will assemble in the main hall, the largest structure ever erected by man. The ceremonies will last one day, and the military and civic display will be something wonderful. In all this wealth and wisdom, may the Lord have the honour, and some good come to his cause.

JOHN O. FOSTER.

South Evanston, Illinois.

A ROMANIST OUTRAGE.

THE Patriotic American of Detroit, Michigan, publishes the following letter from Elroy, Wis.:—

"There are thousands of people in the East who will be loth to believe the high-handed manner in which the representatives of Rome conduct themselves where they get the opportunity; but the case which has been decided in the Circuit Court here, and which has been appealed to the Supreme Court, will give them authentic information, and open their eyes.

"This town has a very large Roman Catholic population. It is not a large place, having a population of about 1600, and is located on the C. and N.W. Railway in Juneau county, about seventy miles west of Madison. They have one public school, with four rooms, in charge of four teachers. There are three School Commissioners elected by the voters, and last fall two of those elected were Roman Catholics and one a Protestant. They met, and elected one of the Romanists president and the other secretary.

"At the regular meetings the two Romanists would not attend, so there would be no quorum; then they would call a special meeting and not notify the Protestant. They appointed three Roman Catholic teachers, and retained one lady who had long been teaching there, and who was a Protestant, though there was a clamour among the Romanists of the town for her removal also—but they seemed satisfied with 75 per cent. of the teachers.

"Then came the priest of the Roman Catholic Church and ordered the Bible out of the schools. This was done. Then he ordered that the Roman Catholic catechism should be taught in the schools; the Protestant teacher objected, but she had to submit or resign. Then came the crowning outrage of all. One morning the priest came into the school and ordered the three Roman Catholic teachers to take all of their scholars over to the church at once.

"He then went into the other room and notified the lady to take all her pupils over to his church, as some interesting proceedings were to take place. She protested; but he marched every one of the scholars off, and, taking every child over to his church, he publicly 'consecrated' or baptized them into the Roman Catholic faith, Protestants and all, and many of the little folks did not know what was being done to them.

"This last indignity was too much for some of the Protestant parents, and with the Protestant School Commissioner they applied to the Circuit Court for an injunction to restrain the priest from further interfering with the public school. The court has granted the injunction, and the priest and his backers have appealed the case to the Supreme Court. This is the Supreme Court that last year decided that the Holy Bible was a sectarian book, and must not be read in the public schools.

"The Supreme Court decides such appeals on the briefs submitted, and the Roman Catholics have plenty of money to retain the best attorneys to fight their case, while the Americans have no such powerful organisation.

"In case the Supreme Court decides in favour of the priest, what will he do next? And what will every priest in Wisconsin do if the people submit? This is in America in 1892.

"The records of the Juneau county, Wis., court will verify every particular as given above."

THE PARIS CITY MISSION.

REV. S. H. ANDERSON writes as to the work of the Paris City Mission:—The reports of our missionaries are of increasing interest. A woman remarked the other day, "You must have wondered why I wept so much at the Lord's Supper. I was overcome by emotion at the thought that my dear husband and I had at last found our way to Jesus Christ," and she expressed deep gratitude to the missionary for having won them to the Saviour. They have both been Roman Catholics.

Another instance is that of a woman who writes with joy, to tell of how she and her husband have family worship at present, how he reads the Scriptures and she reads the prayers.

Two men of thirty have accepted Christ, and speak and pray at the meetings with their compatriots. One says "Christ has laid hold of me, and I have laid hold of him!" He spends the evening in making known the Gospel. The other is persecuted by his wife. Remember this work of grace is in Paris.

Another couple have been won for the Saviour. They frequent prayer meetings held on the week nights. The husband said, "I now believe in the Almightiness of God. No more belief in the Mass or in the errors of the Church of Rome. My only book is the Bible you gave me. My wife has gone to Brittany to see her people, and has carried your hymns with her."

The missionary who reports this is a poet and has composed twenty hymns for the Bretons, among whom he labours under the supervision of Pasteur Theodore Monod, and is greatly blessed and loved."

A long list of similar conversions follows, with statements about crowded meeting. Last month one missionary addressed fifty-six gatherings of working people.

Our ten missionaries are very zealous and fully occupied, but several pasteurs are pressing the committee to grant them an evangelist. Devout Protestants are very few in France, but these, though not one in a thousand, do all they can. They are grateful to their liberal English brethren, and add one-half to all money sent by them. The good work is now languishing for lack of funds, as fourteen of our generous supporters have been called home. The hon. sec. of the Paris City Mission for England is Mr. J. M. Weylland, 14, Nicoll-road, Harlesden, N.W.

WIESBADEN is a well-known winter resort. Its sheltered position mitigates considerably the rigour of the cold season of the year, and the healing virtue of its mineral springs for rheumatic and bronchial patients has a world-wide reputation. A great deal is done by the authorities to make Wiesbaden pleasant to visitors in the winter. In order to bring the advantages of a stay there within the reach of persons with moderate means, an institution has lately been started under the management of deaconesses, called "Christliches Damen und Familien Hospiz." It is situated in a very convenient but quiet part of the town, and is, as the name indicates, specially suited for ladies who are old, or for families. The address is 16, Jahnstrasse, Wiesbaden.

ZENANA BIBLE AND MEDICAL MISSION.

A VALEDICTORY meeting held at Portman Rooms last week under the presidency of Lord KINNAIRD proved a most interesting occasion. In addition to sending out more lady doctors to strengthen the medical staff, the society is taking a distinctly forward step. It is one which must commend itself to all who have watched the development of Mission Work in India, and noted the need for some special effort to reach the enormous population resident in its villages. The list of missionaries included six returning after furlough, these being Miss Abraham going to Patna, Miss Keay to Lahore, Miss Kimmins to Bombay, and Miss Pailthorpe, M.B., to Benares Hospital, and the Misses Leitch to Ceylon; also seven new missionaries—Miss Brett to the N.W. Provinces, Miss Gray, L.R.C.P. and S. Edin., to Benares Hospital, Mrs. Hewlett to the N.W. Provinces, Miss Hill to the N.W. Provinces, Misses L. and A. Leslie to Ceylon, for Medical and Mission work, and Miss Nathan to Lahore.

Miss WELLS is going out to begin work in the province of Behar, entirely devoting herself to its villages. It is intended that little communities of Christian workers should settle down amongst the villagers and seek to bring to them the knowledge of Christ and his Salvation.

Rev. A. R. CAVALIER said that fifteen ladies were going, of whom six were returning after furlough and nine were additional workers for the mission field in India. Cheering as it is to have reinforcement, the great need, in the North-west Provinces particularly, calls urgently for yet more help.

Miss M. LEITCH spoke strongly concerning the duty and responsibility of Christians to go to the help of the ignorant heathen, starving for lack of the Bread of Life. Rev. MARMADUKE WASHINGTON briefly addressed the missionaries. After the meeting was closed, many friends expressed their interest and approval of the new departure in village work.

Mission Work in India.

IN India's Watchman, Mr. W. J. Gladwin writes from Bombay:—"Two men are needed for mission work among the Jews. This is an important Eastern centre. Three men for City mission work among all classes. Three men for work among the Indo-Portuguese and other Romanists in Western India. Five men are greatly needed for colporteur-evangelists. We now have three men, but what are they in all India? Ten men are required for interior native work, where aggressive advance is being made. It is chiefly on self-supporting methods. Twenty-five more young men are wanted as 'Mission apprentices.' Any who have devoted their lives to the Lord's work, and wish to enter a course of training, study, and work, trusting in the Lord for their support or glad to work hard to earn it, may offer for this labour.

"For further information write to me freely and fully, stating your case clearly. Give age, education, occupation, health, heart experience, church, and religious work."

Waldensian Church in Italy.

THE latest report of the Committee of Evangelisation of the Waldensian Church in Italy gives a very encouraging account of the work which has been carried on during the past year. There are 138 pastors and teachers at work. Every Sunday 6639 worshippers assemble. During the past year 49,720 occasional hearers availed themselves of the opportunity to know what we are and what we want; the communicants, members of the church, number 4737, a net increase of 220. 2381 children are trained in our day schools, and 2,832 in our Sunday schools.

The various churches have given liberally, nearly 60,000 lire, or £3600, for the cause of God. This is a good sign, a proof that the spirit of sacrifice is plainly understood by the converts, who are nearly all workmen. The Committee of Evangelisation has appointed for the present year two lecturers, Dr. Gay and Rev. G. Ribetti. It is a new method, which we hope will be blessed by God. Italy must be for the Lord, and as the Christians are longing for reunion, we are looking on for the reunion of our people. Pray for us.

THE JEWS AND THE SECOND ADVENT.—A conference on subjects relating to the conversion and restoration of the Jews, and the Second Advent of the Lord, has been arranged for Thursday and Friday, Nov. 24 and 25, in Hope Hall, Liverpool. There will be four meetings daily, to be presided over (D.V.) by Mr. J. E. Mathieson, while addresses will be delivered by various friends

"THE HOLY LAND" AT BRIGHTON.

A DEEPLY interesting exhibition has been opened at 131 and 132, Queen's-road, Brighton. The object has been to display Oriental objects so as to entertain visitors and enable students to understand and realise life and its activities in the Holy Land, changeless in one sense but in another ever-varying and animated.

A large part of the ground floor of the spacious building is devoted to the representation of streets in Jerusalem, designed under the supervision of Rev. James Neil, M.A., the popular author and lecturer on Palestinian subjects. On the stalls are various articles of the character found in bazaars in the East, from needlework and embroidery to articles made of olive-wood from Jerusalem and the bright and beautiful wares of Cairo and Alexandra. There are also several stalls of books telling about Palestine and other Eastern countries; and refreshment stalls where the sweetmeats of Damascus may be bought.

In a picture gallery upstairs Mr. Neil gives amusing and instructive sketches of Eastern life.

A diorama of many spectacular effects and the famous Tentz models of Jerusalem in the time of Herod are on view. There is also an exhibition of the products of Palestine, brought over by Mr. Pilling, whose father is engaged in making the new railway to Damascus. They are samples of the products of last year's harvest, and their variety and excellence will come as a surprise to many, dispelling the not uncommon belief that Palestine is only a barren tract of country. Covering the walls of the upper floors also are splendid scenic paintings of the houses, walls, gates, and towers of Jerusalem, and the villages, fields, and deserts of Syria and Egypt.

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS.

ON Friday last two very interesting meetings were held at 33, Finsbury-square, the headquarters of the Barbican Mission to the Jews, to commemorate the first anniversary of the opening of the new mission house. The audiences, if not large, manifested great interest in this effort to bring the Gospel to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

The chair in the afternoon was taken by Rev. A. J. BRIDGEMAN, vicar of St. Andrew's, Islington.

Mr. LIPSHYTZ gave an outline of the work done in the house during the past year. He passed in review the daily services, at which they had been able to expound the unsearchable riches of Christ to the Jews; the Bible classes, so fruitful in removing difficulties and doubts; the reading-room, where so many, coming to read a paper of their own country, had heard of the Lord Jesus; and the Home for Converts, which had proved such an asylum for at least forty who were in need, many of them having been turned adrift by friends for Christ's sake.

The Chairman reminded the meeting of the debt we owed to Israel.

Rev. A. BERNSTEIN very warmly commended the work of the mission. Rev. PAUL ASHKENAZIE said he knew something of the difficulties of work amongst the Jews, but God was blessing it, and that blessing would be more abundant if friends would support and sustain the mission by their prayers.

In the evening Mr. T. A. MILLER presided, and spoke of God's purposes concerning his people Israel. Addresses were also given by Rev. J. B. Barraclough, Mr. Lipshytz, and others. Between the two meetings a sale of work was held on behalf of the mission.

Tunbridge Wells.

A USEFUL work is being carried on here under the management of Mr. and Mrs. John McAuliffe.

Nineteen years ago the late Capt. Bingham, being concerned at the neglected spiritual condition of the neighbourhood of John-street, opened a mission room, which was maintained at his expense for some years. Five years ago his widow invited Mr. and Mrs. McAuliffe to take charge of the work, which has proved fruitful in winning many for Christ.

On Thursday last a meeting was held to open an extension of the premises, an adjoining cottage having been secured and thrown into the existing hall. The meeting, over which Mr. Richard Cory presided, was addressed by several gentlemen from London and elsewhere, who met to bid God speed to those engaged in the good work. A touching feature of the proceedings was the announcement of over forty monetary gifts which had been received from poor members who had received blessing, accompanied by over fifty testimonies from men and women who had been led to Christ during Mr. McAuliffe's ministry.

The work is still personally supported by Mrs. Bingham, and on Sabbath and week-night the Gospel is preached by various evangelists, as well as by the friends on the spot.

Mr. McAuliffe's address is—The Mission House, [illegible]-street, Tunbridge Wells.

A TEMPERANCE CONVERSAZIONE.

A MEETING of temperance workers in connection with the National Temperance League was held on Friday evening in the Egyptian Hall at the Mansion House. The BISHOP OF LONDON, who presided, dwelt on many encouraging signs of progress, adding that much remained yet to be done before the eyes of the public were fully opened to the extent of the evil they were called upon to fight. No doubt men now looked upon the whole matter very differently indeed from the way in which they looked upon it forty or fifty years ago; and the change was unquestionably due to the perpetual and persistent exertions of the temperance organisations. But the subject was still treated more lightly than it should be, and some seemed altogether to have forgotten how Paul denounced drunkenness. It was the duty of all Christians to discountenance in the strongest way anything like levity about this evil thing, and to show that they regarded it as very serious indeed. He called upon them to see that in all their ordinary conversation they treated the subject as they should treat it in the sight of God; making it distinctly understood that they looked upon drunkenness as a most grievous sin; showing that, in their opinion, those who considered it lightly were forgetting their duty to God and to the Saviour; and making it generally known that, cost what it might, the evil must and should be put down by the determined resolution of those who cared for God's service and meant to lead Christian lives.

Every man should take the question to heart, and every woman too, for there was a want of progress amongst the women. He held women were as much men, or even more than men, bound to care about this thing, for assuredly women did suffer from the evil even more than men. He did not know anything more terrible to lay to heart than the fact that there had been for a few years past, and there was now, a growing increase of intemperance among women. It was an awful thing. He charged them in all their actions in life to make people look upon this thing as horrible. It was a terrible thing that a man should give way to intemperance, but there was somequite revolting to humanity in the thought that women did so – that the purity, the natural refinement and modesty which distinguished women, should be degraded by so fearful a fall.

Amongst the speakers who followed were Messrs. J. Williams Benn, M.P., C. E. Tritton, M.P., W. Saunders, M.P., J. R. Diggle, and other well-known temperance workers.

LET ME GO.

1 Kings xi. 14 to 22.

He stood in Pharaoh's palace halls
  Amid that royal throng,
A youth—whose life had ever been
  A poem and a song.
His to command—a prince was he,
Bred in the lap of luxury!

What tho' the fountains sparkle high!
  And soft the breezes blow,
Wafting sweet music on his ear
  The river's ceaseless flow.
Within those palace walls of stone,
Pensive and sad, he is alone!

Alone? his fair young wife so near,
  The daughter of a king!
While courtiers one and all around
  Unite his praise to sing.
Alone! his son before his eyes?
Why, surely this is Paradise!

He heeds them not, his brow is fixed,
  His lips with purpose pressed.
He has a strange request to make,
  Not one had ever guessed.
Mark the King's look of blank surprise
'Tis, "Let me go in anywise!"

"Go! lacked ye anything with me?
  The monarch made reply.
"I go to wear a crown and found
  A kingdom 'ere I die.
Not here in Pharaoh's palace halls,
But there 'midst Edom's ruined walls."

O, Christian youth of England,
  Brave loving hearts, awake!
To China's teeming millions,
  The living water take.
Afric's dark sons in fetters bound,
Shall they not hear salvation's sound?

Seek not midst England's boasted wealth
  For pleasure, ease, or fame;
But in God's strength go forth,
  To found a kingdom in Christ's name!
Oh, that from many hearts may rise:
"Lord, let me go in anywise."

North Africa Mission. E. TURNER.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

LORD'S DAY, November 27, is to be widely observed as "Temperance Sunday."

At the autumnal meetings of the Baptist Union, a resolution in favour of Local Option was carried unanimously.

A memorable series of temperance meetings has been held in Lincoln and the neighbouring district, under the auspices of the National Temperance League.

The Autumnal Meetings of the Band of Hope Union, held last week in Dublin, were marked by much success. The attendance was good, and the addresses and papers given were of great practical value.

A Parliamentary return, just issued, shows that £13,624 was spent for spirits consumed in workhouses in England and Wales for the year ended December, 1891. There was also a sum of £3,894 expended for wine, and £16,814 for malt liquor.

While the North of England Temperance League was in session at Newcastle, an object lesson was presented at the local police-court, where, out of forty-eight charges taken the previous night, forty-four of the prisoners were charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

During the cholera epidemic of 1832, in the city of Montreal, 1,000 persons died of the disease, only two of whom were teetotallers, and a Montreal paper stated, "Not a drunkard who has been attacked has recovered from the disease, and almost all the victims have been moderate drinkers."

A society founded at Basle to fight alcoholism has issued some sorrowful statistics. During 1891, in fifteen principal towns of Switzerland, of 6,885 persons who died over twenty years of age, 425 were victims of alcoholism. Of these, 366 were men, and the great proportion of the whole belonged to the educated classes.

An appeal on behalf of the Church of England Temperance Society has been issued by the Bishop of London. The activity with which the work is carried on may be judged from the fact that the society has at the present moment forty-two police-court missionaries, six mission women, six labour homes, and two permanent and two temporary shelter homes for inebriate women.

Russia produced (it is said) in the ten years from 1882 to 1891, 875,680,400 gallons of pure alcohol. That would require at least 20,000,000 bushels of grain a year. The other alcoholic liquors produced would doubtless require as much more. The grain thus spoiled for liquor would have prevented the famine in Russia that has bred the terrible pestilence now devastating Europe, and threatening the whole world.

Mr. George Blaiklock has just returned from South Africa, where he has travelled thousands of miles; 800 of these have been in coaches and carts, and on one occasion he spent nineteen consecutive hours in pouring rain. In 150 days he addressed no less than 170 meetings, and, notwithstanding all this hard work, looks well and in good spirits, as a total abstainer should. Mr. Blaiklock has begun his temperance work in England this week with a mission in Leeds.

In an article in The Lady's Pictorial, the following remarkable statement occurs:—"All fashionable doctors know how widespread is the evil, but they are too cowardly to speak out, and there is hardly a suburban tradesman of the classes concerned who could not, if he would and dared, furnish particulars even more startling than those which come from Haggerston missionaries and police-court officials, of the drunkenness that prevails among women who never enter a public-house or are seen outside their homes in a state of intoxication."

Lady Henry Somerset has secured the aid of Mr. John G. Woolley, of Minneapolis, U.S.A., as an advocate of temperance work in the United Kingdom. Mr. Woolley's first mission has just closed at Brecon, and deep interest was manifest at every meeting. Mr. Woolley bases his addresses upon words of Scripture, and illustrates the truths from his experience and observation. On one night over 100 women stood up to pledge themselves to advance temperance. Lady Henry Somerset spoke twice to immense audiences. On several nights hundreds failed to enter.

At the recent quarterly meeting of the Society for the Study of Inebriety, Dr. H. W. Williams read a paper on "The Urgent Need for Amended Legislation for Inebriates." "Our legislators," said he "should be up and doing, not something only, but a great deal, towards removing this foul blot from our boasted civilisation—the sight of a senseless drunkard allowed to go on day by day in his drunkenness, without let or hindrance, a focus of everything that is bad. I have no hesitation in saying that the habitual drunkard is a lunatic to all intents and purposes, as far as the abuse of alcohol goes, and as a lunatic should be dealt with."

Personalia.

Rev. J. Guinness Rogers has, on account of ill-health, tendered his resignation as the chairman of the Congregational Union.

Mrs. Amanda Smith, although far from strong, has been speaking with much power at Chicago, Des Plaines, Salt Lake City, and Ocean Grove.

Gipsy Smith has met with a cordial reception in the States, and his addresses at Ocean Grove and other gatherings have awakened much interest.

Isaac Sharp.—This venerable labourer has now left Japan for China, hoping to be enabled to visit and cheer various missionary brethren and sisters.

Rev. R. H. Roberts, president of the Baptist Union, has been invited to accept the principalship of Regent's Park College, in succession to Dr. Angus.

Rev. Charles Graham.—This beloved and honoured servant of Christ is, we regret to hear, seriously ill. Many who have profited by his teaching will pray earnestly on his behalf.

Rev Thomas Spurgeon had quite an ovation last Friday on his departure for New Zealand. A special steamer with a large company on board took him down the river to join his ship at Gravesend. A parting address was presented, and many hopes were expressed that he would soon return to the Tabernacle.

Rev. Dr. Pindor, of Teschen, Silesia, Austria, is adding Baxter's "Saints' Rest" to the theological works he has rendered available to Polish Christians. The decidedly evangelical character of Dr. Pindor's works and translations is a cause of joy among his people, who have little sympathy with the latitudinarian views held by some very influential pastors in Austria.

Rev. Griffith John writes from Hankow on August 30:—"I feel that I must send you my best thanks for the interest you have taken in the Central China Religious Literatures. Some of your readers have also sent me contributions direct in response to my last letter. You will be pleased to learn that we are quite on our feet again, our losses having been more than made up. In China the missionaries and others have come to our help in a remarkable manner. In fact, the fire has proved itself to be among the all things that work together for good."

Rev. J. H. Lawrie, of Aneityum, New Hebrides, will leave his station at the end of the year. This step has been necessitated by the illness of his wife, who last year suffered from sunstroke owing to exposure in the boat while visiting out-stations. Mrs. Lawrie is under medical treatment in Sydney, and as she cannot again reside in the tropics, her husband is most reluctantly compelled to resign his position as a missionary. Mrs. Lawrie's health will decide his future movements—whether he will return to Scotland or stay for a time in the Colonies.

Mr. and Mrs. Lethaby, from "the land of Moab," who were speaking in Edinburgh, are the sort of missionaries to come around in hard times. They will have no collection. An exceedingly modest couple (says The Scottish Leader), they carry on their educative operations in that out-of-the-way and which lies between Palestine and Arabia entirely at their own risk. And the risk is no small matter; for, on several occasions, they have been waylaid and robbed and placed in peril of their lives by the lawless Arab.

SOUTH MOLTON Y.M.C.A.—The opening meeting of the winter session was held last week, the Earl of Fortescue presiding. Mr. J. H. Sanders, the secretary, showed that the association was making substantial progress, while the noble chairman, reviewing the work of the Y.M.C.A. throughout the world, thanked God for the great things thus done towards the help and salvation of young men.

BELFAST Y.M.C.A.—The committee of this Association have secured the Ulster Hall for a series of meetings every Sunday afternoon. The proposal is similar to the "Pleasant Sunday Afternoon" movement, and it is hoped by such services to reach many in the community who are unconnected with any church. The Association will be heartily supported by Mr. A. W. Vance and the Fellowship Choir. The effort (says The News Letter) is worthy the sympathy of the Christian community.

MR. NED WRIGHT.—Since the beginning of September this evangelist has been working at Dr. Barnardo's Edinburgh Castle Mission Church, Limehouse, with marked success. The preacher's way of "putting things" is keenly appreciated by East London working folks. His solemn appeals to the careless and hardened are calculated to arouse such from their lethargy, while his marvellous history and striking personality are mute but eloquent testimonies to the power of the Gospel to reach, save, and keep the sinner of deepest dye. Not a few who attend the Edinburgh Castle date their salvation from the day they first heard Ned Wright.

Evangelistic Notes.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes has an interesting eight days' mission at Hertford.

Rev. Robert Balgarnie has recently concluded a fruitful mission at Weybridge,

Holt.—A tent mission, held by Mr. J. Cleworth, has been well attended, and it is believed that much good has resulted.

Chatham.—A special evangelistic mission, conducted at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Chatham, by Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, has been productive of much good.

Yalding.—A special evangelistic mission is being conducted at the Spurgeon Memorial Church, Yalding, Kent, by Mr. J. Burnham. There are evident tokens of spiritual blessing.

Mr. William Forbes has been giving addresses at Carlisle, Durham, Newcastle, and North Shields. On Sunday last he conducted the opening service for the winter in the Clock Hall, Paisley.

Mr. J. W. Moodie has just closed a fifteen days' mission at Otley, Yorks, which has been a season of refreshing, with tokens of blessing. He begins a fortnight's mission in Beith, N.B., on Sunday next.

Pastor Schrenk has been holding a series of evangelistic meetings in the German Temple, Mulhouse, Alsace. His recent missions in Germany and Switzerland have been fruitful of very encouraging results.

Rev. Z. B. Woffendale, of Somers Town, has been conducting a most successful mission at the King's-cross Theatre. As a result, a large number of new members have been received into the fellowship of the Somers Town Church.

Ireland.—A most successful mission has just concluded at Markethill, co. Armagh, conducted by Messrs. W. J. Loney and R. M. Robinson, of the Irish Evangelisation Society. Quite a number have professed to find peace through believing. Very encouraging evangelistic services have been conducted in Hall's-road Methodist Church, Belfast, by Rev. R. Cole and others. Similar services have been held at Lisgoniel by Rev. A. Armstrong and others.

Townhill, Dunfermline.—A series of open-air meetings have been held here on Sabbath evenings during the past summer, with gratifying results. An evangelistic association has been formed, and as the days shorten the work will be transferred to a school-room.

Newburgh-on-Tay.—Mr. J. A. Smith, Aberdeen, at the request of Rev. A. H. Davidson, Free Church, has conducted a ten days' mission in the Town Hall here. The audiences were good, and every evening there some pointed personally to the Saviour, while Christians enjoyed a time of reviving.

Wanganui, New Zealand.—Mr. C. H. Hinman, of Wellington, has been holding special meetings here for six weeks. The Lord has graciously blessed his labours in our midst, his visit proving a time of refreshing to believers, while not a few who were living without the blessedness of forgiveness are now rejoicing in Christ their Saviour.

Mr. Richard Weaver, the veteran evangelist, has been holding special services for the past eight days, in connection with Mr. Macdonald, in the Renfrew Town Hall. This spacious place has been crowded night after night, and many were the slain of the Lord. The prayers of God's children are asked on behalf of our dear brother, that he may long be spared to serve in the Gospel. The number who come to the meetings and testify that Richard was the means of their conversion is simply astonishing.

J. M. C.

A MISSIONARY FAREWELL will be held at Harley House, Bow, E., on Monday, October 24, at 3., 5., and 6.30. p.m., when the following sisters and brethren will be commended to God, prior to leaving for Central Africa and India:—Mrs. McKittrick, Miss Moxam and Miss Lanceley, who sail on Nov. 4 for the Congo, Mr. E. P. Davey, who sails for India on Nov. 11, and Mr. H. Hewett, leaving shortly afterwards. Miss M. Geraldine Guinness (from China) will give the charge to the outgoing missionaries.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—On behalf of an evangelistic mission in South Shields from October 26 to 31 inclusive.—For blessing on evangelistic services at Ardsley, Yorks, amongst miners.—That much blessing may attend a mission at Pembury by Rev. Dr. Morris, October 22 to 31.—Two sisters, that they may be delivered from great persecution and unjust treatment.—For a series of meetings to be held in Star Hall, Ancoats, Manchester, that God may own the work amongst the masses of Manchester.—For blessing on a mission to be conducted at Sermon-lane, Islington, N., from Oct. 26 to Nov. 4, by Mr. W. Harry Dawe.—PRAISE:—For especial blessing given in connection with a twelve days' mission at Wesleyan Church, Hackney-road.

Obituary.

DR. JAMES CAMERON (C.I.M.).

We hear with deep sorrow of the death, on August 14, at Ch'ong King (Sz-chuen), of this devoted labourer. He went out to China in 1875, and threw himself with energy and whole-heartedness into the efforts being made to penetrate what was then very largely the unknown and unevangelised interior. He travelled, it may be remembered, very extensively in China, crossing it again and again, and traversing on foot large portions of the empire. In March he took Mrs. Cameron and the children to Chefoo, returning himself in June to his post at Ch'ong King, where he was soon at full work seeing patients and preaching the Gospel. Cholera entering the city, he sent the missionaries into the country for a change. On Saturday the 13th he was himself seized with cholera, and on Sunday morning he passed away, being nursed to the last by Miss Ramsay. Thus has one more devoted and useful missionary been called to rest and reward. The loss will be deeply felt by many at home and in China. Not a few may find in his noble service a fresh call to personal surrender for the work of the Lord in China.

REV. CHARLES CAMPE.

We hear of the passing away of a veteran evangelical, Rev. Charles Campe, vicar of Christ Church, Mount Sorrell, Leicestershire, who will be well remembered at Peterborough, at Hull, at Ellacombe, Torquay, at St. Stephen's, South Lambeth, but more especially at Christ Chapel, now Emmanuel Church, Maida Hill, where he and his devoted wife, who now mourns his loss, laboured for some eleven years (1863 to 1874). At Christ Chapel he usually preached three times each week, morning and evening on the Sundays, and on Wednesday evenings, and it was often hard to find a seat in the place. Hard-headed men of business, artists from the neighbouring studios, two at least of whom were men of some celebrity—Pettie and Tenniel—people of all ranks and conditions sat under him listening to his clear exposition of the Word. Round him were gathered a great crowd of Sunday-school teachers, district visitors, sick visitors, and other workers. Once a quarter they met for the prayer-meeting, when their petitions were led by some of the chief workers, and the pastor addressed them on some subject bearing on the work. Once a month a crowded communicants' meeting was held, when the solemn nature of that sacred feast, its joys, its obligations, its importance, were dwelt upon. Mr. Campe's faithful labours here and elsewhere were blessed to many, of whom not a few are now devoted workers.

PROFESSOR THOMAS CHASE, LL.D.

America has lost another distinguished scholar and devoted Friend in the person of Professor Thomas Chase, LL.D., whose early decease is felt as a general loss. He was on the American Revision Committee for the New Testament, and his Greek text books are widely used. "His was a gentle and genial spirit whose Christian faith and practice shone through his wide culture, and made him lovable. He had scarcely passed middle age." According to a telegram received in this country, Professor Chase passed away on the 5th instant. Since his retirement a few years ago from the presidentship of Haverford College, Pennsylvania, he has lived in comparative quiet at Providence, Rhode Island. Here, however, work of many kinds still pressed upon him, and, though in weak health, he was still busy with literary and other labours in causes dear to his heart. Dr. Thomas Chase was one of the few men in the Society of Friends who have won the repute of scholarship. He was an accepted authority in his own country on his special studies, particularly in the Greek language, for which his text books for students are widely used. A man singularly cultured and refined, who had travelled widely, thought much and deeply, and mingled with the intelligent of all countries, he will be greatly missed, and not alone on his own side of the Atlantic.

DISTINGUISHED HEBREW CHRISTIANS.—The following is from an article in the current issue of The Critical Review:—In Britain we have had Isaac Disraeli and his distinguished son; George J. Goschen, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Rev. Ridley Herschell and his son, Lord Herschell; Sir Julius Benedict and John Brahms, the well-known musicians; Leone Levi, the statistician; Joseph Wolff, the well-known Central Asian missionary and traveller, whose son, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, has taken such a high place as a diplomatist; Adolph Saphir, A. Alfred Edersheim, and Christian D. Ginsburg, eminent Biblical scholars and divines—all either direct proselytes to Christianity or the immediate descendants of those who were.

LITERATURE FOR MISSIONARIES.

Dear Sir,—In these days, when the tide of missionary interest is rising, there may be those of your readers, Mr. Editor, who are seeking for some way of showing their interest in the work, but who are unable to go forth themselves. To such let me suggest one of many ways of thus furthering the cause dearest to Christ's heart, and for which He gave his life's blood.

Missionaries being exactly like other men (although some imagine they have such a superabundance of grace that they can dispense with the ordinary means of grace employed by their brethren at home), have their times of despondency and sore temptation. Isolated from fellow workers, without church or chapel, and surrounded by the utter indifference of the people among whom they dwell, they often feel their need of a stimulus or a bracing tonic which such books of missionary biography of men like Livingstone, Moffat, Hannington, Mackay, or Gilmour can give.

In these faithfully drawn portraits of men of like passions as themselves, there is much to encourage faith and hope.

Who is there who can read Alex. Mackay's heroic life, or brave Jas. Gilmour at his lonely post after wife and children were lost to view, without feeling refreshed and encouraged to overcome the thousand and one trials of foreign mission work?

Possibly other brethren have felt like myself after reading Gilmour's life, that, compared with him, some of us are more like Stanley's pigmies in spiritual stature. Faith, however, grows by being tested and practised; and, without doubt, it gets full play in the foreign field, away from the hot-houses or nursery-beds of conventions, and an endless round of meetings as at home. It is the planting out that tests the plants.

Alas! some of us have felt the effects of chilling indifference, or lukewarm profession, or even the bitter biting blast of persecution, and we do sometimes seek a stimulus along with the pure milk of the Word of God.

Such a tonic is best administered in reading what others have braved and toiled to achieve, or it may in a more diluted form, suiting better certain constitutions, be given in the form of religious periodicals too numerous to name. Possibly the editor of this valuable journal could furnish a list of helpful books and magazines such as Good Words, Leisure Hour, The Christian, Divine Life, &c. We enjoy the Life of Faith, Divine Life, which present the theoretical side of the question, while Mackay's and Gilmour's lives are the practical and more bracing side, showing us the possibility of living divine lives even among debased men and women.

Some of your readers might like thus to minister to their brethren abroad by passing on copies of missionary biography to the secretary of our North Africa Mission, or by paying the carriage out to North Africa. One or two of the brethren in each country there would act as librarians, sending on volumes to his fellow workers.

Coupled with this work, might not books be sent in useful for forming libraries for the Europeans one meets with in every village or town out here, most of whose time is spent in the cafés playing cards, smoking, and drinking? Much good might be done in this way. I have often felt for the stationmasters on our line of railway, whose time hangs heavy on their hands. Often I have given into their hands, or thrown from a railway carriage, illustrated Christian journals—such as L'Ami de la Maison, Rayon du Soleil. Were these journals, and others that could be named, furnished me, I could do a little on the railway mission lines, and post monthly copies of these papers to stationmasters.

P.S.—Back numbers of Illustrated London News and Graphic would be very serviceable.

Yours in Christ's service,

A. S. Lamb.

MANCHESTER Y.M. SOCIETY originated in 1887 by a work of grace in the hearts of several elder lads of the Strangeways Homes for destitute children. Its reality was evident by the fruit it bore. From the renting of a room for prayer and conversation, the little effort has extended to gaol work for God, children's and general Gospel services, a lodging-house mission, and an annual conference of young men and lads. In a small record, the first they have issued, the lads state their object to be the safety and salvation of young working men, and they express the hope that their little booklet may lead other Christian youths to band together for the good of their fellows and the deepening of their own spiritual life. The pamphlet may be had from Mr. Joseph Jennings, hon. sec. Y.M.S., Working Lads' Institute, Strangeways, Manchester.

The Book World.

Uncle Towser. By Rev. A. N. Malan. A boy's story, which many read with much interest in the pages of the B.O.P., and which will be heartily welcomed in book form.

Young Small Shoes. By Joseph Johnson. (1s. 6d. Religious Tract Society.) The simple story of a little foundling, cared for by a pious cobbler, who became in time a blessing to all around him.

Messrs. Nisbet have added to their "Scripture Handbook" series the Book of Joshua (1s.), edited, with notes and explanations, by Geo. E. Johnson, M.A. Many will find in these pages just the help they require in studying the book.

Bert Lloyd's Boyhood. By J. Macdonald Oxley, LL.D. A stirring and well-written story of school life in Nova Scotia, which will charm our boys with many fresh phases of youthful experience and adventure. (5s. Hodder and Stoughton.)

The Way She Trod, by Harriet E. Colville (James Nisbet and Co.), is an admirably written book for young women, who will be attracted by the interesting story telling how Triplice was led by a way she knew not until she finds rest and joy in God.

In the Track of the Russian Famine. This collection of letters written from personal observation by Mr. E. A. Brayley Hodgetts, and published last winter in the public press, afford painfully vivid evidence of what the Russian famine really means for the stricken peasants of the Russian Empire. (T. Fisher Unwin.)

Morning Thoughts for Our Daughters. By Mrs. G. S. Reaney. (John Haddon and Co.) We are glad to see that a new edition has been called for of this little work, with its helpful and spiritual morning meditations. To many it has already proved a messenger of peace. Doubtless it will still pursue its loving mission amongst the girls.

Our Daughters. Here is another of Mrs. Reaney's pleasing and useful books, which also has reached a new edition. Its plain, practical, and pointed words cannot but continue to win it a wide acceptance. (1s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton.)

The Boy's Own Book of Health and Strength. To say that this book is by Dr. Gordon Stables, is as good as affirming that it is at once interesting in substance and animated in style. Lads will read it to much profit, for valuable rules are given for the maintenance of health, as well as directions for the development of muscular manhood. (2s. 6d. Jarrold and Sons.)

Up and Down the House. By Anna Warner. (James Nisbet and Co.) The gifted authoress of the "Wide Wide World" wields a sympathetic and ready pen, which full often has been helpful to her sisters. Here she produces a woman's book, which, starting with "the most wonderful housekeeper on record," deals wisely and well with home life, and how to make the best of it.

Step by Step Through the Bible. A Scripture history for little children. By Edith Ralph. This volume outlines in simple language the sacred story as far as the death of Joshua. Dr. Cunningham Geikie supplies a preface of warm approval. The pages display the needful tenderness and intelligence, and we trust Miss Ralph will be enabled in succeeding volumes to complete the work she has begun, and for which she seems well and fully equipped. (2s. 6d. Nisbet.)

Heroes of the Goodwin Sands. By Rev. T. Stanley Treanor, M.A. (Religious Tract Society.) Stories from real life, stories of dauntless daring for the rescue of shipwrecked crews on these fatal sands, which will set every boy's pulse throbbing with keen interest and high admiration. As the author well remarks, it is but simple justice that some of the "splendid rescues effected on those outlying and dangerous sands by the boatmen" should have a place in history.

Sermon-pictures for Children's Services. By Rev. T. D. Hyde, B.A. (R. D. Dickenson.) Thirty plainly-planned addresses to children, full of suggestiveness, simplicity, and point. We certainly could not follow them slavishly as there are some matters on which all are not agreed, but generally speaking they are sound and wholesome, within the comprehension of the children, and in a style likely to hold their attention. Wisely used, these sermon-pictures will be helpful to many.

Ritualistic Claims and Titles Challenged, is a little book containing sound evangelical discourses by Rev. Richard Glover, M.A., of St. Luke's, West Holloway, on the following subjects:—"Who are the true High Churchmen?" "There is no 'Priest' in the Church of England," "There is no 'Propitiatory Sacrifice' in the Holy Communion," "There is no 'Altar' in her loyal Churches." An introductory letter by Lord Ebury bears on the influence of ritualism upon society. (1s. Nisbet.)

An Old Roman City and a Memorial of the Martyrs. By C. Bloomfield. (A. Holness.) Starting with three interesting chapters on the Buried Roma city now being exhumed at Silchester, the auth passes on to recall the story of the martyrs und Rome pagan and Rome papal, bringing out clear and well their simple faith and heroic endurance f Christ and the Gospel's sake. In days when suc loyalty to truth is well nigh forgotten, we welcome book which so admirably re-tells the stirring story.

A Sketch of the History of Judaism a Christianity, in the light of modern research ar criticism. By G. T. Bettany, M.A., B.Sc. (2s. 6 Ward, Lock, Bowden, and Co.) These are very rea able pages, from the pen of one having no particul views to advocate, but desirous of furnishing an ir partial outline of historical events and dogmat opinions. The volume will be useful in the hands such as will discriminate between undoubted fac and the conjectures of "authorities" who would r write history to establish special theories.

The Ivory Palaces. By J. Oswald Jackson. (Hodd & Stoughton.) The wealth and beauty of the Wo of God are set forth in the form of an allegory this attractive volume, the title of which was su gested by Psalm xlv. 8. The pages evince wide rea ing, and the spiritually-minded will greatly enjo their perusal. Some of the statements in the chapt describing the early versions of the Bible need qua fication and correction in points of detail. We cou have wished that the monkish concoction in the nam of "Publius Lentulus," concerning the personal a pearance of our Lord, had been excluded, or at lea clearly described as of recent date, and in no sen authenticated.

Unity and Order, the Handmaids of Trut Rev. R. W. Kennion, M.A., rector of Acle, Norfol had written this "inquiry into God's will and ou duty concerning the unity and order of the visib Church, with special reference to the Church of En land and those who dissent from it." Originall issued in 1866, the book is now in its second editio In a temperate argument the author maintains th dissent is no longer justified, if it was so at any tim and he appeals to those Protestants who are n members of the Church of England to take the ste which will establish "unity and order" in the intere of truth as against the tactics of Rome and Sata (Seeley & Co.)

Classified Gems of Thought, a really valuab work of reference, has been issued in a third an cheaper edition by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughto (7s. 6d.) The works of great writers and thinkers o all ages have been laid under contribution, and th pages evince sound purpose and good judgment n less than they testify to conscientious toil on th part of the editor, Rev. F. B. Proctor, M.A. Abou three thousand subjects are more or less fully treate of, illustrated notes being alternated with expo sitory sermons, analyses with digests, and sugge tions with analogies. It is a large volume, but ver readable, and bound to prove useful to thoughtfu preachers and teachers.

STORY BOOKS.

Among recent publications of the Religious Tract Society are Breaking His Fetters (2s. 6d. by Rev. W. J. Wilkins, a tale of Indian life, showin the many difficulties that have to be encountered b intelligent Hindus when convinced of the truth o the Gospel, the power of which is admirably illus trated by the incidents detailed. Ivy, the Plagu of his Life (2s.), by Annette C. Lyster, tells of young woman whose life was entirely changed b the Gospel, waywardness giving place to sweetness o character and great usefulness. Worthy of Hi Name (2s.), by Eglanton Thorne, is the expressiv title of a sketch of "Gentleman Gus," a poor ragge little boy who was noble in adverse circumstance and came to honour in after years. Seven Time in the Fire (1s. 6d.), by Maud Battersby, depict tragic scenes in connection with French history a the close of the last century, showing at what grea cost Christ was confessed in the revolution times.

The Medical Pioneer, the organ of the British Medica Temperance Association, is a new paper, and takes th place of the Medical Temperance Journal, now discontinued It will deal specially with the physiological action o alcohol in health and disease, and will therefore be of valu to all who take an intelligent interest in the scientific aspec of the temperance question. The first number, for October contains a portrait of Dr. B. W. Richardson, and man articles of interest and value. (Monthly, 2d. National Temperance League Publication Depôt, 33, Paternoster-row.)

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 23.—DEUTERONOMY XXXIV.

THE faithful servant is loved even to the end, though he has to reap the results of his disobedience. He dies on Pisgah, but the Lord shows him all the land. The law can never lead us into the land of promise. Its wealth, its length and breadth, are a free gift to be claimed by faith. It awaits us only in so far as we are one with the true Joshua, who himself has entered into his rest, and has ceased from his works, as God did from his. We which believe do enter into that rest. It was by the kiss of God, tradition says, that he died, and it was by the hand of God that he was buried. How careful God was to remove from the people that grave which might have been a source of temptation, as gathering his people round death, and hindering the free development of their onward progress. Forget the things that are behind: the true goal and home of the soul is not with the dead Moses but with Joshua and the Ark. Not even the grave of Jesus should arrest us. There is no waning energy in the law of God. Its eye never dims; its force does not abate. When God calls his servants to a new work He waits to fill them with his Spirit. Be sure that you are called to lead God's people; then seek the enduement of that power.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

Joshua was a prince of the tribe of Ephraim, born in Egypt, and after the exodus the companion of Moses and the leader of the host.

The book falls into two divisions, each consisting of twelve chapters, the former on the conquest, the latter on the distribution of the land.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 24.—JOSHUA I.

The law serves a purpose in every life, but the Lord our Saviour alone can give us the land. Though that land of rest and triumph is ours by deed of gift, yet we must go up and possess it; and though it seems as if the Hittites and their confederates would make it impossible for us to realise God's provision, yet as we go forward we shall find that they cannot stand against us. The spiritual blessings with which God has blessed us are all in Christ Jesus. We must sit with Him in the heavenly places if we would inherit them.

The promise (5) made here to Joshua is treated in Heb. xiii. 5, 6, as the common property of all Christians. We need not fear since the Lord is our Helper. We can boldly say, what shall man do unto me? There shall not any man be able to stand before us all the days of our life. With such promises the weakest can be strong and of a good courage. We may well include self in this promise of victory. No external foe is subtler or more difficult to subdue than that within.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25.—JOSHUA II.

Often in the history of the chosen people the purpose of God overlaps their narrow bounds towards the Gentiles. Marvellous that this Gentile woman of evil life should not only be incorporated with the chosen people, but come into the direct line of Christ's descent. Faith, like corn, is indigenous to the soils of all hearts.

Her case is quoted (Heb. xi. 31) as an instance of faith, and we can trace it in her belief in God's wonders wrought before Pharaoh, and during that desert march, as well as in her avowal: "The Lord your God, He is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath." Her trust, moreover, in the promise of the spies, and in the efficacy of the scarlet line, was a striking type of the faith which relies on God's promise of salvation through the blood of Jesus.

A low state of morals is compatible with the first stages of faith, as is indicated by the lie that she told to save the spies. But when faith has once opened the door to the Spirit of God, He will make right all this inner wrong. Her faith secured shelter also for her kindred. We must never forget that God's salvation is only available for those who come home to abide in it. To be outside in the street is to perish, though a Rahab pleads for us. Oh, to be found in Christ, having his righteousness as our only hope!

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26.—JOSHUA III.

This chapter is full of the Ark of the Lord, and its triumphs. It is not only the visible emblem of the covenant, but the symbol of the presence of Christ, who is constantly spoken of as our Propitiatory. We must never go before Christ. We must follow Him, our High Priest, though it be into the waters of death. The way of the inner life, as well as the path of daily duty, is unknown to us in advance, and it is only by following closely that we can discover it.

What a comfort it is to feel that Christ has stepped down into the waters of death and judgment before us, and to know that his presence arrests for ever the tumultuous torrents. There is no fear of their breaking loose from their leash so long as He restrains them, and He will not remove it until all his people have passed clean over. Whatever rivers await the believer they shall not overflow him or drown him, if Jesus leads him through.

It is an anticipation of the New Testament to hear of the Living God (10). We think at once of the Living Christ, who is with us, and who will not fail to expel the sevenfold foes of our hearts, as well as the evil spirits that now possess the hearts of men against the Gospel. Let us take past deliverances as the pledge and assurance that He will perfect that which concerneth us. All power is given to Him in heaven and on earth; and He is the Lord of all the earth.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 27.—JOSHUA IV.

Two memorials were erected of that wonderful passage. One was that twelve stones were erected in the bed of the river, where the feet of the priests had stood. The other consisted of twelve stones brought up out of the bed of the river, and finally erected in Gilgal to excite such questions of future generations as should lead to the announcement of God's marvellous interposition.

These twelve stones typified Israel, first, in the place of judgment when they were delivered; and secondly, as brought up out of the Jordan, and put in the land from which the waters of the Jordan had formerly excluded them. So should the Israel of God recall always the judicial death which they have endured in Christ, and which they are to make real by a daily faith; whilst at the same time they never forget his resurrection, in which they are called to share, setting their affection upon things above, not on things on the earth.

We have only to seek to do God's will, and He will magnify us, and give us the love and fear of men, not for ourselves, but for his truth's sake.

Here again we have a reference to the earth. We were told in the previous chapter that Jehovah was God of all the earth; and now we learn that all the people of the earth are to know Him through his dealings with his chosen. They are to know his mighty hand, and his people are to fear Him for ever. May that godly fear be ours!

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28.—JOSHUA V.

We must ponder this act of circumcision. It seems strange that, though the command was so stringent (Gen. xvii.), yet the generation born in the wilderness had not been circumcised, but that explanation is probably correct which regards the murmuring at Kadesh (Num. xiv.) and God's oath to exclude that unbelieving generation from Canaan as a virtual abrogation of the covenant. This seems alluded to in verse 6 as the reason for the discontinuance of the rite. But now that they were about to face their foes, and go up to possess the land, it was needful that they should stand in the covenant, and that there should be a putting away, symbolically at least, of all filthiness of the flesh and spirit. "The reproach of Egypt," which the Lord rolled away, seems to point to the taunts and reproaches uttered by the Egyptians against Israel during the forty years' wanderings, because they had failed to attain the land for which they started. It surely becomes us to ask whether we have not failed to enter the promised land because of some lack in "the circumcision of Christ" (Col. ii. 11).

The circumcised heart may partake of the Passover (10). It is only those who are living pure and holy lives that can enter into the true meaning of God's redemption. Thus the manna ceases, and the soul feeds on the produce of the land.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 29.—JOSHUA VI.

The last three verses of the previous chapter belong to this one. The first verse is parenthetic, and the Lord, who speaks to Joshua (2), is the captain of the Lord's host, whom Joshua had beheld and worshipped. Joshua's question, "Art Thou for us or for our adversaries?" did not get a direct answer, for it depended on the people's own conduct how it would be (vii. 11, 12; 2 Chron. xv. 2). There were to be times in the history of Israel when the most destructive of their foes were to be described as the Lord's own armies (Matt. xxii 7). But in the meantime the captain gave clear directions of how they were to secure his co-operation. In fact, they were to do as little as possible, but exert faith in Himself that He would do all (1 Heb. xi. 30). It was made abundantly clear that the Lord who dwelt between the cherubim was the mighty worker. His ark in its repeated circuit, his priest, his command to shout, his appointment as to the division of spoils, whilst the people were but to march, and shout, and go up over the prostrate walls. There is a deep lesson for us all here in our conflict with our spiritual foes. We must leave the actual combat to the Lord, whilst we are thoughtful, watchful, patient, and trustful. The taking of the city was the occasion of making good to Rahab and all found in the house the covenant mercy that had been promised her. So may it be with each of us and our dear ones! May we be found at last under the shelter of the scarlet thread of our Saviour's precious blood!

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 30.

THE GOSPEL PREACHED AT ANTIOCH.

Acts xi. 19—30.

GOLDEN TEXT: VERSE 21.

THE sphere of the Gospel is widening. Beginning at Jerusalem, it has spread throughout Judea and Galilee and Samaria. Now it reaches still further north. Phenice (19), a narrow strip of land on the Mediterranean coast, extending about 130 miles northward from Cape Carmel; the chief coast towns of Phenice were Tyre, Sidon, Byblus, and Tripolis. Cyprus—an island in the Mediterranean, having as its two chief towns Salamis at one end and Paphos at the other. Antioch—with which this lesson is concerned—was about twenty miles from the Mediterranean coast. It was built on the river Orontes by Seleucus Nicator, who named it after his father Antiochus, one of the generals of Alexander the Great. It rose to be one of the first cities of the East, having a population of 500,000, including a considerable number of Jews. The Gospel had now reached these three districts.

The first Gentile Church (19—21).—It is most interesting to read how this Church was gathered. The preachers were not apostles (Comp. 19 with viii. 1, 4). Who are God's witnesses to-day? Only ministers and teachers? All who belong to Christ. If you have the light it is in order that others may be blessed by your shining. They reached the city through strange means (19). Satan feared the strong Church that was growing up at Jerusalem, and stirred up persecution. God so overruled the work of Satan as to make it the means of spreading the Gospel to these regions. Against his own intentions the devil has often helped God's work. Their hearers were not in this instance Jews only, but Greeks (20); perhaps because some of the preachers belonged to Cyrene, in Africa, whose Jewish prejudices were not so strong as those of the Jerusalem believers. That they should preach to these Gentiles is the more remarkable, seeing that Peter's mission to Cornelius had probably not yet taken place. Their success (21). Every doubt that was suggested as to preaching to the Gentiles was set at rest by God's manifest blessing on the work. Should we not see more of our hearers "believing and turning to the Lord" if we were more careful to have "the hand of the Lord" working with us?

The Visit of Barnabas (22—26).—God times his events wisely. Tidings of this work among Gentiles in Antioch did not reach Jerusalem until after the Church had heard of Peter preaching to Cornelius. How differently would they have received the tidings before? There could have been no more suitable messenger than Barnabas. Recall what has already been declared concerning him. The significance of his name, his belonging to Cyprus, his self-sacrificing love (iv. 36, 37), his kindness to Saul of Tarsus (ix. 26, 27), and his character as described here (24). If the same three things could be declared of every teacher, would not the same result follow? Note that the grace of God can be seen. It finds men sinners, but it makes them saints. No one can be a real Christian without others knowing it. The exhortation of Barnabas is needed for all young Christians (23). It is not the beginning, but the continuance and the ending that proves us to be Christians indeed. And none will cleave to the Lord as Ruth did to Naomi (Ruth i. 14) without "purpose of heart." Stedfastness involves meeting and overcoming difficulty. As Barnabas formerly introduced Saul to the Church at Jerusalem, so now he went to Tarsus, and brought him to the church at Antioch. The circumstances of Saul's remarkable conversion, and the prediction that his mission would be to the Gentiles (ix. 15, xxii. 21, xxvi. 16), were known to Barnabas. Christians (26). No name has been more misused than this. It was used originally not by believers of themselves, and would not be likely to be applied by Jews, for they would thus have been consenting that Jesus was the Christ. It was doubtless given by Pagans, not as a term of ridicule, but as identifying them with the Person whose name they constantly preached. A true Christian is one who depends upon Christ, lives for Christ, seeks to be like Christ, and delights to be with Christ.

True Christian fellowship (27—30).—Agabus (see xxi. 10), belonging to the Church at Jerusalem, was gifted by the Holy Spirit with the power of foretelling future events (1 Cor. xii. 28). Claudius, in whose reign the predicted famine took place (28), was successor to Caligula, and occupied the throne from A.D. 41 to 54. Josephus tells of a famine in Palestine about 45 and 46. The famine gave the opportunity of proving that the Gentile Church at Antioch and the Jewish Church at Jerusalem were one. Christ had broken down the barrier between them, Jerusalem rejoiced with the Church at Antioch, and Antioch sorrowed with the poorer brethren in Judea (Gal. vi. 2).

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

A new church has been opened in a needy parish in Hull.

Rev. H. Armstrong Hall has accepted the call to St. John's Episcopal Church, Perth.

A memorial to the late Bishop Lightfoot is to be unveiled this day in Durham Cathedral.

Canon Luckock, D.D., has been appointed to succeed the late Dr. Bickersteth as Dean of Lichfield.

Rev. T. J. Madden announces he has declined the offer of the Vicarage of St. Mark's, Tollington Park.

The Bishop-coadjutor of Brisbane (Dr. Nathaniel Dawes) has been elected first Bishop of Rockhampton, a newly-established diocese in Central Queensland.

The C. M. S. Lay Workers' Union for London held last week its annual meeting at the Mission House, Salisbury-square. The report showed good work for the past year.

The Bishop of Wellington, New Zealand (Dr. Octavius Hadfield), has announced his resignation, owing to advanced age, of that see, to which he was appointed in 1870.

The Bishop-designate of Lucknow (Rev. A. Clifford) has arrived in London for conference with the committee of the Church Missionary Society. He expects to leave again in December.

Popular violence (it is announced by telegraph) has again broken out within the Fuh-kien Mission. The house in which the Rev. H. S. Phillips lived at Kien-Yang has been burnt down, and the missionary and his wife narrowly escaped with their lives.

Rev. F. B. Westcott, son of the Bishop of Durham, occupied the University pulpit at Cambridge on Sunday week, taking as his subject, "I press towards the mark." In a clear, ringing voice he addressed some wise and earnest words of counsel and encouragement to those beginning their undergraduate course.

We understand that Commander Williams, R.N., has been appointed secretary of the Protestant Reformation Society, in the room of the late Rev. George Clements. Commander Williams has for several years past conducted a useful work at Oxford, largely amongst the undergraduates, under the auspices of the Protestant Reformation Society.

The Principal of Ridley Hall is to deliver a course of lectures later on in the term at Trinity Church on "Some Points of Doctrine," and he is also taking a Bible reading for undergraduates on Sundays, after College Chapels are over, in the Henry Martyn Hall. Ridley Hall is this term all but full, there being twenty-eight students, the capacity of both old and new buildings combined being thirty.

The Evangelical Protestant Union held its fourteenth annual conference in Manchester on Thursday. At the morning session General Sir Robert Phayre presided, and the subject of discussion was the tendency of the age in relation to Church matters and the danger to the Protestant faith of yielding to it. At the afternoon sitting Archdeacon Taylor, of Liverpool, delivered an address upon the Lincoln judgment, and pointed out what should be the attitude of Protestant Churchmen in regard to it.

The annual Lion sermon at St. Katherine Cree was preached on Sunday night by Rev. A. Stuart Melville, M.A. About 250 years ago Sir John Gayer, then Lord Mayor, was shipwrecked on the African coast, and, being attacked by a lion, escaped, and on his safe arrival in England made an endowment on the church of St. Katherine Cree. Ever since then a yearly sermon has been preached in commemoration of this deliverance. The preacher took for his text 2 Tim. iv. 17, "And I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion."

CONGREGATIONAL.

New Sunday-school buildings are to be erected in connection with Vine-street Church, Coventry.

Craven Chapel, under the pastorate of Rev. J. Le Pla, is, it is hoped, about to make a fresh and vigorous start.

A series of Sunday evening services for the people has been commenced at Upper Chapel, Heckmondwike, by Rev. Frederick Hall.

Rev. J. Ossian Davies has now entered on his fifth year pastorate at Richmond Hill, Bournemouth, where the work shows many tokens of encouragement.

Rev. Wm. Muncaster has commenced his ministry at Trevor Church, Brompton-road, S.W., under most encouraging circumstances.

A valedictory service has been held at Fylde to bid farewell to Rev. Horace Theobald, of Kirkham, and Miss Theobald, who are going out to the Indian mission field.

While the population of Bradford has increased from 103,778 to 216,361 during the last forty years, the accommodation provided in the Congregational chapels has advanced from 3,568 to over 12,000.

The new Congregational Mission at Seacombe goes forward. The foundation-stone of a handsome school-chapel now in course of erection is announced to be laid on Tuesday by Mr. Wm. Crosfield, M.P.

Mr. T. Woodman, formerly of the London City Mission, and who laboured for upwards of five years in connection with the gas works on Greenwich Marsh, has been recognised as evangelist of Cheriton Chapel, Alresford, Hants.

A week of special evangelistic services has been conducted at Kingsland Church, Stoke Newington, by Rev. M. H. Le Pla. As a result many have professed decision for Christ; nine persons are now before the church as candidates for fellowship.

A mission church has been erected at Kirdford, Sussex, by Mr. Jesse John Tustin, of Burstow Hall, Surrey, and has been designated "The Tustin Memorial Chapel." The memorial-stone was laid by the donor on Thursday, when a sermon was preached by Rev. J. McAuslane.

The semi-jubilee of Derby-street Church, Bolton, has been celebrated. The church was formed in 1867 with thirty members, as an outcome of mission services held in the Sunnyside Institute. In 1875 a church was built, and opened with a debt of £1600, which was extinguished in 1885.

BAPTIST.

An institute has been opened in connection with Fuller Chapel, Kettering.

A new church is to be erected at Kirkham. Towards the cost £400 has been raised.

Rev. John Thomas, of Huddersfield, has accepted the call to Myrtle-street, Liverpool.

Rev. T. F. Waddell, late pastor at Crayford, has accepted the pastorate at Dorking.

Mr. Arthur G. Edgerton, of the Pastor's College, has accepted the pastorate at Annandale-road, Chiswick.

Rev. W. B. Haynes, late of Stafford, has commenced his ministry at Clarendon Chapel, Camberwell New-road.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Enfield Baptist Tabernacle pastor, Rev. Geo. W. Whitter, was celebrated on Tuesday, 11th, when two sermons were preached by Rev. T. H.

Messrs. Gordon Wilkins, of Nottingham Midland College, and Ernest Davey, of Cliff House, Derbyshire, have been accepted as missionaries to India, and will depart for that country next month.

At the annual meeting of Stanningley Church it was stated that the entire school debt had been cleared off during the year, and that between £600 and £700 has been raised during the past six years.

The Ministers' and Missionaries' Prayer Union, founded by Mr. Meyer, is in some little difficulty as to its future, Mr. Meyer having resigned, and Mr. W. R. Skerry, invited to fill his place, having declined acceptance.

Rev. Robert Martin Julian has announced to his congregation at Baxter-gate Church, Loughborough, his acceptance from the Missionary Society of the pastorate of the English Church in Circular-road, Calcutta.

Misses Bergin, Gledsher, and Pike, lady Zenana missionaries, sailed for India on Friday in the P. and O. s.s. Kaisar-i-Hind. Mrs. Benjamin Evans voyages in the same vessel to rejoin her husband, who is stationed at Monghyr.

At Drake-street Chapel, Rochdale, a public tea-meeting has just been held to commemorate the settlement of the long-standing dispute between the church and the trustees of the late Mr. H. Kelsall, and to commemorate its reunion with its sister churches in the town and neighbourhood. There was a large audience.

The third anniversary of the opening of the church at Wynne-road, Brixton, was held on Wednesday week. The pastor (Rev. Z. T. Dowen) sat in the vestry during the day to receive the thank-offerings of the people, and £140 was brought to him. The report at the public meeting showed the church and all its organisations in a healthy and prosperous condition; forty-two new members had joined the church during the year.

METHODIST.

The Central Hall Mission, Manchester, is entering upon another winter's campaign amid many auguries of continued and ever-increased prosperity and success.

The York Foreign Mission Anniversary has been enthusiastic. Revs. David Hill, Bryan Roe, Wm. Goudie, Marshall Hartley, and the City Sheriff were the chief speakers.

A week's special services have been conducted at Boulderclough (Halifax South) by Mr. Robert Benton and Revs. B. Dutton and J. W. Sims. They were well attended.

During special religious services at Pudsey, held by Mr. Fearnside, there have been large audiences, and upwards of seventy persons have avowed their decision for Christ.

Revs. W. H. Watson, W. T. A. Barber, David Hill, F. Boden, and Mrs. Watson, all missionaries from China, have been holding meetings at Bristol. They dealt with their own fields, and great enthusiasm was awakened.

At the missionary breakfast of the Leeds Wesleyan Missionary anniversary, held under the presidency of Dr. Rigg, £1,060 was promised in the room. This included £100 each from the treasurer, Mr. J. J. Fitch, and Mr. Joshua Wilson.

There was great enthusiasm at City-road during the Mission Band Union meeting. Rev. W. J. Dawson stated that the best men should engage in open-air work, and that he was surprised at the twaddle talked and listened to out of doors.

An interesting meeting of welcome to the forty Wesleyan pastors who have recently come to London circuits was held on Monday at Wesley Chapel, City-road. Rev. H. Price Hughes gave the address of welcome, and Rev. W. L. Watkinson replied.

Exeter Methodism means to move, and the following schemes are contemplated:—Opening the Mint Chapel to Fore-street, which involves buying property, etc.; renovation of Southernhay Chapel; sale of King-street Mission-hall, the money to be used for new work elsewhere, and a new chapel at Exminster.

A two days' Convention has been held at Portsmouth, Rev. G. R. Graham presiding. The subjects discussed were of a practical character, the P.S.A. movement being among the number. The various aspects of holiness proved a theme of great importance, and was ably dealt with by Rev. A. D. Cope, W. J. Graves, and Captain Riley.

The centenary of the Ashby-de-la-Zouch Circuit was celebrated on Wednesday week, a special sermon being preached by Rev. F. L. Wiseman. Rev. H. Gibson, presiding at a subsequent meeting, claimed that they had maintained the holy succession in the circuit, for, after a hundred years, they had eight ministers and 2477 members.

The Evangelists' Home and the Great Central Mission Hall Scheme for Birmingham are in full swing. Young men from the Home are establishing independent missions in different places; others are assisting circuits or ailing ministers, and the fixtures for this winter include a large number of the stations from one end of the country to the other.

On Sunday large congregations attended special services in the Great Queen-street Wesleyan Chapel, Lincoln's Inn Fields, held in celebration of the ninety-fifth anniversary of the laying of the foundation-stone of this place of worship, which, next to the well-known chapel in the City-road, is the oldest belonging to the Wesleyan community in the metropolis. Rev. John Bond, the minister in charge, preached morning and evening.

The twenty-fourth report of the Metropolitan Chapel Building Fund shows a total income for the year from donations, loans, subscriptions, public collections, etc., of £14,932. In these receipts is included a generous donation of £500 from Mr. Alexander McArthur. The Welsh Chapel has received £1450: Hinde-street Chapel and the new chapel at High Barnet, £500 each; Forest Hill, £378; Hendon, £400; Beckenham, £338; and Walham Green, £250; in all £3816. Two new chapels have been opened during the year, two others are in progress, and a dozen excellent sites in various parts of the metropolis now await occupation.

Philip-street Chapel, Hoxton, is now to be handed over to the care of Rev. Thomas Jackson and the workers of the Clapton Mission. The income of the mission last year from all sources was about £800. The soup-kitchen, the social guild, the savings and investment fund, the reading-room, visiting the sick, feeding the outcast, and caring for the waifs of the East-end are all being vigorously worked. Meanwhile, the spiritual and temperance work are pushed forward. A substantial chapel, with schoolroom and six vestries, a mission-hall and premises, with flourishing Sunday-schools and Bands of Hope, are the tangible outward results of eight years of devoted service.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. A. Connell, of Westbourne-grove, has declined the call to Thurso.

A mission church is being erected at South Stockton, in connection with St. Andrew's Church. The building will seat 200 persons, and will cost £250.

Rev. J. G. Train, of Hull, who is to be called to Upper Norwood as successor to Rev. Robert Taylor, conducted last week a mission in Highgate Church.

The annual social gathering of the Association of North London Choirs takes place in the lecture-hall of St. John's-wood Church, Marlborough-place, on Saturday, 25th inst.

The Presbyterian College in Bloomsbury has reopened its doors for the winter session. Principal Dykes presiding over the opening meeting, gave encouraging details of the work.

The Blue Book of the Pan-Presbyterian Council gives statistics embracing ninety-one different churches of the Presbyterian order. The ninety-one churches contain 23,437 pastoral charges, and represent a Presbyterian population of twenty millions.

Sir George Bruce, speaking at a Church Extension Conference of the London Presbytery, said that they needed a strong Church extension work if they were to take their share in evangelising London. In forty years the population of the metropolis would be ten millions. To-day London had a larger population than all Scotland, and would soon contain more Highlanders than the Highlands of Scotland. They had, therefore, not to do with a city merely, but with a kingdom. They should go in advance of the population and secure sites in localities which could then be had cheaply, and would pay for keeping. They wanted to plant churches in such places as Battersea and Walthamstow. They had secured a site at Leytonstone for a permanent church, a hall was in course of erection at Church-end, Finchley, Mr. Leckie had given a site at Felixstowe, and it was in contemplation to have another church in Finchley-road, and one at Enfield.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

A very successful conference on the deepening of spiritual life has just been held in Sunderland, and attended by many Friends, for whom it was chiefly intended.

Thomas White Fisher, of Dublin, has been holding meetings in different northern towns, and in company with J. T. Dodland and Wm. H. Wilson had good service in Sunderland.

Wm. Hobson, of Peckham, has returned from a series of meetings in Kendal, Stockton, Norton, Thirsk, and West Hartlepool, in all of which the gracious overshadowing of the Divine wing was manifest, and the melting power of the Holy Spirit sweetly felt and owned.

The fourth annual gathering of Christian workers in Ulster was held on the 28th ult. at Brookfield, co. Antrim, and was a time of much profit and stimulation. About 130 visitors, besides the officers of the school and children, were present. "Many who were present through the day have cause to look up with thankful hearts for the fresh unfoldings of the manifold grace of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Homes for inebriates and temperance legislation are occupying the earnest attention of the Friends' Temperance Union, and in conjunction with the London Young Friends' Temperance Association it has arranged for a series of conferences in various meeting-houses in London during the month. One such conference was recently held at Devonshire House, when Mr. John Hilton read a report on inebriate homes.

SALVATION ARMY.

General Booth has had a good reception in Jersey.

Colonel McKie's meetings in Stockholm are described as most powerful, resulting in the salvation of many souls.

Tuesday being the second anniversary of Mrs. Booth's death, a memorial service was held in the Agricultural Hall.

On Tuesday evening last Mr. Matthew Burnett delivered a farewell address at the Lighthouse Shelter, a number of the men accepting Christ.

Mrs. Bramwell Booth's Thursday afternoon meetings have been resumed for the season, but in Regent Hall, Oxford-street, instead of Exeter Hall as last year.

A former resident in Manchester has, it is reported, left £5,000 to trustees to be applied in furtherance of the work of the Salvation Army in the rescue of the "submerged tenth."

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Presbyterian Orphan Society has just added 170 children to the large number already on its list.

The Methodist ministers on the Enniskillen district have just held a very successful holiness convention in Pettigo.

An anonymous donor has contributed £1000 to Irish Presbyterian Missions towards the cost for three years of an additional medical missionary for China.

The annual conference of the Presbyterian Young Men's Guild was held in Belfast on Tuesday week. Mr. Thos. Sinclair, J.P., presided, and there was a large attendance of delegates.

A meeting of the Railway Mission was held in Belfast on Tuesday week, when Mr. Robt. Nixon, general secretary, gave an interesting account of the work being carried on throughout the United Kingdom.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

During the past season 6060 children were sent out of Glasgow for a holiday by the "Fresh Air Fortnight" Fund.

Lady Victoria Campbell addressed the recent annual meeting of the Campbelltown Young Women's Christian Association.

Principal Rainy, in a recent address in Edinburgh, made some remarks on the theatre that have incurred the disapprobation of a leading actor.

During the past fortnight over thirty children have been received into Mr. Quarrier's Orphan Homes. The needs of his large family require a daily income of £40.

At a meeting of the Aberdeen branch of the Upward and Onward Association, Lady Aberdeen, in an address, dealt with the question of how a domestic servant might make her lot happier by identifying her interests with those of her mistress.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Bagnères-de-Bigorre, France, Rev. C. Bellingham, Rector of Castlebellingham, co. Louth, aged forty-five years.—At Ballycastle, co. Antrim, Rev. J. Gilbert, Methodist minister, aged eighty-three years.—At Chelmsford, after a painful illness, Mr. John Taylor, Mayor of Chelmsford, and an earnest Christian.—At Coldharbour-lane, Brixton, on 6th inst., Mr. S. Panther, aged seventy-five, for many years an earnest worker at Herne Hill.

TORONTO.—A delegate to the Pan-Presbyterian Council writes:—It was well worth a journey from New York to see how these Scotch and Irish Canadians keep the Sabbath. Scotland herself is fairly outdone. I have seen men reeling with intoxication on a Sabbath morning in Glasgow, but in Toronto all was quiet save that the whole population seemed to turn out to church. It is said that there are twenty-five Presbyterian churches in this population of 200,000. Altogether the churches of the city number about 150.

A BLACK OUTLOOK.

DEAR FRIENDS,

The outlook for the coming winter is black with woe and want.

Fever has been rife; the labour market is depressed; those who have heroically struggled to keep their lips above water are now throwing up their hands in despair and sinking, in utter hopelessness, into pauperism and vagrancy.

This has been the busiest month I have had in 22 years. I have stretched myself to the utmost to try and cope with the need. Respectable young men, with tears in their eyes, have begged for a bit of bread. Promising boys, whose mothers have had to enter the workhouse, have craved for shelter. Widows, with faces ghastly from privation, have implored me to receive their children, whose cry for food has been piercing their hearts.

I have spent every penny I have. Every bed is full. Each day the pressure upon me increases. What am I to do? I cannot hear these life-tragedies, and say in empty words, "Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled." Am I to turn away unheard and unhelped the widow and the orphan, the prodigal boy and the famished waif? God forbid.

To carry on the work here till Christmas, secure some extra sleeping space, and keep an open door for every really needy, homeless boy, we need £2,500. Who will help? £100 will keep fourteen waifs right through the winter; £50 will send five to Canada, where they will not need another farthing of English charity. £10 will pay for one boy's emigration; £7 10s. for one boy's maintenance till the spring. £5 will pay for five beds; £2 for a boy's outfit; 10s. will give 60 a good breakfast.

This is a home missionary work. We are grappling with famine at our doors. We are living and labouring amongst our young home-heathen. Will you strengthen our hands and cheer our hearts?

ANALYTICAL REPORT.

Benjamin Nickels, F.C.S., F.I.C., and Wallace C. Nickels, F.C.S., Analysts to "The Fruit Trade Journal," "The Health Corporation, Limited."

Analytical and Technical Laboratory, 41, Cheapside, London, E.C., March 4th, 1892.

"This Report certifies that I have submitted to a careful chemical and microscopical examination samples of the medicine called JOLLY'S PILLS, and have no hesitation in declaring their composition to be free from all added mineral substances or injurious vegetable matters. They are composed entirely of vegetable and fruit extracts, in a highly concentrated form, which from their action and the unique method of their combination, cannot fail to prove of exceptionable value to all who use them."

TESTIMONIALS.

Mrs. Kennedy writes, Oct. 6, 1892, from Brookhill, Lisburn, co. Antrim:—"I enclose 1s. for another box of 'Jolly's Pills.' I have found them most beneficial for Headache and Indigestion, and don't like to be without them."

Charles E. Clements writes from Rochdale Road, Harpurhey, Manchester:—"I have found great benefit from taking a few doses of your excellent pills. I believe they are the best pills that have ever been brought before the public, as they do not leave any disagreeable effects like other pills I have used."

SOMETHING ABOUT PLAISTERS

If people knew more of the advantage of healing by means of Plaisters there would be less suffering. Internal remedies have their proper place and value in the treatment of disease, but many persons cannot take them; and others are positively injured by overloading the Stomach with unsuitable Medicines. Any sufferer may derive benefit without deranging the system, by using Dr. SETH PYNAR'S CORRUGATED AMERICAN PINE PLAISTERS. For Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Difficulty of Breathing, a suitable Plaister on the Chest affords immediate relief. For Indigestion, Wind, Heartburn, and Sickness, a Plaister at the pit of the Stomach is a reliable and successful remedy. For Back-ache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Twists and Sprains, a Plaister is BETTER THAN ANYTHING ELSE. Pain in the Bowels, Constipation, and even Cholera are all relieved by a properly-prepared Plaister on the abdomen. Its influence extends over the whole system, and if the Balsamic properties are suitably incorporated, the grateful, comforting sensation is very pronounced. Aches and Pains of all kinds are conquered by these Plaisters, which can be applied with enormous advantage to any weak part whatever, and will not only strengthen and stimulate such part, but will invigorate the entire system and enable it to overcome the complaint.

The Common Plaisters are generally composed of cheap and useless Mixtures, whil much heat is used in their manufacture that whatever amount of value the ingredients contained is entirely destroyed before the Plaister is ready for sale.

To avoid disappointment, ask for PYNAR'S CORRUGATED AMERIC PINE PLAISTER, which is made on a new principle by special Machinery, an superior to all others. This Caution is necessary, as many dealers will try to substi ordinary Plaisters, which only lead to regret and discomfort; while the above-na Plaisters, by their most excellent properties, will conduce to both satisfaction and eas

PARIS CITY MISSION

Has for 12 years published Salvation in the capital of France—chiefly to its ouvriers. From house to house, in Mission Halls and in cemeteries, by Bible and Gospel tract distribution, in and out of season, its TEN Missionaries have worked on with proof of blessing. Fourteen of its supporters have recently been called HOME. The work is therefore languishing for want of funds. Who will take their place by casting into this part of our Lord's treasury?

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving a portrait and sketch of PROFESSOR J. AGAR ET, of the Wesleyan College, Richmond.

The commencement of Rev. F. B. Meyer's icles on the work and character of Joshua postponed to next week.

Mr. Moody is now busy in Dublin. At the se of his two weeks' mission there, he will a brief visit to Reading, the dates fixed ng November 10 and 11. The friends at ford and Cambridge are bestirring them- es, and are greatly in hopes of securing isit from the evangelist.

Sabbath next, October 30, has been nestly recommended as a day of united yer for the student volunteer movement connection with foreign missions. It is gested that, in connection with this day of yer, a public meeting should be held erever possible, and a thank offering made vards the extension of the movement. . O. O. Williams (of the London Hospital), Stepney-green, London, E., is one of the cutive committee for Great Britain.

The conference of cultured Hindus, held ely at Benares for the purpose of deter- ning the best means by which their religion ld be maintained, appointed Sunday, tober 30, as a day of universal prayer to Supreme Deity for that end. Would it be well (writes a correspondent) if the ristians of this country would unite next turday and Sunday for a repetition of the Carmel Day"? The proportion of mis- naries to the professors of Hinduism is ater than that of Elijah to the worshippers Baal. And, as then, the Almighty God is us.

As a practical result of the recent Mission- Convention, held in the Conference Hall, angeways, Manchester, a fresh mission- will be placed in the foreign field (China), l a native teacher will be supported ually in Africa. The convention com- ttee has apportioned the offering of the cial mission fund made on the last day of convention, as follows:—China Inland ssion, £50; Congo Mission, £15; Church England Zenana Mission, £10; Bible nana and Medical Mission, £10; Burmah dical Mission, £15. It is quite hoped that convention each year will show the same actical result.

Some of the stories unfolded in the roners' courts afford glimpses of dark and l scenes in the daily life of London and her huge cities. An inquest was held the ier day by a London coroner upon a young man who had poisoned herself. According the evidence, suicide followed closely upon heels of despair. Alas! Edith Macbean but the type of thousands of girls who "go ong," and are swallowed up in the macl- öm f London. But why is there no human law that will reach the man in such cases? Society is ever ready to cast the stone at an erring sister, but is not ashamed to receive back into its bosom the rich, titled, or highly-placed profligate.

In Mr. John Hollingshead's recently published history of Leicester-square, the writer says incidentally of some new thoroughfares, that as regards drink shops they are in much the same condition as the old bye-ways, one of which was Hogarth's "Gin Lane":—

> If the reader's views upon the drink question are liberal, he may or may not be delighted, but if he is a follower, even at a distance, of Sir Wilfrid Lawson, he will undoubtedly be horrified. In the space of half a mile, he will be able to count nearly twenty fully licensed drinking shops. . . . This is the new boulevard. Is it too late even now to alter its name to Pot House Avenue?"

No wonder that the national drink bill is so heavy, when the authorities thus help to place temptation in the way of the people.

A practical commentary upon one of the glaring anomalies of criminal law administration is furnished by a report in The Yorkshire Post of the sentences passed at a recent Quarter Sessions. For stealing twelve rabbits a weaver and a labourer were sentenced to three and four months' imprisonment respectively, whilst for a "savage assault" upon his wife a man received three months' imprisonment with hard labour. In those parts of the country where there is strict preserving of game, sentences out of all proportion to the offence are often passed upon offenders against the game laws. It might almost appear that, in the eyes of some landowner-magistrates, foxes and pheasants are the most sacred kind of property, and of more value than human life or limbs.

In a recent suggestive address to the Younger Clergy Union of London, Archdeacon Sinclair urged that non-Christian religions are not to be summarily condemned wholesale: in them are to be found germs of truth, which must be sought for and developed and used to lead on to Christ. At the same time he was careful to put his hearers on their guard against the error of considering Christianity as merely the best of several religions; it is unique, and the inferiority of other religions is far more striking than any resemblances which they may possess.

"It is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn." "The labourer is worthy of his hire." "They who preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel." "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" These and other Biblical words come to mind as we think of many evangelists whose needs ought to be met, but are not, by those who invite them to preach in their localities. Surely it must be from want of thought that even railway expenses are frequently not offered. We heard lately of a brother walking eighteen miles to preach. He was invited to come again, and this time he went by train. He had absolutely no income, and his wife lay dying of cancer, but no inquiry was made, and not even his railway fare was paid.

Parliamentary Commissions of Inquiry are too often made an excuse for shelving a pressing reform for an indefinite period. We trust this will not be the case with the Commission which, it is reported, the Government are likely to appoint to investigate the working of the Poor Law. There is great need for some more rational and Christian method of dealing with the aged and infirm poor, and also for meeting temporary distress. Less red tape and more elastic machinery, as well as more heart in its management, are much to be desired.

The friends of religious education are much indebted to Rev. T. Howard Gill, vicar of Tunbridge, and late chaplain in Paris, for the vigorous paper he contributed to the Church Congress on National Education. When many School Boards in this country are inclined to give up religious training, it cannot be too widely proclaimed what results have followed that course in France. He quoted from an official report by inspectors of workshops and factories in Paris:—

> We have noticed with pain the lack of moral instruction in these children (juvenile employés). Although they have attended cours de morale in the schools they have just left, they show little trace of it. It proves that this instruction is given in a most imperfect manner. It is an unpleasant duty to report that, for want of moral education, the children are losing all notions of respect and duty, and becoming addicted to bad language and obscene expressions. Their misconduct in the public streets is often scandalous. Everyone is complaining, and many employers in Paris will no longer engage apprentices on account of the troubles they cause. It is high time to put an end to these moral disasters (désastres moraux).

We turn with thankfulness to the 4,000 voluntary teachers of the Ragged School Union, and many others, who closely follow the good Lord Shaftesbury's footsteps, in teaching the children of congested London, when we learn of such a condition among the children of a so-called centre of civilisation.

It is not to be wondered, therefore, that, as Mr. Gill reports, "Tens of thousands of families are withdrawing their children from the State institutions, and providing denominational ones of their own, often at great cost and self-sacrifice." It is very sad to think that the Protestant churches of France are so ill prepared when such a fine opportunity as this presents itself.

A thrill of sympathy for the President of the United States will go through the civilised world at the news which reached this country on Tuesday morning of the death of Mrs. Harrison. For months the President has watched by her sick bed, and his devotion to her prevented his appearance at the dedication ceremony of the great Chicago Exhibition last week. The fact that this sore bereavement comes on the eve of a Presidential contest will not lessen public sympathy for Mr. Harrison, whose Christian character is well attested.

The question of Uganda continues to engage the serious attention of the friends of African missions. On Thursday last an influential deputation, representing the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, presented a memorial to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, expressing apprehension at the proposed retirement of British agents from the country, and asking the Government, as a measure calculated to assist in the suppression of the slave trade, to guarantee interest on the capital required for the construction of the railway from Mombasa to the Victoria Nyanza, and to establish a protectorate of the country. Lord Rosebery, in his reply, said:—

> I view Uganda as a country of great possibilities, as the key, perhaps, of Central Africa, as commanding the Nile basin, as a field recently of heroic enterprise, as a land that has been watered by the blood of saints and martyrs. . . . You represent what has been eloquently called that continuity of moral policy which Great Britain cannot afford at any time or in any dispensation to disregard.

Lord Rosebery further declared his belief that Britain will not relax her exertions to put down the traffic in human flesh and blood. His words afford grounds for confidence that the Government will do something to protect the mission workers in Central Africa, whose position has become in a special sense imperilled in consequence of European action in the region.

In a letter to Sir Gerald Portal, published in Tuesday's daily papers, Bishop Tucker says:—

I deprecate in the very strongest terms the idea that missionaries, in penetrating into savage and uncivilised countries, should look for or expect aid and protection from their Home Government. No proposition could be more preposterous—no contention more absurd. But, if the missionaries have no right (and clearly they have none) to compromise the Home Government, on the other hand, the Home Government, I maintain, has no right to compromise the missionaries; and this, I submit, is what Her Majesty's Government has done with respect to Uganda.

The Bishop shows that, under treaties of the Imperial East Africa Company with the King of Uganda, the adherents of the English mission naturally supported the English Resident, with the result that they incurred the hatred and hostility of the other parties in the State. He refuses to believe that any British Government would break the pledges that have been made, and upon the faith of which the missionaries have so far acted.

An important correspondence on the Kanaka traffic has passed between the directors of the London Missionary Society and the Premier of Queensland. That the traffic is inimical to the highest interest of the natives is the general testimony of the missionaries; moral progress is retarded, and the eventual depopulation of the islands threatened. The reply of Sir S. W. Griffith is everything it should be in courteous style; but it gives no hope of the traffic being abandoned. He believes that the proposed supervision will prevent a recurrence of the abuses of former days; and holds that it is undesirable to prevent the natives from satisfying their curiosity to see civilised countries. As to New Guinea, the Premier says he is not aware of any suggestion having been made to deport the natives of that island to Queensland.

Holiness Meetings in Belfast.

A series of holiness meetings were held last week in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Wellington-place, and the Exhibition Hall of the Botanic Gardens. The speakers included Rev. George C. Grubb, M.A.; Rev, Charles Inwood, Colonel Oldham (Edinburgh), and Mr. V. D. David (Tamil evangelist). On each occasion the attendance was encouraging, and the various addresses excited a good deal of interest. Well-attended meetings were held at ten and twelve o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. In St. George's Hall, between one and two o'clock an address to business men was delivered by Rev. George C. Grubb. Most men, he said, had sufficient religion to make them miserable: they had not enough to make them happy. They were told in the Westminster Confession and in the Shorter Catechism that man was created to glorify God and to enjoy Him for ever. Were they doing this in their lives? He urged upon them the necessity for self-examination and for making increased efforts to act up to their responsibility. In the Exhibition Hall, at half-past three o'clock, another successful meeting was held, and at the night meeting at eight o'clock, in the same hall, there was a good attendance. Mr. Grubb delivered an interesting address upon the words, "Christ is all and in all."

Present-day Preaching.

"As dull as a sermon" has passed into a proverb. Yet there is no necessary connection between the pulpit and platitude. Even in our own days, when the influence of the Press is supposed to overshadow the Preacher, we can point to not a few whose words have won the attention and gained the hearts of multitudes who hung spell-bound on their lips. There may be many who in their sermons "aim at nothing and hit it," but the man who is mastered by his theme and declares the whole counsel of God has never failed to command an audience.

Nor is there any reason why the Pulpit should ever cease to maintain its proper place or to exercise its peculiar power. So long as the preacher is true to his mission and faithful in proclaiming the Gospel of God, he holds a position second to none. For in this world, where sin riots, and its curse has captured the very heart of man, he who worthily fills the pulpit is the messenger of Divine mercy and the harbinger of heavenly bliss. There is no higher message, no holier ministry, than his.

Nevertheless, it were folly to deny that many sermons are wholly lacking in worth. Without "grace, grit, or gumption," they fail to reach either the understanding or the heart. Containing no Divine message, and wholly devoid of spiritual power, they effect no change in the faith or life of those who hear them. Now, surely, the purpose of a sermon ought to be the conversion of sinners or the "building up" of believers. The true function of the preacher is to persuade, not to please. Yet nowadays this is not seldom forgotten. The orator too often is mainly anxious to display his gifts, and win the applause of the groundlings. Provided he can satisfy himself and his hearers, he is too often well content. Thus lightly does he fail to use the vantage-ground assigned him, and he both forgets and forfeits the high and holy privilege with which he has been entrusted. Sermons, however eloquent or profound, ranging over the whole field of literature, while carefully avoiding all reference to the Gospel, are a disgrace to preacher and hearer alike.

Evidently, if the pulpit is to remain true to itself, it must allow only and always the exposition and enforcement of the truths contained in the Word. In other places and at other times it may be lawful to deal with the "burning questions" of the hour; but when the congregation meets on the Lord's Day, the one question demanding an instant answer is, "What saith the Scripture?" People who believe that God has given us a rule to direct us how we may glorify and enjoy Him, care very little about the thoughts or opinions of the man who speaks; they are only anxious to learn and love the true sayings of God. It is worse than impertinence merely to amuse or interest an audience when its one real concern and need is to be saved and sanctified by the truth of God.

One of the highest compliments ever paid to a preacher by a king was addressed to Massillon by the ruler of France:—"When I listen to other preachers I go away pleased with the preacher; but after listening to you, I depart displeased with myself." The reason is not far to seek. While others cared only to tickle the royal ear, the more faithful priest was anxious to awaken the sleeping conscience and to make some impression on the hardened heart. The weight and worth of a sermon are alone determined by its effect. When preaching sends truth to the heart by the power of the Holy Ghost, sinners are saved and saints are edified. And it is by "manifestation of the truth," that the genuine preacher commends himself "to every man's conscience in the sight of God."

There are two qualities essential to success in winning souls. Fitly are they thus indicated in the recent address from the chair of the Congregational Union:—

There are two things which a preacher must ever keep alive in himself: love of Christ and his Gospel which ensures personal piety—the one thing which one cannot learn from another, and which is not transmittable; and the love of men and their eternal welfare, which makes him a true Christian philanthropist. These two, if watched and fed, will make a living, interesting, if not an eloquent preacher. Ineffective preachers, as a rule, are lacking in one of two things—in real personal religious conviction, or in sincere interest in the welfare here and hereafter of their fellow-men. And if you question the fact that there are preachers without any interest in their fellow-men read the advertisements where Church livings are offered for sale. The last recommendation often dwelt upon, after describing the pleasant scenery, the spacious vicarage, the salmon pool, and the almost total absence of Dissenters, is that there are only so many inhabitants in the parish. Yes, "a recommendation" that there are no people to take trouble with. No people to be loved, saved, and edified; and the living is bought with avidity!

What better can be done with a preacher, be he Conformist or Nonconformist, if human beings with their trials and eternal destinies are nothing but trouble to him, than to bury him alive in a district without people?

But let me quote a sentence by an eminent Churchman of quite another spirit, Dr. Arnold: "That which we know and love we cannot but communicate." If we would be living preachers we must be loving ones; we must idealise our congregations and see in the men and women and children around us those for whom Christ gave Himself, and the glorious characters He can make them to be. What Emerson says of eloquence is not only true but very suggestive: "It is the best speech of the best soul." What additional powers, what increase of influence is opened before each one of us by making our preaching the best speech, full of the tenderest persuasion, the outflow of great love, and ourself the "best soul," telling upon our thoughts, words, and the very tones of our voice. What "land to be possessed" is opened before us, in new and legitimate influence, on the one side, and the other—"the best speech of the best soul"!

These words are both wise and needful. In the absence of the indispensable qualities mentioned, the sermon may be eloquent and learned, but it lacks power. On the faith and love (may we add also the hope?) of the minister, the efficiency and usefulness of his ministry surely and always depend.

AMERICAN NOTES.

Advocates of a New England Sabbath are jubilant. Their petitions have prevailed, and unless some unanticipated power is given to the wicked, the gates of the great Exposition will be closed on the Lord's Day. Congress has so decided, and so Christian sentiment has prevailed.

For a time the cholera epidemic scared our people. Rigid quarantine laws were enforced at great cost to steamship companies and at great inconvenience to travellers. Serious misunderstandings arose between Federal and State authorities, and for a time confusion reigned. But now quarantine is modified, cholera victims are on the decrease, and for the winter at least we are hopefully safe.

A world's convention of Christians at work will be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, U.S.A., for seven days, November 10 to 16, 1892. It is convened under the auspices of the International Christian Workers' Association. All Evangelical Christians engaged or interested in aggressive Christian effort have the privilege to attend as delegates. Reduced railroad fares and entertainment rates will be provided for all who wish to avail themselves of these privileges. Full particulars can be obtained by addressing the Secretary, Rev. John C. Collins, New Haven, Conn., U.S.A.

LANCASTER.—The Central Hall in this town has been opened on undenominational lines for Sunday evening evangelistic services. The secretary, Mr. G. H. Weekes, Lancaster, will be glad to hear from any willing to help.

The Outlook in Ireland.

(By a Special Correspondent.)

In the last issue of The Christian, the experiences of a recent visitor to Ireland are given. The present religious outlook affords ground for profound thankfulness to God. The prayers of God's servants for Ireland are being answered; masses of Roman Catholics are breaking away from the control of the priests, and the Christian people here at home are bestirring themselves as they never did before.

Mr. Moody's evangelistic tour has been the means of clothing the dry bones of native Christianity with flesh, and breathing the breath of life into what had too long been a cold corpse. Then the priests, unfitted by their training to cope with the new order of things, are pursuing the very course best calculated to drive the people into revolt. As an evidence of their blind and intolerant crusade against the flowing tide of spiritual revival, the following extract from *The Catholic, Rev. Thomas Connellan's monthly for November, will interest your readers:—

"As an evidence of the degree and kind of religious liberty in store for all who dare to differ from the priests in religious matters, we commend the following to the careful notice of our readers. A young girl in the town of Boyle procured a Douay Testament three years ago, and began to read it. She had been brought up a Roman Catholic, and she could see no harm in reading a book approved of by the Irish Roman Catholic bishops. As she read she got new light on many things. She found, for example, that Christ is the one and the only Priest of the New Law, and that He 'needed not daily to offer sacrifices first for his own sins and then for the people's, for this He did once in offering Himself' (Heb. vii. 27). She found too that 'there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus' (1 Tim. ii. 5). She read how a simple act of faith in Christ changed a thief into a saint, and gave him a passport to Paradise. Then, as she came to know Christ more, and, as a consequence, to love Him more, she gradually fell away from the Church of Rome.

"Yet for a whole year she continued in outward conformity with that Church, lest she should bring down the ire of the priests upon herself and her family. As she grew in grace, however, she became bolder, and united herself to one of the Christian communities in the town. Then the fiery cross was sent round; for though Protestants are received with open arms into Rome and have the fatted calf killed for them, a Roman Catholic will join Protestantism at his peril. Two of the town priests waited upon her. She remained firm, although very respectful. Word was at once sent to her father's parish priest in the country. He is one of those who believe in saving souls by curses and blackthorns, and he put such pressure upon the father and brothers of this poor girl that they came into town determined to carry her off by force. There was a terrible scene, her brother telling her he would 'sooner see her dead.' Dread of the police prevented open violence just then, but she was informed that another and a more suitable occasion would be availed of to carry her to a place where her religious views would soon have to be modified.

"The girl is twenty-four years of age, but the priests do not consider she is yet able to think for herself. In fine, the poor girl became so alarmed that she fled to Dublin, and is now in the hands of excellent Christian ladies, who will teach her, by example, 'how these Christians love one another.' If anyone desires to learn the facts from her own lips the editor will be happy to put them in communication with her.

"A young lady in Sligo recently had to fly to Dublin to escape the brutal persecution of the priests there. She, too, had dared to follow the dictates of her conscience. Her aunt, a pious devotee who shadows the confessional in the morning and looks after her neighbours during the day, promised to give her everything she had in the world if she returned. Her letters are in existence, and she even followed her niece to Dublin. The latter, however, preferred the liberty of the children of God to her aunt's wealth, and is happy in her newly-found Saviour's love."

The preceding are only two out of many similar cases. It is absolutely necessary that the white light of public opinion should be brought to bear upon those gentlemen who are fighting so hard to establish Papal depotism in Ireland.

Mr. Connellan, who has been evangelising in the West for some months, has returned to Dublin, and commenced his winter campaign there. He preaches the Gospel to his Roman Catholic countrymen every Sunday evening in Central Hall, Westmorland-street, and the services are numerously attended. He has also got around him a band of workers, men and women, all of them recent converts from Rome, and brought out by his instrumentality. They have a weekly meeting for prayer and consultation, and, knowing the inner workings of Roman Catholicism, are labouring with great success and acceptance.

Many other agencies are in the same field; among them the Dublin Medical Mission, recently established at 6, Chancery-place. Mrs. Figgis is the hon. sec., and Dr. Long the medical superintendent. The poor come in to have their bodily diseases cured, and the occasion is availed of to bring them to the feet of the Great Physician. Some remarkable conversions have already resulted, and the mission gives promise of much fruit in the future.

Mr. Moody's visit to Dublin has excited the deepest interest, and much prayer has ascended that great and lasting good may result. Let our brethren in England, who have all their lives had the blessing of an open Bible, pray for Ireland. The day star has at length arisen above the Irish horizon. May the Sun of Righteousness soon follow. "Behold, a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." "And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." (Isaiah xxxii. 1, 2.)

MISSION IN ENNISKILLEN.

A most encouraging mission, conducted by Miss Bax and Miss Smith, has just closed in Enniskillen. The meetings were held in the Methodist Church, in which large congregations assembled night after night. On Sunday evenings especially almost a thousand persons were found in the church. The solos and duets by these devoted ladies, as well as the clear and convincing expositions by Miss Smith, and the pathetic and powerful addresses of Miss Bax, through the Holy Spirit, led scores of persons to decision for God.

During former missions it was found difficult to break down the prejudice against the inquiry room, but in this instance so mightily did the Spirit work that the greatest willingness was manifested to go to the quiet room for prayer and conversation.

On the last night of the mission a praise meeting was held in the church, when 180 persons testified to blessing received. Some of the cases are exceedingly interesting. For instance, a militia sergeant and his three sons and one daughter were brought to God. Three sisters who have a ladies' school surrendered, and a number of others, who are now workers in the new Christian Endeavour Society.

During the mission Mr. Moody paid a visit, and gave two stimulating addresses, after which a large number stood up for prayer.

Mr. Charles Inglis in Liverpool.

The Lord's people on the south side of the city have been greatly cheered in the fortnight's mission just concluded by Mr. C. Inglis. The spirit of hearing has been very marked, so much so that on Sundays there have been overflowing congregations, many being unable to gain admission, while hundreds have taken their seats an hour before the advertised time to begin.

The Spirit of God has wonderfully owned the addresses given by his servant in bringing conviction to many hearts; night after night the inquiry room has been filled with anxious ones seeking the Lord. Some who have professed conversion were very striking cases. One man who had lost a good position through gambling was convicted of sin, made a full confession to the Lord Jesus, and then burnt his books. Mr. Inglis has been giving Bible talks at the mid-day prayer meeting in the centre of the city, which have proved a time of deep spiritual profit and refreshment to business men and others who have attended them.

MEXICO.—Mr. John Mercer writes that he hears from Mr. Bright, now in Mexico, that there are many little meetings and groups of believers scattered here and there in the country. He longs that some one might be stirred up to go and visit and cheer these lonely witnesses. Information on the subject may be had of Mr. John Mercer, 29, Queen's-road, Southport.

CHRISTMAS LETTER MISSION.

The Christmas Letter Mission will next Christmas chronicle its "coming of age." It was on a wet and stormy night, in the Christmas week of 1871, that in the house of a Brighton clergyman, the late Rev. E. B. Elliott, of St. Mark's, Kemp Town, a little company was gathered to give help in a plan which was only then made known. Some hundreds of printed letters, envelopes, and Christmas cards or leaflets—all very different from the present illustrated and attractive issues of the Mission—were laid in piles on the table, being destined for Brighton Hospitals and packets for London Institutions. Round the parcels all knelt with earnest petitions, that not merely pleasure and comfort might attend the distribution of the letters, but that the Spirit's power might accompany each message of life through a crucified Saviour.

Beginning without a name, then taking shape as the "Hospital Pillow Mission," and in 1879 expanding into the "Christmas Letter Mission," by sending forth letters, cards, and other publications suited for all classes, it has established its claim to supply a need long, even though indistinctly, felt. Christmas opportunities may now be capitalised by the busiest workers, to whom are furnished ready to hand and in tasteful and attractive form material for evangelistic effort, as well as for the interchange of Christian and social greetings. More than 130 hon. secretaries have carried out its distributions. During twenty-one years, dating from that first seed-sowing at Brighton, more than six and a-half millions of letters, and nearly an equal number of text-cards, have been sent forth, as well as between three and four hundred thousand hymn-books, booklets, and other publications. With few exceptions the hospitals, workhouses, and infirmaries throughout the land have been supplied, while in town and country districts distributions have on all sides become a recognised Christmas observance.

Of souls won for Christ, of outcasts restored, of the intending suicide arrested and brought to the cross, of the murderer transformed into a missionary among his comrades, of sick beds cheered, and, in many instances, converted into beds of testimony to the "power of Jesu's Name," the reports have, year by year, been laid before the supporters of the mission. The work has extended to the Continent, to India, to the Colonies, and has become naturalised in America. Encouraged by the assurance that the Lord is still "confirming the word with signs following," it is desired afresh to enlist the interest of readers of The Christian in the extension of the distributions.

Letters suited for mothers' meetings, for the sick and their nurses, for children, for railway men, postmen, lads and boys, the blind, and other sections of the community have been prepared. Mrs. May, the hon. sec. for India, writes: "One of the letters distributed among the soldiers was given to a man of whom one might have been tempted to say that he was hopelessly and irretrievably lost. He was a drunkard, he was a prey to all sorts of vice, and he had even at one time been particeps criminis in a case of murder. Surely a man from whom there was little hope! Yet this man, receiving the Christmas Letter, was led first of all to give up the drink. Then he appealed to the giver of the letter to admit him to her Bible-class. After some hesitation—for the man's character was known to be terribly bad—he was admitted, and then it became evident immediately that he was in real earnest. He asked for a private interview with his new friend and helper, and then made confession of his crimes against man and God. The record was a fearful one, but the grace of God was able to change the heart of even this man, and now he is leading a new and better life, and is known as an earnest worker for Christ. He has returned to the wife he had deserted, and is honestly endeavouring to make amends, not only to her, but others, for the past years of his life. 'Man could never have done it,' he says in a letter, which lies before me, acknowledging God's goodness, and how in his Providence he 'was saved by a mere letter and card.'"

For three stamps a specimen packet, and for 1s. 6d. a sample packet, may be obtained by return from Messrs. Hazell, Watson, and Viney, 1 Creed-lane, Ludgate-hill, E.C. Full particulars, reports, and names of local secretaries may be obtained from the hon. organising secretary and treasurer, Miss E. Steele Elliott, 66, Mildmay-park, N.

National Protestant Congress.

The third National Protestant Congress was held last week at Portsmouth, and was at once encouraging to its promoters and inspiring to thousands of Evangelical Christians. There were devotional gatherings on Monday evening and Thursday morning. On the two intervening days meetings were held in the Albert Hall in the morning and afternoon, and in the Town Hall in the evening. The weather was fine and the attendance of the public large; on the last evening so many people came together that an overflow meeting was held.

Sir Arthur Blackwood presided over the preliminary devotional meeting, and, in the course of an earnest address, said that though regarding the actual condition of affairs with apprehension and sorrow, he looked forward with much hope. These are not days for pessimism, for pulling down or lowering the colours; but, on the contrary, by God's blessing, we must rally our forces under his banner and in his Name, and by gatherings and other efforts throughout the world achieve our urgent object. Thus the minds of our country-people will be opened to the progress of Romanism and Ritualism throughout the land. Their consciences would be quickened and the hearts of multitudes would be led to joint effort and action so to fight the good fight of the faith that they might be instrumental, by the good hand of God, in maintaining the Protestant religion and the liberties of England. If we are to achieve by the blessing of God ultimate victory, it is above all things essential that our work should be in the highest sense a spiritual effort.

Addresses of a helpful character followed, on "The Church of the Living God, as described in the Epistle to the Ephesians." The Chairman spoke on "The Temple" (ch. ii.); Canon Bell, of Cheltenham, on "The Family" (iii.); Rev. J. S. Wyard, of Gosport, on "The Body" (iv.); and Rev. J. C. Martin, M.A., Portsmouth, on "The Bride" (v.).

WHAT IS PROTESTANTISM?

Sir Robert Lighton presided over the morning meeting on Tuesday, when stirring addresses were delivered on Protestantism from various points of view. Rev. Dr. Potter answered the question, "What is it?" As a term, from the Latin, "Protestant" is synonymous with the Greek word "martyr," significant of realism in place of sham, of testimony or faithful witness-ship for God and his truth. It was not first invented and applied at the Diet of Spires, as some ignorantly affirm; it was an old term, well known and used before that celebrated assembly met in the sixteenth century. We see it in the old Latin Vulgate Bible. This term "Protestant" is found in the Coronation Oath. Our Sovereign has no right to rule in "this Protestant kingdom," as it is called in the Bill of Rights, the charter of our liberties, save as a Protestant. It is found in statutes of the realm, as in the Acts of Union with Scotland and Ireland. Protestantism is a great principle, a penetrating power, reaching down to the depths of man's conscience and soul, transforming him, and, under Divine guidance, bringing clean out of the unclean. It is an exaltation of Christ, instead of a so-called human priest; spiritual liberty, Divine authority, and supremacy of God's Word, in place of human tutelage; the enfranchisement of the human mind, purity in place of that complete corruption of the whole man, begotten by the leaven of the great apostasy.

Dr. Verner White, of London, sketched the past activity of Protestantism. First, as to Bible circulation. Rome burns the Book; Protestants disseminate it far and wide. Second, as to missions. British Protestant missionary societies spent in 1890 no less than £1,574,000 sterling. The Romanists of England raised for missionary purposes £9,380, the entire income of the Roman propaganda for this object in 1890 being calculated at £283,000. Again, Protestants keep the Sabbath because it is God's command. Compare in this respect England and the United States with France and Spain. Further, Protestantism has exposed and subverted the Pagan superstitions of Rome, and restored the Gospel doctrine and the ordinances of the New Testament; another point was Sunday-school work. Here Protestants have done an incredible amount of good; while the labours of Romanists have been small in the extreme. Civil and religious liberty, law and order, benevolent and charitable institutions, commercial prosperity, and morality and crime, were heads upon which the speaker made cogent remarks. In conclusion, Dr. White maintained that Romanism is on the decrease in the British Isles. In 1841 the Roman Catholics were 27 per cent. of the entire population; in 1881 they were 15·5 per cent.

The future of Protestantism was dealt with by Rev. J. G. Mantle, late superintendent of the North Birmingham Wesleyan Mission. It depends upon our fidelity in the proclamation of the old-fashioned Gospel of Jesus Christ. What attitude are we prepared to take in these days of unbelief, unrest, and hostile criticism? Again, it will depend upon the measure of spiritual power with which the truth is proclaimed. It is because we have secularised the Church that we have failed to evangelise the world. The real Church of the future will be the Church that has the largest measure of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus.

Bishop Eldridge followed upon the same subject. He strongly urged Protestants to avoid countenancing Ritualism in any way.

THE AUTHORITY OF SCRIPTURE.

Bearing in mind the fact that Romanism no less than Rationalism depreciates the Word of God, qualifying its authority, and denying its sufficiency to make men wise unto salvation, the committee appropriately arranged for instruction on this subject to follow the definition of that vigorous Protestantism which has gloried in the profession that the Bible, and the Bible only, is authoritative in matters of religious faith and practice. If, as has often been said, the battle at the present time affects the Old Testament, it is obvious that a consideration of the claims of the Hebrew Scriptures involves a survey of Holy Writ in its entirety; for Christ accepted the Old Testament, and his utterances regarding it are scattered through the Gospels, while citations therefrom distinguish the various Apostolic Epistles. The meeting on Tuesday afternoon was presided over by Commander B. H. Key, R.N., who spoke of the vital relation of the Law to the Gospel, the one being fundamental to the other, and urged increased diligence in the regular study of the sacred Scriptures.

Rev. James Knaggs, Congregational minister, Stratford, E., read a paper on the testimony of Christ to the authenticity of the Old Testament Scriptures. Though the Lord did "empty" Himself in assuming human nature, He was afterwards filled without measure with the same Holy Spirit by which the writers of the Old Testament were inspired. So his competency to speak on the subject cannot be called in question. By reference to many of our Lord's quotations from the Old Testament, the speaker showed that He especially bore testimony to those events which have been most severely criticised, and that He repeated Old Testament utterances alike in the days of his flesh, and subsequently to his resurrection. He pointed out that to modify his testimony is to rob Him of the glory of his Godhead, to destroy the dignity and honour of his manhood, and to reduce the Sacred Volume to a mass of cunningly devised fables.

Dr. Waller, Principal of St. John's College, Highbury, spoke of the absolute veracity of the Old Testament Scriptures. Of course, he meant (having regard to various readings) Scripture so far as we assuredly know it; and very properly he pointed out that what we sometimes think must be mistakes often show themselves easy of comprehension when more closely examined. The Lord declared "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth" (John xviii. 37). What did He mean by the truth? His reply is, "Thy word is truth" (xvii. 17).

Dealing with what he called our Lord's negative testimony, the speaker pointed out that Christ never found fault with the Old Testament writers, or corrected them. Then as to his positive testimony. The first mention of this kind was before the incarnation, and is found in Dan. x. "In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia . . . . in the four-and-twentieth day of the first month . . . a certain Man" said unto Daniel, "I will show thee that which is noted in the Scripture of truth." This seems to indicate that the Scripture of truth was written not on earth but in heaven. The Bible would indeed be an unearthly book if it should turn out that the books on earth are a portion of those which are written in heaven. The time will come when the books will be opened; and it behoves us to beware how we trifle with that which may be written not only on earth but in heaven.

In the days of his flesh, the Lord said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets." Again, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Now, jot and tittle refer not to spoken words, but to written words. If that utterance is not a testimony to the absolute veracity of Scriptures, what does language mean? Having shown that the expression "Law" is sometimes used in the New Testament of the entire Old Testament, the speaker asked why the Lord, speaking from heaven, called Himself the Alpha and the Omega? He was not simply the beginning and the ending, the first and the last, but the great exponent of the Old Testament. As the Hebrew Scriptures came into the hands of the Jews they were without vowels, although four of the consonants could serve as vowels. To read the Hebrew Scriptures without the points one has to supply something from one's knowledge and the sense of the book. Christ, the true Owner and Master of the Old Testament Scriptures, has supreme authority to read them; it is He who supplies the vowels, saying "I am the Alpha and the Omega."

Rev. A. A. Isaacs, of Bath, dwelt upon the authority of the writings. From the time when the serpent inquired, "Yea, hath God said," the evil one has suggested doubts concerning revelation. Modern cavils and objections are not new, and they will share the fate of their predecessors, and the Scriptures will carry on the work of the God whose glory they proclaim. That before which Bacon and Newton bowed in full assurance of faith may well enlist the confidence of those who know God through the Lord Jesus Christ.

ROMANISM AND LIBERTY.

There was a grand audience in the Town Hall in the evening, when addresses were delivered on "Romanism, the death-blow to liberty." Mr. Thomas Cave, who presided, referred to the religious oppression endured in Italy, Spain, and other countries; the people have no sympathy with the Papacy, and long for deliverance. Yet, with these object lessons before them, the people of this country are submitting to those who would lead them back to Rome.

Rev. J. Edward Flower, M.A., Congregational minister, Wandsworth, dealt with the subject as it affects the individual. He showed that freedom has come of the Gospel. Romanism is simply "baptized Paganism," therefore a persistent hater of liberty. Ostensibly a religion, Popery is really a great political power, using religion as its chief means. The priests, many of them excellent men, are agents of the system, being bound to submission and obedience by the most awful vows. These points were illustrated, and lessons drawn from the life and work of Wycliffe, Copernicus, Galileo, Luther, Gratry, Döllinger, and others. The conscience is not regarded by the system, nor is the operation of the Holy Spirit, of which the Apostle said, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

Rev. Joseph O'Shea, D.D., ex-priest of the Church of Rome, was heard with special pleasure. His address showed a sound position in regard to Evangelical truth. He based his remarks on Gal. ii. 20, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." The one thing necessary in Christian life is union with Christ; where there is that union there is true liberty. The Roman Catholic system materially interferes with the attainment of that union, and becomes a great enemy to Christian liberty. St. Paul's words implied that God was the Apostle's life and strength, and his all. Without God he was nothing; he only existed in God. This brought a great trust in the Creator's goodness, and the Apostle cast himself upon the providence of God, whose love filled him to the joy of his soul. This union is obtained by faith in Christ alone. Rome, however, puts a human being, in the person of a priest, between the sinner and the Saviour; and teaches her people that once they have been separated from God by sin, no road remains open to them, other than by the absolution of the priest, who is a sinful creature like themselves. In order to get back to God, the sinner must, according to the Romish system, have recourse to good works, and so he comes to rely upon his own righteousness, long prayers, fastings, and other acts, which will, he hopes, propitiate God and give him the grace of repentance.

Having remarked that, for a quarter of a century he exercised the twin office of a sacrificing priest and a judiciary priest in the Church of Rome, e speaker showed how entirely a penitent places mself under the priest. This position he con-ted with that of a Protestant oppressed with a se of sin. The latter goes straight to God ough his Son, Jesus Christ, no human priest-od intervening. Christ obliterates the distance tween the sinner and God, which the Romish tem displays in the light of penances and rifices, leaving the contrite heart in continual ubt and anxiety. Protestantism shows the ner to be justified by faith, which doctrine, said e speaker, was the first source of spiritual asure that dawned upon me after I left the urch of Rome. In view of that truth I became so ful that I had to ask myself whether it was too good to be true. How was I led to this owledge? I will tell you. One evening, while ding what is known in the Church of Rome the "Divine Office," consisting of psalms d lessons from the Old and New Testa-nts, a passage from the Homilies of St. gustine struck me. It was stated that by no vious merits of our own do our bodies become the mples of the Holy Ghost. There was not a word out auricular confession, but it was a going straight God with some act that will dispose us to receive grace. That led me out of the Church of Rome, d afterwards, coming to a knowledge of justifica-n by faith, I felt the most intense pleasure and lief. I felt that in that doctrine there was uine freedom, and saw as clear as light that it ne unadulterated from the throne of God.

Appealing to his hearers as "sensible men," the aker asked whether it could for one moment be ieved that Christ, the second person of the most orable Trinity, would come down to earth, and thirty-three years live a life of poverty, and suffer blood to be shed for the redemption of men, and er all that transfer the outcome of his work to a ful priesthood, to be divided just as human in-uity might suggest! In conclusion, he warned otestants not to be so blinded by the dust-throwing Ritualists as to fall a prey to the enslaving power Rome.

Mrs. Auffray (Edith O'Gorman) dwelt upon the rors of the confessional, being followed by Mr. es Inskip, of Bristol, who showed the effects of manism upon Continental communities, and urged diffusion of light among Papists, and loyalty to Scriptures on the part of Protestants.

OTESTANT AND ROMISH MISSIONS CONTRASTED.

On Wednesday morning Mr. R. Cory, of Cardiff, sided, and the subject was, "Protestant and mish Missions Contrasted." The first speaker s Rev. H. E. Fox, M.A., of Durham, who was ited to deal with African affairs. The object the two classes of missionaries is ostensibly same, but the Romish theory of introducing thens into the Christian Church is altogether dif-ent from the Protestant. There are labouring in enty-nine districts of Africa fifty-seven Protes-t agencies, and twenty Roman Catholic agencies thirty-four districts. Of the Romish agencies e are French, and that fact has a distinct bearing n recent events in Uganda. Mr. Fox blamed the mish missionaries for their disloyalty to the ntries to which they go. In their periodicals y assert that their object is not only to pro-te the interests of the Church, but also those of nce. That is the secret of the troubles in anda. Romanists want not merely to get footing there for the Church, but also ust British influence from the country. There-e they have been plotting, counter-plotting, and riguing for years in a way which would startle British public if the facts were known and duly preciated. Rome is not simply a church, but a vast itical agency. Though the speaker would not that no Protestant missionary has ever inter-ed in the politics of the country to which he took Gospel, he was sure that the rule was for m to keep as far as possible clear from any such anglements.

The Missions Catholiques, issued in France, has m time to time contained hints, growing in plain-s, as to the real object of the new crusade with ich the name of Cardinal Lavigerie is associated. Joubert, who went out in connection with these thers of the Sahara, has built a station like a t, and thus "defends the mission" when in nger. Children are bought and trained in the man Catholic religion. Mentioning Rome's well-own, very objectionable, method of arming the tives to do her work, the speaker told how on officiating for the first time, Bishop Tucker found his congregation to consist of armed men. Living on the edge of a volcano, and not knowing when war might break out, they carried their rifles to Divine worship. The Bishop told them, when they assembled to worship God they must trust God, and leave their weapons at home. The advice was readily acted upon. Among the Romanists, however, the other plan prevails, and civil and physical force was used where Protestants employ moral and spiritual persuasives. When Bishop Tucker entered the country he took no gun (leaving at Zanzibar the one that was included in his outfit), and had no weapon of offence or defence except a white umbrella! He left behind all unnecessary things, in order that he might carry as many Bibles as possible. Rome's method of systematically purchasing slave children is really an encouragement to the greatest curse that afflicts the country.

Another charge which Mr. Fox brought against Romish missions was the fact that they do not give the Bible to the people. The only hope of the world to-day is the Bible, which reveals the Lord Jesus Christ. Wherever the Book has gone, blessing has been diffused, and wherever it has been kept back, darkness and superstition have prevailed; and sooner or later a wave of heathenism rises, and sweeps the mission away. Rome hates the Bible, and will not translate it into the tongues of the people.

Dr. H. Martyn Clark spoke on Rome's influence in India, where he has laboured as a medical missionary. He sketched the work of Rome in the Peninsula, saying that when brought under this influence the heathen are in more hopeless case than previously. The gods of the Hindu pantheon have been worshipped under new names, and penances and other works in which to trust have been added to those upon which the benighted people already relied. The Romanist priest has no Gospel for the heathen. Mahommedanism arose as "the sword of the Lord" to purge the Apostate Church, and those who have come under its sway hate Rome and sneer at her priests. So the priests say: "We cannot touch these; let the Protestant missionary do his best and gather converts, and then we will go in and do the reaping!"

In the Punjaub, said the speaker, in weakness but with much patience we sowed the good seed of the Word of God, going into the zenanas, and taking the light of life to the people—healing their bodies and telling them of the balm for their souls. What does the Romanist? By whatsoever things are impure, unlovely, and of evil report, he seeks to win our converts. In July, 1890, the Fathers of the Franciscan Mission fell upon us. There were some five thousand Christians gathered in, mostly from the lowest classes of the people. The priests got hold of the riff-raff of our Mission, and gave them wages higher than they could otherwise earn to go into the villages around seeking proselytes. In the course of a few days hundreds of the people joined, being bribed with money, food, and presents, and in every possible way induced to become Roman Catholics. The poor were fed and lodged, driven about in carriages even; and naturally they said: "Never were things so good as this with us!" The slightest friction among members of the Protestant Mission offers occasion for the priests, who say to them: "We are also Christians. You will be just as happy with us, and we are not quite so strait-laced as those other people."

Saddest of all, I charge the priests with having deliberately promoted habits of intemperance, and with having fostered immorality among the people, in order that they may be cast out of our churches and then be received with open arms by the Romanists. Our people in the Punjaub were a nation of water-drinkers. Simultaneously with the Romanist missionaries there came a flood of strong drink, and indulgence in this has been favoured by precept and example. The Khols are a people who never drink excepting for the purpose of intoxication, and the Protestants have enforced upon them the rule, "Touch not, taste not, handle not." Among these much moral corruption has resulted from the influence of the priests. No Scripture instruction is given, nothing that can regenerate the heart of man; but every device is employed to corrupt Protestant converts, and when they lapse, news is sent home of a great and glorious victory! In conclusion, Dr. Clark said that the Punjaub perverts had nearly all returned, and he believed the same was true of another centre in which mischief had been wrought.

Dr. Barnardo read a paper on Rome's work at home, especially among the young. He said: The most common of Rome's methods of proselytism is by securing the education of Protestant children in Roman Catholic elementary schools. Until recently, most of the elementary schools demanded fees. It is a fact that the fees of Roman Catholic schools have always been designedly lower than those of the Protestant schools in the same district. The result is that numbers of the children of the working classes have been sent by preference to the Roman Catholic schools, from economical motives. In these schools are hung the crucifix, images of the Virgin and Child, and of the Saints, with divers Roman Catholic prayers or mottoes. The Protestant child who attends that school, even if not one word is said on the subject of religion, becomes familiarised with the various objects of Roman Catholic superstition which surround it. Its young companions, on entering school, cross themselves in front of the crucifix, and the child soon learns to do the same; and we may be sure that no opportunity is lost to teach it short prayers. In three cases known to me, where the children of labouring people living in the East-end attended Roman Catholic schools on the score of cheapness, the mothers made the children recite for me the "Hail Mary" as a mark of intelligence; and all made the sign of the cross on the mention of the Saviour's name.

Great blame also attaches to many well-meaning Protestants of the upper and middle-classes who, seduced by the alleged educational advantages of convent schools in France and the Continent, send their girls there for education. In many an instance known to me, the young lady returns with the foundations of her Protestant faith sapped and mined, if she has not become an actual pervert. I know of an instance in which the eldest of a family of seven, all girls, was sent to a convent school at Lille. She returned a Romanist, and carried over with her to the Roman Catholic Church no fewer than four of her sisters, one of whom has since married a Roman Catholic.

By claiming all the children of mixed marriages as her own, and by the adoption of any means, however unscrupulous and unlawful, to make good her claims, Rome every year and all over the country, in spite of the law of the land (which says a child's religion shall be that of its father), seizes for her own the helpless and unresisting offspring of deceased Protestant parents, or the sons and daughters of fathers who may be still living but are utterly indifferent to the children's religious interests. Rome stops at nothing in order to lay forcible and unauthorised hands upon the young, so that their minds may be led, at an early age, to accommodate themselves to her teachings. Dr. Barnardo gave several striking cases in support of his assertions, maintaining also that bogus baptismal certificates are manufactured when needful to support desperate cases. In closing, he said that no one approaching the study of Rome's methods as displayed during the past forty years in England can help coming to the conclusion that the Romish Mission in Great Britain may be fairly summarised as unscrupulous in its methods, audacious in its advances, and intolerant in its relations to others.

ROME UNCHANGED.

In the afternoon addresses were delivered showing that Rome is unchanged. Mr. Benjamin Nicholson presided, and declared convents and monasteries to be habitations of cruelty. Rev. E. K. Elliott, M.A., of Worthing, told the story of the past in the horrors of the Inquisition, as revealed when broken open at Rome in 1849. The recital was full of painful passages, occasionally relieved by intimations of noble testimony on the part of those who came under the iron heel of the ruthless persecutor. Among other things discovered was correspondence which revealed State information obtained through the confessional. Many of the letters were from Irish and English Roman Catholic Bishops. Deputy Surgeon-General Partridge exhibited a collection of "instruments of piety" or disciplines, explaining their use in the past and the present. He was followed by Mrs. Auffray (Edith O'Gorman), on convent life, who appealed to the compassion of Protestants to open their eyes and hearts to the sufferings of deluded inmates of conventual institutions, who ought at least to have the right of liberty in case they desire it.

THE PROGRESS OF PRIESTCRAFT.

General Phayre presided over a crowded audience on Wednesday evening in the Town Hall. He spoke of the carnality of sacerdotalism, showing its absolute incompatibility with the Scriptures, which set forth one high priest, even Jesus, and all his people anointed of the Spirit to approach God in worship and service.

Canon O'Connor, from Ireland, described the development of priestcraft in the Church of Rome, seeing evidences of it in the manner in which, on the waning of her political power, she advanced her spiritual claims, and posed before the world with one infallible head. Again, no longer does Rome speak of the Divine right of kings, but, since power has got into the hands of the people, she has taken up the cry, "The voice of the people is the voice of God." At the same time, political advances have been made, and the social changes have favoured Rome's designs.

Miss Cusack (the Nun of Kenmare), followed, saying:—Don't give Rome liberty to take away your liberties; that is what she has been trying to do for half a century. The object of the Roman Catholic Church is temporal dominion; and in the United States she already has control with results that I know of. Protestant honesty is no match for Roman Catholic duplicity, for Rome tells you one thing but teaches her people another. She wants all the liberty on her side, and keeps no pledges made with "heretics."

Rev. Lindsay Young, M.A., of Portsea, spoke with much effect of the spread of priestcraft in the Church of England, tracing its progress from the "Catholic Revival" of fifty years ago. He drew attention to the influence of the various Ritualistic organisations in Great Britain, and said that there are from 400 to 500 churches where "masses for the dead" are regularly offered.

The last speaker was Rev. Jacob Primmer, of Edinburgh, who told of the progress of priestcraft in the Episcopal Church of Scotland, where "the mass" is performed, and members of which have formed a "Society for the Study of Ancient Liturgies." Something similar is going on in the Church of Scotland, whose ministers, to the number of 530, have joined a Church Service Society, which has issued a Popish "Book of Common Order."

The final session of the Congress, held on Thursday morning, was of a devotional character, and addresses on the revival of true religion were delivered by Mrs. L. B. Fooks, of Worthing, and Revs. J. Gelson Gregson and W. Darlow Sarjeant. The organising secretary, Rev. Warden Stubbs, announced that it had been practically decided to hold the next Congress at Bath.

THE WOMEN'S PROTESTANT UNION.

Thursday afternoon and evening were devoted to the interests of the Women's Protestant Union, which is a handmaid of the Congress, and just a year younger. Its president is Miss Whately, but Mrs. Arbuthnot (Plaw Hatch, East Grinstead), hon. sec., presided at the meetings. In her address Mrs. Arbuthnot gave an account of the rise, progress, and work of the W.P.U. At the end of the first year it had a membership of 1000; now there are between 1800 and 1900 members and sixteen local secretaries. The work comprises, among other things, a junior branch for girls, the intention being to educate them in the principles of Protestantism. The Union is non-political and unsectarian.

Madame Leite Bozas gave a helpful address on the need for prayerful systematic study of the Scriptures in the midst of the ignorance of vital truth which prevails.

In the evening the Albert Hall was again crowded, and there was also an overflow meeting in the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Arbuthnot read a paper entitled "Woman: her Place, Work, and Influence in the Church of Christ." Among the speakers were: Miss Golding, the latest "escaped nun," who was listened to with much interest; Mrs. Anderson, whose address on the safeguarding of the young from Ritualistic error, was received with great enthusiasm; and Miss Marsland, who gave from personal experience an account of the influence brought to bear upon girls in convent schools. Addresses were also delivered by Rev. Dr. O'Shea and Canon O'Connor.

BETHANY.—Mrs. Ben Oliel, who has been spending a few days with Miss Crawfurd at the ancient home of Martha and Mary, writes that a real quiet work is being done by Miss Crawfurd, who would be thankful to hear of one or two Christian ladies willing to settle and work with her. To any with small or some knowledge of medicine the work would be most suitable. We learn also that Miss Crawfurd is waiting on the Lord for means to build a small hospital. She offers a site, but needs the funds.

THE CONGREGATIONAL UNION.

Notwithstanding the great and impressive change which has passed over the leaders, as they are often called, of the Congregational Union, Bradford received as large a number of visitors this year as have ever attended the Union meetings. One looked in vain for familiar and venerable forms; their places were either vacant altogether, or younger men filled them. Whatever the cause may be, there is certainly no unbecoming forwardness on the part of men whom time and change are forcing to the front; they come slowly.

The chairman (Dr. Herber Evans, of Carnarvon) delivered an effective address on the subject of treating it in a simple, pictorial, earnest way. No time was spent upon the philosophy of it. A direct, practical method, ofttimes very solemn and searching, prevailed from first to last, and of course the only speaker who drew tears and sobs from the ministers and students at Mr. Spurgeon's memorial service did not fail in true pathos. He said: "We are all members of a church; let each one ask himself, 'Am I a member of a dead church, a dying church,or of a church full of spiritual vitality?' A dead church is an altar without a fire, a body without a soul, and it is the worst of heresy. Life is the only condition of success. If we would win the world, we must show it what is better, nobler, higher; not stoop down to its level, but rise to higher things. We can cast out devils only by having more of Christ. We can cast out worldliness, the curse of the age, only by having a deeper spiritual life. We can win the world to Him whose right it is only by making every church a home, alive with sympathy, love, and joy."

WORK IN THE CHURCH FOR WOMEN.

The most touching part of the address was Dr. Evans' reference to the need for a further recognition of the value of woman's work in the Church, he said: "How slow we have been to ask our sister members to help us! Although we read of deaconesses in the early Church, and although we do not read of a single woman who was unkind and unfaithful to the Saviour while here upon earth, men were diabolic in their cruelty to Him, but never did a woman betray Him, mock Him, desert Him, nor spit in his face. Many of them cheered Him on his way to the cross, washing his feet with tears before men pierced them with nails, anointing his head with precious perfume in anticipation of the thorns with which men crowned Him. They wept with Him on the way to Calvary, and were true to Him to the very end. And are they not devoted and true to Him still? Why, then, have we been so long in calling for their services?"

PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY.

But women have been called, and have come. Women now sit on the Board of Directors of the London Missionary Society, and share its committee work; churches can and do send women as delegates to the meetings of the Congregational Union of England and Wales; and although no woman has, so far, taken part in the meetings of the assembly as a speaker, a women's meeting is now a recognised part of the programme, and men who take the liberty of going to it are not excluded. It is only a question of time, and men and women will be found meeting on absolutely equal terms. One of the addresses this autumn was given by Mrs. Armitage, wife of Professor Armitage, of the Yorkshire United College, on the subject of parental responsibility, and was as full of spiritual power as of intellectual force. One sentence we may quote: "Our desires for our children must be purified; and this implies that we should be constantly bringing those desires to the altar of sacrifice, offering up the vain and poor ambitions, the worldly desires, the selfish hopes, which we too frequently cherish for our children, and thus having our eyes purged to discern the purpose of God for them, his concern in the unfolding of their souls towards Himself."

That a radical change is passing over the spirit of the meetings of the Independents, where women take a part, is evidenced in many ways. A tender, devout, unworldly tone is much more perceptible.

A NEW CENTRE OF GRAVITY.

Time was, and not long ago, when the greatest enthusiasm used to prevail over the meetings at which "our principles" were expounded and enforced, though for the last twenty years not a few members of the Union have been anxious to see also, if not instead, some meetings of a more devotional type. At length this desire is making itself very distinctly felt. Early morning prayer-meetings are held, and are attended by growing numbers; while a prayer union has been formed whose members pledge themselves as far as possible to unite in prayer every morning between 8 and 9 o'clock for a blessing on the churches. The Lord's Supper is also observed at the time of the meetings of the Congregational Union. And in addition to this, every autumnal and May session has one or more meetings for the advocacy of foreign mission-work, at which the spiritual interest seems now to culminate. The centre of gravity is changing from the semi-political meeting to the devotional meeting.

Thousands of persons assembled to partake in a valedictory service to bid Godspeed to thirty missionaries who will presently go forth to various parts of the world. This was a provincial leave-taking; a metropolitan one takes place on Wednesday, October 26, in Exeter Hall. Almost all these brothers and sisters are an addition to the staff of the London Missionary Society, and form part of the hundred which the Society proposes to send forth in four years; they are "the earnest."

Thus the Independents, while maintaining their ancient testimony for civil and religious liberty, are manifesting a deep interest in the condition of our large town populations, in the scattered inhabitants of the country, and in the millions of heathendom. They are concerned, like all churches, in questions of Biblical criticism and other cognate subjects, but they are re-kindling the fires of their devotion at the altar of prayer and praise. J. P. G.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

A meeting in aid of this excellent society was held on Friday afternoon in the Mansion House. The Lord Mayor, who presided, said, in the course of a sympathetic address, that the number of pensioners on the society at the present time was 1244, and they were told that 864 of that number were upwards of seventy years of age, 277 were over eighty, while seventeen were more than ninety. Nothing appealed to the charitably-disposed more than the affording of succour and help to the young and the old—the two extremes. The first claim was that of the infant, but side by side came that of the decrepit and the old. This society gave help to the aged in the most practical manner possible, and he was sure the support of the public would be generously accorded. During the eighty-six years of the society's existence it had granted pensions, amounting to more than £230,000, to 5600 aged Christians. They were doing good physically and morally, because they were giving attention to those who spiritually had not neglected in themselves that higher call and duty—the duty to God.

Archdeacon Sinclair spoke of the great evangelical revival of spiritual life within the Church of England during the present century, and said that one outcome of it was the society which they had met to support. Where people who had proved their solidity and truth and loyalty to their faith had misfortune overtaken them they should not be neglected in their old age, and that was what the society sought to prevent. He rejoiced to think the society's operations were on so large a scale, and hoped they would continue.

Sir Henry Peek spoke of the inestimable good which the society was doing in a quiet and very unostentatious way. In many instances the 2s. or 3s. or 4s. a week they gave to the pensioners was of the greatest possible assistance.

Rev. L. B. White, D.D., directed attention to the importance of largely increasing the annual subscription lists of the society and asylums, in order that the work of the institution might be adequately sustained. Subscriptions, remarked the rev. doctor, were the solid ground on which the society rested. They were thankful for donations and legacies, but subscriptions were most important. The work commended itself to all their Christian principles.

Mr. W. H. Collingridge said that in his personal experience of over forty years the institution for the relief of God's aged poor was managed by a band of wise and godly men, who were ever ready to devote their time and means, and the funds which the subscribers furnished, to carry on, to the best of their ability, the work which they had undertaken.

THE WEST LONDON MISSION.

There is no denying that the West London Mission is a great fact, and that it has accomplished a great work. Five years ago there was no such thing as a church here, while now Mr. Darlow Sargant is able to write as follows: "The Mission Church contains about fifteen hundred men and women, most of whom profess to know Jesus Christ as their own personal Saviour. The unwavering answer given to many pointed questions leaves me no doubt that at least the large majority of those whose names are on the church-roll have passed from death to life, and are living by faith in Jesus Christ. Some of the classes are composed of poor but devout people from the Soho and Cleveland districts; but the large number of the members are gathered from the business houses." Moreover these 500 members are in addition to numbers who, having been converted, have joined their own churches, and many others who have gone off to the country, have passed into the presence of the King. These facts being borne in mind, it becomes abundantly evident that the West London Mission has been the means of doing a great evangelistic work.

The fifth anniversary of this mission was held on Friday in St. James's Hall. In the morning Rev. Mark Guy Pearse preached on "The Supremacy of Love." At luncheon Mr. C. J. W. Rabbits presided, and insisted on the strong claims of the mission for further public sympathy and support.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes spoke of the gratifying progress which is being made by this Christian enterprise, which he said was intended not exclusively for the destitute poor, but for all classes of living or working in the West-end. Never before were their prospects so bright and their opportunities so great as to-day. When he remembered that it had been publicly stated that in one direction alone in the West-end it was intended to spend £100,000 a year in ministering to the doubtful pleasures of the people, it almost made him blush to say that on that occasion all they needed at present to sufficiently continue their work was £3000. The cost for the maintenance of the ministers and agents of the mission, so far as the organised Church was concerned, was met by collections and contributions at the various services, and he explained that all the money sent by friends in the suburbs was devoted to purely missionary and aggressive work among the unchurched masses of London.

Mr. Percy Bunting, hon. treasurer, said their work went at the root of all social problems, and he did not think it was to the credit of the State that the Government should in the great centres of population allow large sections to grow up without any provision being made for Christian training.

A largely-attended meeting was held at St. James's Hall in the afternoon, when Mrs. Pearsall Smith, in the absence of Lady Henry Somerset, presided. Interesting reminiscences of the mission work were recounted by "Sisters" Mary and Emmeline, and brief addresses were given by Revs. T. Morcom Taylor, H. Price Hughes, and Mark Guy Pearse, the latter strongly advocating the formation of mission sisterhoods in the large towns.

In the evening the large hall was crowded in every part by an enthusiastic and sympathetic audience.

Alderman Quibell, of Newark, presided, and opened the proceedings with a hearty and vigorous address, rejoicing in the fact that the mission was being real, arduous, fruitful work, getting into touch with the people by diverse means and methods, and winning them to the Saviour.

After addresses by Revs. W. L. Watkinson and J. E. Codling expressive of full sympathy with the work of the West London Mission,

Mr. Howard Barrett, M.R.C.S., as the Medical Director, reviewed the work of his department, showing how the dispensary and district visiting touch the poorest and most sorrowful inhabitants of the district; how the sick and suffering were helped and healed, and how the sweet ministry of Christian love found a ready hearing. After some details of the crèche work, Mr. Barrett closed with a touching plea on behalf of the proposed Home for the Dying, to be known as St. Luke's Home. How hard, he pleaded, it is for those who cannot even so much as die in decency or with a distant approach to comfort. Is there any family among us where some loved one has not died slowly from some hopelessly fatal and lingering disease? Was any effort or sacrifice or careful tendence deemed too much if the suffering could be soothed only a little, or the last hours lightened in their load or brightened in their outlook? Then by the love you have borne to those who are gone, are you not stirred pitifully to remember those who have lost in the battle of life; and who, having drawn out an existence of hard struggle, for the most part cheerless and profitless, are now dying quite near you in circumstances of singular misery? Think of those who, having throughout their lives maintained the respect of themselves and others, at last, with untarnished honour, have fallen upon evil days, and find themselves in the ever-darkening valley of the shadow of death, without friend, consolation, or comfort. If you have any pity, if you really believe in the brotherhood of man that we are so fond of asserting, if you have any love for Christ and desire to grow in his likeness, if you aspire to win the smile of the Almighty Father, try and realise these things. For if you once realise the pathos and the horror of the actual—and your most daring fancy is not likely to over-colour it—you will most certainly act, and come speedily to help us.

Next came the important matter of the collection, and the chairman set a good example by indicating what he had been doing already in the way of interesting his friends, his efforts resulting in some £86, besides his own personal gift of £50.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes followed with one of his characteristic appeals. The mission work is, he said, entirely unsectarian. We are here to persuade men not to be Methodists, but to be Christians. A few years ago no such place was in existence. Now we have 1500 persons meeting in class, and professedly Christians. Besides, this great hall is crowded every Sunday, while Princes' Hall is crowded with the overflow, and full often hundreds cannot get in at all to either place. Again, it must be remembered our people give nobly and well, raising about £4000 a year among themselves, and really supporting the ministry and the whole work of the church. Why, then, do we ask for money? To carry on the active aggressive evangelistic work among the practical heathen around us. Mr. Hughes went on to give little incidents, such as that of a policeman's wife taking in washing to earn something for the mission, and of a young woman's class raising £6 14s. 2d. towards the anniversary collection. These facts show the spirit of the people, and ought to stimulate others to similar devotion and liberality.

I fear, he said, the conscience of the Christian Church is almost dead on the subject of giving. The gold and silver are the Lord's, not ours. He has committed them to our care, and will demand of us an account. Here is a work God is wonderfully blessing; here are men and women devoting their lives and strength to it; and yet while there are millions of money in the hands of the Christian Church, a mission of this kind is allowed to languish for lack of funds. We want only £3000, but we want that sum made up now; surely we will have it this night.

The stewards were then for a while busy with promissory forms, many of which, from £100 down to a guinea, were read out. Eventually the total sum raised reached about £2000.

We may note that Shern Hall, Walthamstow, was opened on Saturday afternoon as a Rescue Home for young women needing shelter and care.

HOP-PICKERS' MISSION, ALTON.

On Tuesday in last week a public meeting was held in the Assembly Rooms, Alton, to commemorate the twenty-fifth year of the work amongst hop-pickers in the Alton district. Mr. W. Wickham, chairman of the bench of magistrates, presided, and the meeting was addressed by Revs. J. Whyley, vicar of Alton, J. Ossian Davies, John Greig, S. Chinn, and others, all bearing testimony to the fact of the power of the Gospel in reclaiming and saving men. Warm testimony was borne by all the magistrates to the great value of the tent services, inasmuch as since the tents have been erected and the mission conducted, the authorities have scarcely anything to do during the hopping season. It was stated as well known in the district that many of the roughest characters have been reclaimed and are now in good situations. A commemoration fund to carry on the work is being organised. Any of the Lord's people wishing to help, may send to Dr. Stewart, Ackender House, Alton, or to Mr. S. Chinn, Alton, Hants.

MISSIONARY PRAYER UNION.

By Pastor GEO. WAINWRIGHT.

Since the notice of our Missionary Prayer Union appeared in The Christian, I have received several applications for further particulars. There are no additional particulars to give. The chief advantage of the scheme is its extreme simplicity. The diagram card we use was obtained for us by Mr. A. H. Baynes from the Church Missionary Society. Our local matter is printed on the other side. An exact copy of this appeared in a recent issue of this paper. The boxes used are ordinary missionary boxes; but we have had a separate slip, with copy of our agreement, and space for name and date pasted on one side of the box. Having said this, there is really nothing more to say.

One or two have written about it as though it were a scheme intended and fitted in all its details for adoption by every church. I never attempted anything so pretentious, and (as I believe) so impracticable. Each church adopting it is at liberty to make its own form of agreement, and its own suggestions for subjects of daily prayer. I think I am right in saying that the London Missionary Society's "Watchers' Union" has been suggested by this Prayer Union, and has adopted, with some alterations, our agreement and our arrangement of prayer subjects. Let others make what alterations they think to be improvements for their own locality.

The daily giving is deemed a difficulty by some. Our experience does not lead to that conclusion. Not a few of our members are domestic servants, who find it not only possible, but easy and delightful, to give their half-penny and often their penny per day. The conviction grows upon me that the principle is not only easy but Scriptural. Our prayer is for daily bread; God's promise to us is as thy day so thy strength; and our obligation—let me rather say—our grateful return, should be daily also. "So will I sing praise unto thy name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows." (Psa. lxi. 8.)

DAYBREAK ON THE LOPORI.

It will interest some of our friends at home to hear of God's work in this far-off Congo region. Bongandanga is about 1000 miles inland, on the Lopori, and 120 miles from Ikau, the nearest station. Some will remember our coming here in March, 1891, only a year or so ago. Thus early God has been pleased to send us blessing—to manifest his saving power among the heathen. To-day we had the joy of baptizing four lads of about seventeen years of age, one little boy, and two girls. Each of these, since confessing Christ some months ago, has given evidence of a real change of heart.

From that very spot where we stood in the water, many a poor victim has been sold to a life of slavery—sold to die—and in days not long gone by many a wretched captive has fallen before the savage "beheading knife." What might those silent banks not tell of the awful deeds of blood committed in the sight of heaven when the "oppressed" for ages have stood alone with their "oppressors." Praise God with us for the change; they shall be among the "gems for his crown," to whom the woods rang back the sweet hymn, "When He cometh," sung in the native tongue from full, glad hearts. Our lads have "come out" to be "separate" just at the age when temptations to sin are strongest, but sneers and curses have not moved them from their anchorage. God has, indeed, magnified Himself in them—He proves Himself in truth the "Mighty to save," Almighty to keep.

Very few of the grown-up people came to witness the ceremony. The hold of witchcraft upon them is terribly strong; the parents now look on their own sons with a superstitious fear. A good number of our school children were present; we are greatly encouraged by their confidence in us, and by their desire to learn. We trust the day may not be distant when many of these shall also be numbered among the "jewels," and when a great awakening may come upon all, old and young, in this district. We prayerfully fight on, in faith, under his banner, before whom heathen superstition and darkness must one day flee. Brethren and sisters, pray for us.

MR. MOODY IN NORWICH:

The visit of this evangelist to the ancient capital of East Anglia will long be remembered by thousands of citizens. The invitation was promoted by the local committee of the Evangelical Alliance, who carried out all the arrangements. The Agricultural Hall was selected for the place of meeting, which, when fitted, was found to be a splendid place for assembling mass meetings. Seats were provided for 4250. At every meeting these were not only occupied, but hundreds more attended who had to stand. During the three days some 36,000 were gathered into the building. Mr. Moody arrived from Boston on Thursday, Oct. 20, in time for the afternoon meeting, and drove direct to the hall, where a crowded audience was gathered to hear him. His address was founded on Gal. vii. 6-7, and the Christians of the Cathedral City had a taste of some "plain talk," as one of the local papers described it. The evening meeting was crowded to overflowing by an audience who listened with rapt attention to a discourse on "Regeneration." At the Friday afternoon meeting the address on "Rest" came home to hundreds of hearts with refreshing and comforting effect, as well as stimulating power.

The Friday evening meeting was intended specially for men. It was a strange sight in Norwich to see at a religious meeting the body of the hall filled to its utmost with a dense mass of men only. No political meeting could have been more awake. The pictures of Herod and John Baptist were vivid, and seen to stand for men living in our generation. The audience moved with intelligent and lively sympathy with the preacher, and they once burst into a cheer at some plain speech about seducers. It was immediately hushed by the speaker, who, with emphasis, expressed his dislike to it. Many anxious ones sought the inquiry room at the close.

On Sabbath morning there was an eight o'clock meeting for Christian workers. The morning was cold, with showers of sleet. Fears were entertained that the weather would spoil the attendance, but by eight o'clock nearly 4,000 had assembled. They were well repaid for any sacrifice made in order to be present by an address on "The Holy Spirit." By consent of the ministers, a meeting for non-churchgoers was held at eleven, when the hall was again crowded. In the afternoon Mr. Moody rested, and a large meeting was addressed by Mr. Charles Inglis.

It was expected that there would be a crush at the closing meeting in the evening. It was announced for 8.15, but by 6.30 the hall was full. A chapel near, capable of holding 1200, was opened about 7.30. It, too, was immediately crowded, as was also a hall adjoining it, seated for 800. It was calculated that over 12,000 was gathered inside and outside these buildings. Mr. Moody's address was on "The Excuses." No true idea can be conveyed on paper of this meeting and the address. From beginning to end there was poured forth an irresistible stream of striking truth, flashing wit, unanswerable argument, pathetic appeal, and spiritual force. The impression on the audience was visible and profound. The Assembly Room, used as an inquiry room, was crowded with inquirers at the close. "It was a night to be remembered." "The like has not been seen" in Norwich.

Universal regret was felt that Mr. Moody could not prolong his stay, which regret was shared by himself when he saw the field and its ripeness. The singing of Mr. Stebbins and Miss Rose, as well as a fine choir of over 300, was a powerful aid in the meetings, and gave point and force to a remark of Mr. Moody's at the Sabbath morning meeting, viz. that singing the Gospel had not got its proper place in Christian work. All the evangelical ministers heartily co-operated in the mission. It has been to many of these and other Christian workers a season of refreshing, and a time of "bracing up," as one brother expressed it. Fervent thanksgivings were and are rendered to the Lord of the harvest for thrusting forth such a capable reaper as Mr. Moody, and for sending him through the churches to teach his servants how to win men to Christ.

On Monday evening, after Messrs. Moody and Stebbins had left, a praise and prayer-meeting was held in the hall, which was attended by some two thousand people. Mr. Charles Inglis gave a Gospel address, and Miss Rose sang solos. Numbers went into the inquiry room, and a busy time was passed in leading the anxious ones to decision

FAREWELL TO MISSIONARIES.

A very happy meeting was held on Monday afternoon at Harley House, Bow, E., to bid farewell to workers about to leave for various parts of the mission field. The hall of the College was well filled with friends from near and far. Among those who were commended to God in prayer were missionaries for Congo—Bolololand, and India, who have had the benefit of training in the East London Institute for Foreign Missions, under Dr. Grattan Guinness; several labourers for the Congo from the Presbyterian Church of the Southern States of America; a party of workers in connection with the China Island Mission; and two friends about to reinforce the Congo stations of the American Baptist Missionary Union.

Some words of spiritual encouragement and counsel were addressed, at once to the outgoing missionaries and the audience, by Rev. Evan H. Hopkins, who based his remarks on St. Paul's charge to Timothy, "Be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. ii. 1). The speaker observed that grace is the opposite of merit, the complement of our need. As with justifying grace, so also with sanctifying grace, it is received by faith in Christ. One who is strong in this grace enjoys deliverance from the power of evil; has a continuous supply of strength; and is ever giving out that which he receives. Believers should realise that they are millionaires in Christ, being "blessed with all spiritual blessings," and having had given unto them "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." We must empty ourselves to be filled; we must be weak in order to be strong.

Mr. Stanley Smith having specially remembered the outgoing missionaries to China at the Throne of grace, Mr. E. P. Davey, who is shortly sailing for India, under the auspices of the Baptist Missionary Society, to labour at Agra, N.W.P., told the story of God's leadings, whereby he had realised his duty and privilege to testify for Christ in a distant land. He has been for nearly three years in the Institute, and, as in thousands of other cases, has seen an end of his own purposes, and witnessed providential marvels in making clear the path in which God would have him go.

Mr. H. Hewett, who has been accepted for service in connection with the London Missionary Society, but whose sphere is not yet fixed, told an interesting story of a way made plain so far, but not yet open as to the immediate future.

Dr. Harry Guinness, committing these brethren to the Lord, asked that the various agencies in India might soon be increased by the formation of an interdenominational mission such as the C.I.M. and others. Referring in a brief address to the opening up of Africa, he remarked that in less than three and a-half years the Congo-Balolo Mission has established four stations, translated portions of Scripture and fifty or sixty hymns into the language, preached the Gospel to the natives, and witnessed the baptism of some fifty people, who were not merely delivered from heathenism but from absolute savagedom.

Mrs. McKittrick, who returns to the scene where her husband's remains sleep, awaiting the resurrection morn, referred, in feeling terms, to the peculiar circumstances of her present departure from England. Letters from the missionaries at present on the spot show how encouraging the work is, and how great and urgent the need for reinforcements. Miss Lancelev, who also goes to the Congo, follows in the footsteps of her brother, who laid down his life for Africa years ago in connection with the Livingstone Mission. Miss Moxam, another student from Doric Lodge, thanked God for making her way clear to go to Africa.

The several testimonies were made up of interesting details, and all gloried in the assurance that the Lord leads them. "Lo, I am with you alway," was an encouraging and consoling consideration with each. Two pleasing-looking Congo children having sung a hymn, in the spirit of "There is a gate that stands ajar," Miss Guinness spoke some sympathetic words of instruction on "the unsearchable riches of Christ," as to wisdom, grace, and "the glory of the mystery, which is Christ in you" (Col. i. 27).

AT THE recent annual meeting in Dublin of the Irish Association for the Prevention of Intemperance, it was stated that in spite of a diminishing population there is in Ireland an increasing expenditure on intoxicating drinks. Resolutions in favour of Direct Veto and Sunday Closing were passed,

FRESH C.I.M. MISSIONARIES.

A series of farewell meetings have been held during the past week in connection with the departure of a strong party of fresh missionaries in connection with the China Inland Mission, additional interest being awakened by the presence of Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, who has been heartily welcomed on his return from China. The central meeting of the series took place in Exeter Hall (lower) on Monday evening, when fourteen young men and ten or twelve sisters, leaving ere long for China, were commended to the Lord. Ten of these brethren, leaving this week, had naturally the first place assigned them in bearing testimony. Mr. T. A. Denny, who presided, and Mr. Theodore Howard having briefly expressed their thankfulness in seeing Mr. Taylor safely home again, a season was spent in prayer and praise.

Mr. J. Hudson Taylor then reviewed the position in China, rejoicing in the increase of missionaries and in the tokens of blessing, but speaking, on the other hand, solemn and serious words on the activity of the enemy in seeking the destruction of the whole work. Doubtless, difficulties may be ahead; but the work is God's, the missionaries are in his hand, and all will be well, in the working out of his gracious purposes towards China.

In regard to the thousand additional missionaries for whom so many have been praying, Mr. Taylor could not tell how many other missions have added but the C.I.M. have in two years had 208 new labourers, and thus God is evidently answering prayer. Of course the arrival of these large parties from Scandinavia, America, Canada, Australia besides others from home, has meant care and consideration in the reception and training of these in China, but, nevertheless, He who sent them provided all things needful. Still, it must be confessed, there has been some anxiety in the matter of funds. God has supplied every need but often He has been pleased to bring those responsible for the Mission into circumstances in which they could only wait upon Him—and they have not waited in vain.

Mr. Stanley Smith, B.A., told how under his own heavy bereavement comfort and rest had come to him from the precious words "That in all things He might have the pre-eminence." Describing his own recent spiritual experiences, Mr. Smith referred specially to meetings at Harley House and Pyrland road on the "Fulness of the Holy Spirit," which had been peculiarly blessed to himself and to others. Now his glad testimony is that "Jesus does satisfy." For some time he has been waiting to know the will of the Lord as to returning or staying, and at length, in the simplest way, God has shown that his will is he should go back at once to China.

Mr. B. Broomhall explained that there are seven or eight sisters now on their way to China, while ten brethren present are leaving to-morrow (Friday) and four others follow in a fortnight (November 10th) with Mr. Stanley Smith. Further, seated behind these was a party of ladies, several from Norway, two from Finland, and five from our own land, who leave a little later on.

Five of the young men leaving this week followed with brief, bright testimonies; these being Messrs. Lewis Jones (Cardiff), H. T. Ford (Peckham Y.M.C.A.), C. Thomson (converted in the Cor Soldiers' Home), W. Elmslie, and W. M. Cameron—the three latter being all Scotchmen. Mr. G. F. Bett, formerly secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Folkestone, now going out to China, also told how the Lord led him to go.

Dr. G. F. Pentecost followed with a stirring address on the value of missions, and the blessing God is granting and is about to grant in these latter days in the foreign field. He believes that the elixir of life for the home churches is to be found in these days in the far off lands. As the churches reach forth to evangelise the heathen, God seems to be pleased to bless his people at home.

The five brethren already named as leaving to-morrow are accompanied by five young Scandinavians—Messrs. Sandberg, Blom, Björkebaum, Hoistrand, and Bergling—some of whom bore glad testimony to their joy in being called to God's service among the heathen.

IN REGARD to the growth of intemperance in France of late years, it is stated that there is now in the country a drink shop to every twenty-seven of the population, and that in Paris alone there are twenty-seven thousand places for the sale of intoxicants.

THE HOME OF INDUSTRY.

Two interesting meetings have been held within e last ten days at the Home of Industry. The st was a social gathering to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Macpherson Merry on their marriage and urn to settle down to work in London. A large mpany of friends assembled, and after tea spent eason in prayer and pleasant converse. Miss acpherson gave some details of the Home work, ile Messrs. W. F. Archibald, C. Dobbin, Joseph rry, and others dwelt on various phases of the rk, and offered hearty welcome to the young uple. Mr. James Merry replied, thanking God for e prayerful sympathy he had met with.

On Wednesday of last week the workers' meeting s held, being rendered peculiarly interesting by e return, after long absence, of the beloved rector of the China Inland Mission—

REV. J. HUDSON TAYLOR

He addressed the assembled friends, beginning h a few thoughts on Unity in Christ Jesus, and the tual helpfulness of believers labouring one with other in faith and prayer. Having read Jer. ix. 24, Mr. Taylor urged the importance of having t merely the truth, as far as orthodoxy and soundss go, but the living truth, truth in the power of Holy Ghost. Now about China. We have seen e Spirit working, and many souls brought out of rkness into light. Since I last stood here we ve seen some 1400 persons baptized on profession of th in Jesus Christ, while many not members of e Church on earth have gone unbaptized to glory. e find it right to be increasingly careful in the mission of members, giving them plenty of time prove their faith by their works.

Then in that period we have more than doubled e number of voluntary unpaid native workers; d God is blessing their efforts very much, several urches having been gathered entirely by these tive workers. Miss Macintosh tells, for example, one young Chinese wife, the only Christian in r village, dying of consumption, who bore even in ath such a testimony that several were led to cept Christ. So it has been in many parts of ina. Then as to missionaries. The great Shanghai nference issued appeals, and many resolved to ay for a thousand fresh labourers within five ars. Soon after, and without warning, a gentlen walked into our house at Shanghai as a leader a party of thirty-five, and since then God has rred many hearts at home and abroad, and we ite expect our prayers will be fully answered.

But while this is so, the enemy has been busy sing opposition. Hence the blasphemous literare and the riots. God, however, is our helper, d even the ladies furthest from European aid feel fear, for God is with them.

The other night I had a letter from Mr. Polhillrner, telling how he and his wife had been beaten a distant and lonely station. Yet, I believe, en these two return home on furlough they will l us God was with them and sustained them all e while. In the future there may be difficulties; but whose work if is, who has sent us, has prosed to meet every need. He never slumbers or eps; therefore we are assured all will be well.

Brief words followed by Miss Black, as also three ng students from Harley House and three edish brothers, who form part of a band of ten ving this week for China.

Miss Macpherson and Mr. James Merry gave ails of the work at home and in Canada, and the ceedings concluded with prayer.

Miss Krikorian.

A letter, dated October 4, from Rev. Dr. Fuller, of ntab, Turkey, says:—

'Miss Krikorian reached home yesterday in safety. great company of friends went out to meet her and lcome her home. There was great rejoicing at return by a wide circle of friends. I have no ubt she has come full of zeal and courage for her at interesting and important work. We will do best to help and to advise her.

'The field is ripe for just such a worker. I confitly believe she has been raised up and led in the r Lord's own chosen way, and so specially fitted for at usefulness among her people."

Communications respecting Miss Krikorian's work l be answered by Mr. J. McDonald, Exeter Hall, rand, W.C.

A NATIVE SAINT AND MARTYR.*

Namuri, one of my Aneityumese teachers, was placed at our nearest village. There he had built a house for himself and his wife, and there he led amongst the heathen a pure and humble Christian life.

Almost every morning he came and reported on the state of affairs to me. Without books or a school, he yet instructed the natives in Divine things, conducted the worship, and taught them much by his good example. His influence was increasing, when one morning a sacred man threw at him the kawas, or killing stone, a deadly weapon like a scythe stone in shape and thickness, usually round, but sometimes angular, and from eighteen to twenty inches long. They throw it from a great distance and with fatal precision.

The teacher with great agility warded his head and received the deep cut from it in his left hand, reserving his right hand to guard against the club that was sure to follow swiftly. The priest sprang upon him with his club and with savage yells. He evaded, yet also received, many blows, and rushing out of their hands actually reached the mission house, bleeding and fainting, and pursued by howling murderers.

I had been anxiously expecting him, and hearing the noise I ran out with all possible speed. On seeing me, he sank down by a tree and cried, "Missi, Missi, quick! and escape for your life! They are coming to kill you. They say they must kill us all to-day, and they have begun with me, for they hate Jehovah and the worship."

I hastened to the good teacher where he lay; I bound up, washed, and dressed his wounds; and God, by the mystery of his own working, kept the infuriated Tannese watching at bay. Gradually they began to disappear into the bush, and we conveyed the dear teacher to the mission house. In three or four weeks, he so recovered by careful nursing, that he was able to walk about again. Some petitioned for him to return to the village, but I insisted, as a preliminary, that the Harbour chiefs should unitedly punish him who had abused the teacher, and this to test them, for he had only carried out their own wishes—Nowai excepted, and perhaps one or two others. They made a pretence of atoning by presenting the teacher with a pig and some yams as a peace offering; but I said, "No! such bad conduct must be punished, or we would leave their island by the first opportunity."

Now that sacred man, a chief, too, had gone on fighting with other tribes, till his followers had all died or been slain; and after three weeks' palaver the other chiefs seized him, tied him with a rope, and sent me word to come and see him punished, as they did not want us after all to leave the island. I had to go, for fear of more bloody work, and after talk with them, followed by many fair promises, he was loosed.

All appearing friendly for some time, and willing to listen and learn, the teacher earnestly desired to return to his post. I pleaded with him to remain at the mission house till we felt more assured, but he replied, "Missi, when I see them thirsting for my blood, I just see myself when the missionary first came to my island: I desired to murder him, as they now desire to kill me. Had he stayed away for such danger, I would have remained heathen, but he came, and continued coming to teach us, till, by the grace of God, I was changed to what I am. Now, the same God that changed me to this can change these poor Tannese to love and serve Him. I cannot stay away from 'Shem,' but I will sleep at the mission house, and do all I can by day to bring them to Jesus."

It was not in me to keep such a man under such motives from what he felt to be his post of duty. He returned to his village work, and for several weeks things appeared most encouraging. The inhabitants showed growing interest in us and our work, and less fear of the pretensions of their heathen priest, which, alas! fed his jealousy and anger. One morning during worship, when the good teacher knelt in prayer, the same savage priest sprang upon him with his great club and left him for dead, wounded and bleeding and unconscious. The people fled and left him in his blood, afraid of being mixed up with the murder. The teacher, recovering a little, crawled to the mission house, and reached it about mid-day in a dying condition. On seeing him, I ran to meet him, but he fell near the teacher's house, saying, "Missi, I am dying! They will kill you also. Escape for your life."

Trying to console him, I sat down beside him, dressing his wounds and nursing him. He was quite resigned, he was looking up to Jesus, and rejoicing that he would soon be with Him in glory. His pain and suffering were great, but he bore all very quietly, as he said and kept saying, "For the sake of Jesus! For Jesu's sake!" He was constantly praying for his persecutors, "O Lord Jesus, forgive them, for they know not what they are doing. Oh! take not away all thy servants from Tanna! Take not away thy worship from this dark island. O God, bring all the Tannese to love and follow Jesus!" To him Jesus was all in all, and there were no bands in his death.

He passed from us, in the assured hope of entering into the glory of his Lord. Humble though he may appear in the world's esteem, I knew that a great man had fallen there in the service of Christ, and that he would take rank in the glorious army of martyrs. I made for him a coffin, and dug his grave near the mission house. With prayers and many tears, we consigned his remains to the dust in the certainty of a happy resurrection. Even one such convert was surely a triumphant reward for the missionaries whom God had honoured in bringing him to Jesus. May they have many like Namuri for their crown of joy and rejoicing in the great day!

A Children's Convalescent Home.

Many will be interested in hearing of a new Children's Convalescent Home, started last May. It is for boys and girls, up to ten years old, who are crippled or otherwise invalided and delicate. Since May seventy-four of these children have been benefited, having enjoyed fresh country air and wholesome food for a period varying from three to eleven weeks.

A good many have been only partially convalescent hospital children, and it has been most gratifying to see those who have come down pale and sickly, and often perfectly helpless, return to their homes looking bonny and able to get about without any assistance, having learnt to walk perfectly on their crutches.

It seems hard that such should be the case, but it is nevertheless true that the doors of most convalescent homes are closed to young children, and also to those suffering from any wound requiring dressing.

The Home is particularly in need of funds just now, as three cases of scarlet fever have occurred lately, having originally been brought down by a London child; this of course necessitates repapering and painting, and the responsibility of this will fall heavily on the two ladies who are working the Home

REST FOR DEACONESSES.—In the report for this year of the Liverpool Deaconesses' House and Training Institute we read: "Mrs. Manders' Home of Rest, Wightwick, Manor Farm, Wolverhampton, has been a delightful retreat to several of our workers, when needing change or rest; and very sincerely is her generous hospitality appreciated." This Home has been started for over a year, and is greatly liked by all the ladies who have sojourned there. Deaconesses of any denomination are welcomed

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR SOCIETY.

By Rev. J. B. MORGAN, Chester.

IV.—COMMITTEES AND THEIR WORK.

So much has been written and said about Christian Endeavour Committees, that to add thereto looks like a work of supererogation. A great Frenchman, two centuries ago, exclaimed, "All has been said, and we come too late!" The remark is not without an application to the present subject. It may chance, however, that the literature is not familiar to British readers—being largely American—and something written from a purely British standpoint may have its advantages.

Committees have often been made butts for the shafts of sarcasm. A celebrated preacher is reported to have said he liked "committees of three; two of them absent." The Y.P.S.C.E. does not act on that principle. As under Nehemiah, small groups of men undertook different pieces of work, so the Endeavour Society parcels out its work, and each committee is responsible for its own department. Here the average society finds its chief difficulty, and with some committees more than others. It takes time to get into working order. One minister, giving the experience of many, says, "It was not until the second year that these committees did their most effective service." But Endeavour Societies are not alone in finding it difficult to get Christians into active work "for Christ and the Church." The place of difficulty is also the place of opportunity, and patience and perseverance will yield ample fruitage.

THREE COMMITTEES ESSENTIAL.

The number of committees necessarily depends on the strength of the Society. Apart from the executive, which demands a word by itself, three committees are essential to the effective working of a Y.P.S.C.E.—"The Look Out," "The Prayer Meeting," and "The Social." These committees are elected at the half-yearly business meeting, and usually consist of five members each, the first elected acting as chairman. It is customary to make changes in the personnel of each committee every six months, but a new society will find it better, if possible, to keep all committees intact for the first year; and, while bringing as many new members into service as occasion permits, it is always well to retain on each committee one or two members accustomed to the work.

Endeavour committee work should be accepted as a sacred trust, and glorious opportunity to serve the Master. While rivalry and personal ambition should be rigorously excluded, the office should be loyally accepted by those on whom the choice falls, and never refused except for reasons of gravest emergency. A true Endeavourer will habitually watch these possible rocks of offence, and "to be forewarned is to be forearmed." Each committee should meet at least once a month; the time often found most convenient is for half an hour after or before the weekly prayer meeting. Whether little or much has been done, a monthly report should be presented to the Society, thus keeping committee and Society in closer touch with the work.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

This committee stands apart from all the rest both as regards the scope of its operations and the character and manner of its composition. It consists of the pastor of the church, the officers of the Society, that is, president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, and the chairmen of the several committees. It will thus be seen that the executive cannot be formed until the other committees are elected, and then its formation is practically automatic. It may correctly be regarded as the cabinet of the Society elected on democratic principles. The work of this committee is not simply departmental, as is largely the case with the others. All recommendations of a business character coming from other committees shall be laid before the executive for consideration before their introduction in the open meeting of the Society. Suggested alterations and improvements are first of all considered and reported on by this committee, and with that report attached carried to the full business meeting.

The executive also deals with the Society's finance. This is very rarely a burdensome matter. A member of Parliament once said he was rich, not because of the greatness of his means, but because of the fewness of his wants. The financial needs of the Endeavour Society are few, and therefore it is generally well-to-do; but so far as financial arrangements are required they are in the hands of the executive committee.

THE LOOK OUT.

The title of this committee sufficiently indicates the nature of its work. It is "The eyes of the Endeavour Society," or, as others have called it, its "outside conscience" and its "monitor." "Its business," as a witty American once described it, "is to look out, look in, look after, look into, look around, look over, but never OVER-LOOK." In a familiar letter, treating of committee work, Dr. Clark says, "Where each committee is of vital importance in its own sphere, there is no need of instituting comparisons, but I think if I must give up any committee the last one I would want to part with would be the Look Out Committee. It is more unique and peculiar to the Christian Endeavour Society than any other."

The bringing in of new members, and their introduction to the work is in the hands of the Look Out Committee, and to this end the eyes should always be wide open. In the Society of which the writer is president two members of this committee are always expected to be at the church doors on the Lord's Day after service to speak to the young people, and invite them to the prayer-meeting. The Look Out Committee should also devise means for working the neighbourhood, and laying hold of young people outside the church and congregation. The looking up of absentees and the reclamation of any who seem to be growing indifferent is also a part of its work. Its duties call for the exercise of much affectionate tact; its possibilities for good are enormous.

PRAYER MEETING COMMITTEE.

If the Look Out Committee is the eyes of the Y.P.S.C.E., the Prayer Meeting Committee partakes of the characteristics of both brains and heart. It has to think and feel for the whole society. True, it works more inside and out of sight, but it is absolutely essential not only to the prosperity, but to the very existence of a Christian Endeavour Society. It is directly responsible for the prayer-meeting, for its programme, and for its interest or "go." Where the Society prefers the selection of its own topics to adopting the uniform series, they are assigned, or at least a wise control is exercised over those selected, by individual members of the Prayer Meeting Committee. As the appointment of leaders is also in its hands, the work of this committee in getting out the quarterly or half-yearly programme is periodically very heavy, and wise discretion is always needed.

On no committee is it more essential to have members of some experience in Endeavour work. It must not be supposed either that its task is accomplished when the programme is prepared. An Endeavour meeting is always more dependent upon the members generally than upon the leader, and the Prayer Meeting Committee should always see that a sufficient number are prepared to take part, and, on the least signs of flagging, be ready to step in with a helpful word.

THE SOCIAL COMMITTEE.

In a very true sense the Social Committee is the hands of the Endeavour Society. Its duty is to promote the feeling of unity and fellowship among the members, to make them mutually acquainted with each other, to give the warm hand clasp of welcome to strangers as they find their way to the meetings, and to break down stiffness and restraint, and all that savours of cliqueism. Rightly or wrongly, the complaint is often made by young people that they come and go to a church for months, sometimes even years, without having a kindly work spoken to them, or any apparent interest taken in their welfare. That could never be in an Endeavour meeting with an active social committee, or in a church where the Endeavour Society is fulfilling its true mission.

For the purpose of encouraging this spirit of Camaraderie Sociables are periodically held. They should not be held too often, once a month at most, and should never be allowed to interfere with the great aims of the movement; but they will, as has often been proved in other spheres of work, do more in one night to make friends than can be accomplished perhaps in twelve months in the ordinary meetings of the Church. Strangers should specially be invited to these Sociables, and they should be regarded in the light of relaxation and innocent amusement, with the end already named kept distinctly in view.

OTHER COMMITTEES.

While the three committees named are practically indispensable to every well-ordered Endeavour Society, they by no means exhaust the list of those in operation in a society of even average strength. A strong society will have nine or ten; a more usual number is five or six. "It is foolish," as Dr. Clark says, "to multiply committees simply for the sake of adding to the list, but the more the better if all are faithful and active." The leading idea is to get some definite work for each member; this is accomplished largely by the committees, hence the importance of having just as many as can work efficiently.

A music committee can find very useful work to do. Sometimes the social committee takes the music under its wing, and is called "The Social and Music Committee," but whether that is done or not the musical element ought not to be neglected. The previous selection of two or three hymns appropriate to the subject for the evening; an arrangement with one or more friends to give a solo or part song will all help in providing a good programme. In many places, too, it is found possible to start an Endeavour Choir, and then still widening spheres of usefulness open before the Music Committee. The names of other possible committees must be allowed to explain themselves. The missionary committee, the temperance committee, sick visiting committee, literary committee, the Sunday-school committee are all of proved usefulness and blessing.

CONCLUSION.

With a closing word this series of articles will reach their termination. To an outsider these methods of doing Christian work by, with, and for the young people will, perhaps, seem unduly ornate and cumbrous. It may be freely acknowledged that the Y.P.S.C.E. is a somewhat elaborate system, but it works out well, and to those who heartily take it up it becomes simplicity itself. There is no part of the constitution without meaning, and nothing has been advocated in these papers but has been tried and NOT found wanting. Without the blessed agency of the Divine Spirit no piece of religious machinery, however perfect in itself, will glorify God or benefit humanity. With that, very humble crude means will accomplish great things. Best of all if the Divine Power be wedded to the means best adapted to serve the age, and utter "the present truth."

In the confidence that the Endeavour movement is unsurpassed as an organisation for work among the young, it is here recommended to the churches. It affords a splendid opportunity for glorious service: there is room in it for the exercise of almost every consecrated gift; it already possesses a history that ought to secure for it a cordial reception; it occupies a field which all Christian people have been longing to see battalioned with soldiers of the Cross, and which, so far, has only been partially held; and it is not rash to prophesy that it will bring a great blessing to the churches of England as it has already done on the continent of America.

THE THONON MISSION.

The Gospel work at Thonon during the four years of the mission's existence has greatly increased. Quantities of Bibles have been given away, and many are being earnestly read. There are evangelistic services, Bible classes, children's meetings, women's sewing meetings, temperance meetings, medical mission, and a cottage hospital, which, it is hoped, will be opened this winter. The cottage is ready, only waiting the means to furnish it.

Last winter the whole of this work (with the exception of two or three temperance meetings), with the addition of visiting and nursing, was carried on by the two ladies who founded the mission. They are anxious to meet with two other ladies to join them—one a trained nurse, for nursing in the cottage hospital and among the poor; the other to help in visiting and in the general work. The strain of last winter's work was too much for two people, and unless helpers are found much must be dropped this coming winter.

For all information address Mesdemoiselles Larritt and Wilson, Thonon, Haute-Savoie, France.

BASUTOLAND.—Rev. H. Moore Dyke writes telling of steady work going on, and adds: "Over some parts of this still heathen land the Spirit of God has lately moved with power. One of our brethren tells us of having had the joy of receiving seventy persons as candidates, while in another district 100 persons have come forward seeking to make an open profession. In former years the majority of our converts were women, but in answer to prayer the great movement of late has been amongst the men."

THE LATE COL. GEORGE R. CLARKE,

FOUNDER OF THE PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION, CHICAGO.

WE announced a few months ago that Colonel GEORGE R. CLARKE, the beloved founder and manager of the well-known Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago, died at his home in Morgan Park, in that city, aged sixty-five years. When about nineteen years old he became much interested in the Christian life, but the demands of business soon engrossed his attention, until he was reclaimed in the Rocky Mountains. He had accumulated in the mines a fortune, which was stolen from him. He and his partner there invented a process to manufacture bogus gold-dust, and they were about to begin in the matter when his conscience condemned him, and he sought forgiveness. His partner, who was a profane man, heard the prayer, and heartily joined in it. They both made a public profession of religion in the mines, and the meetings they began to hold were filled with power from on high. The miners came from far and near to attend.

Colonel Clarke was a member of the 113th Illinois Infantry, served in many battles, and remained until the civil war closed, having made a distinguished record. He rose from a captaincy to be the lieutenant-colonel of his regiment.

In 1873 he was married to Miss Sarah D. Dunn, of Chicago, who survives him and continues the work of the Pacific Garden Mission. The influence of this Christian lady upon the life of Colonel Clarke was wonderful. For a number of years before her marriage she had given her strength and time to work among the very poor and friendless of the city. Her interest in this class did not change when she became Mrs. Clarke, and the Colonel soon became separated from the world and joined his wife in Christian work among the masses.

In 1877, on Clark-street, and standing in the most depraved section of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke began meetings in a vacant store building. Their names have become household words in the city. As the work progressed, the congregations were crowded out of the store, and went to the present commodious quarters of the mission, which was previously known as the "Pacific Garden Beer Hall," and this is where the mission got its name.

Services are held every night in the week, on Sunday mornings, and, during the fall and winter months, on five afternoons in the week. During the summer the workers go out often to hold open-air meetings, which have been blessed with remarkable results. The mission has a converts' class about two hundred strong, a free sewing class for girls every Saturday afternoon, a Chinese Gospel meeting four nights in the week, and a Chinese Sunday-school, as well as a Sunday-school of its own for the children and young people of the community. Mrs. Clarke has spent three afternoons each week in going from cell to cell in the crowded jail of the city, speaking kind words and telling the prisoners of the Friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

In addition to this, a systematic house-to-house visitation is carried on by the workers at the mission. It stands in the "Five Points" district of Chicago, and saloons, gambling-dens, dago-shops, opium-dens, and houses of ill repute, are all around.

There are some sixty-five volunteer Christian workers in Colonel Clarke's corps, and five, including Mr. Harry Monroe, who is the efficient right-hand man of the mission, are regularly paid. The congregations at the mission are made up of all nationalities and colours, and both sexes, but are principally composed of young men under thirty years of age, most of whom have been victims of strong drink. Last year there was a total attendance in the meetings of about one hundred and fifty thousand, and 5,618 professed to seek the Lord. The books of the saved are kept in heaven, but we hope that a good majority of this little army will be found to have been safely housed in the Kingdom of God.

For ten years Colonel Clarke, almost alone, paid the expenses of this extensive work, which averaged 6,000 dols. per year. During the last five years others connected with the mission have helped him to carry the financial burden. In the matter of expenses he was often troubled what to do, and Mrs. Clarke sometimes went out collecting money from such sources as she could, in the time of great embarrassment. But Colonel Clarke's business soon prospered again, and for a long time he did not have any serious trouble about forthcoming funds.

He said, in an address given at the Battle Creek, Michigan, Sanitarium, a little while before he died :—

> Our talks and sermons aim to reach the heart with the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ. We have found, by actual experience, that the millionaire from the boulevard and the tramp from the streets need alike the same message of love and mercy, and alike may be touched by the unadorned Gospel truth and appeals. They both hunger and thirst after that which they do not possess—the bread and water of life, which is offered so freely to all.

He remarked, in the same address :—

> The worst drunkards I have ever known have been converted. I have known those in the first stages of delirium tremens to come under conviction in our meetings, and go out sober. Many of them, to my positive knowledge, have kept sober, for they have been working in the mission since. Of course there are many backsliders, but those who really trust in the Lord are kept from falling. One instance was that of a man six feet and one inch high. He was very obstinate, always on the contrary side. If anybody talked against the mission he would defend it, and if anyone spoke favourably of it he would take the other side. He was a hard drinker. He lost his wife and child by divorce and became a vagabond, sleeping in five-cent lodging-houses and other low places. He said in the mission one afternoon that God had told him that this was his last chance, and he made a full surrender to the Lord. He became a very substantial Christian man. For the past five years he has been an active worker in the mission, and leads the Gospel Temperance meeting every Friday night. The hardware firm for whom he works have made him the superintendent of nine departments in their great wholesale store.

For Colonel Clarke to live was to give. He possessed rare unselfishness, and it was a peculiar pleasure to him to become the real friend of the man who was deserted by every other friend. He could discern remarkable possibilities in the most abandoned, and his great love won many from a life wicked and without hope of any kind. One poor fellow, after years of struggle with his appetite for strong drink, gave up in despair. His mother sent a letter to the Colonel, imploring him, as only a mother can, to try to help her wandering boy. Thirty-three times the man of God sought out and helped her son, and on his dying bed he thought of him, and said, "I hope to meet Walter in heaven."

One winter morning, there came into the office a sick, penniless man, accompanied by his wife. He was respectable and hard-working, but had come into a most heart-rending condition. He had no money to pay his rent, and his family was about to be set on the street. In a few minutes the Colonel removed all the difficulty from their hearts, and it seemed to those who were looking on as if heaven and earth had met, and kissed each other. The man has regained his health, has the best of employment, and he and his family never tire of speaking gratefully of their friend.

Another man went wrong and served a term in prison. When he regained his liberty, he felt his disgrace most keenly, and came to Chicago to make a new start in life. He made himself known to Colonel Clarke, who helped him to a position in business and gave him a brother's friendship. At the meeting in the Pacific Garden on last New Year's Eve, this man said, "I thank God for Colonel Clarke. When I was hopeless he took me by the hand and encouraged me to live a Christian life. God has prospered me, and to-day I have a standing as a business man, and my word is as good as my bond."

Hundreds of the men who have been blessed at the mission have moved to other parts of the country and are a blessing where they live. Among the many grateful letters received by Mrs. Clarke since the death of her husband is one from a man who has come to be the superintendent of the German department of the public schools in the city of Evansville, Indiana.

Colonel Clarke's greatest characteristic was the love he felt for all men, and one of the speakers at the memorial service held after his death said that we do not need more books on Christianity, but more men like Colonel Clarke. We trust that a noble Memorial Hall will soon take the place of the present dingy quarters of the mission.

Deacon Abraham's Orphanages.

In addition to the extraordinary and severe trials which the orphanages of Deacon Abraham at Oroomiah, Persia, have had to pass through during the present year from the Moslem officials, like many other parts, the city has come under the dark shadow of the cholera.

The approach of the scourge was met by the Deacon with fasting and prayer and days of humiliation. The cattle too fasted in their stalls, and the Lord again proved Himself to be the hearer and answerer of his children's cries. The Deacon decided to purchase no medicines but to trust in the arm of the living God.

Many from Oroomiah escaped to Mount Seir, provoking the scoffing ridicule of their Moslem neighbours, but the Deacon remained at his post, visiting for reading and prayer those who were suffering from the disease. Soon he was ill and suffered for ten days, but to the glory of God not one soul was called away from his village, although it numbers about 200 families.

At times from 500 to 800 people would be gathered in solemn waiting before God, and true to his word He proved himself willing and able to deliver. Though cheered and strengthened, the poor Deacon is in most pressing need.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—The Christian Institute has passed into the hands of the American Methodists. Miss Blackmore has bought it for her mission work on behalf of her women's missionary association. Here, for twenty-six years, Mr. C. Phillips has carried on, as a self-supporting missionary, a most useful Gospel and temperance work, which has had much to do in preparing the way for other workers and other agencies. Mr. Phillips now hopes to devote himself more fully to his work in English and Malay, more especially in connection with the Presbyterian mission at Prinsep-street.

THE GOSPEL IN THE OPEN-AIR.

By CHAS. COOK.

No. I.

Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets; she crieth in the chief place of concourse.—Prov. i. 20-21.

In the centre of a town in the Eastern counties, a well-dressed cheery-looking man was speaking to a large concourse of people in pleasant natural tones, with an earnestness which riveted attention, and yet at times evoked a smile. At home with his audience, he spoke with such a convincing tone that they listened attentively, whilst I, convinced of the truth of his statements, gave evidence of my faith by purchasing several of his commodities. He was a "Cheap Jack," and thoroughly advertised his goods by that best of all mediums, the human voice. As fast as he could hand out articles he took money; and as I returned some three hours later, he still appeared as busy as ever. Other men might rent shops, display their goods, and serve customers who came, but this man went where the people were, held up his goods to their view, told their excellences, and thus convinced and converted his hearers to buying his wares. His takings were nearly £20. How many a shopkeeper might envy him. I found that he was a Christian, and he said, "I do a bit o' preaching myself when I'm at home in Sheffield."

When will all Christians learn the lesson taught us by the above incident?

It is still our privilege to follow our Master by going forth "into the highways." Are we complaining of empty seats? Here is a remedy, "Go out quickly into the streets." Do we say, "It is done . . . . and yet there is room"? Here, then, is our Lord's further command, "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." Twenty years ago people came more willingly into places of worship than they do to-day. Thousands of the working classes are being educated to devote the Lord's day to the airing of their social grievances, and not only have they no desire and no intention of coming under the sound of the Gospel, but they are busily engaged in spreading

A GOSPEL OF THEIR OWN.

In our earlier days almost the only open-air meetings were those where the Gospel was preached. Now we are only one of a dozen. Then we held the field; now we need all the power our God can give us to hold our own. At that time nearly all those who could be attracted by open-air speaking heard the herald of the cross; now a babel of sounds bids for the ear of the listener.

The toilers in our cities, the workers in our towns, the masses of our country, are being caught by a gospel that bids them rise to a higher plane socially, but altogether ignores the aspirations of the soul; many of the teachers of this doctrine speak disparagingly of the followers of Christ, while they are in fellowship with atheism, and are fostering a bitter spirit between the different classes of humanity.

We are thankful for the hearing that the Gospel gets at the street corner, in the market place, on racecourse, or in our London parks, notwithstanding the large crowds gathered round men of lawless spirit, whose teaching is altogether opposed to the Gospel; whilst almost as many assemble round men who entertain them with comic recitations and the like. We need not fear for the Gospel, God is behind it; and it will ever be "the power of God unto salvation."

All open-air Gospel meetings are not alike. The occasions, people, and places are widely dissimilar. While many consider it beneath them to be seen at an open-air meeting, there are others who count it an honour to sound the Saviour's praises beneath the blue sky. I am afraid this time-honoured institution is looked down upon by many of the Lord's people who do not see that the open air is yet to be the battle-ground where the vast masses of the people are to be influenced

Walking with a friend on Glasgow Green one summer's evening, we observed groups of small gatherings all over the large open space in fierce altercation and argument, and we felt it was a glorious opportunity to proclaim the Gospel. We began to sing a hymn, and before we had finished, a thousand willing hearers surrounded us, and for well-nigh two hours listened to the simple but profound story of God manifested in flesh coming on earth to redeem his fallen creatures. The immense crowd which had augmented considerably were loth to leave; even their "Will ye nae come back again?" made us promise that on the following night we would be there. We were accompanied to our hotel by a man who was led to accept and confess Christ; and who said, "I had an engagement this evening with a man to hold a public debate, he to speak on Christianity and I to advocate infidelity, but as I heard the Gospel preached by you I was obliged to listen, and thank God I accept his salvation."

Yet one more case. The scene was Epsom, the event the Derby. Bookmakers, tipsters, backers, were all at work. The showmen on the hill were shouting, "Walk in, gents, no children admitted"; the shrill shriek of the steam roundabout mingled with the harmony of the glorious Gospel, as our brethren on the course were singing "O Calvary, dark Calvary, where Jesus shed his blood for me."

The whole scene was a panoramic medley, a perfect babel, a mixture of blue blood and blatant blackguardism, of peer and peasant, autocracy and democracy, hobnobbing in the ignoble sport of gambling; the cream of society and the scum of the earth rubbing shoulders with each other. Yet amidst such discordant sounds we thank God the Gospel has for over thirty years been preached and had a respectful hearing, while many direct results have been seen from the services. There are thousands who never would be reached but for the Gospel preached on the racecourse.

Now for some suggestions. As to ordinary services, I believe that open-air preaching should form

AN INTEGRAL PART OF ALL CHURCH WORK.

At present it is left by many of our churches to missions to accomplish this. Wherever there are seats that need filling in any of our places of worship, I would affectionately commend to the pastors that they go out into the open air for the half hour preceding the service, and give a warm, loving invitation to the people, who will gather round a dozen or so of the choir. This work can go on all the year round. It is not only the lowest stratum of society that is reached by these efforts. A manly, sensible, sympathetic address of ten minutes in any main thoroughfare will attract not only the skilled artisan, but many of the middle classes.

As to special places, in many parts of the metropolis there are large open spaces, and other places, where the Gospel is regularly preached to attentive and thoughtful audiences. In the provinces similar gatherings are held in the market places, and on such occasions the services are altogether on different lines to those mentioned above. There may be an audience numbering thousands, many possessed of thoughtful minds capable of appreciating the logic and learning of a well thought-out address. Such meetings can only be held during the summer months, and a choir capable of rendering first-class music is a most helpful acquisition.

Then as to extraordinary occasions—that is racecourses, fairs, agricultural shows, and similar gatherings. There are few men who are qualified to hold an audience on the Derby racecourse. It is no place for the giving out of commonplace sentiments, or mere platitudes. Your soul needs to be on fire for souls, your spirit burdened with thought that men by the thousand are well-nigh given over to the devil. This kind of work differs altogether from the ordinary open-air service, yet it is just as needful, for we must carry the Gospel to every creature, whether it be in the streets of our city, the parks of the West-end, or the resort of the gambler and the pleasure-seeker.

SALVATION ARMY.

IN MEMORIAM SERVICE.

Two years having passed since Mrs. Booth was called home, a memorial service was held on Tuesday week in the Agricultural Hall, which was crowded by a dense mass of Salvationists. The scene proved a most remarkable one. There was no attempt at speaking, the hymns being announced on a great white screen. At the opening all present rose and prayed that the Holy Spirit throughout the service should rest upon them, and 8,000 voices that spoke as one repeated the Lord's Prayer, and the "ever and ever" came in a volume which perhaps it has never had before. Sayings which Mrs. Booth has made to the army next appeared on the screen, and as each became visible, cries of "Allelulia!" resounded through the hall. The portrait of "the mother" provoked a fresh outburst of enthusiasm, and a view of "the vacant chair" was received in a silence which was even more eloquent.

A new phase was entered upon when Mrs. Booth's opinions upon the drink traffic were flashed from the lantern. "Hoist the flag of death to brewers and dramshops," was the signal for cheers and the clapping of hands, which increased in volume as denunciation after denunciation of strong drink appeared, and culminated in a most impressive scene as in obedience to the all-powerful lantern the vast gathering rose, and each man and woman, holding up the right hand, pledged himself or herself in the mighty "Amen" to a life of total abstinence.

General Booth delivered his address by means of a message flashed on the screen to the following effect:—"Beloved comrades and friends, you could not hear my voice in this vast building if my heart to-night would allow me to speak. I must, therefore, tell you from this canvas how earnestly I join with you in the praise and prayer and consecration which these sacred memories call forth. Two years have passed since my beloved was taken to heaven, and that voice was silent which called us so often on earth to renounce every evil thing, to devote every power and possession to the battle with sin and misery and hell, to extend the kingdom of Jesus Christ, and to advance the glory of our God. But with that voice to-night she calls us as loudly as ever from her place in heaven to make every sacrifice, to put forth every exertion to secure victory in the same glorious war. Soon our earthly day will close; with your general and many more in this hall the shades of evening are drawing on; with the youngest and the healthiest life is uncertain; the messenger to call us home may to-night be waiting at the door. What shall the memories of our lives be? Shall they be a strength and stimulus to those we leave on earth? Shall they be a glory and triumph to ourselves in heaven and a praise to our King? But to-night I call to you. I join my voice to the sainted spirit of my beloved; I join my voice to the entire army of salvation; I join my voice to the Christ who died for you, and beg you one and all to present yourselves to God as living sacrifices for the salvation of mankind. Come to the mercy seat, come to be cleansed by the blood of Jesus from every sin. Come, and be made strong, courageous, and more than conquerors."

A COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY.

Speaking in Exeter Hall about midsummer, General Booth expressed his readiness to have the administration of his social scheme investigated by a committee of independent and impartial men. The following committee has now been formed:—The Earl of Onslow, Sir Henry James, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Sydney Buxton, M.P., Mr. Walter Long, Mr. Edwin Waterhouse, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants. Mr. C. E. Hobhouse, M.P., will act as secretary. These four questions may be taken as indicating fairly what the terms of reference are likely to be. They are:—

1. Has General Booth personally benefited in any shape or form by the "Darkest England" scheme, or is he the disinterested servant of the public he represents himself to be?
2. Are the accounts and cash affairs and balance-sheets managed in a fair, business-like, and honourable way?
3. Are moneys expended on the lines laid down in the "Darkest England" scheme expended in such an economical and business-like manner as promises a reasonable measure of success?
4. Is the property given to or acquired by the scheme so settled that it can never be applied to any other purpose than that for which it was intended?

It is understood that the committee will set to work at once; the report ought to be ready before Christmas.

REV. JOHN McNEILL IN AYR.

The way was providentially opened up for the extension of Mr. McNeill's visit by a week, and at the closing meeting yesterday there was only one strong, deep sense of gratitude for the privilege given to Ayr; and only one desire—that we might soon see his earnest, manly face amongst us again. Mr. McNeill is no ordinary evangelist, and indeed no ordinary gift of God to the churches of the land; for, as he himself says, he belongs to ALL, without name or distinction. He is a favoured child of nature, as of grace. Rare gifts of head and heart unite in him on behalf of the Gospel he loves with all the intensity of a strong man; and as we listened to him from day to day, pouring the truth into the ears of the crowds who came in increasing numbers to see and hear for themselves, one was often reminded of the promise, "My word shall not return unto Me void." There can be no better guarantee for a harvest in autumn, than there is for the fruit of those wonderful addresses. It is one of Mr. McNeill's firmest convictions that this is so; and he is content to press home the acceptance of a present Saviour, without resorting to any artifice to commit men hastily. He believes in the preaching of the word; and he does not consider it always necessary or wise—to use his own illustration in another connection—to dig up the newly-sown seed, to see whether it has begun to grow.

Mr. McNeill's addresses range over a variety of subjects, but he never fails to put the Gospel strongly and clearly. Whether he leads Naaman down to the waters of the Jordan, and takes care to put him in seven times; or presses home the promise of the second coming, he is always seeking to quicken the conscience, and bring the sinner to trust a Saviour's bond.

On Thursday evening the Town Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, quite a number having driven in from a radius of ten miles round. The subject of Mr. McNeill's address was, "Daniel—or Constancy in Religion." The burden of the address was consistency in Christian life and conduct; and in terms of strong denunciation he referred to what he called the blot on the Christianity of the community in connection with the annual carnival of the Ayr Races. He appealed to the meeting to pledge itself to use every legitimate means to overthrow this iniquity: and in response, nearly the whole audience rose at once to their feet.

Three meetings were held on the closing day, so as to give a chance to all who desired to be present; and it was noticeable at the meeting for men, that nearly all stood up at the close to confess their faith and interest in the Saviour.

Very effective service was rendered by Mr. McNeill's musical colleague, Mr. Burke, whose sympathetic singing of the Gospel must have touched many hearts.

A strong impression has prevailed that this special effort should not cease with Mr. McNeill's departure, and arrangements have been made to continue the mission for another week. The united committee have asked the Rev. J. Jeffray to conduct the meetings. Mr. Jeffray is a minister of the Free Church of Scotland, who recently resigned his charge in the Presbytery of Glasgow to devote himself to evangelistic work. J.

Mr. Geo. C. Needham and Mr. W. Henry Collins have been holding special services at the First Baptist Church in this city. The Lord has greatly blessed his truth through the Bible readings and addresses of Mr. Needham. The Lord's return was a subject that roused Christians. One cannot but feel that if truth is presented in a proper way how much more welcome it becomes.

Union mass meetings were also held at the Methodist Church; a women's meeting, led by Mrs. Needham; meetings for men at the Baptist Church were led by Mr. Needham, and for young men and women at the Congregational Church by Mr. Collins. Souls have been won for Christ and Christians helped. After Mr. and Mrs. Needham left, the meetings were carried on for a few days by Mr. Collins.

SIX ADDITIONAL TEACHERS are urgently needed in connection with the Jurston-street and Shaftesbury Memorial Schools, Charles-street, Westminster Bridge-road, S.E. Volunteers are desired to apply to Mr E Coules, Hon. Sup., 6, George-street, Blackfriars, S.E.

THE RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

Aggressive or drift work was specially considered on Thursday evening, at a conference convened at the offices of the Ragged School Union, 37, Norfolk-street, Strand. Many of the most practical and successful workers and teachers in ragged schools feel that the necessity is growing for looking constantly after and using every means to get hold of the lowest class of the children of the poor—children who are peculiarly hard to win, and who seldom attend any school.

Mr. C. J. Montague said (in opening the conversation) that until recently the Union had only taken up an indirect position in the work of evangelising the children of the poor, but it had now added to its helpful operation by assuming responsibility for the Drift Children's Mission. The essentials in starting a branch were the loan of a large room on week evenings, an individual with strong personal influence, and an initial treat. The worker, who became a sort of children's missionary, went from house to house and room to room in the very poorest streets of the locality chosen, inviting the children to the treat, and getting their names and addresses. This formed the basis of future operations. Gospel meetings were held, absentees were invited, and the missionary was thus able to deal with large bodies of children, the bulk of whom were not under regular religious instruction. With one exception no ragged school claimed to have more than 500 names on its books as attending its week-night meetings, and the actual attendance would be less. Where there were 1000 Sunday scholars there were not more than about 400 attending during the week, while there were probably 4000 children close at hand whose needs ought to be met. If one night a week were set aside for "drift" work in a school, it would be found to be a splendid "feeder" for other meetings.

Mr. John Kirk, who presided, said it was a question of week-night agency based on personal sympathy and knowledge. Teachers were largely dispensed with by having some competent speaker to give an address.

Mr. C. L. Boyer asked that ragged schools generally should take up the work and give an evening a week for the "drift" children. If London was to be reached it must be through the poor, and they were best reached through their children.

Mr. T. W. Howe thought that the question of visitation was the most important of all. If the work was to succeed he was of opinion that it must to a large extent be done by paid agents able to give to it their whole time and attention.

Water Springs in Dry Places.

By Mary L. Hankin.*

No crumb was left in the empty scrip,
The bottle was shrunk and dry;
The pitiless glare of an Eastern noon
Poured down from the brazen sky,
As she left the lad on the desert sand,
That she might not see him die.

Emptied of life and of earthly hope,
The soul in her body dies,
When the sudden touch of an angel's hand
Is laid on her darkening eyes,
And she sees from a waste of burning sand
The waters of blessing rise!

When quenched the light of the busy brain,
The hope of the loving heart,
Those broken cisterns lie bare and dry
That the waters of life may start—
And friend and comrade must stand aside
That God may take our part.

A WITHDRAWAL.—In reference to the case of the lad G.O.P., mentioned in our issue of October 6, Mr. J. W. C. Fegan desires us to say that the vicar of the parish in which the boy lived denies that he "suggested" the flogging (although he "concurred in it" as an alternative to prosecution and possible imprisonment), or that he in any way gave his sanction to the method or extent of the punishment. Mr. Fegan, therefore, wishes unreservedly to withdraw any words in his article conveying this impression. He heartily clears the vicar from any complicity in the cruelty of the assault, and much regrets being led into a mistake by the depositions in the case, which seemed a reliable authority.

SABBATH BREAKING COMPANIES

AND THE UNLIMITED LIABILITY OF THE SHAREHOLDERS.—II.

By Rev. George Wallace, D.D., Hamilton, N.B.*

"But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication."—Rev. ii. 14.

We have proved that it is a sin to exact unnecessary labour on the Lord's Day, and we now add that

THE SIN IS AGGRAVATED WHEN IT TEMPTS OTHERS TO SIN.

Railway, steamboat, tramway-car, and omnibus traffic on the Lord's Day is a direct temptation to sin, and those who are responsible for it act the part of tempters. For,

1. They tempt their own servants to sin against the commandment of God.

2 They tempt many to turn the Lord's Day into a day of pleasure; who, if such facilities for travelling were not placed within their reach, would be forced to stay at home, and might be induced to frequent the House of God. To those who are not religiously inclined they offer a cheap and easy escape from religious influences. They tempt young people specially, many of whom have been taught differently at home, to spend the sacred day in jollity and riot. And to a great extent they undo the good work of godly parents, Sabbath-school teachers, and ministers. Surely that cannot be consistent with a profession of love for Christ and a desire to advance His Kingdom among men.

Moreover, that is not the whole of the mischief wrought by Sabbath trains and steamboat excursions. They reach to every town and almost every village of any size, and they are the means of throwing upon many quiet places the godlessness, and even the rascality, of the large towns and cities, turning for the day the peaceful village or country town into a drunken pandemonium. Parents in these places, seeking to keep the eyes and ears of their children from pollution, are horrified at the sights which these children witness, and the foul language to which they are compelled to listen. On the day when they wish to raise their own minds and the minds of their children to heavenly things, they cannot escape from scenes which resemble "hell let loose" rather than heaven. There is no necessity for this Sabbath traffic.

We have said it is unlawful to demand unnecessary labour. But a plea may be urged here, that the kind of labour to which we have referred is to a large extent necessary.

Well, a plea of necessity is good, if the necessity be real. But is there a real necessity? It is declared to be necessary that working people should have a day in the country. We deny the necessity. The usual Sabbath excursions, we believe, are from one town to another. But suppose that our hard-wrought people wish to go into the country to enjoy the fresh air, and the sense of enlargement of soul which contact with Nature is fitted to impart, is it necessary for anyone to go a long distance into the country? If a walk in the open air is needed, why can it not be taken on other days? Why must God be robbed of his day, and railway servants be robbed of their rest on his day, that masters may increase their gains by overworking their workers on other days? If the workers are overwrought, let the hours of labour be shortened, so that they may be able to enjoy recreation on some other day or days of the week.

It is said that trains ought to be run to meet cases where people require to travel for purposes of necessity and mercy. We have often been treated to highly-coloured descriptions of the hardship of preventing a son from reaching his dying mother, or a husband from hastening to the deathbed of his wife. We have had presented to us over and over again harrowing pictures of the woes and sorrows likely to result from the complete stoppage of railway traffic on the Lord's Day. Now let us pause and ask ourselves, how often do such cases occur? How often has such a necessity arisen for ourselves or for others? Probably not once in a lifetime to our knowledge. Yet for this purely imagined necessity trains are run whose hours of departure are regularly fixed. And if a case of most extreme necessity should happen after the departure of the fixed train, no appeal, except in the shape of a large amount of hard cash, will move railway managers to run a special train.

Yes! there is a necessity, a very strong necessity—the necessity of increasing profits. Companies will run trains on the Lord's Day if they can be made to pay. If they cannot be made to pay, if there is no hope that by perseverance in their evil course they will succeed in undermining respect for the Sabbath, so that travelling will become common enough to make it pay, then all the necessity in the world will not induce them to run Sabbath trains.

They say, "We will give the people trains if they wish them. We throw upon the public the responsibility of deciding on the necessity." They cannot. It is they who tempt people to travel, and are glad to see them yield to the temptation, for it swells their money-bags. And for that noble end, they rob their own servants of their privilege of weekly rest; they pander to the immoral tastes of the most depraved sections of our population; they persuade many young persons, who otherwise would come under the hallowing influences of religion, to spend the sacred day in dissipation; and they destroy the peace of the places to which they carry their riotous customers, violate the religious feelings of the people, and spread the contagious germs of moral corruption. They do this all for gain. That is the real necessity. Directors of companies do these things, and the shareholders, who appoint them, are responsible, for

THERE IS NO LIMITED LIABILITY IN MORALS.

A different feeling prevails in many minds, and the plea is urged by the shareholders of companies in their defence, that a single shareholder has only a very small amount of power in deciding upon the action of a company, and therefore his guilt must be proportionately small.

This is undoubtedly the secret thought which enables many Christians to continue to hold shares in limited companies, and which brings companies into that conscienceless condition that has become proverbial among us. When a man is only one among a thousand shareholders he fancies that he has only a thousandth part of the guilt to bear. Moral liability does not admit of such a mode of measurement. Within the past few years we have witnessed a marvellous development of the principle of "limited liability" in the pecuniary responsibilities of companies. There is no such "limited liability" from a moral point of view.

Does he sin who only tempts others to sin? Let our text answer. Balaam only taught Balak to put a stone of stumbling in the way of the children of Israel. Did God hold him innocent? "Take heed" says Christ, "that ye despise not one of these little ones." "Woe unto him through whom occasions of stumbling come. It were well for him if a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were thrown into the sea, rather than that he should cause one of these little ones to stumble."

It might, we think, be fairly enough argued that the smaller the share the greater the guilt; for the temptation to sacrifice everything to profits is less to a small than to a large shareholder in any business. A person who has his whole means invested in a business, and who will be reduced to beggary if the business fail, is under a stronger temptation to take wrong steps to insure success than the person who has only a portion of his means invested in the business. If the moral guilt of a wrong action is lessened when the temptation has been exceptionally strong, then the small shareholder may even be more guilty than the large. Into that question of casuistry we do not enter. We rest content with saying every shareholder in a Sabbath-violating company must bear a share of the responsibility and of the guilt.

We think that we have shown something of the greatness of the guilt. Let Christian men decide whether it is a position which they can, in loyalty to their Lord, occupy. The evil has grown and is growing. The stream of railway, steamboat, and omnibus Sabbath traffic has been during past years widening and deepening, undermining the Sabbath feelings of the whole community, breaking down the loose soil on its banks, and gathering a volume and a force which seem now to be almost irresistible. The companies are now sufficiently powerful to defy public opinion, and they are determined to use their power in a tyrannical manner. They are deaf to all remonstrances. To the cry of their own servants for a quiet Sabbath they turn a deaf ear, telling them that if they will not work on the companies' terms, others are prepared to step into their places. To the appeals of Christian people, whose dearest religious convictions they are outraging, they reply with bitter scorn, telling them to mind their own business. Of course, the shareholders are innocent of these things. They only invest their money in the business, and look for their annual dividend. But the directors do these things in their name, and for their interests, and whatever a man does through another, he does it himself.

SHOULD CHRISTIANS CEASE TO BE SHAREHOLDERS?

The only thing that would warrant Christians to become or remain shareholders in these concerns would be, in order that they might place themselves in a position to put down the evil. That would be one way of fighting the battle for the Sabbath. But it must be a real and not a sham fight. It must be carried on with the determination to succeed.

Christians who are shareholders in such companies ought on every possible occasion to lift up their testimony against Sabbath traffic. At every shareholders' meeting that must be their endeavour. In all likelihood it will expose them to abuse and ridicule. But the motto of Danton, the French revolutionist, must be that of the Christian shareholder: "Boldness, and again boldness, and always boldness." It may seem so utterly hopeless to get a hearing or produce an impression, that the prudent man may deem it the wisest thing to keep silence. But such prudence may be really cowardice; and in the judgment of the Lord will be regarded as a denial of Himself. Nor is the thing so hopeless as we may imagine. What at first seemed to men a foolish course of action has often succeeded when pursued out of a sense of duty to God, and in humble dependence on Him.

If, after an honest attempt to put an end to the sin, there seems to be no hope of success, the Christian must sever his connection with the company. Only thus can he deliver himself from the guilt of a sin like that of Balaam, who was the means of rolling a stumbling stone in the way of the children of Israel.

THE WORK AT COSTERS' HALL.

After thirty years of service among the street trading classes of London, Mr. W. J. Orsman, L.C.C., has sorrowfully to realise that many of his original helpers are passing away, and that their successors do not continue their contributions to the work. It is thought that there is too much of a tendency for newer missions to attract away attention from the older. In any case, Costers' Hall is a hive of industry, over forty meetings being held weekly. These include Gospel services, Bible readings, prayer meetings, juvenile services and schools, classes for young people, Christian societies, adult and juvenile temperance societies, thrift and benefit societies. The thrift contributions during 1891 amounted to £2833. It is calculated that over 67,000 adults and 78,000 children were attracted to the meetings in the year. The great room of Costers' Hall is crowded at the regular service on Sunday evening, all sensational accompaniments being avoided, while 200 poor people attend the prayer meeting at 8.30. The spiritual work of twenty-one years has yielded good spiritual results. Mr. Orsman says: "The converts are united with churches all over the world; some have become ministers of the Gospel, and a large number are engaged in Christian work."

The working mission church at Costers' Hall itself now numbers 456 members. They are for the most poor, but last year they contributed £310 to the mission funds. Mr. Orsman is assisted by 154 voluntary teachers and helpers. What is called the humanitarian side includes the feeding of half-starved Board School children with cocoa breakfasts, and adults with soup and bread in the winter. There is a cottage for poor convalescent married women, between two and three hundred children are annually sent into the country for a fortnight, and over 2000 young and old have their day in the country. In company with Lord Monkswell, Mr. Orsman was returned to serve on the London County Council at the last election; so that while his days are given to committees which have to deal with sanitation, housing of the poor, parks, open spaces, lunatic asylums, &c., his nights are devoted to the service of this mission. The donkey show held in July attracted 5000 visitors; and in the course of over a quarter of a century, during which time the shows have been held, they have exercised a wonderful influence throughout London, teaching the men to use their animals kindly. The funds are now at an unusually low ebb, and in order that the work may not be allowed to flag, an appeal is made for subscriptions. Mr. Orsman's address is Milton House, Shacklewell Green, London, N.E.

Tract Distribution in Paris.

"It is wonderful how ready the people are to receive tracts." Thus one of Miss de Bröen's lady-workers wrote a few days ago.

Special fly-sheets were printed by Miss de Bröen for the funeral of M. Renan, simple words of Scripture bearing on eternal life, and addressed to "Libre-Penseurs, Catholiques ou Protestants." A black border surrounded the leaflet, securing its being kept on account of that superstitious regard of the French people for anything in memory of the dead.

Thousands of these "silent preachers" were distributed among the crowds in the cemetery and elsewhere. "I have just come in from another excursion," writes one of the workers, "and had the joy of giving our papers to a crowd of people waiting at the theatre. I have so often longed to do that. They were all eagerly received." All inquiries about the work may be made at 205, Rue St. Honoré, the office of Miss de Bröen's Mission.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

A new home has been opened by Grays Y.M.C.A.

New Associations have been formed at Teignmouth nd Dawlish.

The winter's work at Tunbridge Wells has been ost successfully inaugurated.

Wednesday evening parlour socials have been com- ienced by Rochester Y.M.C.A.

The President has chosen as next year's motto f the Y.M.C.A., "Only be thou strong and very ourageous" (Joshua i. 7).

The Annual Western District meeting has been eld in the "George Williams" Memorial Hall, ridgwater.

The annual meeting of Chelmsford Y.M.C.A. as held last week, the report stating that there are 66 ssociates and 116 members.

The Y.M.C.A., Abergavenny, have just brought eir outdoor services to a close, and have resolved continue them under cover for the winter.

Encouraging accounts are to hand of the inaugural eetings held by Associations in every part of the ountry for commencing the winter's work.

Mr. Herbert E. Kinsley reports that the Paris nglo-American Y.M.C.A. is full of work. The nnual public meeting will be held in November.

Efforts are being made to form an association at hesterfield. A small branch has just been inaugu- ated at Marsden Moor, a mining village near Shef- eld.

The Y.M.C.A. "Week of Prayer" will be held this ar from November 6 to 13 inclusive. Special rmons to young men will be preached from very any pulpits throughout the land

Mr. George Holmes sends an interesting letter om Gibraltar. The Governor-General, Sir Lothian icholson, gave him a cordial reception, and ex- essed the heartiest interest in his mission.

The tenth annual meeting of the Hastings Associa- on was held on the 11th inst. Gen. Sir Robt. hayre presided; and the proceedings were full of terest and encouragement. A large addition has ken place in the membership.

The Bible-class lessons for 1893, prepared by Mr. Henry Thorne, and issued by the National Council, ave been taken from John's Gospel; they are so ranged that the whole Gospel may be read and udied in the course of the year.

Mr. George Williams has issued to the Associations the English Union a circular appeal calling for the -operation of the members in the extension of the ternational work, represented by the Central Inter- ational Committee, whose head-quarters are at eneva, Switzerland.

The annual meeting of the Birmingham Associa- on, held last week, proved encouraging, showing as did genuine progress and earnest work. The ayor, who presided, spoke highly of the work; while ajor Owen Hay and Canon Mansfield Owen warmly pported the claims of the Y.M.C.A.

On Saturday evening, at the Central Young Men's nristian Association, Mount Pleasant, a "Pleasant aturday Evening" was started, Rev. J. K. Nuttall, Great George-street P.S.A., presiding, and an ldress being given by the Rev. S. R. Macphail, .A., on "Jesus Christ as a Working Man."

At the Y.M.C.A., Whitehaven, a series of mission rvices, conducted by Mr. George Clarke, has been eatly blessed. The hall where the meetings were ld was filled to overflowing, and the offer of the esleyans of the use of their church was gladly cepted. Large numbers professed to decide for nrist, and those who have since visited the converts stify to their apparent sincerity.

Earnest prayer is asked for God's blessing upon e work in Shaftesbury Hall, Bournemouth, ring the coming winter. The hall has recently en purchased for the Y.M.C.A., and it is proposed open the season with a series of dedicatory ser- ces during the Y.M.C.A. universal week of prayer, mmencing Sunday, Nov. 6. It is hoped that Cap- in W. H. Dawson will hold the first service on that y, to be followed throughout the week by Rev. eorge C. Grubb and local clergy and ministers.

The Belfast Y.M.C.A. have taken the largest hall the city—the great Ulster Hall—to conduct a ries of "Pleasant Sunday Afternoon" meetings. his action has already met with success. The first eeting was held on Sunday week, and notwithstanding e great capacity of the hall it was crowded the doors, hundreds being unable to secure admis- on. Mr. D. A. Black explained the nature of the ovement, asking the sympathy of the clergy of the ty on its behalf. Rev. W. J. McCaughan delivered Gospel address upon the words, "I am the Door."

The Sunday morning Bible-class of the Associa- on, which meets at 10 o'clock, is attracting con- derable attention. Three hundred men are in tendance. The class is conducted by the general cretary.

The Folkestone Y.M.C.A., on the 19th inst., at a largely-attended "Opening Meeting" of the winter session, bade adieu to Mr. G. E. Betts, the late secretary, who has just been accepted for the China Inland Mission, and sailed on the 26th inst. A presentation of books and the very hearty wishes of all the members go with Mr. Betts. Mr. Alexander Reid, the new secretary, who has had six years' experience at the Edinburgh Y.M.C.A., was welcomed, and seems well adapted to carry on a spiritual and thorough all-round work among the young men of Folkestone. Mr. W. R. Lane holds a two days' mission on 26th and 27th inst.

STAR HALL, MANCHESTER.

In spite of the slummy district in which this hall is situated, the interest, and consequent attendance, during the eight days assigned this year to a holiness convention have largely increased. The speakers were Rev. G. C. Grubb, Mr. J. G. Govan, Mr. and Mrs. Reader Harris, Mrs. Rendel Harris, Mr. Dudley Kidd, Rev. E. W. Moore, Mrs. J. G. Watson, and others. Mr. F. W. Crossley was convener and chairman. These formed a representative platform of very varied denomination, character, and style, but all were in harmony on the point under consideration, viz.: the obtainment of holiness as a present personal experience. The addresses given are in process of publication, and will form a valuable contribution to the rapidly-increasing library of holiness literature.

The Star Hall, though placed in the slums, is itself a fine and commodious building. It is fitted with every convenience for the use of visitors who are sufficiently in earnest to reach it, and after all it is quite easily approached by the excellent tramways of Manchester

I desire to bear grateful testimony to the soul-inspiring meetings recently held at the Star Hall Holiness Convention, and at the same time to express my great regret that so many of our suburban Christian friends were absent, for the aid to Christian workers is immense, and the wave of blessing flows from that assembly of God's faithful people to one's own work.

In my own case it was very remarkable. I was obliged to leave with Mr. Wolstencroft, my dear fellow-labourer, for our Mission Hall in Macclesfield, for the Saturday-night meeting, and that evening and all day on Sunday our people felt the wondrous influence and power of the Holy Ghost.

Truly the convention was apostolic in its tone, and over and over again were we forcibly reminded of the Acts of the Apostles. I believe it is in such teaching we find the remedy against Ritualism, Rationalism, etc., and also the incentive for the Lord's work at home and abroad.

By the way, I would say that "sinless perfection" was never mentioned or hinted at, but rather the whole conference was remarkable for its scriptural teaching, and a new and refreshing light was given not only on the Word, but by the Word. I fervently hope that Mr. Crossley will issue a report, and I believe he will, if supported by orders being sent in for copies beforehand, so as to insure him against loss.

Yours faithfully, Chas. H. Johnson.

Upton Grange, Macclesfield.

Seamen's Christian Friend Society.

The memorial stones of this society's new head-quarters, being erected in St. George's-street, Ratcliff Highway, were laid last Thursday by Mr. George Williams and Mr. T. W. Powell, in the presence of a large concourse of friends, including a number of seamen, for the benefit of whom the building is mainly designed. Addresses of sympathy with the work and congratulation on its success were given by Mr. J. W. Benn, M.P., Revs. G. C. Dow and T. J. Hobbins, Mr. Hodder, Mr. T. A. Denny, and others. The president gave, as an expression of his interest, a second donation of one hundred guineas.

Subsequently a public meeting was held in the temporary Seamen's Chapel, presided over by Mr. John Bell, when addresses were given by Colonel H. G. Macgregor, Mr. F. M. Barclay (manager of the Sailors' Home), Mrs. Hill, Miss Messer, Mr. Davis (Whitehaven), Mr. George Lampard, and others, the sailors present evidently enjoying the proceedings.

THE BOROUGH ROAD POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE was opened on September 30, by Lord Rosebery. The limit of the number of members, fixed at 2,500, was reached within a week of the opening, and hundreds have since applied for admission. To complete the institution, there are needed workshops for engineering and electrical work and fittings, at an estimated cost of £4,000; a swimming bath with gymnasium, £6000; a hall to seat 1500 for lectures and other entertainments, £7000.

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

(From our own Correspondents.)

OXFORD.

The new term has commenced with 694 freshmen, as compared with 687 last year.

The anniversary services of the Methodist Free Church were held last week, when a very hearty welcome was given to the new pastor, Rev. C. D. Holmes.

A conference for the increase of spiritual life has just been held in connection with the Berks, Bucks, and Oxon Association of Baptist churches, when an interesting and profitable time was spent in prayer and fellowship,

Among the city ministerial changes are the departures of Rev. A. Martin, Wesleyan, and Rev. H. M. Booth, Methodist Free Church, who have gone to other circuits. Their places have been taken by Revs. R. M. Rees and C. D. Holmes.

The Inter-Collegiate Christian Union will greatly miss Mr. T. W. Ketchley, of Exeter, who has completed his course at Oxford. During his secretaryship and presidency, he was the life and soul of the Christian Union, and was the means of much blessing among the men. The president and secretary for this year are Mr. T. Alvarez, of Jesus, and Mr. E. H. Edwin, of Merton.

Another change of importance to Christian work is the removal to London of Commander Williams, R.N., to assume the secretaryship of the Protestant Reformation Society, which he has represented in Oxford for some years. Commander Williams has done a most valuable, albeit quiet, work among undergraduates by means of personal intercourse and daily prayer meetings, while he has also engaged in much Christian service for the city.

Rev. G. C. Grubb has commenced a special mission in Oxford, and much blessing is being prayed for and expected in connection with it. It is hoped that Oxford will have the privilege of a visit from Mr. Moody. Very earnest action is now being taken to obtain him for a mission here.

The anniversary meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held on Monday last, when the Rector of Exeter College (Dr. Jackson), a warm friend of the society, presided, and gave an earnest address. Archdeacon Hodgson, of Zanzibar (Universities Mission), also spoke.

Mr. Gladstone's visit to Oxford may perhaps be noted here. It certainly has been the topic of conversation among all classes. His long connection with and deep love for Oxford make his visits here noteworthy at all times, but several circumstances have combined to make the visit one of special interest.

CAMBRIDGE.

On Sunday evening, October 16, Trinity Church was thronged with undergraduates to listen to Rev. Handley Moule's address to freshmen. The speaker selected the words "I know" (2 Tim. i. 12) for the basis of some earnest and loving remarks. It is the intense reality, he said, of the living and loving Christ which, in the first instance won, and ever after was the source of energy and power to Paul. Men might argue against Christianity with specious sophistry; but he knew. This is what will overcome the world, what will keep a man firm in his university life, amid the varied forms of temptation.

At the Church Missionary Union on Monday, October 17, in the Henry Martyn Hall, the members had the pleasure of listening to an address from Mr. Dudley Kidd, of the Cape General Mission, upon South Africa. Very earnestly did the speaker appeal for men to consecrate their lives to the work of winning the Africans and our colonists to Christ.

Perhaps the most important feature of the week was the annual meeting of the local branch of the Church Missionary Society, on Tuesday evening, at the Guildhall. To this society alone nearly £300 was last year contributed by resident members of the University, although compared with the money annually spent upon pleasure, no doubt it appears small indeed.

A Home of Rest for Missionaries.

My dear Sir,—I am happy to inform you that the intimation in The Christian has led to an opening for the disposal of Kingsholme, Weston-super-Mare. We hope it will be used by a lady who thinks of commencing there a Home of Rest for Tired Workers, especially missionaries and their families returning from the foreign field.

For missionaries returning from abroad Weston-super-Mare lies at convenient distances from Southampton and Plymouth, and could easily be reached from either of these parts without going to London.

As I am leaving for the Continent this week, will any who may be interested in this work, or desiring further information, apply to Miss F. C. Campbell, 9, Portland-terrace, St. John's Wood, London, W.

Weston-super-Mare. F. W. Baedeker.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

A new mission hall is being built for the work of the Shoe Lane Mission, carried on in a needy district of Inverness.

In a recent lecture, Rev. D. M. Ross, of Dundee, put in a strong plea for the reform and the rigorous applications of the liquor laws.

At a Y.W.C.A. meeting at Kirriemuir, Hon. Emily Kinnaird gave a stirring account of her recent visit to India, and the needs of its women.

The name of Dr. Walter Smith, of Edinburgh, is mentioned as the probable moderator of the Free Church next year; it will be the jubilee year of that Church.

We are glad to hear that Prof. Blaikie's health has not suffered through his visit to Canada. He and Mrs. Blaikie are now on their way home to Scotland.

Dr. Danson, preaching in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Aberdeen, made a rousing call for a young man missionary to go forth as a representative of the congregation.

Mr. John Knox Bokwe, a Kaffrarian secretary to the Lovedale Institution, South Africa, recently preached in Queen's Cross F.C., Aberdeen. He reported wonderful progress at Lovedale.

A "Toynbee House" has been established in Glasgow as a branch of the work of the University Settlement Association. It is to be a centre of social and educational work among the people.

A mass meeting was held in the St. Andrew's Halls, Glasgow, on behalf of the foreign missions of the United Presbyterian Church. Various missionary addresses were given, and a number of departing workers were bidden God-speed.

Mr. D. Anderson, a resident in the Argentine Republic, gave at Dundee last week an interesting account of missionary work in different provinces of South America. There is great opposition, he says, from ecclesiastics of the Romish Church.

The Baptist Union and Home Mission of Scotland has had its anniversary gatherings in Glasgow; they were largely attended. In his presidential address, Mr. Chedburn, of Aberdeen, strongly insisted on the essential spirituality of the Church of Christ.

A suggestion has been made that Rev. E. J. Brailsford, the chairman of the Edinburgh District Wesleyan Synod, should be set free from circuit work for a period; so that he may devote his energies to fostering the work of his Church throughout Scotland.

In replying to several temperance deputations that waited upon him, Sir George Trevelyan, Secretary of State for Scotland, admitted that in coming temperance legislation no measure could be brought forward that did not recognise the principle of local option.

The Church of Scotland Young Men's Guild had its annual conference in Greenock last week. About 400 delegates attended. The Guild has 546 branches, and close on 22,000 members. Several practical topics were discussed. The scope of the Guild is largely social.

The Young Women's Bible Class at Bonnethill Free Church, Dundee, has lately grown remarkably, and now numbers 345, while the Young Men's Bible Class in the same church numbers 450. To accommodate these, a new hall has had to be built, and its opening last week was marked by much interest.

A new "Scottish Church Society" has been formed, "generally to assert Scriptural principles in all matters relating to Church order and policy, Christian work, and Scriptural life." The society's aims appear to be more ceremonial than spiritual, and we fear little is to be expected from it in any evangelical direction.

An indignation meeting of Edinburgh citizens was held in the Free Assembly Hall last week, to protest against the granting of a proposed drink licence for the New Palace of Varieties. The meeting demanded such changes in the liquor laws as will give to localities control over the multiplication of these sources of temptation.

"A Working Man," writing to The Aberdeen Free Press, raises the very timely subject of the best ways of spending the winter evenings in the rural districts. He favours the founding of reading rooms, libraries, magazine clubs, and mutual improvement societies. These are all excellent suggestions, but a more lively, personal, and rational interest in the rural workers on the part of all the Churches, would be greater safeguards for the mental and moral welfare of the people.

Mr. Duncan, Secretary of the Ploughmen's Union, told the Established General Assembly Commissioners on the Religious Condition of the People, in a meeting at Alyth last week, that he had never seen a minister inside a bothy all the fourteen years he was a farm servant. He held that it was impossible to expect a man who worked seventy-two hours a week to attend church on Sunday. One ministerial speaker made the extraordinary suggestion that prizes should be given to ploughmen for regular attendance at church.

THE CRISIS IN UGANDA.

The following minute was adopted at the last monthly meeting of the committee of the Church Missionary Society:—

1. The committee of the Church Missionary Society have received from the secretaries of the society a report of Lord Rosebery's reply to the deputation of the committee; they have also read the letter of September 30, 1892, to the directors of the Imperial British East Africa Company, intimating Her Majesty's Government's acceptance of the principle of Uganda being evacuated, but offering to assist by pecuniary contributions towards the cost of prolonging the occupation until March 31, 1893, and the reply of Sir A. B. Kemball accepting the proposals of Her Majesty's Government "actuated by the hope that the provisional arrangement may in the issue bear fruit conducive to the cause of humanity and to the public advantage."

2. At the present grave crisis in the history of Uganda, the committee of the Church Missionary Society feel that a special responsibility devolves upon them to communicate to the British public their sense of the grave wrong which will be inflicted upon the people of Uganda, if this determination to withdraw the protection in which they have been led to trust, be carried into effect.

3. How that protection should be secured is a political question, and one of the fundamental principles of the society is that the committee and missionaries must keep clear of politics; they, therefore, make no suggestion on this point, but are firmly convinced that, where the claims of duty are paramount, some method of meeting those claims can be devised.

4. Nor do they attempt to indicate whether the moral responsibility rests on the company, which under Royal Charter has assumed Imperial responsibilities, or on the Government, under whose charter that company acts. But they cannot forget that in the exercise of the powers thus granted the Imperial British East Africa Company have persuaded the people of Uganda to place themselves under British protection. They therefore insist that a grave responsibility lies on the nation itself, and they urge that a duty rests upon every citizen to secure, as much as in him lies, that by some means or other the national responsibilities shall be fulfilled.

5. But the claims of humanity demand that a society which has special interest in Uganda, and which through the missionaries on the spot has special means of judging of the urgency of the present crisis, should contribute anything which its position enables it to contribute to the data which go to the solution of the problem.

6. The committee recall, as indicative of the special interest of the society in Uganda, the fact that missionaries of the society first announced the existence of the great African lakes, and thus gave a direct impetus to African geographical research; that in response to King Mtesa's appeal, through H. M. Stanley, the society sent out the first missionaries to reside on the shores of the lake, the Roman Catholics not arriving until eighteen months later; that the society's missionaries, besides teaching the truths of the Gospel, have introduced the printing press and other handicrafts; and that through their diligence the whole of the New Testament is now translated into the language of Uganda, that language having been reduced by their labours to writing; that Uganda is a land which has already drunk the blood of martyrs, many of the Christian converts having nobly witnessed for Christ at the stake; while several of the societies' missionaries—notably Bishop Hannington—have laid down their lives for Uganda; and others still living have expended their best strength on its behalf.

7. The committee feel bound to let it be known that Bishop Tucker and their missionaries in Uganda unite in expressing their conviction that the withdrawal of British protection will be followed by a general war and the inevitable massacre of Christians. They have received a touching appeal from the Christian converts connected with their mission, who write: "Our friends, we inform you that we Baganda are under the Queen's flag; we very much want the agents of the company to stay in our country; moreover, we think that our country should be subject to the Queen as she rules all other dominions. Our friends, we tell you the truth, we shall undoubtedly, in the case of the company withdrawing, fight amongst ourselves, and our country will become a wilderness." Careful consideration of the opinions expressed by Captain Lugard in his report of March 4, 1892, and in his letter to The Times of the 8th inst., and by Bishop Tucker and the missionaries as to the almost certain effects of the withdrawal of British influence from Uganda leaves the conviction on the mind of the committee that the fears of these gentlemen, so eminently qualified to form a just estimate, are by no means exaggerated.

8. The committee would further emphasise the fact, which they ventured to lay before Lord Rosebery when he received the deputation from the society, that the position of the missionaries and converts in Uganda has been completely changed by the establishment of British authority; that if that authority be withdrawn it is impossible for the missionaries or the inhabitants of the country to return to their former relations with the ruling power whenever such power is re-established. The old system has been swept away, and with it the relation which the missionaries formerly occupied to the King and the people.

9. In conclusion, the committee wish it to be clearly understood that it is not merely on account of the peril in which the missionaries stand that they have recently approached the Government on this subject, and that they feel now impelled to make this representation to the nation at large.

A PROTESTANT APPEAL.

An appeal to the Protestants of the British Empire on the present crisis in the Church of England has been issued over the signatures of Rev. Charles Stirling, M.A., for more than fifty years vicar of New Malden and Coombe, Surrey, and Rev. Nicolas R. Toke, M.A., formerly rector of Knossington. After giving details of the progress of Romanism and Ritualism during the past generation, the appeal proceeds:—

"The tendency towards Rome is year by year more clearly developed; in fact, reunion with Rome is the object which is avowedly sought, and the idol of the Madonna, ready for the superstitious worship of deluded votaries, has been set up at Westminster Abbey and within the metropolitan Cathedral of St. Paul's.

"These facts being indisputable, what, speaking generally, have the Evangelical clergy done? Have they not for the most part been contented with a succession of protests, vain and futile, feeble and ever feebler, while action—firm, unflinching, and united action—has been unfortunately absent?

"There was a time when, if banded together as one man, they might have successfully demanded the removal from the Prayer Book of every ambiguous phrase or rubric upon which Roman teaching could even seem to find a basis, and thus, by a movement from within, the Reformation might have been saved.

"Nothing, however, of the kind was attempted—the golden opportunity was lost—and we are persuaded that if successful resistance is to be offered to the Popish adversary, it must be by a courageous, determined, and independent effort.

"Fellow Protestants! It is the method of God's Providence to give deliverance by few rather than by many. It was Gideon's 300 by whom victory was achieved. And so perhaps it may be again.

"The hour has certainly arrived when God seems to be saying to all true Protestants within the Romanised and Romanising Established Church, 'Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.'

"We appeal, therefore, to those faithful ones amongst the clergy who will count the cost and are prepared for sacrifices, and to the 'seven thousand' amongst the laity who are also ready for self-denying efforts, and are willing to sustain the clergy in the struggle that is now before us. Thus, by the blessing of God, a thoroughly 'Protestant Church of England' may be reared, such as our martyred reformers intended the Church of England to be—such as she would have been but for the Laudian reaction.

"A Prayer-book—completely revised on Protestant lines—will shortly be ready for our use, and there will be no difficulty in supplying episcopal organisation from existing religious communities external to the Established Church. Such a Protestant Church of England will, it is confidently hoped, prove a beacon light in these dark days, a rallying point for Protestants at home and abroad, and a centre of attraction for all Protestant and Evangelical bodies throughout the world.

"We invite all to whom this proposal may commend itself to communicate with us at once, care of Mr. J. Kensit, 18, Paternoster Row, E.C., and we ask their earnest prayers that God may be pleased for Christ's sake to interpose in defence of his own truth in our land, and to grant to his people, once again, a signal and gracious deliverance."

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION opened, on Thursday last, new business premises at 57 and 59, Ludgate-hill, when a number of influential friends assembled to take part in the proceedings. Mr. J. E. Tressider, senior hon. secretary, observed that the whole of the profits from the trading section were handed over to the benevolent department, and that during the last thirty years no less than £60,000 had been devoted from this source to the development of Sunday-school work throughout the world.

Evangelistic Notes.

Dartford.—Mr. Wm. Sampson, the Cornish Evangelist, is conducting a special evangelistic meeting at Dartford. The meetings have been well attended, and there have already been evident signs of blessing.

Mr. James White, who has laboured for nearly twenty-five years as an evangelist in and around Hastings, is now free to conduct special village missions. He may be addressed, Wesley House, Bourne-street, Hastings.

Redbourn, Herts.—Mr. T. Goudie has just conducted a successful six days' mission. The audiences were large, his visit proving a time of refreshing to Christians, while many anxious souls were dealt with in the inquiry room, and not a few are now rejoicing in Christ.

Ireland.—During the past week Gospel missions were conducted with great blessing in the Methodist Church, Caledon; in Kingsland Park Church, Dublin; in Kilcaddon, co. Donegal; in Agnes-street, Frederick-street, and Hall's-road Methodist Churches, Belfast; in Ballysillaw Episcopal Church, and in Willowfield Presbyterian Church.

Howden-le-Wear.—Three weeks' revival services have just been held here by Miss Peart, of Sunderland. Every night during the three weeks and on the Sabbaths the chapel was crowded to excess, and there have been many good cases of conversion. The last night was a memorable one, not soon to be forgotten. Christians wept for very joy because sinners were coming to God.

Dr. Newman Hall has been holding an eight days' mission in the church of his brother, Rev. Arthur Hall, at Hastings, on Sundays, October 16 and 23, and the days inclusive. There was an after service every evening, to which the greater part of the congregation remained, and at each of which some hands were held up for the prayers of believers. The pastor presided and met inquirers.

Mr. Herbert R. Hurditch has just concluded a fourteen days' mission in the Baptist Meeting House, at Lisnalea, co. Armagh. Throughout the mission the presence and power of the Holy Spirit were felt, and many souls, it is believed, found peace, amongst whom were a goodly number of Sunday scholars. Our brother is now holding special services at Moylon, and intends fulfilling several engagements before returning to London.

Shoreditch Mission.—Mr. Matthew Burnett has conducted a fourteen days' mission at the Hackney-road Chapel, which has been the scene of many conversions, and the Church has been greatly energed. Mr. Burnett has assisted with two missions of fourteen months, and his earnest appeals have been crowned with Divine approval. Sister Louie, of the Wesley Deaconesses' Institute, sang most artistically, sweetly, and persuasively.

Mr. Robert Stark has just held a ten days' mission in Kentish Town. The weather during the first week was very unpropitious for outside meetings, but whenever it was possible such meetings were held, and considerable numbers were drawn to stand and listen to the old, old story, told in earnest and winning language. The meetings inside steadily increased both in interest and numbers as they went on, and closed with the largest and most interesting of all.

Wimbledon.—From October 8 to 18 a mission was conducted at Queen's-road Chapel by Revs. F. C. Burr and F. B. Meyer. The work had been well prepared for by advertisement and visitation outwardly, and by much prayer within the church. Hence from the first blessing rested on the effort. The meetings began well, improved as they proceeded, and though they have now ended results are still appearing. Members of all the churches came together, and under the earnest and faithful preaching of the missioners found blessing, and others who had never known the joy of trusting Christ are now glad with gladness not of this world.

Leith.—Under the auspices of the Leith Christian Fellowship Union, special evangelistic services have been held in Leith by Mr. J. M. Scroggie. Many have expressed decision for Christ, and the meetings have been acknowledged to have had a reviving effect on the Christian community. Two of the largest churches in the town, Junction-road U.P., and North Leith Free, were placed at the disposal of the Union, a week's services being held in each. Mr. Scroggie's visit was preceded by a week of prayer at the rooms of the Union, which were filled almost every evening. Cards of invitation to the special services were delivered at every door in the town. The children were not overlooked, extra meetings being held for them, at the last of which there were over 1200 present. All the services were largely attended, and on Sabbath evenings the spacious churches were crowded to the doors.

Mr. Charles Inglis is holding a mission at Shanklin, I.W., this week, and will be engaged in the West of England next month.

Personalia.

The G. Kirkham Memorial Fund now amounts to £800.

Archdeacon Sinclair B.D., has undertaken, we hear, the editorship of The Churchman.

Dr. W. S. Swanson, now returned from America, has taken up with fresh vigour his important missionary delegation work.

Rev. R. H. Roberts has accepted the presidency of the Regent's Park College. Dr. Angus, however, remains at his post during the current college year.

Rev. R. H. Walker has left Zanzibar for Rotterdam, where he is expected to arrive on the 29th inst. He is bringing home Mika Sematimba, a young convert.

Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D, is expected to occupy the Metropolitan Tabernacle pulpit on Sunday. We feel sure many will pray for him and his ministry at this juncture.

Rev. F. E. Clark, D.D., received a warm welcome at Auckland, N.Z., where his narrative of the origin, growth, and fruitfulness of the Christian Endeavour Society awakened much interest.

Rev. Dr. Johnstone, Moderator of the English Presbyterian Synod, a delegate to the Presbyterian Alliance, and Mr. Archibald Ferguson, another delegate, have returned safely. Rev. Dr. Matthews, general secretary of the Alliance, has also returned to London.

Dr. S. S. McBride, of New York, who resigned a pastorate some months ago to enter upon an effort to aid the evangelisation of Ireland through the Baptist Irish Mission, has recently received £1100 from a merchant in New York City (a native of the North of Ireland), to aid in carrying forward the good work.

Rev. George Brown, D.D., missionary secretary to the Australasian Wesleyan Conference, is at present travelling through the colony, seeking to arouse and intensify the missionary spirit. His services and meetings have been numerously attended, and his accounts of work among the islands of the South Pacific have served to elicit deeper sympathy and larger support.

Mr. J. Rennie, colporteur, Hitchin, has during the past twenty years sold in the markets and villages 210,286 volumes, 452,003 magazines and new books, 3,264,400 tracts, at society's prices, £13,308. He has published a graphic little pamphlet entitled "Looking Back, or the Wanderings of a Laddie of Things Experienced, Seen, and Heard." Six copies, post free sixpence.

Dr. G. F. Pentecost has returned to the Marylebone pulpit, and will resume his Thursday evening Expository Lectures on the Fourth Gospel. Last Sabbath the church was full at both services. At the second meeting after the evening service about fifty inquirers made themselves known, and more than a hundred persons in the congregation asked prayers for unconverted members of their households. The deep emotion manifested showed how many hearts were stirred. Great things are expected in and by the congregation during the autumn and winter.

Obituary.

MR. THOMAS NELSON,

The death of the head of the firm of Thomas Nelson and Sons, publishers, took place at his residence in Edinburgh, last week. Mr. Nelson achieved his greatest success as a publisher when he took to the publication of school books, maps, and atlases, most of which were prepared either by himself or under his supervision. He was an ingenious mechanic, and introduced many devices in printing, bookbinding, and photo-zincography which have now become common property. One of his greatest successes in this direction was the invention of a rotary printing press, a working model of which was shown in the London Exhibition of 1851, and again in the Edinburgh Exhibition of 1886. He was an energetic and indefatigable man of business from first to last. He kept the control of a large establishment, with all its multifarious details, in his own hands, and since his brother's death in 1887, the entire burden of the business has fallen on his shoulders. He was a staunch Free Churchman, and a generous contributor to the undertakings of that Church, as well as to charitable institutions in Edinburgh.

If there is anything sad in the world, it is to see men and women that have come close to the cross with tears in their eyes, and then have turned their back upon the Cross of Christ and become its enemies. I have read that there is no ice that is harder to melt than ice that has been once melted and frozen the second time. So the soul that has begun to melt before the love of Christ and then refuses to lay its sins on the Lamb of God, that heart is the hardest and most difficult to break again.—Pastor T. Monod.

THE "CHRISTIAN" ALMANACK, 1893.

Each number of this week's issue contains, as Supplement, a copy of The Christian Almanack. It has been prepared with care, and will, we trust, be found acceptable to our readers. The distinctive feature of the year is the series of engravings that are intended to illustrate the life of the great Hebrew leader Joshua, an exposition of whose life and character is about to be given in these columns by Rev. F. B. Meyer. Apart from their artistic excellence, the pictures will suggest lessons worthy of careful pondering by the reader, as he scans the daily texts morning by morning.

The first illustration depicts the erection of the memorial in Jordan. It may serve to remind us, as Christians, that we have been brought out of the place of death, of which the Jordan is regarded as a symbol, into the place of resurrection, where stand the feet of our High Priest. We are already by faith seated with Christ in the Heavenlies, and our daily life should be attuned to the highest possible enjoyment of our privilege.

The second picture speaks to us of the walled cities of difficulty by which we are confronted day by day. To how many Christians Jericho stands right in the pathway that we must take in order to reach some land of promise. Some obstacle, some perplexity, some temptation, is our Jericho. And the faith by which the battlements of the ancient Canaanitish city fell down is still inspired in the faithful and trusting heart by the Holy Spirit. There is no difficulty that should not yield as we advance towards it, so long as we are in God's plan of life and action.

Number three tells of the necessity of living before God with a pure heart story. Many are seeking to do God's work and to possess alien territory; to overcome the evil that is within, whilst at the same time they harbour in their secret souls some accursed and unholy thing. For such defeat is inevitable. We should see to it that there is nothing in us that would hinder God from being our champion and ally.

The central picture, representing the transfer of the Israelitish command from Moses to Joshua, brings home the thought that the law, of which Moses was the great type, can never lead us into the land of promise. No resolutions, however earnest, no vows, however often they may be reiterated, will win for us the rest and peace that may be ours by faith. We can but trust the living Christ, our Great Forerunner, who beckons us to follow.

The two attendant illustrations speak of lessons which, as soldiers of the cross, we do well to remember. The one exhorts us to be found faithful amid the faithless—to "dare to stand alone" for God, even when our comrades and associates bring in an evil report. The other reminds us that in Jericho there may be a Rahab—that even in the vilest and most worldly surroundings there are those who, being rescued, shall shine as jewels in the Redeemer's crown. For this reason we should be willing to go as spies for God, that we may seek them out and save them.

The first picture of the lowest series on the sheet should warn us against entering into an alliance with doubtful characters, to the compromise of principle There are plenty of wily Gibeonites who are anxious to win that countenance and support which we are too prone to give without asking counsel of the Lord Let us bring all such proposals to the Ithuriel test of the Word and Spirit of God.

Can we ever gaze on a representation of the pursued manslayer, stepping within the precincts of the city of refuge, without lifting our heart in thankfulness to Him who has interposed Himself as a strong bulwark between us and the consequences of our sin? Jesus, Immanuel, is the Antitype of which these six cities of refuge were transient emblems.

Lastly, the renewal of the Covenant at Shechem, as sketched by the artist, will often be a reminder that though we can never repeat in its entirety the first consecration of ourselves and all that we possess to God, it is wise at special seasons to renew our vows and knit again the slackening cords by which we are bound to the horns of the altar of service, by which Giver and gift are alike sanctified.

THE MAIDA VALE SPECTACLE MISSION has been in operation for the last six years; it has been doing quiet, steady work, and has relieved on an average 550 people each year. It is for the supply of spectacles only to those whose eyesight is failing from old age, or in a natural and ordinary way. To widen its sphere of usefulness, it will thenceforth be called The Spectacle Mission Society. It will give spectacles to applicants provided with a Spectacle Card signed by a subscriber. The cards will be supplied on the same system as hospital letters—every subscriber or donor being entitled to a given number of Spectacle Cards. Miss Waring, 197, Sutherland-avenue, N.W., hon. sec., will be glad to supply further information.

Letters to the Editor.

STRIKING CONVERSIONS.

Dear Sir,—As a comparatively young evangelist, I have felt what a great help I should derive in my work if put into possession of a few striking cases of conversion to God which other and older Christian workers have met with. May I beg that those of your readers who are able to render me practical help in this matter will kindly supply me with particulars?

I will undertake that in no cases shall names of persons or places be divulged unless special permission is given.

Perhaps some who see this note would furnish me with the particulars of their own conversion, where such would be thought likely to be helpful to others. Communications might be addressed to the care of the editor. Yours most truly,

Honorary Evangelist.

SYSTEMATIC BIBLE STUDY.

Sir,—I am glad to see the note in this week's paper concerning "Bible Study." My mind has been exercised for some time on this very subject, for a mere superficial comparing of various lists cannot be called study. There cannot be two opinions as to the need at this time of digging deep down into the mine of truth.

I hold that the Bible best explains, the Bible way is the only true interpreter of the Living Word of God, and those things that cannot be explained through the Bible most certainly cannot be explained outside the Book itself.

I should be glad to correspond with any who might be willing to take the matter up in such wise as to bring into shape the suggestion thrown out by your correspondent, in order that if possible some line of order might be arranged to start the New Year (1893) with a definite plan beginning at Genesis. There is time to do this, but none too much, and that only if a beginning be made at once.

Yours faithfully,

Maycot, Bexley, Kent, Oct. 21. J. G. Dixon.

HYPNOTISM.

Dear Sir,—Your readers are no doubt aware that at this season of the year events are not usually stirring enough to fill the newspapers, and social and religious questions are ventilated by a world that knows nothing of Christ, the only key to the truth regarding them, by means of a sea of opinions of persons who are not all even thinkers.

There was room, then, in The Daily Chronicle of the 14th inst. for three columns from Mrs. Besant, expounding Theosophy—the up-to-date Theosophy of Madame Blavatsky—which, as all Christians who have at all looked into the subject know, is preparing the way (professedly) for the worship of Satan, the great dragon (of Rev. xii. 9, xiii. 4).

The same number contained a letter showing the further development of hypnotism in the experiments of Dr. Luys and Colonel Roche. As no one cognisant of demonology can help connecting the two, the following letter from Mr. Hayes in The Daily Chronicle of the 17th inst. will be interesting. The world dislikes such names as magic, witchcraft, and sorcery, but call the same practices demonstrative science, and it receives them with a cordiality flattering to its own pride. I would, however, warn your readers against coming under occult influences in disguise.

Sir,—Those of your readers who care to study with the attention it deserves Mrs. Besant's letter will no doubt have been struck with the report of hypnotic experiments at La Charité, which, curiously enough, appears on the same page. While Mrs. Besant says, in brief, that most of the recent discoveries and speculations in chemistry, physics, and physiology confirm theories propounded ages ago, and until now derided by scientists as vulgar superstitions, Dr. Luys and Colonel Roche are stated in your Dalziel telegram from Paris to have demonstrated the practicability of transferring a hypnotised patient's sensibility from her physical organism to a glass of water, a photographic negative, &c., with the result that intentional injury inflicted on the latter is not only felt by the patient, but gives rise to appropriate marks on her body.

What will these gentlemen say now of the stories of ancient magic and mediæval witchcraft wherein a wax figure or other effigy of the person intended to be injured or killed was put to melt before a fire or pierced in the heart by a needle, with the asserted result of sickness or death to the victim at a distance?

To those interested in psychical research, it need not be pointed out that the Charité experiments do not of themselves prove objective transfer of sensation. But even assuming that hypnotic clairvoyance coupled with the known possibilities of self-suggestion (as in stigmatisation, &c.) is sufficient to account for the results obtained in this particular instance, Mrs. Besant has none the less grounds for claiming, if she chooses, the most recent developments of hypnotic experiment as distinctly bearing upon the "exploded superstitions" of bygone ages.—I am, Sir, yours, &c. F. W. Hayes.

Oct. 14.

Man looks upon Popery, Freemasonry, Spiritualism, Theosophy, Hypnotism, Atheism, Phallicism, and Idolatry, as distinct ethical forces, but God treats them as branches of the great Mystery of Lawlessness. Is He withdrawing the restraint He placed on it at Babel? Man is failing in the Church, in Government, in social life. Is not the time coming, perhaps very soon, when the Lord will glorify Himself, and take his Church to Himself in clouds, that the day of Christ may set in in the heavenlies, the Day of the Lord in the earth? May it be so! It is the Day of man (1 Cor. iv. 3 marg.) now, nowhere more manifestly than in the Church. Alas! how few seem to consider that it is not the amount of work done that will give us a reward in the Day of Christ, or the post of prominence to which one may attain in the Church Visible, but its abiding character. How few really want the Lord's coming! How many have even heard that they are dead and risen with Christ! Yours in Christ,

G. Warrand Houghton.

MR. SCROGGIE IN LEITH.

This evangelist has just completed a fortnight's meetings in Leith.

The mission commenced with a conference on "Soul winning," when Rev. John Kelman remarked that some who deal with souls try to force the inquirers to say that they "believe it"; but often it is only a head knowledge, while the heart is as hard as ever. Consequently the professed convert goes back to the world, and disgrace is brought on the cause of Christ. This seasonable word was acted upon throughout the meetings.

Mr. Scroggie began his mission in the United Presbyterian Church, Junction-road, which was filled with all classes of society. Many seemed under conviction of sin, and remained to the after-meeting.

The services were very well attended on the week nights, and the Holy Ghost was pleased to use the word spoken to the conversion of souls.

During the second week of the mission the meetings were held in North Leith Free Church. The Sunday gatherings were specially large. On the last night of the mission Mr. Scroggie changed his method of conducting the second meeting. He told all Christians to pray silently, and in the silence asked those who wanted prayer for friends to say so. Soon voices were heard from all parts of the church. "Prayer wanted for a mother," "for a brother," "for a father," "for a sister." Then those who were anxious about their souls were asked to hold up their hands, and no less than twenty-four held up their hands, many of whom we trust were afterwards led to the Saviour.

Mr. Scroggie while in Leith had two services for children which were greatly blessed. Another feature worthy of notice was the meetings for Christians on Sabbath mornings. We trust that this time of special blessing will stimulate and unite all Christians more closely together. It is impossible to calculate the good done here, but we know many have been aroused to their duty, while others have received Jesus into their hearts.

Miss Sharman's Orphan Homes.

In issuing her report of the twenty-fifth year's work in the orphan homes, Miss Sharman recalls some trying experiences, and testifies that God has continued to supply every need, while not seldom testing faith by keeping his servants waiting. An attack of measles caused great anxiety in the spring, but providentially all the children recovered. As to the work of the year it is stated that:—

The number of applications for admission to the Home during the past twelve months has been greater than ever. Fifty-one new children have been received, but many more were regretfully refused. Our whole flock now numbers three hundred and ten. The Homes have all been quite full during the year, and some children have been boarded out. We have a large number of very young children. Our nursery party includes five little ones under three years of age, and the infant school children number over eighty. If some of my readers will come and see our large family, I think they will feel moved to select a little fatherless and motherless darling as a protégée, to not only support, but to love and care for, and take a special interest in for Christ's sake.

Details follow of the plan for having little ones adopted, of the seaside work, of the country homes, little branches at Gravesend and Tunbridge Wells, also of the Hastings House Fund. A plea is made towards building a much-needed seaside home. Many interesting incidents are given, but on these we cannot here enter. The report may be had of Miss Sharman, The Orphans' Home, Austral-street, West-square, S.E.

We have known this valuable institution since its early years, when the late Rev. Samuel Martin used to preside at its annual meetings. He took a very deep interest in the orphans and in Miss Sharman, whose life is devoted to their welfare. We warmly commend her pathetic report to our readers' sympathetic study.

The Book World.

Little Folks appears already in its Christmas dress, containing the good things of half a year made up into one plum pudding. The worlds of nature, history, poesy, revelation, mythology, fairyland, and we know not what other spheres, have been ransacked to find attractive morsels. (3s. 6d. Cassell and Co.)

In The Workings of an English Jewish Christian Heart, Mark Levy, president of the Christian Jews' Patriotic Alliance, states his reasons for believing the Lord Jesus to be the Messiah, and in doing so, to use his own words, "lays bare the inmost workings of his heart." He sums up his experience thus:—"Whilst moving in Jewish circles my social pleasures were great, but my spiritual joy was small; in Christian circles my social pleasures have been small, but my spiritual joy has been great." The author writes forceful prose, and also indulges in verse. Some passages of the book have a deep pathetic interest. (6d. Operative Jewish Convert Institution, Palestine-place, Cambridge Heath, E.)

Mohammedanism, by the late G. T. Bettany (2s. 6d. Ward, Lock, and Co.), one of the series of books descriptive of "the World's Religions," is a popular, stated and succinct account of the rise and growth of the Mohammedan system, and of the life of its remarkable founder. It is a portent in the history of our race that a scheme of "religious" faith built up on force, persecution, sham revelations, and loose living should have secured such an extended hold on mankind. Probably the fact that it caters so largely to the weakness of our sinful nature has given it acceptance. This and its persecuting element make it the most terrible obstacle to the advance of real Christianity in the lands where it holds sway. The volume also has interesting chapters on the religions of ancient Egypt, Assyria, Greece, and Rome, and is one of great value as a popular handbook on these historic themes.

NEW EDITIONS.

Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton have produced a popular but attractive edition of that classic work in evangelistic biographical literature, Charles Finney's Autobiography. The promoters of modern revival movements might learn much from the remarkable experiences of this prince among God-sent evangelists. (3s. 6d.)

A second and enlarged edition of Among the Holy Places, by Rev. James Kean, is published by Mr. Fisher Unwin. This work belongs to the guide-book order of literature, It is a matter-of-fact description of a modern pilgrimage through Palestine from south to north. But it is far from being a dull book; the writer has a most observant eye and a ready graphic pen. There is little sentimentalising or moralising, but it is interesting to know that "the traditional Calvary is defended."

Students of the Christian faith and the vicissitudes of its cradle stages will examine with much interest the third edition of the late Edward Backhouse's Early Church History (Simpkin and Co.). The edition embraces large revisions and additions by the editor, Charles Tylor, and there is a biographical preface by Dr. Hodgkin. Of course Mr. Backhouse sought to portray the progress of the infant church with a view to find countenance in his researches for the special doctrinal views of the Society of Friends (of which he was a member) on such questions as the Lord's Supper, baptism, the public ministry, etc., but impartial and inquiring students will value the book none the less on that score.

Two Bible Searching Almanacks have reached us—"The Scripture-Subject Searching Almanack" (1d. Marshall Brothers), and "The Churchman's Acrostic Bible-Searching Almanack" (1d. Miss M. Mason, Woolhampton Rectory, Reading.)

The Religious Book Society, 28, Paternoster-row, is issuing very attractive and cheap motto cards for 1893. Some are blank in the centre, and others have Scripture texts. The Mother's Almanack is a good penny wall-sheet. A small Life of Christ (2d.) is amongst the other cheap publications of the society. It is abridged from Fleetwood's well-known work, but none the better for the occasional illustrations.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 30.—JOSHUA VII.

ISRAEL was now to learn that victory is only possible to literal obedience and entire consecration. We cannot hope to overcome our foes or to surmount the difficulties of our life, unless we are living in unbroken fellowship with God. And where there is failure, there should instantly be very earnest inquiry into the cause.

If we prostrated ourselves before God, as Joshua did, He would tell us some wonderful secrets about our inner life. How beautiful to see the absorption of Joshua in the honour of God. "What wilt Thou do unto thy great name?" He had learnt this way of viewing matters from long fellowship with Moses. But there are times when we no longer should remain on our faces in prayer and confession, but should arise to deal with and put away the sin which has been at the root of our defeat. "Get thee up; wherefore art thou thus fallen upon thy face?"

The "accursed" is better rendered devoted thing (vi. 19 R.V.). Thus the sin of Achan was both theft and sacrilege. He stole that which belonged to God, and was consecrated to his service. There was covetousness, dissembling, and unbelief in God's omniscience. When we deal with sin we should be specific, casting lots among the several emotions of the soul or acts in the life. Sin has a pedigree; you can trace its parentage and descent.

This valley of Achor became ultimately a door of hope (Hos. ii. 15). When we are honest in confessing, judging, and pushing away our sins, they no longer impede our advance, but we pass up into a wider and stronger life.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 31.—JOSHUA VIII.

What an illustration is here of the Divine co-operation with man. He gives into our hand Ai and the people, but we must go up and fight. There is no room for fear or dismay when God gives the command to advance. Note that the restriction as to appropriating the spoil, which had been in force in the case of Jericho (vi. 18, 19), and the neglect of which had been the sin of Achan, is now removed (2).

There are some great distinctions of right and wrong which are, so to speak, asserted by conscience as fundamental. But, in some cases, there has been a special code of rules and regulations announced by God, such as the Levitical code, which, as it was arbitrarily imposed, could be arbitrarily removed. One of these was the appointment of the seventh day as the rest day. This regulation as to the spoil is one of these. Though there was no moral obligation, the imposition of these rules was an unexampled means of education and discipline.

We learn from Deuteronomy xxvii. 13 that the curses of the law were to be pronounced on Mount Ebal. Appropriately, therefore, and as it were to hold out the only hope of deliverance, the altar was erected on Mount Ebal rather than on Mount Gerizim (30). "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us."

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1.—JOSHUA IX.

The alarm and consequent confederation of the kings (1, 2) must be connected with the fall of Jericho and Ai, the last six verses being parenthetic. Gibeon (3) is still known as El-Jib, and lies about five miles north of Jerusalem. The name means "built on a hill."

The people of God have always had more to dread from wily Gibeonites than from the avowed hostility of open foes. The world is always striving to enter the ranks of the Church, to dilute and lessen its influence. Appeal is made to our pity and compassion, to our charity and catholicity. But we shall be very foolish to be swayed by considerations like these, and so miss asking counsel of God (14).

There was a measure of faith in these Gibeonites (24) as formerly in Rahab, which led to their seeking a league with Israel, even though through deceptive means. And this was so far rewarded that, while the deception was punished by their degradation to a servile condition, their faith was owned in their being spared, and, to a certain degree, incorporated amongst Israel and associated in service with God's house.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2.—JOSHUA X.

The object of this alliance of the five kings was to smite Gibeon, because it had made peace with the children of Israel, and so Satan persecutes and tempts us, not merely because evil hates the good, but because he desires to injure Christ in injuring us. And yet, as the honour of Israel was implicated in this attack on their confederates, so the honour of our Lord is at stake in us. He cannot imperil his own great name, and therefore we are certain of his help, whensoever temptation is near, and we say: "Slack not thy hand from thy servants, come up to us quickly and save us and help us."

Joshua immediately went to their help. The promise on which he had been led to rest (i. 5) was renewed to him. He was assured of victory before he went, but he co-operated to the best of his ability with his divine ally, by taking with him "all the mighty men of valour." The promise of divine help does not imply sloth or neglect in us. Joshua did not taunt the Gibeonites with the deception they had practised on him, and our past sins will not alienate the help of Christ. The prolonged day given in answer to Joshua's prayer was God's seal on his leadership and obedience. Those captive kings are emblems of tyrant evils which God will make the footstool of our feet. Our Joshua gives us power to tread on all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means hurt us. Note the recurring phrase "The Lord delivered," and the other phrase, "He utterly destroyed." Deliverance by God must be accompanied by destruction on the part of man.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3.—JOSHUA XI.

This chapter records another confederation of kings, at the north of Canaan, to oppose the advance of Joshua and Israel, and they called in to their help the Canaanites on the east and west. The result was a vast concourse of men, horses, and chariots (4). No wonder that Joshua's heart misgave him, but God cannot use a discouraged or fearful man, and therefore again the encouragement came "Fear not." All along our life God goes at our side, not delivering us from trial, but hushing our fear, and assuring us of his very present help. Again it is said, "I will deliver them up." The destruction of the chariots, and the houghing of the horses, was to put away temptation from Israel (Deut. xvii. 16, Isa. xxxi. 1).

At first it seems terrible to consider the carnage and havoc connected with the entire destruction of the Canaanites, but we must remember their long respite, their abominable crimes, their evident knowledge, as indicated by the words of Rahab, with the mighty deeds of God on behalf of Israel (Gen. xv. 16). The whole world would have been infected if such a hotbed of sin had not been utterly destroyed. It reminds us of the rigorous words of Mark ix. 42-50. It was a great pity that any of the Anakim were left; those that were not cut off, but remained in Gaza, Gath, and Ashdod, were a source of perpetual weakness and danger. Oh, to have a record like this which is made concerning the simple-minded soldier; he left nothing undone. Note, Joshua took the land, and he gave it to Israel; so Christ has received the fulness of the Spirit and all spiritual blessings, which He imparts to all those who believe.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4.—JOSHUA XII.

This chapter is the summary of Israel's victories, or at least of the kings whom they subdued. The two kings that fell under the sword of Moses on the other side of Jordan, and the thirty-one kings that fell before Joshua on this side of Jordan, are mentioned by name. It is strange, in the light of subsequent history, to find that one of these was the "King of Jerusalem," and yet it was not till four hundred years had passed that the Jebusites were driven out by David (2 Sam. v. 6), so slack was Israel to go in to possess the land which God gave to them. In like manner it is one thing to rejoice in the victory which our Joshua, the Lord Jesus, has won for his people, as it is described in Col. ii. 15; but it is another thing so to follow up this victory as to make it our own by faith, and to claim that our enemies should be subdued under us. We must never forget that Satan is a conquered foe (Eph. i. 21). It is a much easier thing to descend on him with the assurance that he has been vanquished, than to attack him in uncertainty as to the result.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 5.—JOSHUA XIII.

With this chapter we commence the second part of this book, which records in the remaining chapters the division of the land amongst the tribes. How significant the sentence, "There remaineth yet very much land to be possessed." This is true of tracts of the Bible little explored by ordinary Christians; of regions of experiences seldom entered; of countries of the world not evangelised. It would appear from ver. 6 that owing to Joshua's age the expulsion of the inhabitants not yet subdued could hardly be expected in his life-time. He was, however, to divide or allot the land, whilst God offered Himself to do the work of driving out the people. The force and significance of the words (v. 13), "Nevertheless the children of Israel drave not out . . ." is therefore all the more terrible, following, as it does, the proposal on God's part to do it for them. They either sought not his help, or tried to do it in their own strength and failed. We must first comprehend as far as we can what we may have in Christ, and then proceed to apprehend it by his grace. Mark Balaam's doom (v. 22), here recorded as the melancholy close of a perverted life. In the N.T. he is the type of the downward course of corrupt and apostate professors of Christianity. (2 Peter ii. 15; Jude ii.) The remark about Levi having no inheritance, because the Lord God of Israel was their inheritance, reminds us that we may be well content to live a pilgrim life when our souls can say to God, "Thou art the portion of mine inheritance."

Acts xii. 1—17.

GOLDEN TEXT: Ps. xxxiv. 7.

THE Church at Jerusalem is opposed and persecuted by a new and formidable enemy in the person of "Herod the King" (1). This man was grandson of Herod the Great, and son of Aristobulus and Bernice. He was born about 6 B.C., and died miserably about A.D. 44 (see verses 20—23). His history had been a very remarkable one. After many vicissitudes, the Emperor Caligula made him King of Gaulonitis and Batanea, giving him also the tetrarchy of Lysanias. After his uncle Herod Antipas was banished to Lyons, he received the tetrarchy of Galilee; and the Emperor Claudius, a former friend of his, added Judea, Samaria, and Abila to his dominions, so that he now possessed the entire kingdom formerly governed by Herod the Great. Though called here "Herod the King," he is called in history Agrippa I. His three children, Agrippa II., Bernice, and Drusilla, are all mentioned in this book (see xxiv. xxv.).

His motive was to "please the Jews" (3). From the same motive he was outwardly observant of all Jewish rites. King Saul (1 Sam. xv. 24) and Pilate are examples of the same evil. The man who acts upon so base a principle may find himself doing the most wicked and cruel things. Having begun, he will be certain to "proceed further" (3) as Herod did.

James was the first apostle martyr (2). Why Herod fixed upon him cannot be discerned. In his death the word of Jesus (Mark x. 35—39) finds its fulfilment. How brief this record is as compared with that of Stephen's martyrdom! This is the more remarkable considering how intimately James, with John and Peter, had been associated with Jesus. Probably "by the sword" intimates that he was beheaded. Tradition has added to this account the statement that "the accuser of James was converted while listening to his defence, and was then beheaded with him." There seems to be no foundation for the opinion that he preached the Gospel in Spain.

Peter was intended to be the next victim (3) He was securely guarded in the prison by four quaternions of soldiers (each company consisting of four men), who were on guard in turns during the four watches of the night (4). He was also bound by chains to two soldiers. It was not the first time he had been thus confined (chap. v. 17—23). The remembrance of his former escape suggested these extreme measures now.

The Church prayed (5).—There is no record that they used any other special means. God had miraculously delivered his servant before, why not again? Hence their fervent, unceasing prayer for Peter. Which will prove the mightier—the prayers of the church, or the prison, the soldiers, the chains, and all the power of Herod and the Jews?

Everything connected with the deliverance is instructive. The time (6). Not nearly so soon as the praying disciples could have wished, but at the time which made their consolation the greater, and added more confusion to their enemies, and therefore brought more glory to God. Peter seems not to have been expecting it, nor to have feared the wrath of Herod, for he slept.

The angel (7). Neither prison gates, nor armed soldiers, nor chains of brass can prevent the powerful ministry of these unseen messengers. If angels do not appear to us in the same form their ministry is not less real (Heb. i. 14). See Golden Text.

Peter's work was not to deliver himself, but to obey the angel. See how one command followed another (7—10). Obedience was for him and for us all, the way of liberty. The graphic description needs no other words.

Mark (12) is supposed to have been the evangelist of that name. (See xv. 37.) It was now night, and the day intended for Peter's execution drew nigh. The disciples were, therefore, the more fervent in prayer. Peter's visit was unexpected (14—16). They had faith enough to persist in prayer, but not faith enough to expect an answer in such a manner,

Lessons:—(1) How differently God deals with his people. James martyred, yet Peter delivered. Why was no miracle performed for James? God's ways are past our finding out. (2) Successful wickedness means speedy ruin. Herod begins by resolving to please the Jews. Prompted by this motive he proceeds from one sin to another. But God is against him, and visits him with terrible judgment (20—23). (3) When God gives opportunity for prayer, and invites his people to persist in prayer, He means to work mightily for them. The best way to "move heaven and earth" is to move heaven by prayer, then leave heaven to move earth. (4) Having prayed, expect the answer, though it seems humanly impossible.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Mission and Colportage Van of the Church Army is now passing through Aldershot and various parts of Hampshire.

The Church Parochial Mission Society held a good meeting in Folkestone, addressed by Canons Atherton and Lester and others.

Rev. G. H. Parson, who has been working in Boscombe for some time with Rev. S. A. Selwyn, has now returned to his former field in India.

The Norwich Cathedral Bible Class, which proved so successful last season, will be resumed this week under the presidency of the Dean.

The Record contains a long article, giving details of the work of the C.P.A., and insisting on its importance and usefulness as an auxiliary of the Church.

The monthly prayer meetings at Falcon Court in connection with the Ladies' Home Mission Union of the Church Pastoral-Aid Society have now been resumed.

Rev. Dr. H. M. Luckock, Canon of Ely, who has been appointed Dean of Lichfield, in succession to the late Dr. Bickersteth, is known as a very pronounced High Churchman.

Rev. W. B. Hornby, vicar of St. Columbus, Southwick, Sunderland, has accepted the offer of the Bishopric of Nyassa. He has always taken a deep interest in missionary work.

The Bishop of Liverpool has appointed Rev. H. C. G. Moule, Principal of Ridley Hall, Cambridge, to preach the sermon at his Advent ordination in St. Peter's Pro-cathedral in that city.

Rev. Edward J. Lough, for the last nine years curate of the parish church, Hebden Bridge, has resigned that position with the view of going out to Bermuda to assist his father (Rev. J. F. B. L. Lough) in mission work.

The Bishop of Liverpool spoke last week at the annual meeting of the Liverpool Auxiliary of the S.P.G. He said that all over the country there was now an increasing desire to do something for the souls of people in other countries. Time was when they seemed to be sleeping on their oars, but that time had altogether gone by.

An interesting reminder of the progress of Christianity in Uganda came up at the C.M.S. Committee of Tuesday, when it was agreed to ask the Bible Society to print Luganda versions of 1 and 2 Corinthians and Hebrews, completing the Luganda translation of the New Testament. Recalling the history of Madagascar, the possession by the native Church of the Bible in their own tongue is full of hope for them, whatever persecution the future may reveal.

At an examination of Sunday-school teachers held on Saturday, the Bishop of London gave some useful hints to teachers. Being, to begin with, themselves Christians, they should possess knowledge, clear, distinct, and systematic. The mind of the teacher must be well informed, in order to give a lucid idea to the taught. The Bishop gave examples of mistakes which were sometimes made in quoting Scripture, and in applying Scripture texts. Then it was necessary to know the customs, habits, and circumstances which were behind the Scripture narrative.

Archdeacon Sinclair, preaching last week at the induction of Canon Hurst, said that most of the City churches were doing a useful and quiet work, and were much beloved by their parishioners. Most of them had some special feature in their work. Three were the seats of suffragan bishops; others made music a strong point. Some found their usefulness chiefly in week-day lectures; one was for the Dutch and another for the Welsh. That principle might, he thought, be enlarged. Some churches might be specially devoted to the use of policemen, others to young men, young women, market people, the fish trade employes, children, or the railway employes; yet others set apart for intercession and meditation, and as religious libraries and studies, and missionary centres.

CONGREGATIONAL.

A men's Bible discussion class has been formed at George-street Church, Oxford.

A new Congregational chapel is to be erected at Penrhyn-side, a rising watering-place between Llandudno and Colwyn Bay.

Dr. John Brown, of Bedford, preached in the Union Park Church, Chicago, on Sunday, October 2, and in the evening gave his lecture on John Bunyan to an immense audience.

Rev. J. Perkins, of Norwich, has held, under the Church Aid Visitation Scheme, interesting services at Newmarket, Sawston, Burwell, Castle Camps, and Balsham, Cambridgeshire.

Rev. J. Branwhite French has accepted the invitation to undertake the pastorate of the church at Summerton, in the north of Oxford, with a view to extension in that suburb.

A Berkhampstead paper prints a copy of a requisition to the Archdeacon of Huntingdon, dated May 18, 1821, for a licence to use a barn as a place of worship for Protestant Dissenters from the Church of England.

Farewell services were held at Calne on Thursday week in reference to the departure of Misses Bessie and Mary Harris, daughters of Mr. Thomas Harris, to Hankow in connection with the London Missionary Society.

The other Sunday morning the congregation at Lewisham High-road extended practical sympathy to the church at Greenwich-road, in its noble effort to provide new school buildings, by making a special collection on its behalf.

A very interesting example of Christian unity and co-operation is being witnessed just now in the united week evening services which are being held during the five Wednesdays of the present month at Lewisham High-road Church and Brockley Baptist Church alternately.

The Colonial Missionary Society is paying special attention to the north-west of Canada. It proposes to establish a number of churches along the track of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Already churches have been founded at Brandon, Winnipeg, Vancouver, and Portage la Prairie.

Never in the history of the London Missionary Society has such a magnificent gathering taken place as that in the St. George's Hall, Bradford, on Wednesday week. Thirty missionaries were there, the meeting being a valedictory service in their honour. Nearly four thousand persons were present. From first to last the proceedings were full of interest.

The third anniversary of the settlement of Rev. H. Elwyn Thomas in the pastorate of Tolmers-square Church was held last week. In reviewing the work done during the year Mr. Thomas rejoiced in a net increase of fifty in the number of those let, and of seventy-five received into church fellowship. A Young Men's Christian Guild and a company of the Boys' Brigade had been recently formed, bringing up the total of societies under the control of the church to thirty-seven.

On Sunday Rev. W. Crosbie visited his old friends at Victoria Church, Derby, the pastorate of which he held for sixteen years. The occasion was the ninety-first anniversary of the Sunday-school, one of the oldest schools in the Midlands, dating back to the beginning of the century. Very large congregations assembled, and in the afternoon Mr. Crosbie addressed a large gathering of young people. A considerable number of the present teachers were formerly children in Mr. Crosbie's classes.

In connection with the anniversary of the Manchester and Salford Auxiliary of the London Missionary Society, a children's missionary meeting was held on Tuesday week in Grosvenor-street Chapel, Piccadilly. Rev. J. Peill gave an account of the advances made by Christianity in the Island of Madagascar during the eighteen years he had been working there as a missionary. Mr. Newell spoke of missionary work in Samoa, and Mr. Sa'anga gave an address in the Samoan tongue, which was interpreted by Mr. Newell.

BAPTIST.

Rev. W. H. Broad, pastor of Cotton-street Baptist Chapel, Poplar, has removed to 34, Tavistock-crescent, Westbourne Park, W.

Anniversary services have been held at the village chapel, Streatley, in connection with King's-road chapel, Reading, by Rev. E. Henderson.

Mr. G. S. Wilkins, a senior student of the Midland Baptist College, has been accepted by the Baptist Missionary Society and will leave for India in November.

The special services at Abbey-road Chapel, St. John's Wood, were continued through last week, and the interest shown at the opening meetings was well sustained.

A new chapel has been opened at Launceston, where for eighty years the Baptists have worshipped, but up to the present time have met in rooms and other public places.

At a largely-attended meeting of the Clydebank Baptist Church, it was unanimously agreed to invite Mr. Joseph Burns, who has laboured as missionary in connection with the church for the past year, to fill the pastorate.

Recognition services in connection with settlement of Rev. T. Hancock as pastor of Cavendish, Ramsgate, were held on Thursday week. Mr. Hancock commences his ministry with a united church, and has already received signs of blessing.

At a meeting on behalf of the centenary fund of the Missionary Society at Wycliffe Chapel, Reading, addresses were delivered by Rev. J. Ewen (Benares) and Mr. J. J. Cooper. £117 had been promised at a parlour meeting on the previous evening, and this, together with the collection, and the amount collected by the Sunday-school, makes a total of £150 from the Wycliffe Church for the centenary fund.

For about fifteen years past the young men connected with the Bible-class from the Baptist Church in Clover-street, Chatham, have carried on and supported a mission work at Blue Bell Hill. The meetings have been held in a wayside cottage, and from the first the ministry of the young men has been favourably received, and the meetings well attended. Now it is proposed to erect a small chapel in the village.

Rev. Thomas D. Landels, M.A., just inducted to the pastorate of Jesmond Baptist Church, Newcastle-on-Tyne, is the youngest son of Dr. Landels, of Edinburgh, who preached on Sunday week from the words "But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God."

A united conference of the Berks, Bucks, and Oxon. Associations was held the other day at New-road Chapel, Oxford, for the increase of the spiritual life. At the morning session the subject of "prayer in relation to the life of the Church" was introduced by Rev. James Cave. In the evening an address was given by Rev. J. R. Russell, on witnessing for Christ—(1) The qualification of the witness; (2) witnessing by the life; (3) witnessing in speech.

METHODIST.

The Plymouth Methodist Council has resolved to have a Class Leaders' Convention.

One of the poorest Yorkshire Circuits, Knaresborough, has increased its foreign mission income by £20.

The memorial stones of a new Wesleyan chapel have been laid at Ashton, in the Preston district. Accommodation is to be provided for 640 persons at a cost of £3,200.

A new Wesleyan chapel, which has been erected in Altom-street, Blackburn, was formally opened on Thursday. Accommodation is provided for 500 persons at a cost of £2,000.

The Huddersfield Council is sending a deputation to the mayor to consider the stopping of the sale of newspapers in the streets on Sundays, and one to the police with a view to suppressing Sunday gambling.

Rev. Dinsdale T. Young, Wesleyan minister, of York, has declined to allow his name to be submitted to the members of Westminster Chapel for the pastorate. The deacons assured Mr. Young of a hearty invitation.

Subject to the approval of the next Conference, Rev. William H. Booth, recently of Cheetham Hill Circuit, will take charge of Ebenezer Wesleyan Chapel, Sheffield, and will work it on the lines of the London Mission. This is part of an aggressive movement among the Sheffield Methodists.

During the past thirty years, substantial grants towards the erection of as many as eighty-seven large chapels in London have been made by the Metropolitan Chapel Building Fund. In addition, help has been given towards the acquisition of numerous sites and the enlargement of several small buildings.

Reopening services at Great Bridgwater-street Mission Chapel were successfully continued last week by Revs. Charles Garrett and Peter Thompson. The chapel has been thoroughly adapted to the work of the mission, and the missioner and his helpers are doing their utmost to gather in the people. In many of the homes they visit squalor and vice abound.

An important scheme of circuit extension has been inaugurated in the Sheffield Norfolk-street Wesleyan Circuit. The scheme embraces the building of three chapels in the suburban parts of the circuit, and the renovation of the existing chapels, at a total cost of £10,000. The sum of £3,750 has been promised, £750 16s. being subscribed at the inaugural meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, held at Prestwich on Monday, it was stated that the Manchester district had contributed to the funds of the society last year the sum of £6,647, towards which the Gravel-lane circuit furnished £523, and £31 was collected at Prestwich. The amount collected at Prestwich this year is more than £96, an increase of £15.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. J. E. Kelr, M.A., South Queensferry, has declined the call to Everton Valley Church, Liverpool.

In the year 1860 there were only twenty-four Presbyterian congregations in London. Now there are eighty-seven.

The Presbytery of London South has just ordained Rev. John Steele to labour as a missionary at Swatow, China.

The New-road Church, Woolwich, celebrated last week its jubilee. The work was shown to be prospering in various ways.

The new English Calvinistic Methodist Chapel at Mold, which is now completed, has cost £2,500, and will be opened free of debt.

The North-western and Midland Home Mission Board has made a grant of £100 to the Oldham congregation towards purchase of site.

Rev. A. Connell, co-pastor at Westbourne-grove, has, to the joy of many, resolved to decline the calls from Cambridge and Willesden.

Dr. S. H. Kellogg, late of Toronto, who is proceeding to India to superintend the translation of the Bible, preached at Camden-road Church on Sunday morning.

The Oldham Sunday-school Anniversary was observed on the 16th inst. The preacher was Rev. R. M. Thornton, of London, who also lectured on the Monday. The anniversary was followed by the usual festival and prize distribution.

Rev. Richard Leitch read a paper before the Newcastle Presbytery on "The Holy Spirit's Power in the Church." In the discussion that followed there was a delightful tone of earnestness and desire for larger experience of the power of the Holy Ghost in the congregations.

At the annual soirée of Trinity Church, Newcastle, Dr. Ross, who presided, said that, by the authority of the congregation, the committee approached the Newcastle Corporation with a view of obtaining a site in Northumberland-road. The application was entertained by the Corporation. The moment they obtained the land they would proceed to the erection of school-rooms, class-rooms, and other suitable offices.

SALVATION ARMY.

The Pall Mall Gazette announces that an influential committee is at last being formed in response to General Booth's challenge, and that an independent inquiry will shortly be made into the working of the "Darkest England" scheme. Lord Onslow is interesting himself in the matter.

"Colonel" Pearson, one of the heads of the financial department of the Salvation Army, died suddenly on Monday week from heart disease. He had been a member of the Army for nearly twenty-five years. On Saturday his remains were buried at Bow Cemetery, a special memorial service being held at the Great Assembly Hall.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The Sunday Evening Mission Services carried on so successfully last winter in the Central Hall, Cork, have been resumed under hopeful auspices.

Rev. J. E. Leslie, of Cookstown, who is completing his sixtieth year in the Presbyterian ministry, fifty-seven of these having been spent in his present charge in Cooks town, intends to retire from his pastoral work next Sunday.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Finchley-road, on 17th inst., Mr. Charles Tyler, an earnest worker.—At Altrincham, Mrs. Morris, aged 81, widow of the well-known Rev. A. J. Morris.—At Kidsgrove, Staffs, on 15th inst., Rev. T. Pitt, aged 38, known and loved as a Wesleyan minister.—At Saxlingham Rectory, Norfolk, on 14th inst., Rev. G. King, aged 81. At Southborough, on 18th inst., Mr. Plumptre, aged 92.—At Hale (Hants), on 14th inst., Rev. H. G. Windsor-Aubrey, aged 66.—At Usk (Mon.), on 11th inst., Rev. S. C. Baker, for thirty-two years the devoted and beloved vicar of the parish.—At the China Inland Mission House, Shanghai, Mr. Thos. Macoun, of Belfast, aged thirty-two years.—At Gorey, co. Wicklow, Rev John R. Dowse, Dean of Fierns, aged seventy-seven years.—At Rathmines, Dublin, Rev. J. M. Emerson, Rector of Timahoe, Queen's County.

The Open-Air Mission.

An animated company of more than 400 friends of this mission sat down to tea at the Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, on Tuesday, 18th inst., and afterwards adjourned to the large hall to celebrate the anniversary of its Mildmay and North London Auxiliary. Colonel J. F. Morton presided, and referred in touching terms to the great losses sustained by the mission in the deaths of Mr. John MacGregor and Mr. Gawin Kirkham. An encouraging statement of the work accomplished by the auxiliary during the year was submitted by Mr. Charles L. Young, the honorary secretary. Special mention was made of a most interesting service held every Sunday morning in Lea Bridge-road, Upper Clapton, a favourite rendezvous for men, where large audiences are attracted, and at which much blessing has been granted. The Sunday Morning Preachers' Training Class, held at the Conference Hall from 9.30 till 10.30, and conducted by Mr. P. S. Badenoch, had been attended by an average of over 100 men, to whom this systematic instruction in the Word had proved most helpful. Brief addresses were delivered by several leaders of bands, and also by Mr. Frank Cockrem, of the parent society, and Mr. Marcus Wood, of the China Inland Mission.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For a ten days' mission to be held in St. Simon's Church, West Kensington, Nov. 12—23, by Rev. H. Foster Pegg.—That a very great blessing may rest upon the forthcoming and second mission conducted by Mr. John Simmonds, of the Evangelisation Society, at Yorktown, Sussex, from Oct. 30.—For a fortnight's mission in the parish of St. Barnabas, Birmingham, from Oct. 30, conducted by Mr. J. Brown, of the Evangelisation Society.—For the recovery of a valued London City missionary now dangerously ill.—For blessing on evangelistic meetings being conducted in Stranorlar, co. Donegal.—For a mission by Mr. William Forbes at Hayling Island, Hants, to begin on 30th.—For much blessing on Mr. J. M. Scroggie's mission in the Union Tabernacle, Wandsworth, Nov. 6.—For blessing on an eight days' mission at the West-end Chapel, Hammersmith, from Oct. 30 to Nov. 6, by Mr. Newton Jones.—For blessing in conversion to God at mission services at Bracknell Congregational Church, to be conducted by Mr. Rowland Sturt, of the Evangelization Society, and continued by Mr. A. E. Lidford.—For much blessing on a mission at North Berwick beginning October 30.

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL.

TESTIMONIALS.

COLDS.

THE REV. CANON FLEMING, B.D., writes from The Residence, York, September 7, 1892:—"Canon Fleming has pleasure in stating that he has used the Carbolic Smoke Ball with great success. Its use not only checked the progress of a heavy cold in its earlier stages, and removed it, but has prevented it from going down into the chest, and preserved his voice for his public duties."

THE REV. H. BAUGH, Kempston Vicarage, Bedford, writes:—"I have found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial, both for the voice and preventing colds. I have recommended it to many friends. Kindly re-fill my Smoke Ball, and return it by first post."

CATARRH.

THE REV. DR. LUNN writes from 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W., November 16, 1891:—"I have much pleasure in tesifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

THE REV. T. ROGERS writes from Llanrindod Wells, Radnorshire, May 24, 1892:—"Your Carbolic Smoke Ball is a most efficacious remedy, It has completely cured me of a dry nasal catarrh of very long standing."

ASTHMA.

CHARLES MOORE, ESQ., writes from Sunnyside, Birchington, Westgate-on-Sea, Oct. 9, 1891:—"Your Carbolic Smoke Ball has afforded immense relief to my wife, who has suffered severely from Bronchial Asthma. When I bought the Ball she was unusually bad, and it acted like magic."

MISS HUDDLESTON writes from Walmersley House, near Bury, Lancashire, Oct. 15, 1891:—"Miss Huddleston is finding the Carbolic Smoke Ball a great blessing for Asthma. She is very glad to say it is doing her a great deal of good when hope had almost gone."

BRONCHITIS.

DR. H. G. DARLING, M.D., Linden Cottage, Shepherd's Well, Kent, writes April 18, 1892:—"I had used the Carbolic Smoke Ball only a few times when it gave me immediate relief, although I am eighty-three years of age, and have suffered more than one-third of that time from Bronchitis complicated with Asthma."

MRS. MACDONALD writes from Milland, Liphook, Hants, Jan. 2, 1891:—"The Carbolic Smoke Ball has given me the greatest possible satisfaction, and since using it for the last eighteen months I have been FREE FROM BRONCHITIS, to which I was a constant martyr."

INFLUENZA.

LADY BAKER writes from Blandford, Jan. 19, 1892, when ordering another Smoke Ball:—"I and the children have hitherto escaped Influenza, though in the thick of it, owing entirely, I believe, to the good effects of the Carbolic Smoke Ball. I am recommending it to everyone."

THE MARCHIONESS DE SAIN writes from Padworth House, Reading:—"The Marchioness de Sain has daily used the Smoke Ball since the commencement of the epidemic of Influenza, and has not taken the Influenza, although surrounded by those suffering from it."

THE VOICE.

MME. ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-Nos Castle, July 10, 1891:—"Mme. Patti has found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial indeed."

DR. JAMES CLARK writes from Laurel Bank, Headingley, Leeds, Oct. 4, 1892:—"Professor Clark depends greatly on the Carbolic Smoke Ball when he is lecturing, and, as he has commenced the present session with a bad cold, he will be glad to have his Ball re-filled, and returned as soon as possible."

C. J. BISHENDEN, ESQ., writes from Portland-place, W., Jan. 18, 1892:—"The Carbolic Smoke Ball does all that is claimed for it. Every singer and speaker should have one, as it is simply invaluable."

DEAFNESS.

J. HARGRAVES, ESQ., of Manchester, writes, A 28, 1891:—"Since using the Carbolic Smoke Bal can hear my watch tick three or four inches aw which I have not done for months."

MRS. KINGSLEY writes from the High Hou Woking Village, May 4, 1892:—"I am most tha ful to be able to say that my hearing still contin to improve, so I am anxious not to miss using Carbolic Smoke Ball even for a day. The Cata has entirely disappeared."

SORE THROAT

THE REV. H. S. VLAKO TURNER writes fr Potter Hamworth, near Lincoln, Nov. 25, 1891 "I have derived very great benefit already from use of the Carbolic Smoke Ball for my throat."

THE REV. DR. HITCHENS writes from Gloucester-street, Belgravia, S.W., Jan. 1, 1891 "Your Carbolic Smoke Ball relieved the head a throat to a large extent."

NEULALGIA.

MRS. WRIGLEY writes from New Wandswor S.W., March 12, 1892:—"The Carbolic Smoke B has entirely removed the terribly acute neural headaches from which I have suffered for years. am much stronger in my throat and health genera since using the Ball."

Temperance Notes.

Mr. Montagu Williams, Q.C., ventures the opinion that 50 per cent. of London public-houses are centres of betting.

The Recorder of Dublin has just refused, after careful inquiry, a licence asked for a great music hall and theatre.

A fourteen days' Gospel Temperance Mission has been held in Dublin and Kingstown by Mr. W. H. Whitehead, of Manchester.

The thirty-fourth annual conference of the North of England Temperance League, recently held at Newcastle-on-Tyne, was marked by great enthusiasm and success.

Says one of the Indian Zenana missionaries:—"Many are the children I have had to teach who could hardly learn, so stupefied were their brains for life by the nightly dose of opium given to them while babies."

In twenty-seven States in the American Union here is a law prohibiting the sale of liquor to children, and there are seven States in which there is entire prohibition of manufacture and sale of intoxicants.

During the second week in October the British Women's Temperance Association and the Yorkshire Women's Christian Temperance Union held a joint conference in York. The whole of the meetings were well attended, and very enthusiastic.

At the recent Anti-Opium Convention, Rev. J. Hudson Taylor pointed out that in China hundreds of women slaves committed suicide to escape from the lives of shame into which they were forced in order that their owners might obtain the money necessary to purchase opium.

Mildura, a town of New South Wales, founded in 1888, has been transformed, by means of irrigation, from a desert to a beautiful garden. By the terms of the Mildura Irrigation Act no liquor is allowed to be sold in the settlement, and in consequence everyone appears happy and prosperous.

Dr. S. N. Davis, speaking recently before the Chicago Medical Society, made the following statement: "Abundant experience has shown that an alley filled with decayed garbage does not more certainly invite cholera germs in the neighbourhood than does the use of alcoholic drinks invite them to the tissues of the individuals who use such drinks."

Dr. Kate Mitchell has just concluded a series of lecturing engagements for the British Women's Temperance Association in Lancashire: at Bury, Burnley, Rawtenstall, Bolton, Newchurch, and Pendlebury. Several new members were enrolled for the British Women's Temperance Association. Many of the meetings were crowded, and much enthusiasm was displayed.

At the recent annual meeting of the Sanitorium for Women, High Flatts, Yorkshire, the report was most satisfactory in every way, and showed that this home is proving a blessing to many a woman, and consequently it is the means of brightening many a family's otherwise painful experience. Dr. Norman Kerr read a paper setting forth in strong terms "The great need of more effective legislation for inebriates."

It is not in Britain only that the forces of temperance are closing in upon the enemy, which day by day is sapping the national life and honour. A law has just come into force in Switzerland which enacts that "any person rendering himself obnoxious or dangerous to his family, or to the community, through drinking habits, may, with a medical certificate, be sent to an inebriate asylum." An evening paper not inaptly asks the question, What asylum accommodation would England need if such an Act were put in force here?

One of the tramps recently reclaimed by the Church Army was a man who, through the death of his wife, took to drink, and thus lost his situation. He tried to commit suicide, and received one month in Wandsworth Gaol, his six children becoming chargeable to the rates. On leaving the gaol he immediately applied to the Church Army for admission into one of their labour homes. After ten weeks' steady work he obtained a situation, got together a small home, took all his children from the Union, and is now doing well.

A bill to be introduced next Session will propose the compulsory limitation of the number of licensed public-houses in a definite proportion to the population of each area, allowing for the entire extinction of licences in any district which, by the will of a sufficient majority of its ratepayers, vetoes the granting of licences. A popularly-elected licensing authority would have no power to grant new licences in excess of the statutory proportion, and after five years should effect such reduction, and refuse sufficient renewals until it had been effected. The licensing board should at any time within the first five years be empowered to accept surrender of existing licences by paying a bonus limited to the actual profits from the sale of liquors during the three preceding years.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1892.

* Donations should be sent by Cheque or P.O. Orders not by stamps.

* Will donors oblige by giving explicitly and fully the titles of the institutions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

* Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank"; this will effectually prevent loss.

WEST-END POVERTY!

THE COMMITTEE OF THE

LATYMER ROAD MISSION

Are under the necessity of making

AN URGENT APPEAL FOR HELP,

FUNDS being PRESSINGLY NEEDED to carry on the Work during the Autumn and Winter months.

THE MISSION (ONE OF THE OLDEST IN THE WEST-END) INCLUDES:—

Evening Shelters for Boys and Girls; Infant Day Nursery; Gospel Services; Sunday Schools; Temperance Meetings; Working Men's Recreation Club; Mothers' Meetings; Relief Fund for Sick and Destitute; and various other Agencies.

The Committee hope soon to OPEN the

SOUP KITCHEN

And to provide throughout the Winter

FREE DINNERS FOR HUNGRY CHILDREN.

Contributions will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Mr. CHARLES SMALLMAN, Latymer Road Mission, Blechynden Street, Notting Hill; by Messrs. MORGAN AND SCOTT, office of THE CHRISTIAN; or by (Miss) F. M. GLADSTONE, Hon. Secretary.

URGENT APPEAL.

The Committee of the LONDON SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIANITY AMONGST THE JEWS very earnestly appe to all friends of Christian work amongst the Jews f help at the present time, when the Financial Positio of the Society is causing no little anxiety.

An ardent desire to increase the usefulness of t Society and to extend its Missionary operation amongst the Jews at home and abroad, especially i London and Palestine, led to an augmented expend ture last year; and this, coupled with the fact tha the Income of the General Fund suffered great from the diversion of contributions to certain Speci Funds, caused a deficit of £8,190 5s. 7d. at the clos of the financial year on March 31 last.

There is every probability—nay, certainty—tha this adverse balance will be very materially increase by March 31 next, UNLESS one of two results can b immediately brought about—namely, either a seriou retrenchment in Expenditure, or a substantia advance in Income.

The Committee cannot for a moment think tha the supporters of the Society will consent to any ex tended retrenchment, which must of necessity lea to the abandonment of useful agencies of, and a pa tial withdrawal from, a work which they believe to b greatly blessed by Almighty God; and therefore the adopt the alternative of calling upon them to mak strenuous efforts, individually and collectively, t raise the Income of the Society to an amount suff cient to cover its Expenditure.

In order to bring about this desirable end. th Committee now make an appeal, with all the earnes ness in their power, on behalf of the GENERA FUND for—

Firstly, an increase in the number of subscriber and an increase in the amount of individual subscri tions;

Secondly, large donations from those who are ab to give out of their abundance;

Thirdly, an increased number of parishes givin Sermons and Meetings on behalf of the Society; an

Finally, they solicit the prayers of all God's peopl that the Missionary operations of the Society, main tained in their present scope and efficiency, ma redound to the glory of Almighty God, and a greate ingathering of his ancient people Israel into th Redeemer's fold.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING

FEMALE EDUCATION IN THE EAST

Treasurer:—Sir W. R. FARQUHAR, Bart.

This Society, established fifty-eight years ago, ha lived to see its work, once considered Utopian, no only recognised as possible, but regarded as a indispensable part of Gospel Missions.

It is the oldest Society established in the Wester Hemisphere for the spiritual benefit of women an girls in Asia and in Africa; the pioneer of a subsequent Zenana work among them, and the firs to send out a Missionary teacher for Hindu an Mahommedan Zenanas, and for Turkish Harems.

Its object is to lead all under its influence t "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the si of the world"; and to enable every Eastern woma and girl to read the Holy Scriptures for herself, i her own tongue; and it will not give Educatio without the Bible.

The sphere of the Society's work embraces Chin Japan, India, Persia, Africa, and the Levant, an it includes the Establishment of Orphanages Boarding, Day, and Infant Schools, Bible an Sewing Classes, Mothers' Meetings, Zenana Visiting and Medical Work.

This important work is now crippled by want of Funds. HELP is therefor URGENTLY NEEDED for its support an extension, and will be most gratefully received by the SECRETARY, Miss Webb 267, Vauxhall Bridge-road, London, S.W. or by the BANKERS, Messrs. Herries Farquhar, and Co., 16, St. James's-street, S.W.

Appeals.

CLAPTON AND HOXTON MISSION.—The workers in this Mission feel greatly the need for a home of rest and convalescent home for poor working women of east and north-east London. To enable us to open such a home of rest for the use of the poor, irrespective of sect or party, we appeal to any lady or gentleman having a suitable residence available, within reasonable distance from London, to grant us the free use of it for the purpose named. Communications should be made to Rev. Thomas Jackson, 41, Powerscroft-road, Clapton.

EVIAN LES BAINS.—Miss Wellington and her sisters, after a season of rest, are beginning their services at this place, but feel strongly the need for a lady helper. "Some of the people are very glad to see us back, and we are hoping for greater blessing than ever."

DR. LANGEN'S

COMFORT

A charming booklet—free to mothers.

It tells how and when to feed baby, is beautifully illustrated and baimful of valuable information for anxious mothers. The trouble is, nine-tenths of the parents do not know how and when to feed their little ones. It also tells about Dr. Langen's Sugar of Milk, a pure and delicately refined preparation, which, added to Baby's food in place of ordinary sugar, keeps the well baby strong and makes the sick baby well. Send a post card to-day to Burroughs Brothers, 66 Basinghall Street, London, E.C.

SUGAR OF MILK

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT IN THE WORLD.

"I WAS SAVED FROM AN EARLY GRAVE."

So writes a grateful Patient to

MR. C. T. CONGREVE,

relative to his case of

CONSUMPTION

"YOUR MEDICINE IS PRICELESS"

FOR THE TREATMENT OF CONSUMPTION & ALL CHEST DISEASES,

AND

RESULTS OF INFLUENZA.

Read Mr. CONGREVE'S Book "ON CONSUMPTION, Etc.," which may be had, post free, for ONE SHILLING, from the Author, Coombe Lodge, Peckham, London, S.E.; or may be ordered of any Bookseller.

NOTE.—CONSULTATIONS FREE at Coombe Lodge, Peckham, on TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings only. No charge except the usual charge for three weeks or six weeks' supply of medicine. All patients should read the Book first.

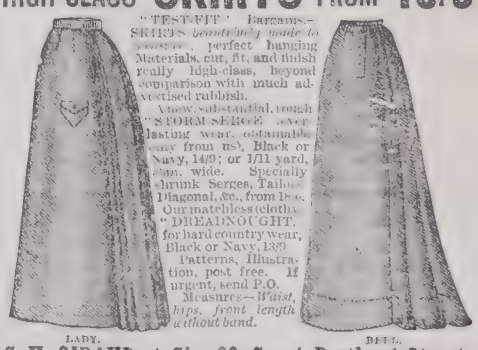
Mr. Congreve is always willing to meet the cases of those whose circumstances are such as to need a reduction.

THE FORTY-FIRST SERIES OF CASES.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CASES OF LUNG DISEASE FOLLOWING INFLUENZA, AT BALLINAMALLARD, CO. FERMANAGH, IRELAND.

MRS. JOHN CAMPBELL, of the BAKERY, at the above place writing me in May last about the case hereafter mentioned, says:—"Some time ago you sent me medicine for one of the young men here named JAMES HALL, who, by God's help, recovered under your treatment. Will you please send me medicine at reduced price for WILLIAM CROZIER? I fear his case is a bad one.



"He had a very bad turn of influenza in the spring. Some of his relations have died of Consumption. He is now confined to bed. Cough very severe, acute pains in the side, dark expectoration, oppressed breathing, palpitations, general loss of flesh and strength."

A month after this Mrs. Campbell writes:—"Will you kindly send medicine for Crozier? He is much better, and would have died but for that you sent."

I heard from her in July. She says:—"Crozier has got on so well, he has been able to be at his work every day. I can truly say there is no medicine to beat yours. It would save many a precious life if persevered with according to your instructions."

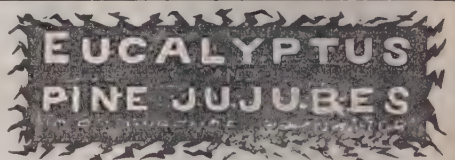
A Book—Free.

This book opens up to you in a simple yet graphic manner the mysterious workings of nature in your own stomach.



You would not believe what delicate mechanism, what clock-like precision, what faultless processes are secretly and quietly in constant operation; now all these are set in motion by a bit of food entering the stomach.

Studying these things teaches us what to eat, what to avoid, and how to promote health.

Those who suffer from weak stomachs or any form of dyspepsia should certainly read it.

Please send your address, mentioning THE CHRISTIAN, to Guy's Tonic Company, 4, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

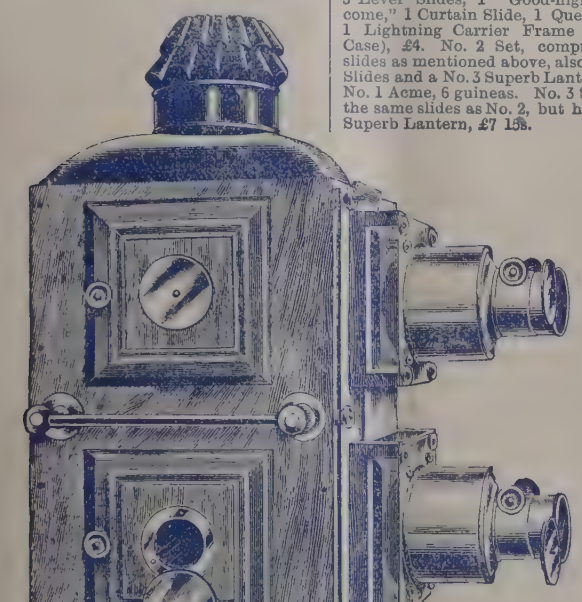
MAGIC LANTERNS AND SLIDES

LARGEST STOCK IN LONDON.

GRAND ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, 90 pages, free 3d.; larger ditto, 300 pages, 1s. From the smallest Lantern and the smallest Slide up to the largest. Wholesale Manufacturers. Trade supplied.

THE ACME LANTERN.—Thoroughly recommended as a good Family Lantern. Strongly made, well finished, will give a picture on the screen 12 feet in diameter. Will burn paraffin or any kind of mineral oil. Each lantern is thoroughly well made of stout japanned tin, with dome-shaped top, telescopic chimney, spring slide-holder, japanned sliding-tube, with brass O.G., fitted with a powerful 3-wick lamp (1½-inch wicks). Four-inch piano-convex compound condenser, in brass cell, and double combination achromatic front lens, in brass nozzle, with rack and pinion adjustment, and packed in black box, with handle complete. Lecturers requiring a cheap, reliable instrument cannot do better than purchase one of these. Please notice this lantern is fitted with side door to open, also with flash-cap to nozzle, which cheaper lanterns of other makers have not, but which is absolutely necessary in case of emergency. Over 500 of these lanterns were sold last season. Price £1 12s.

The same lantern with lamp having 2-in. wicks .. .. £1 14s.
" 4-wick lamp, with 1¼-in. wick £1 14s.
" 4-wick " 2¼-in. " £1 16s.
" 4 and extra large back lenses to the back combination .. £1 18s.

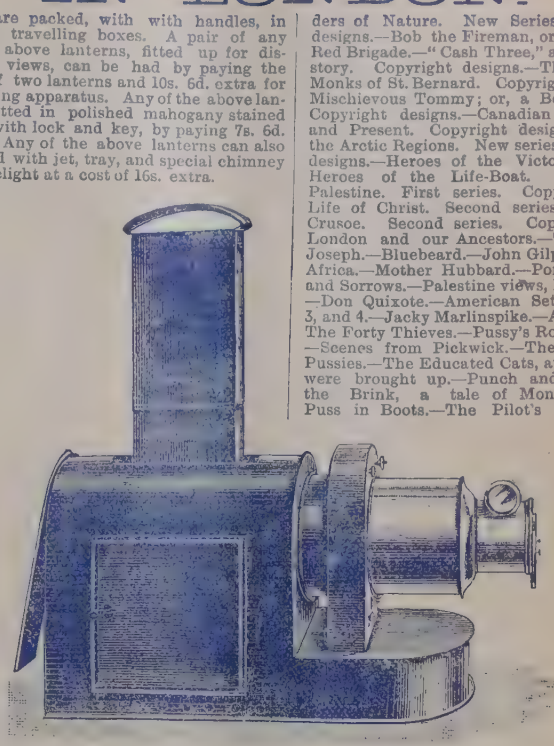


Any of the above lanterns can be had fitted up for limelight without alteration, and will then give a 25-ft. picture. Price for fitting with limelight tray, chimney, and jet, 16s. extra. Dissolving View Lanterns: Any of these lanterns can be had fitted up as dissolving view lanterns by paying the price of two lanterns, with 10s. 6d. extra for dissolving apparatus.

THE ADVANCE RUSSIAN IRON LANTERNS. NEW THIS SEASON. These lanterns are of very superior finish throughout; they are elegant in appearance and at the same time strongly made, and will bear a lot of knocking about. They have embodied in them all the latest improvements up to date, and are fitted with the improved circle-shape 4-wick mineral oil lamps, having 2-inch wicks, giving a far better light than any other lantern at the same price in the market; fitted with brass sliding tubes, 4-in. piano-convex compound condensers, double combination portrait front, with extra large lenses to the back combination, rack and pinion adjustment; each lantern in black travelling-case, with handle. Price 60s.

THE ECLIPSE LANTERNS. These are similar in appearance to the Acme, but are fitted with sliding brass tubes to the front, giving a much better appearance, and also with brass and coloured glass sight-hole in the door, with 3-wick lamp in box, complete, 42s.

THE LECTURER'S MAGIC LANTERN AND SLIDES. Without doubt the greatest bargain ever offered to the public. Especially suitable for Village Parishes, Schoolmasters, Sunday Schools, Temperance Workers, &c.



No. 1 Set comprises one Acme Lantern No. 1, 6 dozen slides (6 sets) selected from any of three-and-a-quarter by three-and-a-quarter Lithographic Lantern Slides. 12 Comic Slipping Slides, selected from any of the Lithographic Slipping Slides, and also the following, the selection of subjects of which must be left to us: 48 Pictures on long slides. 3 Lever Slides, 1 "Good-night," 1 "Welcome," 1 Curtain Slide, 1 Queen Slide, and 1 Lightning Carrier Frame (complete in Case), £4. No. 2 Set, comprising all the slides as mentioned above, also 3 Rackwork Slides and a No. 3 Superb Lantern instead of No. 1 Acme, 6 guineas. No. 3 Set comprises the same slides as No. 2, but having a No. 1 Superb Lantern, £7 15s.

TRIPLE LANTERNS, from Ten Guineas upwards.

THE SUPERB MAHOGANY MOULDED LANTERN.—No. 1, with beautiful moulded body of polished mahogany, moulded foot, panelled side door to open, brass sighthole, japanned top, solid brass front, brass sliding tubes, superior double combination front lenses, with extra large back lenses, fitted on brass nozzle with double pinion flash cap, 4-inch plano-convex compound condensers, mounted in brass cell, 4-wick (2-inch wicks) lamp of best quality; the whole fitted in travelling case complete. A lantern that can be thoroughly recommended and is certain to give every possible satisfaction. Price £5.

No. 2.—The same style throughout, but with tin front instead of brass (still having brass sliding tubes), single pinion to front, and 3-wick lamp, £4. No. 3.—The same style throughout, but with japanned front and japanned sliding tubes, 3-wick lamp and single pinion, £3 10s. No. 4.—The same as No. 3, but having a plain polished mahogany body (not moulded), and without sighthole at side, having brass sliding tubes, and 4-wick lamp, £3. No. 5.—Same description as No. 4, but with japanned sliding tubes, and 3-wick lamp, £2 15s. All the above lanterns are packed, with with handles, in stained travelling boxes. A pair of any of the above lanterns, fitted up for dissolving views, can be had by paying the price of two lanterns and 10s. 6d. extra for dissolving apparatus. Any of the above lanterns fitted in polished mahogany stained cases, with lock and key, by paying 7s. 6d. extra. Any of the above lanterns can also be fitted with jet, tray, and special chimney for limelight at a cost of 16s. extra.

THE CLIMAX BIUNIAL LANTERNS.—Solid, substantial, sound, and satisfactory. No. 1.—Superior Biunial Lantern, with polished mahogany moulded body, panelled doors each side, moulded foot, brass carrying handles, brass sighthole, solid brass front, with rolling curtain effect, brass sliding fronts, extra large and massive, best quality double combination fronts, with double pinion sliding flashes, and grooves for tinted glasses, 4in. plano-convex compound condensers in brass cells, thoroughly tested and warranted. In case, with lock and key, £9 9s. No. 2.—The same description, but having the ordinary good quality lenses, same as supplied to No. 1. Superb Lanterns and without groove for tinted glasses, £8 8s. No. 3.—The same description as No. 2, but having japanned front, and without rolling curtain, but still having brass rackwork front, £6 6s. No. 4.—Same description as No. 3, but having plain polished (not moulded) body and ordinary (not panelled) doors; a wonderful lantern for the money, £5 10s. Any of the above lanterns fitted with a pair of blow-through, safety, limelight jets, with cog-wheel lime adjusters, and with a star dissolver, for 37s. 6d. extra. Any of above lanterns fitted with polished mahogany stained case for 10s. 6d. extra.

COLOURED LITHOGRAPHIC SLIDES, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED.—Full size 3¼ by 3¼, 12 slides to each set. The nearest approach to Coloured Photographic Slides of anything yet made, and actually mistaken by many persons for such, give a splendidly clear picture, and as now manufactured and finished by an improved process, bring them up to the highest standard of excellence. Over 50,000 dozen of these slides were sold last season.

On receipt of this Advertisement, accompanied by Postal Order for 6/- or 74 stamps, we will forward DIRECT FROM OUR LOOMS to your address one of our 7s. genuine SEAMLESS WOVEN REVERSIBLE CARPETS, suitable for Drawing-room, Dining-room, Bedroom, &c., handsomely bordered, and woven in thirty different patterns and art colourings to suit all requirements and LARGE ENOUGH TO COVER ANY ORDINARY-SIZED ROOM. These Carpets are manufactured from a material equal in wear to wool, and are undoubtedly the cheapest in the world.

With every Carpet we shall ABSOLUTELY GIVE AWAY a very handsome RUG to match, or we will send TWO CARPETS and TWO RUGS for 10/6. Money willingly returned if not approved.

The Queen says: "Decidedly stouter and handsomer than any of the kind, the price being the astounding part of the matter." Schoolmistress: "For style, durability, and cheapness, they cannot be beaten." Penny Illustrated Paper: "Manufactured in every variety of colour, and is one of the most surprising bargains I have seen." Church Bells: "Truly wonderful value."

Thousands of Testimonials similar to the following and Repeat Orders have been received from our Customers:

"166 Crown Street, Aberdeen.
"Gentlemen,—The two Carpets and Rugs to match you sent us two years ago, have given every satisfaction, and are still in use.—Yours faithfully,
"ALEX. MALCOLM."

"1 Tyme View Villas, St. Helens, Isle of Wight.
"Lady Ida Lowe begs to inform the British Carpet Co. that she is so much pleased with the two Carpets and two Rugs they sent her a week ago, that she begs them to send her, to the above address, two more similar Carpets and Rugs."

This offer is made to the Readers of this paper only, and may not be repeated. All Orders despatched same day as received. Cheques and Postal Orders to be crossed "Union Bank," and made payable to J. HARGREAVES, Secretary. (Established 1872.) Address—The

THE PRINCE OF PREACHERS:

A Sketch,
A Portraiture,
and
A Tribute.

WITH LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT.

By Rev. JAMES DOUGLAS, M.A.

C. H. Spurgeon

SOME REVIEWS OF THIS NEW LIFE OF MR. SPURGEON.

The Rev. THOMAS SPURGEON says of this book:—

"I have been happily conscious that the book is not a mere narration of oft-told facts (with some fiction) and worn-out anecdotes. The 'Sketch' is good; the 'Portraiture' is better; the 'Tribute' is best of all. Right glad am I that Mr. Douglas has succeeded so eminently in his difficult but congenial task."

From "The Sword and Trowel":—

"Since the 'Prince of Preachers' has been promoted to glory, many tributes of love and esteem have been rendered to his memory; but the one before us far excels all others that we have seen at present. Mr. Douglas knew Mr. Spurgeon, loved him, reverenced him, and fought by his side in his great battle for the faith; it was meet that he should sketch his portrait, and he has done it perfectly. We could scarcely wish to have a word altered from the first page to the last."

From "The Rock":—

"The information is original, the author having exceptional opportunities of 'a personal and private' nature of knowing Mr. Spurgeon. Mr. Douglas has in this memoir given some interesting matters. We have no doubt the book will command a wide popularity."

From "The King's Own":—

"It is far and away the very best presentation of Mr. Spurgeon that has yet appeared. This book should become THE gift book of the season from all Spurgeon-lovers to their friends."

From "Word and Work":—

"In its own way it is quite unique, as it deals with Mr. Spurgeon not from the outside, but is a keen, loving, sympathetic analysis and exposition of the powers, purposes, and achievements of the great modern apostle."

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL.

TESTIMONIALS.

COLDS.

THE REV. CANON FLEMING, B.D., writes from The Residence, York, September 7, 1892:—"Canon Fleming has pleasure in stating that he has used the Carbolic Smoke Ball with great success. Its use not only checked the progress of a heavy cold in its earlier stages, and removed it, but has prevented it from going down into the chest, and preserved his voice for his public duties."

THE REV. H. BAUGH, Kempston Vicarage, Bedford, writes:—"I have found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial, both for the voice and preventing colds. I have recommended it to many friends. Kindly re-fill my Smoke Ball, and return it by first post."

CATARRH.

THE REV. DR. LUNN writes from 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W., November 16, 1891:—"I have much pleasure in tesifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

THE REV. T. ROGERS writes from Llanrindod Wells, Radnorshire, May 24, 1892:—"Your Carbolic Smoke Ball is a most efficacious remedy, It has completely cured me of a dry nasal catarrh of very long standing."

ASTHMA.

CHARLES MOORE, ESQ., writes from Sunnyside, Birchington, Westgate-on-Sea, Oct. 9, 1891:—"Your Carbolic Smoke Ball has afforded immense relief to my wife, who has suffered severely from Bronchial Asthma. When I bought the Ball she was unusually bad, and it acted like magic."

MISS HUDDLESTON writes from Walmersley House, near Bury, Lancashire, Oct. 15, 1891:—"Miss Huddleston is finding the Carbolic Smoke Ball a great blessing for Asthma. She is very glad to say it is doing her a great deal of good when hope had almost gone."

BRONCHITIS.

DR. H. G. DARLING, M.D., Linden Cottage, Shepherd's Well, Kent, writes April 18, 1892:—"I had used the Carbolic Smoke Ball only a few times when it gave me immediate relief, although I am eighty-three years of age, and have suffered more than one-third of that time from Bronchitis complicated with Asthma."

MRS. MACDONALD writes from Milland, Liphook, Hants, Jan. 2, 1891:—"The Carbolic Smoke Ball has given me the greatest possible satisfaction, and since using it for the last eighteen months I have been FREE FROM BRONCHITIS, to which I was a constant martyr."

INFLUENZA.

LADY BAKER writes from Blandford, Jan. 19, 1892, when ordering another Smoke Ball:—"I and the children have hitherto escaped Influenza, though in the thick of it, owing entirely, I believe, to the good effects of the Carbolic Smoke Ball. I am recommending it to everyone."

THE MARCHIONESS DE SAIN writes from Padworth House, Reading:—"The Marchioness de Sain has daily used the Smoke Ball since the commencement of the epidemic of Influenza, and has not taken the Influenza, although surrounded by those suffering from it."

THE VOICE.

MME. ADELINA PATTI writes from Craig-y-Nos Castle, July 10, 1891:—"Mme. Patti has found the Carbolic Smoke Ball very beneficial indeed."

DR. JAMES CLARK writes from Laurel Bank, Headingley, Leeds, Oct. 4, 1892:—"Professor Clark depends greatly on the Carbolic Smoke Ball when he is lecturing, and, as he has commenced the present session with a bad cold, he will be glad to have his Ball re-filled, and returned as soon as possible."

C. J. BISHENDEN, ESQ., writes from Portland-place, W., Jan. 18, 1892:—"The Carbolic Smoke Ball does all that is claimed for it. Every singer and speaker should have one, as it is simply invaluable."

DEAFNESS.

J. HARGRAVES, ESQ., of Manchester, writes, Au 28, 1891:—"Since using the Carbolic Smoke Ball can hear my watch tick three or four inches awa which I have not done for months."

MRS. KINGSLEY writes from the High Hous Woking Village, May 4, 1892:—"I am most than ful to be able to say that my hearing still continu to improve, so I am anxious not to miss using th Carbolic Smoke Ball even for a day. The Catarr has entirely disappeared."

SORE THROAT.

THE REV. H. S. VLAKO TURNER writes fro Potter Hamworth, near Lincoln, Nov. 25, 1891: "I have derived very great benefit already from th use of the Carbolic Smoke Ball for my throat."

THE REV. DR. HITCHENS writes from 9 Gloucester-street, Belgravia, S.W., Jan. 1, 1891: "Your Carbolic Smoke Ball relieved the head an throat to a large extent."

NEURALGIA.

MRS. WRIGLEY writes from New Wandsworth S.W., March 12, 1892:—"The Carbolic Smoke Ba has entirely removed the terribly acute neuralg headaches from which I have suffered for years. am much stronger in my throat and health general since using the Ball."

MRS. ARTHUR WEGUELIN writes from 25, Charle street, W.:—"She has found the Carbolic Smok Ball a most excellent remedy against, and cure fo Colds and Neuralgia."

CHILDREN.

LADY MOSTYN writes from Caishalton, Ca Crescent, Torquay:—"She finds the Carbolic Smok Ball a great acquisition in the nursery."

MRS. FRANKLIN writes from Thaxted, March 2 1892:—"She and the children have found the Carbol Ball a great boon, and she is convinced that it ha saved her many days of illness in the house, and considerable amount in doctor's charges."

SIR FREDERICK MILNER, BART, M.P., writes fro Nice:—"Lady Milner and my children have derive much benefit from the Carbolic Smoke Ball."

HOMES FOR AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND MEN AND WOMEN,

HANLEY ROAD, CROUCH HILL, LONDON, N.

FOUNDERS' JUBILEE MEMORIAL FUND FOR FREEING THE BRANCH HOMES FROM DEBT.

Dear Readers of THE CHRISTIAN,

Will you kindly help us this week to raise £78, that we may be able to claim £355, conditionally promised, to free these Homes from debt; the final meetings will be held at the Homes on Tuesday next, 8th inst. Afternoon: Conversazione; Evening: Thanksgiving Meeting. Your contribution, sympathy, and presence will greatly cheer us. We must raise the £78 to claim all promises and pay off the debt by the end of this year. The whole property is in trust for the benefit of the blind.—Yours in the Master's service,

HENRY AND ANN BRIGHT,
Founders and Hon. Superintendents.

GOLD PENS: MABIE, TODD & BARD'S

Manufacture, are 14 carat tempered gold, very handsome, and positively unaffected by any kind of ink. They are pointed with selected polished iridium. The "Encyclo. Brit." says: "Iridium is a nearly white metal of high specific gravity, it is almost indestructible, a beautifully polished surface can be obtained upon it." They will not penetrate the paper. Writer's cramp is unknown among users of Gold Pens. One will outwear 90 gross of steel pens. A choice is offered from 250 various shapes and points. They are a perfect revelation to those who have never used Gold Pens.

DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES has used one of Mabie, Todd & Co.'s Gold Pens since 1857, and is using the same one (his "old friend") to-day; it cost him only 9s. 6d., it would have cost him, in money alone, over £10 to have done the same work with steel pens.

"SWAN" FOUNTAIN PEN, 10/6, Broad, Medium, or Fine Point. Unrivalled and Incomparable.

The "Swan" is a Mabie, Todd & Co. Gold Pen joined to a rubber reservoir to hold any kind of ink, which it supplies to the writing point in a continuous flow. It will hold ink enough for two days' constant work, or a week of ordinary writing, and can be refilled with as little trouble as to wind a watch. With the cover over the gold nib it is carried in the pocket like a pencil, to be used anywhere. A purchaser may try a pen a few days, and, if the writing point does not suit the hand, exchange it for another without charge, or have the money returned. Illustrated Price List, of various sizes (with testimonials), will be sent gratis and post free. Address postal card to

"It will be our contention throughout our study of this remarkable life before us, that though Moses may have had commanding features of mind and body, and have been versed in all the learning of his time, yet the marvellous outcome of his life-work was not due to any of these qualities, but to the faith which knit his soul to God."—EXTRACT FROM CHAPTER I.

The Future Tenses of the Blessed Life. Uniform with the Devotional Series. Cloth boards, 1s.; Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

"If, by the constitution of our minds we must anticipate the future, then let us believe that it is radiant with his presence, filling each moment to its outermost rim. No day, whatever it takes, can deprive us of Him. Each day will utter to the next some speech of his love. All the days linked together and entwined with his present grace will make a golden chain of holy and blessed living."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we purpose giving a portrait and sketch of PROFESSOR AGAR BEET; these were announced for the present issue, but are withheld for a week to make room for the sketch of Mr. Searle, before his farewell meeting to-morrow.

It is pleasant to note that during Mr. Moody's visit to Dublin some of the leading daily newspapers in the Irish metropolis have given great prominence to the event; one, probably the most important, and with the largest circulation of the Dublin dailies, gives not only a description day by day of the services, but also a summary of the addresses. By this means Mr. Moody's words will reach thousands in Ireland who were not privileged to hear them spoken.

One of the most useful of the tent meetings at the last Mildmay Conference was one on "Winning Souls." Many valuable counsels and hints, experiences and testimonies, were given. It would prove instructive and helpful to many if those who have been used of God in this most important work, whether by preaching, by conversation, or by correspondence, would communicate through us to our readers, their successes and failures, their principles and methods, in dealing with souls, collectively or individually.

Our readers will be glad to know that Rev. Canon Girdlestone has consented to give three addresses on "Inspiration" in the Conference Hall, Mildmay Park, N. As the importance of sound teaching on this subject in these days cannot be over-estimated, Bible students would do well to avail themselves of this opportunity. The dates and subjects are:—

Nov. 10. Inspiration and Life.
„ 17. Inspiration and Revelation.
„ 24. Inspiration and Scripture.

As the meetings are to be held in the afternoon at half-past three, many engaged in the evening may be able to attend then.

Intercession for foreign missions should never be a charge on the home churches; and we gladly call attention to occasions when the duty is emphasized and the privilege pressed home. The committee of the Church Missionary Society has appointed Thursday, December 1, as a season for earnest supplication. Meetings will be held in the afternoon and evening (3 and 7), at Sion College on the Thames Embankment. The circular of invitation urges prayer for all missionary organizations, and specifies several topics suggested by the present position of affairs in connection with the C.M.S.

The movement for the secularisation of the Lord's Day is, strange to say, gathering active adherents among the Lord's servants. The announcement has been made that on Nov. 6 several ministers, belonging to various communions, will advocate from their pulpits the Monday opening of museums; and that on the afternoon of the same day certain noblemen and gentlemen of influence will throw their art collections open to the public. The day is to be called Museum Sunday. We rejoice, on the other hand, to believe that in all directions faithful men will, on the same day, take occasion to inculcate due regard for that day whereon, by right divine, the weary may rest, and, through the grace of Christ, the devout may worship God.

Many will read with sorrowing heart the accounts published of the wreck of the Roumania on the Portuguese coast. Of forty-six passengers only two, so far as is known, have escaped—the others, most of them ladies with children going out to join their husbands in India, have all perished. There were, besides, two young couples, married but a few weeks. Rev. J. E. Malkin, going out to reinforce the Telegu Mission, together with a fellow missionary's wife and child, and a daughter of Canon Burbidge, of Liverpool, are among those drowned. Of the sixteen Europeans in the crew not one has escaped. In this our island home we have too good reason to know that "there is sorrow on the sea;" yet none the less will many a sympathising heart be uplifted on behalf of those who now mourn dear ones so suddenly called from time to eternity.

Whatever there may be of political or ecclesiastical significance in the Luther festival, held at Wittenberg on Monday last, we sincerely hope that the proceedings augur well for Evangelical Protestantism on the Continent. The Castle Church, on the doors of which, three hundred and seventy-five years ago, Luther affixed his famous anti-Papal theses, has been restored, and the re-opening was the occasion of influential gatherings, and hopeful utterances from the mouths of exalted personages. The Emperor of Germany was attended by a large number of royal guests and illustrious visitors, and we trust that, while Luther's hymn was sung and his name held in honour, many experienced a rising of his noble spirit in their breasts, and an incoming into their souls of a greater measure of the power of Luther's God.

It is sadly true that we may preach Protestantism and forget the Gospel; but we trust that this celebration sprang from motives more deeply implanted, and will issue in important results. In the document relating to the consecration of the Castle Church, the Emperor says:—

> In evangelical community of faith we have called upon the Almighty and Gracious God in fervent prayer to preserve to our evangelical people the blessings of the Reformation, to increase in our land the fear of God, charity, and loyalty, to keep our German Fatherland in his gracious care, to crown all honourable endeavours and work, in all professions, with his blessing, and to grant us and all our Christian brethren, through Jesus Christ, a happy end in the certainty of a blissful resurrection.

In an address subsequently, His Majesty said:—

> But to us, the living, the new Church is to be not only a token of remembrance of bygone times, but it is, and is to remain, a serious admonition for the present and future. For it is to us the visible expression of the blessings which God has bestowed upon us, and daily renews, in the Evangelical Church. There is no coercion in matters of religion. Here only free conviction of the heart is decisive, and the perception of this fact is the blissful fruit of the Reformation. We Evangelicals attack nobody on account of his faith, but we abide by the faith of the Gospel till death. This is my confidence, my prayer, and my hope.

We hope and believe that these well-chosen words will be fruitful of good, and operate against Romish error and intrigue, not only in the Fatherland, but in our own and other countries.

The police persecution of the little Methodist church in Vienna, which has gone on for many years, appears at length to have reached a culminating point. The mission hall, built by Baroness Langenau for the work, having been closed by the police, and the minister being prohibited preaching in Vienna, the case was carried to the courts. The decision being adverse, a petition for recognition by the State was lodged with the authorities, but this also has been refused. We understand that both the Evangelical Alliance and the Wesleyan Missionary Committee are moving in the matter, but deem it unwise to make any public statement while communications are in progress. Many will pray for the faithful few in the Austrian capital, left without Gospel privileges and certainly suffering the inconvenience of coming under police suspicion.

We desire to direct the special attention of our readers to an article in the October number of REGIONS BEYOND (6d. S. W. Partridge and Co.), by Miss Lucy Guinness, on "Christendom's Drink Trade with Heathendom." It gives much cause for thankfulness in the action of the Brussels African Conference, which virtually "decided that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drink shall be prohibited over the whole of the vast interior of Africa." But it is one thing to legislate, and quite another thing to see that legislation is enforced. In this article it is asserted that at the present moment Europe and America are pouring a flood-tide of "fire-water" in at the open ports all down the coast of Africa.

In proof of the awful damage that is being done to the natives through this channel, a recent letter from Mr. Harvey, of the American Congo Mission, is given by Miss Guinness. He draws a most alarming picture of the state of matters, especially at Matadi, near the mouth of the Congo:—

> Wherever you go you see the natives engaged in the one pursuit of buying, selling, or drinking the trade gin.

Mr. Harvey says that the heavy duty imposed some time ago has been considerably reduced, and now business houses "are reaping a golden harvest at the expense of the ruined natives." In the face of such deplorable facts we are apt to yield to mental paralysis by reason of the difficult task of fighting the evil. But the responsibility is ours, as citizens of one of the chief Powers represented at the Brussels Conference, and also as Christians to whom God has committed the evangelising of the heathen. The first thing to be done is to make known the facts in all their blackness, and the wide diffusion of this article will accomplish that.

"The Holy Land" Exhibition at Brighton continues to draw a goodly number of visitors. This is the first attempt made in England, so far as we are aware, of any exhibition of such magnitude devoted exclusively to Palestine and Biblical subjects, and is, therefore, full of special interest. Besides the models and collection of curiosities representative of Eastern life, there is a picture gallery containing nearly two hundred subjects, many of them by first-rate artists, who have made Oriental customs their special study. Rev. James Neil is, from his long residence in Jerusalem, peculiarly fitted to undertake the interesting and instructive lectures which he gives, and we believe that Bible students cannot fail to gain light upon their reading from a visit to the Exhibition.

Bishop Ryle's Charge.

The Bishop of Liverpool is rightly regarded as a typical Evangelical Churchman. Cleaving consistently to the doctrines of the Reformation, he still cherishes an ardent devotion to the Church of England. Notwithstanding the recent "Lincoln judgment," which greatly grieves and alarms him, he counsels patience and moderation to his brethren who dissent from it. Recognising the wide divergence of parties within the fold of which he is one of the chief pastors, he is still content to pursue the even tenor of his way if allowed to proclaim in peace the gospel of grace.

But he does not fail to perceive the imminent and increasing difficulties of the position he occupies. This is plainly and pre-eminently apparent in his address on "The Present Crisis," delivered at the Liverpool Diocesan Conference on October 25.

While anxious for peace, he seeks "peace with honour," and not "peace at any price." The permission of Ritualistic practices within the Church has to him, as it must have to every intelligent onlooker, a distinctly doctrinal significance. In a leader on the Privy Council judgment, The Times said tersely and truly: "There is a sense of unreality in the effort to treat as neutral or colourless acts which we all know to be, in the view of a party in the Church, technical symbols and unequivocal doctrinal signs." There is a wide chasm between Evangelicals and Ritualists, which admits neither concord nor compromise. As Bishop Ryle puts it, "The plain truth is, that a Church in which two opposite views of such cardinal subjects as the Lord's Supper and sacerdotalism—the very keys of the great Romish controversy—are formally declared to be not illegal, is not a Church in which the clergy can work very cordially and comfortably together, and its thinking laymen will gradually separate into two camps."

Indeed, there are few who doubt that, were it not for the twofold clasp of Establishment and Endowment, the Church of England would long ere the present hour have split asunder into three or more sects. Perhaps it is also held together somewhat loosely by what has in modern times been called the "historic episcopate." Why a disciple of the Reformation should attach any importance to an apostolic succession vitiated by centuries of Romanism passes our comprehension. Orders transmitted through Rome brand their possessor schismatic as long as he remains outside her pale; unless he has the unblushing effrontery to maintain, as we have read in an Anglican catechism, that "in the sixteenth century the Church of Rome seceded from the Church of England."

In his address, however, the Bishop of Liverpool soon passes from these more ecclesiastical questions to a subject which concerns all the Churches of Christ. Referring to what is usually known as "The Higher Criticism of the Old Testament Scriptures," he asserts with great force and fervour the immense improbability of its present conclusions. Abjuring dogmatism in this sphere, he is content, with Bishop Butler, to accept probability as his guide. At the present time this attitude is no less fair than reasonable. No one is concerned to silence just criticism; we only claim the right to criticise it in our turn. The trend of modern discoveries is altogether in favour of the historical belief as to the inspiration and composition of the Old Testament universally accepted by Jews and Christians up to the middle of last century. There is good reason for hoping that on a day not very far distant the spade of the excavator will unearth proof sufficient to convict some rash critics of wild and wilful obscurantism.

Without presuming, however, to predict what the future may bring, Bishop Ryle founds an argument on the past. As brave men lived before Agamemnon, so he reminds us there were learned men, and even profound Hebraists, before Kuenen and Wellhausen. He runs over a list of scholars who were close students of the Old Testament, and who differed widely on many subjects, and adds:—

> But on one point they were entirely agreed. Not one of them ever maintained that the Pentateuch was not written by Moses and Moses alone. This is a discovery that was made 150 years ago! In short, we are asked to believe that the students of the last century and a-half have found out things which were hidden to the intellectual giants of the previous 1700 years! This is my first difficulty, and I cannot get over it. It seems to me to contain an enormous improbability.

Nor can it be claimed on any sufficient ground that the so-called "higher critics" far out-distance other scholars past and present in their knowledge of Hebrew. Not very long ago anyone who ventured to call in question their bold assertions was at once charged with ignorance of that ancient language. Now this is rarely done, for professors of Hebrew, both in Europe and America, have bravely taken the field against them. The fact is, the whole fabric of this criticism is reared on conjecture more or less plausible. Guesses at the solution of difficulties mainly self-made change from year to year. Hitherto they have had no finality. A simple enumeration of the transformation scenes of the last half-century would be one of the most successful exposures of their hollowness and imposture.

Another improbability Bishop Ryle urges against these critical theories is one well able to bear frequent repetition. The testimony of our Lord, given so frequently to the books of the Old Testament, is altogether opposed to them. Whatever opinions we may hold as to the human nature He assumed, all are agreed in confessing the infinite knowledge possessed by the Divine nature which He never renounced. As the Bishop of Liverpool reminds us, the second of the Thirty-nine Articles asserts "the Godhead and manhood were joined together, never to be divided." In the one Person there are two natures. "In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." "In Him are hid all treasures of wisdom and knowledge. One word from Him is of more weight than all the reasonings of men. His testimony is clear and conclusive. The attempts made by the critics to explain away our Lord's explicit statements, if admitted to be conclusive, require us to believe the utmost improbabilities.

LORD MAYOR'S DAY.—Mr. F. N. Charrington writes from the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, E.:—"For five years we have arranged for a supper and entertainment for the poor of the East-end on November 9, so that while the great banquet is in progress at the Guildhall the very poor may not be forgotten. This year the Lord Mayor-elect has very kindly given us a cheque for £50. We still require nearly £100 to entertain our full complement of 3000 persons. This cheerful and substantial meal will be all the more acceptable at this time in consequence of the serious distress prevailing at the East-end."

The Russian Stundists.

A friend writes to us as follows:—Th enclosed is a translation of a letter I hav received. The law against Stundists is bein carried out in a new way. They will not i future be exiled, but they will be made t work like convicts for the benefit of the community. Men, women, and children ar everyday taken to labour at drains, roads, an streets, and at night the men are made nigh watchmen. Their property is confiscated they are not allowed to buy or sell, nor to wor for their own benefit. Under cover of thi new order of things, the police, with the elder of the villages, commit the most outrageou cruelties on them, their wives and children.

The letter is signed by four of the men: i publishing it will be better to omit the name Those who live in a land of light and liberty are surely in duty bound to take some steps t alleviate the sufferings of these brethren, wh for the Gospel's sake are persecuted and tor mented. May I ask you to make a stron appeal for sympathy, and open the questio whether a deputation from Christian Englan should not be sent to those who have th power in Russia.

TRANSLATION.

"Beloved brethren, we will tell you wha is done here: The Wolust Elder, with a police man and several other men, in a state o intoxication, torment and illtreat us. Ever day we are taken, together with wive and children, to work in our own and in tw neighbouring villages, and every night we me have to keep watch in the village. Durin our absence the elders of the village go lat at night into our houses to torment our wive and children in the most brutal manner, an when they come out from them they illtrea us in a similar way.

"On the night of September 23 the entered the room of my wife and tormente her in the most brutal way, so that it is impos sible to describe, tearing off her headdres and committing all manner of cruelties. The they forced her to make the sign of the cross threatening her with further brutalities. The so brutally illtreated her that she was scarcel alive when they left her. Everything in ou dwelling was broken and destroyed, and ou rooms are now without windows.

"Dear brethren, we beseech you with tear do something. Send a petition to Government We cannot send one, as we are closely watche day and night. Do something very speedily we are torn to pieces. Oh, pray for us, tha our Heavenly Father may have mercy an protect us in his great compassion."

The following telegram, dated Thursday last, i from the Odessa correspondent of The Dail Chronicle: — "Shocking accounts continue t reach me from the district of Skvira, in the Govern ment of Kief, as to the persecutions inflicted on th Stundists there. The chief of the district (Ispravnik seems determined to force the schismatics to rejoi the Orthodox Church, and has given orders to th village elders and local commissaries of polic to take all needful measures to bring about thei conversion. These minor officials thereupon hav commenced inflicting on their victims the mos abominable treatment. The heads of Protestan families are kept away all day long from their home at communal work, and at night are set on duty a night watchmen. Sentinels are placed over them to prevent their return home. Some of them wh remonstrated had their ears twisted. In one villag the elder and the police commissary assembled a crowd of peasants, and at dead of night they entere the huts of the Stundists, frightening the children and inflicting the vilest treatment on the women All the books found in Stundist houses have bee confiscated."

Joshua and His Life-Work.

By REV. F. B. MEYER, B.A.,
CHRIST CHURCH, WESTMINSTER BRIDGE ROAD.

THE order of the books of the Old Testament is due to something more than human selection, or even the period of their composition. The same Spirit that originally inspired them has manifestly controlled their position in the sacred Book. Genesis begins with God, and leads us back to the origin of that Divine grace which strives against human sin, loves man before ever there is aught in man to warrant it, and binds itself by a covenant, "ordered in all things and sure." Exodus tells the story of Redemption; Leviticus of Worship; Numbers of our position in the ordered ranks of God's army; Deuteronomy of that more spiritual conception of the law of God which is produced by love and faith; and the book of Joshua is an indispensable link in this chain of symbolical teaching which traces the history of the soul through the disorder of judges to the royalty of the kings, and onwards to the hallelujahs of the Psalms and the prophetic visions of the following books.

There is then a special inner meaning in the Book of Joshua which cannot be exhausted when we have learnt from it the story of the extermination of the Canaanites, of the partition and settlement of Canaan, and of the noble simplicity and military exploits of Joshua. It is impossible to suppose that so much space should have been given to the record of these, unless there had been some deep and holy purpose similar to that which has given such minute directions for Levitical sacrifice, each of which contained some deep spiritual truth required for the growth of holy souls throughout the ages. Of the Book of Joshua, as of the Paschal Lamb and the Passage of the Red Sea, it may be said "all these things happened unto them for ensamples."

The clue to this inner meaning is given by the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews, the third and fourth chapters of which are all important in determining the drift of our interpretation; and it is to the clearer appreciation of the true meaning of these chapters that we must attribute the increasing interest with which the Church of God turns to this record of the simple-minded, transparent, humble, and strong soldier, the Miles Standish of the Exodus. So long as the river Jordan stood for physical death and Canaan for Heaven, there seemed to be no satisfactory interpretation for many items which are narrated with significant minuteness, ere the land could be entered; and there was some anomaly in associating fighting with the calm restfulness of the New Jerusalem.

A careful study of the chapters referred to shows us that though Canaan was not the rest of God, because He spoke of rest through an unknown Temple singer, four hundred years after Canaan was occupied; yet it was a vivid type of it. We are to fear lest we "should seem to come short" of the rest, even as they whose carcases fell in the wilderness came short of the Land of Promise. "We which have believed do enter into that rest." Our Lord Jesus has entered into his rest, as God did into his, and therefore has received the ideal Land of Canaan, as the representative of his followers to whom He allots it as they believe. We are summoned to give diligence to enter into that rest, that 'no man fall after the same example of disobedience." All of these references go to establish the spiritual significance of this wonderful story, which tells of that satisfaction of rest, wealth, and victory which may be enjoyed by those who have learned the secret things which God hath prepared for them which love Him, but which are revealed by his Spirit. Oh, that that Spirit may use these papers for the purpose of leading many of God's redeemed ones from the wilderness life into that rest. For that we have been redeemed; for that we have passed through the Red Sea; to convince us of our need of that we have been permitted to hunger and thirst in the desert waste; and our possession of that will alone convince the world that the Lord Jesus is the Christ of God. We were indeed brought out that we might be brought in, redeemed that we might be a purchased possession, justified that we might be sanctified and glorified.

There is another book in the New Testament in deep spiritual accord with the story told in the Book of Joshua, viz., the Epistle to the Ephesians, which rises above all its kin, as the soaring cathedral tower rises above the maze of architecture beneath, on which it rests indeed, but which it crowns, and carries within its heart bells that ring out the wedding peal. Already in that epistle we can detect notes which are to announce the consummation of creation in the marriage of the Lamb. The Book of Joshua is to the Old Testament what the Epistle to the Ephesians is to the New.

The characteristic word of the Ephesians is the heavenlies (i. 3, 20; ii. 6; iii. 10; vi. 12). Of course it does not stand for heaven, but for that spiritual experience of oneness with the risen Saviour in his resurrection and exaltation which is the privilege of all the saints, to which, indeed, they have been called, and which is theirs in Him. It may help us to a better comprehension of this analogy if we trace it in the following five particulars.

I. EACH WAS THE DESTINED GOAL TO WHICH GOD'S PURPOSE LED HIS PEOPLE.—When in answer to the agony of his people's cry, and in remembrance of his covenant, the Lord appeared to Moses at the burning bush, in the first sentence He spoke He pledged Himself, not only to deliver his people out of the land of the Egyptians, but to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey. Their emancipation from the thrall of Pharaoh was only preparatory to their settlement in the Land of Promise.

Some vision of this seems to have shone like a star before the march of the ransomed hosts, and on the shores of the Red Sea their triumphant strains passed from the destruction of their foes to the mountain of God's inheritance, whither He would bring them in and plant them.

"The place, O Lord, which Thou hast made for Thee to dwell in."

"The sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established."

The plagues of Egypt that struck the fetters from the wrists of an enslaved nation, the institution of the Passover and shedding of blood, the passage of the Red Sea and destruction of the hosts of Egypt—all must have been abortive had they not led on to, and been consummated in, the settlement of Israel in Canaan. Nor otherwise could the divine promise to Abraham have been fulfilled—"Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward, and eastward and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever."

Similarly, though so many of the Lord's redeemed ones seem ignorant of it, all the wonderful facts that lie behind the history of the Church were intended to clear the ground, to level the hills and fill up the vales, so as to prepare for the glad entrance of all who believe into the blessed life, into an experience like that which was enjoyed by the Master Himself during his earthly ministry, joy that must for ever be a song without words, peace that passeth understanding, love that passeth knowledge.

It is remarkable how constantly the Epistles point to this experience. The foundations of justification are massively and deeply laid that they may carry the edifice of sanctification and blessedness. The apostles do not write their glowing paragraphs for the conversion of the world or the awakening of the dead, but for the perfecting of the saints and the unfolding of the true conditions of holiness and victory and power.

Let me here solemnly ask my readers if they have realised those conditions, and have entered on those privileges? Are you still in the wilderness, or have you entered the Land of Promise? Do you occupy cities you never built, eat of vineyards and olive-yards you never planted, drink of cisterns filled from the everlasting hills which you never hewed, and inhabit houses full of all good things which you never stored? Do you dwell in a land of corn and wine, while the heavens drop dew? Do you, as the beloved of the Lord, dwell between his shoulders? Do you tread down your enemies beneath shoes of iron or brass? Do you make your dwelling-place in the eternal God, whilst underneath are his everlasting arms? Test yourself by the promises made to Israel, which are types and shadows of eternal realities, and if they do not foreshadow facts in your spiritual experience, understand that you frustrate the purpose of God in your redemption. Leave those things which are behind to reach forth to the goodly land beyond the Jordan, apprehending that for which you were apprehended of Christ Jesus.

II. EACH WAS IMPOSSIBLE BY THE MEANS OF LAW.—"Now it came to pass after the death of Moses, the servant of the Lord, that the Lord spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying, Moses my servant is dead; now therefore, arise, go over this Jordan." "The law came by Moses," and in a very real sense found in him its representative. So it was befitting that, when he died, his eye should not be dim, nor his natural force abated. The law of God can never become decrepit or show signs of weakness and decay. At the end of uncounted ages, it is as strong and fresh and vigorous as that divine nature of which it is the expression.

But the law of God can never bring the soul of man into the land of promise, not because of any defect in it, but because of human infirmity and sin. In that marvellous piece of self-analysis given us in the epistle to the Romans, the Apostle repeatedly affirms that the law was holy, and righteous, and good; he insisted that he delighted in it after the inward man, but he tells us that he finds another law in his members, warring against the law of his mind, and bringing him into captivity. It is the presence of this evil law in our members which makes obedience to the law of God impossible, filling us with disappointment and unrest, ceaseless striving and perpetual failure. We must, therefore, leave the law as an outward rule of life behind us in that lonely valley over against Bethpeor, that the Divine Joshua may lead us into the land of promise.

Not by vows, or resolutions, or covenants of consecration, signed by blood fresh-drawn from the veins; not by external rites or by ascetic abstinence from good and healthy things; not by days of fasting and nights of prayer; not even by obedience to the voice of conscience or the inner light, though attention to these is of prime importance—by none of these shall we enter the land of blessedness. They all become forms of legalism, when practised with a view of obtaining the full rest and victory of Christian experience. Valuable many of them unquestionably are, when the river is crossed, and the land is entered; but they will not of themselves unlock its gates or roll back its guardian river. Just as the forgiveness of sins and eternal life are the free gift of God's grace, to be received by faith, though their full enjoyment is determined by obedience and self-denial, so the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ is bestowed on those only, who in the absence of all merit and effort, receive it with the open and empty hands of the heart. We do not work up to our rest day, as the Jews did, but down from it.

III. EACH WAS ENTRUSTED TO A REPRESENTATIVE.—It is a remarkable characteristic of the story of Joshua that God repeatedly addresses him for the people, and bestows on him what was destined for them. "Go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people." "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee." "See I have given into thine hand Jericho and the king thereof." And it was for him to apportion it. "Thou shalt cause this people to inherit the land which I sware unto their fathers to give them." All was put into the hands of Joshua, as the trustee of Israel, for him to administer as each of the tribes came near to appropriate it from his hands.

And in perfect keeping with this, we find it stated, at the close of the seven years' war, that "Joshua took the whole land, according to all that the Lord spake unto Moses, and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel, according to their divisions by their tribes" (Joshua xi. 23).

How perfectly is this type fulfilled in our blessed Lord. To Him as the trustee and representative of his people has all spiritual blessing been given, and He holds it for us to claim. All power is given to Him in Heaven and on Earth that He might give us authority over all the power of the enemy. The Father has given Him to have life in Himself that He might give us life more abundantly. He is full of grace and truth, that out of his fulness we might all receive. He received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost that He might pour Him forth in Pentecostal fulness. He hath received of the Father honour and glory that we might be with Him where He is.

Let us diligently comprehend all the fulness of our inheritance in Jesus, and then let us go forward to apprehend it by faith. Whatever He has, he has in trust for us. Let us claim it. Let us receive the abundance of his grace that we may reign in this life through the one man. Let us believe that we receive, and live in the power of what we may not feel, but know we have, so acting faith.

IV. Each was missed by many. Their carcases fell in the wilderness, so that the generation who cried "Would God that we had died in the wilderness!" did in fact die there. The Ninetieth Psalm tells the tale of those sad and dreary years, when an unceasing train of funerals passed out from the camp of Israel, and the mounds of the desert traced the course of the guilty and unbelieving race.

Such scenes are witnessed still. And the state of his Church must be a bitter sorrow to the heart of her Lord. Nothwithstanding His agony and bloody sweat, his cross and passion; in spite of the earnest remonstrance of His word and Spirit; though the fair land of Canaan lies within view, yet so few comparatively appear to have realised what He intended. All around, souls, redeemed by his blood, who have been numbered among his people, are perishing outside the land of blessedness in graves of worldliness, of self-indulgence, and masterful sin. We descry here and there a Joshua, a Caleb, or a tribe of Levites. But the majority seem to have come short. See to it, reader, that you are not one of them. "Let us also fear."

V. Each was infested by Many Adversaries.—The seven nations of Canaan held the land with strongholds and chariots of iron, though the Lord caused them to be to his people as bread which needs only to be eaten. They came against the invading hosts in all the pride of their vast battalions and the array of their warlike preparations, but at his rebuke they fled, at the voice of his thunder they hasted away.

The heavenly places also are not removed from the noise of conflict, or free from the presence of the foe. Those who are raised to sit there in Christ, have to encounter the spiritual hosts of wickedness, principalities and powers of evil. They are conquered foes, but nevertheless are terrible to behold, and certain to overcome, unless we are abiding in our great Joshua, who has already vanquished them, and have taken to ourselves the whole armour of God.

Thus the land of Canaan and the heavenly places are one: and we may read into these ancient records the deepest thoughts of the New Testament, for God repeats himself in many ways.

MR. J. CLEWORTH IN WILTS.

Mr. Cleworth lately conducted a fortnight's mission at Holt, Wilts, with very gratifying results. The meetings were held in a tent, which was well filled night after night. One feature of these meetings is well worth recording, and that is the heartiness with which Established Church people and Dissenters united to make them successful.

It is too early to tabulate results, but, judging from the large number who came to the inquiry room, and from other indications, it is believed that very many have been truly converted. Mr. Cleworth possesses remarkable qualifications for work of this kind. A clear, resonant voice, a most sympathetic and attractive manner, addresses in which anecdote, humour, and yet intense solemnity are blended, these and other qualities secure eager attention, which is maintained to the end. There was a feeling of regret when the mission closed, and the strong personal attachment which the people of Holt feel for Mr. Cleworth (and he has been here three times) indicates that he has been the means of bringing rich spiritual influence into their souls. Long may he be spared to continue this noble and Christ-like work!

A Pulpit Quartette.

Four volumes of sermons are before us,* all of them admirable specimens of the best pulpit work. There need be no fear as to the decay of pulpit preaching as a living institution whilst it can muster among its exponents the names of such men as Dykes, Moule, Cuyler, and the late revered Cairns. In these volumes there is a wonderful unanimity, one had almost said monotony, as to the main theme; it is Jesus Christ and Him crucified. That is the keynote of every discourse, though the strains are varied enough. They might, without any perversion of language, be described in musical terms, thus:—The clear, ringing soprano of Dr. Cuyler, the rich, full alto of Dr. Dykes, the mellifluous tenor of Principal Moule, and the deep, grave bass of Dr. Cairns — a most harmonious Gospel quartette. The well-known characteristics of each preacher are distinctly marked in these matured pages; all are as sound in faith as they are rich in love, and good works. The two volumes by Dr. Dykes and Mr. Moule form part of Messrs. Sampson Low and Co.'s series of "Preachers of the Age." Excellent portraits of the three living preachers are given as frontispieces. We have thought well to quote a brief extract from each volume, chosen almost at random, as illustrating the quality and practicality of the discourses:—

on "guarding the deposit."

The mass of Christian dogma about which no difference arises among the great Christian communions is very much larger than is popularly supposed. Set aside metaphysical difficulties about the origination of the new life in the soul, and one deep feud respecting the powers of the Church, her sacraments, and her ministry, there is scarcely another doctrine of consequence which is not held substantially alike in nearly every Church. That leaves a notable consensus in Christendom. Put together these great mysteries: of the Trinity, of the Person of the Lord Jesus, of the fact of his Atonement for sin, of his elevation to glory with power to save and judge mankind, of the mission of the Holy Ghost, of the New Birth, of the free forgiveness of sins, of the hope of the Second Advent, of Resurrection and of Eternal Life for all believers: put these, I say, together, and what a solid body you have of accepted beliefs. These are the most peculiar and influential of all Christian doctrines; about them Christians are virtually at one. . . .

To take up ignorantly "the newest thing out" in religion as one would a fresh discovery, and be ready without enquiry to throw away the most ancient and staple beliefs of Christendom in favour of the latest dream of some brilliant essayist, or the hypothesis of a speculator in theology, is really putting a fool's cap upon reverent and sober inquiry. All Churches owe it to the truth of Christ to protest against such frivolous abandonment of what has come down to us rich with the tears of saints and the blood of martyrs. .

By all means let the conclusions of the past be open to candid review in the spirit of ripe and accurate scholarship, of sober and cautious science. But do not set lightly by the most awful verities of our holy religion, as if they had only been heard of the day before yesterday, or had not been pondered over by the sages, and lived in by the devout, of eighteen hundred years.

The truths here in question are too sacred, the issues at stake are too fearful, to warrant a flippant rejection of what has hitherto been most surely believed among us. Study them by all means; understand them better; clear them of misapprehension and human error where you can. But beware how you fling away at random, in a hasty hour, any portion of your treasure. It is too costly. It is from God. The life of souls is in it. It carries the hopes of mankind. Let us guard it for his honour whose truth it is, and whose great Name is concerned in its pure and wide promulgation.

Guard it for your own soul's sakes, for it is your life and the one pole star to guide you out of time's shadows across the broad gulf of death into the everlasting land. For your fellows' sakes guard it and spread it, for it is the Father's Word to his wandered sin-sick children; to all the crowds that have lost their way and stumble down, pierced with the thorns of earth, to the darkness of eternity.

on "christian self control."

The justified Christian who is self-indulgent, who takes not heed to himself, is an anomaly on Gospel principles. I need not explain that I do not mean that the justified are to mask themselves in an artificial sanctimony. They are not to treat human life as an idle dream, for it is their very training-ground. They are not to be morose and unsympathetic among their neighbours. They are not to suppress all that is warm and radiant in their own circumstances or endowments. No; but they are to control themselves in these things, in the light of the will of God.

They are expected by the whole Gospel to take heed unto themselves. If, claiming to stand among the justified, they find themselves remiss in common things, lax in personal conduct, unregardful of the claims of others, uncourteous, unthankful, unduteous, let them take heed unto themselves. Precisely because they are justified, they are under training and strict training. And eternity will bear the imprint of what that training has been for them. . .

I speak to men who are amply of age for the grave strength of Christian purpose; who are of age, of full discretion to see the dignity of modesty and the littleness of self-assertion, the fair beauty of purity and truth, of reverence for grey hairs, and loyalty to authority and zealous faithfulness to home, and considerate kindness to poverty and service; of age to weigh the responsibility of influence and example; of age to be nobly reverent of all things holy; of age to grasp the root principles of the Gospel, and of age to live by them; of age to see the shallowness of the sneers or sophism that would scout them under some cant phrases of fashionable indifference or unbelief.

The chosen virtues of the Gospel, because the virtues of the justified, are essentially those of self-control. That sacred chapter, 1 Cor. xiii., the psalm of Charity takes a conquered self for granted in all its precepts. It refuses to praise even the martyr at the stake, if he has not also learned the yet better fortitude that suffers long and is kind, and is not easily provoked, and seeketh not her own. Self-restraint is carried into the most ecstatic scenes: "the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets." Every social tie, every family tie, the relationship of marriage, of parentage, of domestic mastership, and service, are clasped with self-control; "forbear, obey, reverence, give honour, remember that ye, too, have your Master in heaven."

How often in the holy pages recurs that grand word "patience"! "Ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God ye may receive the promise. Bring forth fruit with patience. Run this race with patience. Tribulation worketh patience. The Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and into the patience of Christ." And this is not the patience that sits down, but that which rises and goes on; which wills to set step after step in the Leader's footprints, holding on under his tasks, accepting all his terms of discipline. So the blessed Book carries on its long chain of precept, ending, in the midst of the final visions of the coming glory, with that brief suggestion of the order, the discipline, the duty of the world of immortal joy: "The throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and his servants shall serve Him."

on "sermons in shoes."

All the sceptics on the globe cannot refute the unanswerable argument of a consistent, cheerful, courageous Christian life. This fact lays upon us who profess and call ourselves Christians a most tremendous responsibility. The question is sometimes asked, "Why are not more souls converted under the public preaching of the Word?" To this question it is not a sufficient answer to say that "God purposes to save only a portion of the human race." God purposes to save every one who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ and follows Him. Nor is it a sufficient reply to affirm that all men are naturally "dead in trespasses and sin," and can only be made alive by the regenerating Holy Spirit. Let us not throw the blame of men's impenitence on a just and loving God. I very much fear that the blame rests nearer home, and that one great reason why there are not more converts to Christianity is that there is so much preaching against it by those who ought to be preaching for it.

* "Plain Words on Great Themes," by Principal Oswald Dykes (3s. 6d. Sampson Low and Co.); "Christ is All," by Principal H. C. Moule (3s. 6d. Sampson Low and Co.); "Christ the Morning Star, and other Sermons," by the late Principal Cairns (6s. Hodder and Stoughton); "Stirring the Eagle's Nest, and other Sermons," by Dr. T. L. Cuyler (3s. 6d. Nisbet and Co.).

Every unworthy act of a professing Christian is a sermon against our Master and his Gospel. Satan's most successful preachers are inconsistent professors. The bad sermons during the week are often an overmatch for the best sermons on the Sabbath. Do you suppose that if you and I practised more faithfully the instructions of this Holy Word, we would not be able to win more souls to Jesus?

As every one of you is a preacher, and every life is a sermon, let me inquire of you, What sort of a sermon are you preaching? Do you find your texts in the shop or in the stock market, and preach that the chief end of life is to make money? Then you are making more converts for Mammon than for Christ. Do some of you preach that self-indulgence is the "one thing needful"? Then you will draw more to the pleasure party and the play-house than you will to the prayer-meeting. It costs but little that the Eighth Commandment is right from the pulpit, if any of you are guilty of sharp practices in your business, or refuse to give every man his due. What is done by God's professing people outside of the sanctuary carries more weight than anything said within the sanctuary, even though Paul himself stood in the pulpit.

To-day, this world's sorest need is for more Christ-like men and women. The sermons it needs are sermons in shoes. The preaching that alone can save it, is the preaching of a living Christ, illustrated by the holy lives of his followers. A church that does not tread in the footsteps of its Master will never convert a sinful world to God. But a Church of consecrated disciples, whose hearts have been cleansed by the frequent baptisms of the spirit, and whose lives have been made beautiful by inward conflict and secret prayer, such a Church is the embodiment of a living Jesus in this sin-cursed world.

PRINCIPAL CAIRNS

ON REFLEX INFLUENCE OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

What can call faith into play like the work of missions? This is the very objection the worldly take to them. It is all faith, they say; mere cloudland; a going into the chimerical, the quixotic, the impracticable. Nothing so moves the ridicule of shrewd men as the landing of a missionary on a barbarous island, with nothing but a few Bibles, and perhaps not even that, and a few tools and other appliances of civilisation, to put up some rude buildings for shelter, for instruction, and for worship, in order to act upon savages and cannibals. . . . .

But the Church plants its foot exactly here, where the world sees only yielding mist and vapour, Faith laughs at impossibilities, and says it shall be done"; for its footing is the promise of that God who cannot lie. So that if faith be the very king of graces, so celebrated on the rolls of the spiritual world, who will stand higher in this nobility than those who believe and obey, saying, "Here am I, send me," or "Here we are, employ our labour, our time, our substance, and give us only souls for our hire."

Again, take the grace of love. To my mind there is no working of love like the sending of the Gospel to the perishing souls of men at the ends of the earth, I grant that charity, in a true and important sense, begins at home; and if we had no home church to draw from, the supplies of charity for the heathen would soon fail. But I confidently ask if home charity, needful and precious as it is, is the lofty a kind of charity as that which deals with want and woe, enforced by the naked claim of humanity in distress. The man who simply provides for his own is a very useful member of society; but he is not taken as the type of a philanthropist any more than the man who wept not because the death had happened in another parish is accepted as a type of sympathetic sorrow. Our Lord rebuked these limitations in the parable of the Good Samaritan; for there is here the sting of the lofty philanthropy indignant at any barrier which would circumscribe the outflow of love to the whole human race. Is it not an exalted feature of British commerce, that every great calamity strikes to its heart, so that immediately a subscription is opened on every Stock Exchange? But why should missions be less expansive and the soul be less provided for than the body?

In the light of what we know of the dreadful woes and miseries of the South Seas, of Calabar, of Africa, and even of India and China without the Gospel, how hard-hearted and even inhuman is the indifference that sends them no relief; and much more that mocks the sender as an enthusiast or a philanthropist run mad! Oh! for such madness in our own characters. It would warm them into a glow and lift them into a dignity more like heaven than earth. Men would see that others in comparison were but grovelling earthworms, who sneered at love like this only because it was for ever a stranger to their own torpid and frost-bitten souls. I claim for missionary work a first place as a training school of the highest Christian graces.

Dr. Storrs on Missions.

In his recent annual address as president of the American Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, made the following eloquent references to the work of Foreign Missions, and the share in the work committed to the American Churches:—

Our most direct contribution to help the world forward and lift it into larger freedom and light has been the work of Christian missions. It is this work which stands in direct association with that event in Providence of the discovery of this continent, and which merely carries to its consummation and full manifestation the plan which was therein unfolded. This is a work not carried on by our Board alone, but carried on by numbers of boards affiliated with us in affectionate sympathy and mutual confidence; working along the same line towards the same end; in the aggregate contributing scores of millions of dollars already to the world's evangelisation; sending out not only hundreds but thousands of consecrated men and women to assist in this work; planting schools and printing presses and hospitals and seminaries for higher education, as well as native churches, in all parts of the earth; lifting savage tribes on the rocky coral reefs, that a little while ago were bloody with human gore and echoing with shrieks of human fear or human victory, into civilised and Christian commonwealths—this great work of missions, which is following in the path of the Divine commission absolutely and which is accomplished under the inspiration and the tuition of the Holy Ghost, sets our nation forward and illustrates afresh the plan of God in bringing this continent to light at the moment when it came to the knowledge of civilised men, in building and keeping this nation here and setting it forth on its sublime errand. This is a work in which the heart and mind of God must be engaged—have been engaged from the very outset since first he touched by the motion of his Spirit the individual hearts from which have come these magnificent missionary organisations.

Let us never forget two things in the light of this course of thought. One is that progress must be gradual toward that majestic consummation which shed its lustre from afar on the eyes of those in what we call the semi-civilised tribes of Judea long ago. Progress must be gradual. Men of the world sometimes say derisively that it is very slow. "You say you have 30,000 converts. What are they among so many? You have so many churches and so many schools; but, after all, how little are they in such a vast multitudinous population as that of the world?" Well, my friend, will you tell me what great effect has ever been realised in a short space of time? What city was ever builded to its ultimate completeness in one year or in ten years? Your growth here in Chicago has been phenomenally rapid and fast, and yet you go back over half a century and more to see the beginning of your city life. Will you tell me what national literature was ever developed to its completeness in one generation or in five? Will you tell me what government was ever established in equity and wisdom, even with the heroic efforts of men who gave their lives to its service in one century or in two? Will you tell me what physical continent was ever transformed from barbarism to the beauty of civilisation in one century or in two? Great works imply always gradual progress; and nothing is more preposterous than to suppose that this immense, surpassing work, which man says is too great ever to be accomplished, is to be accomplished within a few generations.

Why, there is an interval of ages between the cave or the skin tent, or the hemlock hut and any one of our modernly equipped houses. There is an interval of ages between the first attempt at a song or a narrative and the completed literature which dates from that attempt. There is an interval of ages between the hollow log floating on the water and the majestic steamship that unites the hemispheres. There is an interval of ages between these shores as they were when our ancestors landed here and as they now are; and the great interior behind them has been subdued and cultivated through many successive generations until now it blossoms in villages and in cities. Gradual progress towards the mighty effect is the law everywhere; and we are simply foolish, we simply entertain the most preposterous notion that can ever come into the human mind, if we are offended because the expectation is not realised that in one year or ten years, in one generation or five generations, the work of redeeming the world unto Christ and purifying it unto his beauty is not accomplished.

But let us also never forget that supreme fact that God is behind this progress and that it never will cease until God is dead—never while omnipotence has power, never while the divine wisdom foresees the end from the beginning, never until the heart of God is turned to indifference or hostility towards his children on the earth. There is one banner that never goes down in any battle, and that is the banner of God's truth. There is one army that always marches to success, and that is the army of the Cross. God brought this continent to light at exactly the right moment; He colonised this country with a Christian population at exactly the right moment; He has carried us through all our perils and over every obstacle to our present state of national development and power and Christian culture; and his arm is never weary and his heart is never faint, and it is as sure as that He lives that the result at last shall be accomplished and the earth become the abode of his saints, visited with joy by angels, smiled upon by Him who baptized it unto Himself in water and in blood—in the tears which He shed and in the blood which gushed from his heart. This continent is not a dream; it is a vast majestic fact in the constitution of the globe. That realisation of God's plan to which this was to contribute is not a dream, not a reverie of the devout. It is a purpose of the Almighty as certain to be accomplished as the stars are to remain in their poise, as the constellations are to maintain their sublime and shining configuration in the heavens. Let us be carried forward in all our work for the nation and for the world by this sublime certainty that God is with us and the future is ours.

The humblest life becomes sublime when it takes hold upon God's plan, and helps to work it out. The noblest powers of earth take their supreme inspiration, their coronation and glory, from contributing to the Divine plan. And that will be a joy to us when heaven is opened, for we may look back on the earth and say: "I saw that purpose and I worked to accomplish it. I gave money and time and labour and life to that supreme endeavour." There will be a joy which the harps of saints cannot fully bear, and the lips of the redeemed cannot fully utter. The magnificent privilege of life is to take part in this work and do it with all our might, and do it unto the end.

Breton Mission, Havre.

Mons. Le Quere and a small band of Christians are seeking through this mission to make known to the Bretons and French of the town and neighbourhood the Gospel of God. The mission has under its control six halls (four having been opened this year), where services are held each evening. There are also three Sabbath-schools where the children are told the "old, old story of Jesus and his love."

God has wonderfully blessed and owned the labours of his servants, giving them the victory over priests and infidels, and also the joy of seeing many who were opposers of the truth brought to the feet of Christ. The mission has been in existence for nearly five years; for the past two years and a-half it has been carried on in dependence on God for all supplies. D. S. Mackenzie.

CHRISTMAS LETTER MISSION.—Miss E. Steele Elliott, hon. sec. of this Mission, writes from 66, Mildmay-park, N.:—"For many hospitals, infirmaries, etc., where the Christmas Letters are desired, we have at present no helpers. I shall be happy to furnish particulars to any who may be kindly willing to consecrate, for this sending of the Christmas message to the sick and lonely, the very moderate amount of means involved by this much-desired co-operation."

The Revival in Ireland.

MR. MOODY IN DUBLIN.

Mr. Moody commenced his mission in Dublin on Tuesday evening, October 25. A large wooden building had been erected in the Rotunda Gardens, with seating accommodation for 6,000 people, and even on the opening night it was crowded in every corner. Mr. Moody is a unique conductor of monster religious meetings. Thus, on the opening night, while the choir was engaged in singing a hymn he left the platform and was soon amid the audience. When the choir had finished, a clear deep voice was heard repeating the verse, John iii. 16, "For God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Many got upon their feet to see what it meant, and lo! there was Mr. Moody standing at the back of the gallery on the left hand side testing the acoustic properties of the building. He called to a gentleman on the platform to repeat the text, and then appealed to the people for their decision. As a result the platform was altered next day.

A Dublin High Church paper had in a tentative way attempted to throw cold water upon the Moody Mission by advising the missioner to confine himself to the States. Hence it was with peculiar pleasure that Lord Plunket, the Archbishop of Dublin, was observed making his way to Mr. Moody's side on the platform. The greeting was warm on both sides, and Lord Plunket opened the proceedings with prayer, and pronounced the benediction at the close. Mr. Moody's address was pointed and to the purpose. He dwelt upon the conditions necessary for making the Mission a success, and laid particular stress upon the value of Christian enthusiasm. "Do not be afraid of becoming excited over Christ's work," he said. "Why, there will be more excitement met with in one public-house in Dublin to-night than among the six thousand people I see before me." At the conclusion of his address he announced the order of procedure. Major Whittle would take the eleven o'clock meeting for workers in the Christian Union Buildings. Mr. Moody himself would address the meetings in the Rotunda Gardens at three and eight o'clock p.m. After each there would be an inquiry meeting, and after the eight o'clock meeting Major Whittle would speak to men only in the Rutland-square Presbyterian Church.

The meetings have daily grown in numbers and enthusiasm. Mr. Moody has been speaking very largely upon the New Birth. Some of his sentences are likely to be remembered all their lives by his audience. Thus, in speaking of the Prodigal, he said: "The elder brother seems to me to be the meanest character in the Bible. If we had him now we should probably find him a church official. Put that elder brother into heaven and he would make a hell of it. He had nothing to repent of. He was perfect in his own eyes, and would not consort with saved sinners." Then, again, he said: "The doctrine of the New Birth is the A B C of God's alphabet. A man sound on the third of John is sound on every other other doctrine." His addresses are thickly interspersed with anecdotes all eminently calculated to point a moral. The newspapers have all been favourable. Thus The Daily Independent, a Parnellite organ, read by the masses of the Dublin people, contained the remark that every sentence in Mr. Moody's addresses might be profitably listened to by persons of any denomination. This is perfectly true, and a Roman Catholic has been heard to say that if Archbishop Walsh were wise he would, in the interests of morality and the public weal, have stood on the same platform with Lord Plunket to bid Mr. Moody God-speed.

But it is in the inquiry room that the results of the mission are most clearly seen. The first evening about one hundred people came in. Now several hundreds are present at each inquiry meeting, and large numbers have already accepted Christ. It would not be prudent to tell of all the glorious things there witnessed, for Irish mission work requires great tact and delicacy of treatment. But the Christian workers have been delighted beyond measure by the clear manifestation of the Spirit's presence in the inquiry room. When Mr. Moody was in Dublin before, a young man decided for Christ and followed the evangelist to the States. He is now the pastor of a large congregation, and has been largely used of God. At the very first inquiry meeting a young man stood up to confess Christ, and Mr. Moody—who has a great memory for faces—said, "Is your name H——?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. "You are a brother to the young man who was converted during my last visit here, and is now a devoted worker in the States?" "Yes, sir." At the very next inquiry meeting another young man stood up, was at once recognised by Mr. Moody, and proved to be the third brother who had found Christ. "Well," said Mr. Moody, "this was worth coming to Dublin for."

At the close of his address on Sunday afternoon Mr. Moody invited all who desired to come to Jesus to stand up. Gradually, in twos and threes, and then by dozens, men and women stood until in the end about two hundred people had arisen, and all these followed him into the inquiry room. Now, as visitors are up from all parts of Ireland, it is not too much to say that blessing from this mission will reach every corner of Ireland.

The following suggestions and useful remarks appeared in The Irish Times of Monday:—"Those clergymen and ministers, evangelists and pastors, act wisely who take advantage of Mr. Moody's visit to study the management of great evangelistic meetings. Leaders of men must keep themselves informed of the current of opinion and feeling, and of the various influences which affect the minds of the people whom they seek to lead. And when an opportunity, which occurs only once or twice in a lifetime, is afforded them of observing the kind of attraction which draws crowds under the sound of the Gospel, and holds them there, the preacher of the Gospel cannot afford to neglect it. They will remark, if they come in time, that the evangelist gets into touch with his congregation as it is gathering. That hymn sung by the choir and another by the congregation, now a duet, and then a solo, is all preparing the minds and hearts of the people, drawing them away from mundane thought and attracting them to the consideration of eternal realities. The hymn, 'Throw out the life-line,' with its solemn refrain,

> Some one is drifting away,
> Some one is sinking to-day.

has not only been used of God to induce reflection, but has in this mission been the first step in one remarkable conversion. Then, 'Tell me the old, old story,' expresses the desire which rises in many hearts, and which is met by the promise, 'There shall be showers of blessing,' or the lovely hymn sung by two voices only,

> Though your sins be as scarlet,
> They shall be as white as snow;
> Though they be red like crimson,
> They shall be as wool.

And then perhaps will follow, bringing peace and rest to some, before a word of the sermon is uttered,

> Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine,
> Oh what a foretaste of glory divine.

The mere breaking up of the monotonous routine of ordinary services, and the studied adaptation of means to ends in the selection of hymns leading onward to a desired and definite result, would itself be a revolution of a most beneficent character.

It is often said that Mr. Moody is not a great elocutionist, which, no doubt, is true; there is a conspicuous absence of the art of the eloquent orator, but there is abundance of shrewd remark, 'of thoughts that breathe, and words that burn,' of touching and stirring incident, gathered from his own varied and eventful experiences. As an example of homely and ad hominem remark, take the following—'There wasn't a soldier in Saul's army but believed that God could use him to slay Goliath, but there was a lad outside the army who believed God would use him, and he went in and slew the giant.' 'God can't use a discouraged man.' 'One Elijah on Carmel was worth a thousand Elijahs under the juniper tree.' 'I have no sympathy for juniper trees, I wouldn't give a thank you for any quantity of them. I would not plant one of them.'

"Mr. Stebbins is well-known as a leader of sacred song from his previous visits to Great Britain, and his music in the Songs and Solos is very sweet, and destined to endure. Miss Whittle has also a cultured voice of considerable compass, which she uses with judgment as well as heart. The solos and duets of these sweet singers are as influential as they are attractive.

"Under the enthusiastic and efficient direction of Mr. Cowley, the large and excellent choir is rendering splendid service, and their singing is an attractive feature of the meetings."

THE CHILDREN'S MEETINGS.

Major Whittle's meeting for children on Saturday afternoon was a great success. The area of the great hall was three parts filled, and after the usual hymnal service and prayer, ten little pitchers were seen upon the table where the speaker stood. Being asked what the number ten reminded them of, one child replied, "The ten virgins." Not this, however, but the Ten Commandments was the subject of the address. As a preliminary, the whole audience were invited to rise and repeat the Commandments, led by Major Whittle. He then told a story of a little boy whose mother sent him to school one Sunday afternoon, but who, meeting another boy whom he knew, played marbles with him, and in ten minutes he had broken five out of the ten Commandments. The five pieces of earthenware were then removed from the rest and the children mentioned the broken Commandments which they represented; and to give emphasis to the lesson the Major broke them, showing that the act of breaking could not be undone. Having thus brought sin to the conscience, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, our substitute was simply and earnestly explained, and illustrated by a touching anecdote. Many of the young people expressed a desire to be Christians, and some were led to a confession of Christ, which was, so far as man could judge, sincere and genuine.

These Saturday afternoon meetings are to be continued. Arrangements are being made for pursuing this evangelistic work during the winter.

MAJOR WHITTLE IN CO. KERRY.

To the praise of God and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, we are thankful to record the further progress of the Gospel in the south of Ireland.

Major Whittle, following in the steps of Mr. Moody, and Mr. Vance, the beautiful songster, and accompanied by his daughter and Miss Board man, commenced a mission in Tralee on October 9, having preached the same afternoon at Ardfert to the largest meeting perhaps ever gathered there. The hall in Tralee was one recently acquired for political meetings of all parties, and consequently frequented by all classes and creeds. A second stairs and entrance to the building were specially provided, and it proved in every way suitable for the purpose for, although no meeting was quite so large as Mr. Moody's in another place, the hall was quite filled, and the interest and even enthusiasm of the audiences were most gratifying. Major Whittle had provided himself with a good supply of hymn sheets which were distributed among those not possessing hymn-books, and very soon there were hundreds singing such blessed words as

> What can wash away my sin?
> Nothing but the blood of Jesus;

or,

> Sing it o'er and o'er again,
> Christ receiveth sinful men.

People who had never sung a Gospel hymn in their lives, and to whom the message of salvation must have been good news indeed.

The afternoon addresses were serial, being a course of lectures to Christians on the Holy Spirit's person and work, and very faithfully were the children of God warned of the sins and inconsistencies in home, business, and daily walk, and life which hinder his fulness to which all saints are commanded.

The evening addresses were invariably a full, clear, loving, and sympathetic proclamation of pardon and life for all who believe, and although the strong current of doctrinal statement flowed on each night, not broken or relieved by narrative or illustrations (except once here and there), it may be truly said that the packed rows of hearers seldom or never showed a face other than that of an absorbed and riveted listener, unable and unwilling to lose a sentence or a word of the unaccustomed discourse.

Results in such cases must be mainly looked for subsequently, but there were instances of actual conversion and out-and-out confession of Christ enough to encourage the preacher and to prove that the Lord was falling on prepared and receptive soil. The mission was continued by request to the 1st October, several days beyond the first intention. On the 20th, fresh ground was broken at and a large company assembled, who it may be safely said never before were to be seen at a Gospel mission service. Here, as at Tralee, there was great demand for Testaments, and when Major Whittle, after his manner, offered a card to any man present who wished for a Testament, after a pause, three sturdy fellows advanced up the aisle with looks of firm resolution, and received the tally which should secure them then and there at the door the coveted prize. Immediately a long stream of applicants came forward, and in this manner some 200 Testaments reached as many homes of the people in the two places.

Major Whittle addresses himself much to the masses, in language simple, manly, frank, and persuasive. The people feel not that a rival priest or parson has come among them, but a man who is one of them, who cares for them, and talks plain talk to them about sin and salvation.

Miss Whittle's and Miss Boardman's solos and duets were greatly used to soften asperities and commend the gracious words of God in gracious mien to those for whom they were spoken.

We sincerely hope and trust that this fruitful mission may be followed before long by a second visit of the Lord's dear servants.

BELFAST.

A fortnight's Gospel services conducted by Mr. Jno. Brandon, of Canada, was brought to a close on Friday evening last, in Agnes-street Methodist Church, Belfast. During the mission about 350 persons gave their names as having decided for Christ. At the closing meeting on Friday night, which was a testimony meeting, 103 persons spoke, and about 150 additional persons stood up to indicate that they had received definite blessing during the mission.

Gospel missions have also been held during the week in a very large number of other centres throughout Ireland, and there has not been in this country for many years such a general widespread spiritual awakening as at the present time. People in public and private expect to be talked to now about their souls in a way they would have resented a short time since.

"THE WAY TO GOD."

A few weeks ago I ventured to call the attention of those interested in the evangelisation of Ireland to one way of helping on the good work, viz., by circulating Gospel literature. Mr. Moody's book, "The Way to God," having been signally owned of the Lord, the help of friends was invited to scatter this messenger of light all over our land.

Quite a number of friends kindly responded to our proposal. Please give me space to say now that we can make good use of whatever further gifts may be sent in for this purpose. Books have been distributed far beyond the means provided, and since we do not mean to slacken our efforts, we shall be glad of the further co-operation of all who desire to aid in this good work. Encouraging testimony as to the value of the book has been already received.

BREMERHAVEN, NORTH GERMANY. — Many British seamen land here, and whole crews are paid off. Yet no provision is made for their moral and spiritual well-being; there is neither church nor mission for English-speaking men and women. A small sailors' "Rest" for German seamen has been in existence for some years past, but the burden of its maintenance has become too great for its few German supporters. They were on the point of closing the hall this summer, when the visit of an English lady inspired them with fresh courage. The attendance at the meetings for German and British sailors held by this lady (she also visited the steamers and vessels to invite the men) proved the need there is for continuing this work. M. McMinn.

LUKUNGA STATION, THE CONGO.—In a letter Mrs. Hind Smith, dated August 5, Mr. Ricketts takes acknowledgment of gifts received by his wife for mission work from friends in this country. The contents of the box, he says, were just the thing needed for use by the native women and girls connected with the mission. Mrs. Ricketts has now four native schools which she superintends, being assisted by native teachers. She has eight girls in a training home and hopes soon to have more. She needs help, and the Mission Board in Jamaica are being asked to send a lady assistant, and means will be needed to pay her passage from Jamaica. Mr. Ricketts purposes building a house for the Girls' Training Home at a cost of £150.

YOUNG MEN IN GLASGOW.

The annual meeting and conversazione of the Glasgow United Young Men's Christian Association took place last week in St. Andrew's Hall, which, as in previous years, was filled to its utmost capacity. Tea was provided at many tables by ladies interested in the association. Thereafter Sir John N. Cuthbertson took the chair. The hall, he said, was never occupied for a nobler object. They had met to celebrate the sixty-eighth anniversary of the Association, and he said glory to God in the highest for all his goodness in connection with this and other Christian work. As interested in education, he wished to say that the School Board evening classes had not lessened the number attending the classes of the Association, the Athenæum, and such institutions.

Mr. Oatts, secretary, gave the report, which bore that there were 8547 young men enrolled, 219 fellowship meetings all over the city for the study of the Word of God, with an average attendance of 4036 young men. There were 1300 Sabbath school teachers and 1300 evangelistic workers and 155 young men who were studying for the ministry or had gone to the mission field. There were five evangelistic meetings throughout the city, and meetings every Sabbath afternoon in eight of the lodging-houses. In the missionary society there were 134 members, and between 70 to 80 of their old members had during the last ten years gone to the mission field. There was also a Temperance and Morals Committee trying to work against intemperance, impurity, and gambling. The educational classes were last session attended by 2077, and the monthly magazine had a circulation of 5000. There were reading-rooms in the Christian Institute and in the four sections of the city, open from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m. In these rooms were libraries; but Mr. Oatts asked friends to help them with new books, not books sixty years old. One hundred pounds was wanted, and he would be glad if some kind friend sent him a cheque for that amount. Lastly, they had a gymnasium with 140 members, cycling and rambling clubs making tours in summer, and a successful restaurant.

Mr. A. M. Lindsay, treasurer, gave his report, which was eminently satisfactory.

Mr. John Connal said that during the year they had added the physical as one of the objects of the association, and if anyone wanted to know how it had succeeded, he had only to look into the gymnasium or the restaurant. Mr. Cameron Corbett, M.P., spoke of the advantages and importance of the work of the Association. Mr. Wilson, M.P., also spoke.

Rev. John M'Neill was delighted to see such a scene, and to have the opportunity of beholding the Association evidently at its best. He owed much under God to Young Men's Christian Associations, but his blessedness began earlier. He traced a great deal of what he was that was desirable to a good upbringing. He remembered nothing more gratefully than that item of the home routine —family worship. How gladly would the family have shirked it! But his father and mother had always family worship. Neither of them could sing a note, but they sang; he did not know what it was like. God sent them a family of singers in order that the service of praise might be a little better. The family were brought up in a house with little accommodation; there were a couple of rooms and perhaps some odd corners to stow things in. But he was not aware their minds were corrupted by close association with one another. There was a great deal of cleanness about the fear of God and the worship of God. Mr. M'Neill having recited with great effect passages from Burns' "Cottar's Saturday Night," said another great advantage he derived was that of the personal example of his father in the matter of total abstinence. His father bore the character of a moderate drinker with honour and credit. Many men call themselves moderate drinkers, but people knew them otherwise. When the Good Templars came to the village his father did not care for bibs, tuckers, a worthy this, and a worthy that and the other thing. But as the Order was the only temperance organisation with regular meetings, he joined it the first night, and his family followed the next. Such was the influence of personal example. Total abstinence was not everything; it was not grace; but it held the speaker till grace came.

He was never a model youth, and all manner of evil prophecies were showered upon his head. He did many things. He went to the town and slipped into the theatre amongst the first things he did. He also slipped into the music hall, as he was away from his father. But total abstinence kept him from that everlasting adjourning for refreshment. It was there that bad companionships were made. He soon got tired of this kind of amusement. He found nothing refreshing in these brackish streams. But when he was nineteen years the change came, and so he stood there to plead for definite conversion through faith in Jesus Christ. They should not fear of becoming after conversion, ascetic, with a face as long as a fiddle. Was his face as long as a fiddle? Had he a fiddle shape at all? Did he look as if he had no fun in life? It was the other fellows who were dull. There was nothing like conversion for developing the best in a man—in the directions aimed at by the association—moral, religious, social, physical, and intellectual. Were these all? He could mention a few more. He went first and most strongly into the religious; but some began at the muscular. What they should do was to confess Christ with a certain amount of publicity. They should go to some open-air meeting; it would take more out of them than—it might be—going to the communion. They should go to the open-air meeting because it was the work that made them feel nervous, and because there was a certain amount of public committal and running up their colours to the masthead about it.

Rev. Dr. Bonar pronounced the benediction.

TWO INDIAN VISITORS.

On October 14, a meeting, comprised mainly of Indian Christians, met at The Bombay Guardian offices to pray for blessing upon Miss Soonderbai Powar and Mr. Raju Naidu, of Madras, about to sail for England to speak on behalf of their people against the traffic in opium. Earnest prayer was made that this great stumbling-block, which hinders the spread of the Gospel, might be soon removed.

In a few remarks about the friends leaving to represent India in the anti-opium crusade, Mr. A. S. Dyer said he considered Mr. Raju Naidu had three particular qualifications for this work. First, he is a convert from heathenism. Secondly, two years after his conversion he was considered competent to edit The Eastern Star, one of the leading Indian Christian newspapers. He retained this post during 1890-91, and only relinquished the editorship because he wished to devote himself fully to Gospel work. Thirdly, he has seen the evil of the opium vice within the circle of his own relationship. Mr. Dyer remarked upon the Divine protection and help that had been granted to Miss Powar in the continuous speaking and the cold of an English winter last year. He commended both delegates to the care of God.

Mr. Raju Naidu said that since he gave his heart to Christ the opium traffic had been a topic of great importance to him. He had seen the evil in all the principal towns of the Madras Presidency, and, unless stopped, he saw that it would eat out the very life of his country. He spoke of the peculiar tendency of opium to ruin the moral faculties, and said that the women who were licensed to sell opium in and near Madras, were women of evil character. He has faith to believe that the Lord Jesus will soon see this evil abolished. This is the cause of humanity, and Christ is our counsellor.

Miss Soonderbai Powar, in easy and fluent Marathi (her own language), spoke of the kindness she had received in England. She had no wish to leave her country, but she felt that God wanted her, so she determined to do the work He had given her.

Rev. W. J. Gladwin, editor of India's Watchman, Staff Capt. Abdul Aziz, a Hindustani Salvation Army officer, Rev. Madhavrao Nikambi, Maratti Pastor in the Free Church of Scotland Mission, Bombay, and Mr. Glover, a retired Government official, also spoke.

Prayer is chiefly heart work. God heareth the heart without the mouth, but never the mouth without the heart. Your prayer is odious hypocrisy, mocking God, and taking his name in vain, when you utter petitions for the coming of his kingdom and the doing of his will, and yet hate Godliness in your heart. This is lying unto God, and flattering Him with your lips, but no true prayer.—Marshall.

West London Conference.

The annual West London Christian Conference of the Free Churches was held on Monday, October 24, and two following days, in the Allen-street Congregational Church, Kensington. The congregations were encouraging; the subjects discussed were varied and of great importance, and the presence of the Divine Master was very manifest.

The meetings commenced with a devotional meeting on Monday afternoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. Sylvester Horne, and addressed by Rev. C. Medley. This was followed by a fraternal meeting for ministers, church officers, and Christian workers. The subject discussed was "Power for Conversion in Christian Workers."

It was introduced in a brief suggestive paper by Rev. Joseph Olphert. He mourned the infrequency of conversions. He was afraid that the prevailing unrest in theological opinion had paralysed converting power. As to the human qualifications by which this gift is conditioned there must be a confident experience of God's saving grace, a firm grip of Scriptural truth, maintained by study and much prayer, and what the speaker designated a "holy gush" in appealing to the consciences of men.

An interesting conversation followed. Rev. G. MacGregor feared that among many the word conversion was losing its significance. Whilst they had intense sympathy with the souls of men it behoved them to preach the Gospel with no uncertain sound. Rev. W. Roberts thought broad views of the Divine Fatherhood weakened the force of the preaching or the need of a change of heart. Rev. J. S. Pawlyn believed that the secret of the lack of converting power was found in the fact that the Church was content to live on too low a level of spiritual life. Rev. C. Sylvester Horne said there were mysteries in the operations of the Holy Spirit which could not be solved. The great fact of Divine Sovereignty could not be overlooked. Conversions were not necessarily of the same type. Some passed through one great convulsion, and some were lifted by successive stages to higher levels of spiritual life. If such conversions were less demonstrative, they were not less decisive. Other friends briefly spoke.

The evening meeting was for the special benefit of young men and young women. There was a large attendance. The chair was taken by Mr. W. H. Winterbotham, who at some length urged upon the young people present the duty and importance of training their physical, intellectual, and spiritual natures to the highest perfection.

Rev. W. Suttle followed with a very faithful and timely address on the two points—(1) Do not be led into wrong, and (2) Do not lead others into wrong. Temptations beset them sorely, but they were not at the mercy of tempters. It was most important that they should be careful of their companionships. Above all, he would warn them against the sin of tempting others.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, of Highbury, said every church should be a manufactory of Christian character, and all should be inspired by the lofty ambition of laying hold of sinners for Jesus Christ. Away from the homes of their earlier life, they would often experience the oppression of loneliness, and this should be overcome by seeking some social and Christian centre of attraction and enterprise. Let them carefully watch their thoughts, for thoughts were the seed from which sprang crops of good and evil.

The interest of the meeting was fully maintained on the following day, though the attendances were scarcely as large. The subject for the afternoon was "Holy Living," the meeting being presided over by Rev. Edward Hawken. Professor Agar Beet, of Richmond College, delivered an address on "The New Life in Faith." He dwelt on the importance of perfect dedication to the possession and service of God. Life must be lived in the light of eternity. When we have given all we have a right to claim all that Christ has promised to his faithful ones. Rev. J. Baillie followed with an earnest address on the importance and blessedness of secret prayer.

The subject of the evening's meeting was "Evil Tendencies in Modern Life." Mr. Percy Bunting presided. In a thoughtful address he contended that the only way to preserve sound doctrine is devotion to Christian work. In times of great doctrinal danger the Church had been saved by the holy living of simple disciples. Formulated creeds represented the uprising of the Christian conscience against particular forms of error, and he thought that whilst the Word of God remained inviolable, creeds as such needed to be reviewed and re-formulated every century. The greatest dangers of the age were worldliness and sin, and against these there should be directed a new crusade of holy activity.

Rev. T. H. Darlow delivered a most able address on "The Dangers and Drawbacks of Modern Progress." Modern progress, he said, had not effected any moral cures. Worldliness, sensuality and crime still abound. In many respects, the present days were far better than the old, the intellectual and material progress had been marvellous, but all was not clear gain. There had been a great increase of wealth, the standard of domestic comfort had risen; but this had increased the temptation to high living, the determination to maintain appearances up to, or even beyond, our income. Many Christians would do well to diminish the luggage of life. It was astonishing how much worldly luggage some carried with them on the Heavenly road: one would suppose that they were pedlars, rather than Christian pilgrims. The effect of all this was to materialise and secularise our religious efforts. Against prevailing evils it behoved them, as the followers of Christ, to stand firm, to set their faces as a flint, and not to float hopelessly down the stream of modern tendency.

Rev. H. O. Mackey followed with an earnest address on the duty of unshaken fidelity to the Gospel, and its power to save the vilest sinners, to strengthen against temptation, and to afford an abiding inspiration to the highest forms of Christian experience. The meeting was brought to a close by a brief address by the Rev. A. Mearns on the law of selfishness.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. T. Walker gave a most thoughtful address on Divine grace, showing the folly and wrong of making it dependent on any particular ecclesiastical channels. An interesting conversation followed, in which Revs. W. Page, S. J. Jones, C. S. Horne, E. Hawken, and others took a prominent part. In the evening there was public worship, and a united celebration of the Lord's Supper, at which Rev. W. J. Woods presided.

THE ANTI-VIVISECTION CRUSADE.

It was but natural that the supporters of the anti-vivisection movement should resent the attacks made upon their principles by certain speakers at the recent Church Congress. On Thursday last they assembled in force in the Banqueting Room, St. James's Hall, "for the purpose of reaffirming and vindicating the principles of the society in face of the attacks made, especially by Professor Horsley, at the late Church Congress." Canon Wilberforce presided, and regretted that inaccuracies in the book, "The Nine Circles," should have afforded an argument for the vivisectors. Miss Cobbe urged renewed vigour in the fight against degrading cruelty.

Professor Lawson Tait, at some length, examined the defences which had been put forward for vivisection, denying that it had produced any good results, and maintaining that it was untrustworthy, as the facts ascertained were only certain with regard to the kind of animals on which the experiments were performed, and not with regard to human beings. But even assuming that vivisection had led to discoveries, it was a mediæval method of investigation, like that of pressing an accused person with weights to make him plead. He asked whether it was creditable to modern science that in an age when they could tell the condition of the atmosphere in the nebula of Orion, there should be a resort to experiments upon animals to find out what chemistry in its present advanced form was better able to tell them with regard to poisons. He pronounced the defenders of vivisection to be without logical argument.

Bishop Barry dwelt upon the moral aspect of the question, contending that man's lordship over animals was not that of might over right, but was a delegation from God, for which man would be held responsible.

A TESTIMONY.—A correspondent visited, a few days ago, Rev. James Griffin, at Hastings. He has had a severe attack of spasms, and his lying in a critical state as to his bodily life, but his spiritual life, at the age of eighty-eight, is robust and full of joy. He has preached the Gospel over sixty years. He said—as it were a dying testimony—"Two thoughts fill my heart: the exceeding sinfulness of sin; and the exceeding riches of grace. This is my prayer and hope, 'Looking for the mercy of the Lord Jesus Christ, unto eternal life,'"

REV. G. C. GRUBB IN OXFORD.

(By an Undergraduate.)

The announcement that Mr. Grubb was about to hold a mission in Oxford was hailed with prayerful expectation by many believers here who remember his mission some seven years ago, and who have followed his more recent work in India and the colonies with keen interest and real thankfulness. The mission began on Sunday, October 23, when Mr. Grubb preached at the ordinary morning and evening services in St. Peter-le-Bailey Church, and gave a special address to men only (chiefly undergraduates) at 8.45 p.m. The opening sermon was from Ezekiel xiv. 3, and proved a searching word on idolatry as it appears in modern life in various forms, with special reference to mere profession, separation from God, stubbornness and covetousness. On the Sunday evening the subject was the characteristic one of "Christ is all and in all" (Col. iii. 11), with the following treatment:—1. Christ is all to God. 2. Christ is something to devils. 3. What is He to us? When Christ is all, nationalities, ecclesiastical distinctions, social barriers are regarded as nothing.

Mr. Grubb gave Bible readings each afternoon of the week specially intended for believers, and the large gatherings proved how acceptable and profitable the Word was to those present. Among the subjects was one on the Presence of God as realised in the life of the believer, and all the elements of power and blessing which come thereby. Another was upon the Pentecostal power of the Holy Ghost and the need of it now in the Church of God.

But it is of the evening services, which were definitely evangelistic, that special note must be made; and as to these it was remarkable to watch the deepening interest each night as the mission proceeded. On the first night the attendance was only moderate, which was probably due to other city engagements of that evening, but the next night saw a great increase which was more than maintained each night. On Tuesday the subject was the New Birth and its proofs, and was made a word of power to many souls, while the sermon itself was the topic of conversation among undergraduates on the following day. The next evening the story of the woman of Samaria was dealt with, and the blessings of the living water vividly depicted and freely offered. Again the after-meeting showed a large number desirous of immediately accepting Christ. The subject of Zaccheus followed, and was used to show the need of earnestness and humility in receiving Christ and the blessings of salvation, sanctification, and strength, which accrue from his "abiding in the house." The preacher's treatment of several "trees" in which modern Zaccheuses are perched and from which they must "come down" in order to receive Christ was very faithful and telling. Friday brought the glorious subject of the Passover and deliverance from Egypt, and, in spite of very inclement weather, a large number assembled and great power was manifested. The mission was continued on Sunday last, when the numbers were larger than ever, while the word proclaimed proved a fitting close to a most valuable mission.

Besides the above services for all comers in St. Peter-le-Bailey Church, Mr. Grubb held special meetings, public and private, among the undergraduates, amongst whom there has been definite and unmistakeable blessing. The daily prayer-meeting was addressed by Mr. Grubb on each day, and the members of Mr. Grubb's Mission Band also were at work addressing meetings at the Y.M.C.A. for men only and holding children's services.

Altogether the mission has proved an undoubted blessing in Oxford both to believers and to the unconverted, and many will rejoice on the great day because of it. It was a great privilege and joy to listen to the glorious Gospel proclaimed by Mr. Grubb with such striking faithfulness, and to notice the eminent wisdom and tact in his various methods of conducting the after-meeting. To God be all the praise for this season of refreshment and power. The volume of prayer for God's blessing on Mr. Grubb's labours will assuredly be increased by his Oxford mission.

THE MAGIC LANTERN MISSION, directed by Mr. Wm. Stewart, 7, Effingham-road, Bishopston, Bristol, is capable of much development. The work enjoys the support of a committee, and is well spoken of by ministers and others who know Mr. Stewart and have attended his instructive and entertaining meetings.

ABOUT FRENCH CHILDREN.

Ir is long since I wrote to you, but I have en hearing so much about French children from e lady who has been on Le Bon Messager, all mmer, that I think you will like to hear a few of e interesting things she has been telling me; and rhaps you will long to be able to go yourselves on ch a voyage.

Le Bon Messager does not go on stormy seas; it es only on the quiet rivers and canals of France; d yet it was a perilous venture to go right into e heart of a Catholic country, where even the me of Protestant is feared. I hope that some- e else will tell you how Le Bon Messager was owded night after night with eager, solemnly tentive listeners, and how inquirers came in ntinual succession to hear the good news of salva- on, and how great were the lamentations and what ars were shed when the time came that she left em for another village.

But perhaps what would interest you most would to hear of the children's meetings. The meetings r the grown-up people were under the charge of stors or evangelists from Paris, and were held at ght; but the children were Madame Pim's charge, d very great care it took to tame these wild little lks, who came in throngs to see this wonderful at, so new, so clean, so pretty with its flags and reaths of growing ivy. They were led across the mporary bridge and placed at once, and made to derstand what a solemn thing it was to be in od's presence and to speak to Him. Very short ayers were all that were attempted, for these ildren had no idea of real prayer. Rapidly peated Latin prayers were all they had heard.

Then the hymns—from Cantiques Populaires— ere an ever new delight. Then these children ng! Madame had continually to remind them at "Le Bon Dieu n' est pas sourd" ("the Lord not deaf"). For a moment they would sing softly, d then the chorus would ring out again across the iet waters of the Marne, till far-away labourers in e fields could hear the children's voices telling the d old story in verse. Madame longs now for their arty singing when she hears the rather too quiet nging in the Protestant schools. They liked, per- ps, best to sing,

"Qui dit au soleil sur la terre,"

th its joyous refrain,

"C'est l'Eternel, c'est notre Dieu!"

Mind you sing it on Sunday evenings; it is No. 80 Cantiques Populaires. In one village an old oman of eighty came to the children's meetings, d was so wonderfully attracted by the children's nging and their interest in the Bible lessons, that e came again, bringing two other old women with r. As the whole three were deaf it was needful give them places in the front, and there they sat tening as eagerly as the children to the Bible ories. Some of the children knew something of e New Testament, but the Old Testament stories ere quite new to them. It was not only Catholic ildren who came—in one place Jewish children me and bought hymn books and "sang the raise of Jesu's name" with the others! Another me some real gipsies were attracted by the unusual ght, and, won by the kind welcome and hearty in- tation, came on board and heard of Him who came seek and save that which was lost.

One day Madame saw two boys looking eagerly at the oat, and wanting to come on board. As there was no ildren's meeting that day (Saturday was kept free), ey were told they could not be admitted. They oked so disappointed that she asked where they me from. "Oh!" said one of them, "our llage is five kilomètres away, and always they said e boat is coming and it never came, and at last y comrade and I said we would go and see it." So e little fellows were allowed to come on board, and w the boat, and had a piece of chocolate, and ard a hymn and the "old, old story," and went ome to their village to relate the wonders they had en and heard.

The day after one of the village council came, d then two others, to beg that their village might ve the privilege of a visit from Le Bon Messager. nd so she went, and very many eager listeners owded the meetings, and most earnest among e children who thronged the children's meet- g were the two little fellows who had been the eans of bringing the Gospel to their village. o show what kind of instruction these children had received, one of these boys was found trying to put a penny in the contribution box, saying, on being asked what he thought the money was for, "pour délivrer les âmes en peine!" You can translate that I think.

Now I finish my letter with what I have so often said. Get on with your French, read your French Testament, sing the hymns in Cantiques Populaires (you know the tunes already, and the words only cost twopence or less), pray for French boys and girls, and when you are ready come over and help us!

Your sincere friend,

Valence. S. R. Geldard.

THE STORY OF KIH-NIANG.

Who is that dear little old woman with white hair and dressed all in grey—grey tua-tse, grey trousers, and even grey shoes? Why, that is Kih-Niang, as we call her, which is a title of respect, and meaning "adopted mother." Everyone notices her bright face, and if you did not see how happy she is, you would soon hear it, for she is praising God all the time, and telling everyone how good He is to her, and how wonderful it is that He has saved her in her old age.

She is seventy-five years old, and was converted and baptized when she was seventy-two. Since then she has been telling all the people in her village and elsewhere of the Saviour she has found, and they listen with great wonder to her story. For you must know that she was a "Ch'sh-ts'ai-tih" (vegetarian) for forty-two years, and the Chinese think there is great merit in this, and to keep the vow of vegetarianism, and not eat meat or eggs, or fish, for so many years is to heap up a great pile of merit, which is all lost if the vow is broken. Not only was she a vegetarian, but for twenty-eight years she was a Bhuddist nun. She had a kind husband, and was deeply attached to him, and used to visit all the temples, to pray that he might have a long life, but she was so anxious to be pure and virtuous, that, although she loved him so much, she left him to be a nun. That is why she wears these grey clothes. The nuns' dress is grey cotton, and she has nothing else. She lived in a temple, and took care of it and of the idols, washing their faces, etc.

She had no children, but she adopted a boy called "Kiang-si-ting," and brought him up. They meant him to be a priest, and he served in the temple, but when the time came to shave his head (the Bhuddists shave off all their hair) it was decided that he would not do for a priest, he was far too upright. Eight or nine years ago this man heard the Gospel and was converted. He also had been a vegetarian for twenty-four years, and did not at first break his vows, but five years ago he was baptized. His adopted mother used to wonder what he found in that Book he was always reading (the Bible). Often she would prepare his meals and set the food before him, but he would be so absorbed in his book that he would leave it to get cold and forget to eat it.

After a time he began to tell her the idols she served were no use, they could not help her and they could not take care of themselves. "Why," he said, "if I hit them they can't do anything." Then he told her about the living and true God, and the mighty Saviour, Jesus Christ, who had died for all the people in the world, and she believed the glad tidings, saw that all her accumulated merit was worthless, a false hope, gave it all up and became a disciple of the Lord Jesus, and it is beautiful to see her gratitude and love to the Lord. She is literally praising Him all day long. Often in the meetings she cannot keep quiet, and breaks out with expressions of praise in very emphatic assent to what is being said.

She lives about 40 "li" away with a nephew who is not very kind to her, because he is vexed that she has given up the money she gained by being in the temple, but she will not leave her home because she wishes to tell the Gospel in the place where she served the devil so long. It was nice to see her and her adopted son together, and to see her delight when he was preaching. She is a very polite old lady, "K'eh-k'i-'tch-hen" as we say. We could scarcely get her to eat her own meals, she was so anxious to offer every mouthful to us. She stayed a week with us and has now gone back to her village.

CHILDREN'S MEDICAL MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The seventeenth report of the Children's Medical Missionary Society tells of the steady progress of an excellent work. Maybe some of our young readers do not know of this society. Such will, we trust, write to Miss Annie R. Butler, Medical Mission House, 49, Highbury Park, N., for a copy of the deeply interesting report, the pages of which will inform them of the ways in which help may be rendered to the mission cause.

The income of the society last year reached the sum of £242. We give brief extracts from the report:—"One dear little lad of three-and-a-half years of age collected no fewer than 240 farthings for the work auxiliary. Another wee fellow had two pennies given to him, and said that the poor children should have them both. A boy of seven, aroused to a love of missions by Miss Marston's books, collects for us in the cottages near his home, and is rarely refused a trifle. Another of ten or eleven cleans the lodger's boots and puts the pennies thus earned into his box. Another boy, still older, sends in, from his sister and himself, half the money results of the patient collection of waste paper; and yet another, sent for hurriedly to join his ship, leaves over £1 in his Medical Mission box for us, with two beautiful picture books that he has made.

"Our girls are not idle. From the child of five to the growing-up girls who are rearing canaries for us, or stirring up Medical Mission interest in the hearts of little children and others, we rejoice in them all. And now that the Medical Missionary Association students are getting out from the hospitals into the actual Medical Mission field, how thankful we are and shall be to be able to follow them with helpful gifts, and how specially pleased they always are and will be to be remembered by the children."

THE VICTORIA INSTITUTE.—The twenty-fifth volume of "Transactions" will, we trust, tempt many Christians to join the Victoria Institute. Among the important matter contained in it is a paper by Mr. Rassam, the well-known explorer, completely answering several arguments of those critics who maintain the comparatively recent origin of the early parts of the Old Testament. The question of the situation of the Garden of Eden is specially considered. Added to the paper is a report of a long discussion, in which persons who speak with the weight of authority took part.

GARSCUBE HALL, GLASGOW.—In his little report for the past year, just issued, Mr. D. J. Findlay, 42, Grant-street, Glasgow, says:—"The need for a larger place is not less, but more manifest than ever, but until the Lord opens another door for us, we must continue to work on in the only door that is open. During our last winter mission we took the City Hall for our Sabbath Evening Services, and it, under the preaching of Richard Weaver, was crowded to overflowing. Our own hall only seats about 450 persons, and we could just as easily, and with much better effect, have a congregation twice as large if we had a building to put them in. We would ask our many friends to continue with us in prayer that when He sees fit our Master may open up our way in this matter."

MR. MOODY AT BOSTON, LINCS.

The mission at Boston proved an unqualified success. The congregations were the largest that ever assembled day after day in the town. Mr. Moody's opening meeting was in the Corn Exchange, the largest public building in the town, and it was filled to its utmost capacity, several hundreds being unable to gain admission. The acoustic properties of the building, however, were such that Mr. Moody resolved to hold his future meetings in the Wesleyan Chapel, which had been placed at the service of the mission. Enormous congregations awaited on his ministry there. Mr. W. R. Lane conducted large overflow meetings on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights.

Mr. Moody's John-the-Baptist-like unsparing rebuke of the sins of the day—drunkenness, uncleanness, perjury, dishonesty, and nominal Christianity—could not fail to awaken the slumbering souls of many, while his uncompromising teaching of the doctrine of repentance, faith, and regeneration, will, we believe, reverberate for ever in the consciences of his hearers, and turn, in days to come, to the salvation of those yet undecided.

The part Mr. Stebbins took was very spiritually helpful. His rendering of the hymns was soul-stirring.

One of the special features of the mission was the Wednesday afternoon meeting. Wednesday being market day, a service was set apart for visitors from the country, and fully 2000 from the surrounding villages and towns availed themselves of this opportunity of hearing the evangelists. A large enquiry meeting was held in the Congregational Church at the close, and many, it is believed, were won to the Lord, and returned home to become centres of influence in the villages and towns whence they came.

The co-operation of Mr. W. R. Lane was most valuable. He attached to himself at once the affection and confidence of all the Christian workers, who remained throughout his willing and cheerful supporters. From the first he found no difficulty in gaining an audience, and as the mission continued, after Mr. Moody left, the attendance at the services was exceedingly good, the two closing meetings filling the large Wesleyan chapel. He was honoured of God in the conversion of souls and the blessing of the righteous was upon him.

Up to the time of writing, more than 160 have given in their names as having come to spiritual decision during the week's mission, and there are many who, like the woman of Gospel story, healed by the touch of faith, have concealed themselves in the throng without public confession. The spirit of Christian unity which prevailed through all the meetings and committees was not one of the least of the blessings of the mission. We believe that all the centres of religious life in the town will carry on this evangelising work more energetically in days to come as the fruit of the mission.

Rev. C. B. Sawday, of Leicester, held a two days' mission in the town last week and was blessed of God in the salvation of souls.

Mr. Fay Mills in Utah.

Rev. B. Fay Mills has had a successful work in Salt Lake City, Utah. The mayor issued a proclamation, recommending the closing of places of business September 13, and a very general response was the result. Every day the power of the Gospel has been more and more manifested.

Sabbath (Sept. 25) was a day such as has never been seen in Utah. It was a day of prayer and power. When Paul preached at Antioch in Pisidia, it was written of the mighty work of the Gospel: "The next Sabbath day came almost the whole city together, to hear the Word of God." Thus in Salt Lake City, this city where a few years ago the people of God could find no place for the soles of their feet to rest, where they were pushed into the loft of a livery stable to find a place to worship God—in this same city it may be truthfully written: "Almost the whole city came together to hear the work of God." The capacity of the great tent was the only limit to the audience, and many stood without, listening to the word of truth. The results of the day's blessing upon the city can never be known. Between five and eight hundred people expressed their purpose to lead a new life.—Record of Christian Work.

THE LATE REV. J. JACKSON WRAY.

The world of religion and of letters will learn with deep sorrow of the death of Rev. J. Jackson Wray, known as a unique and powerful preacher, social reformer, and prolific author in the domain of religious thought and action. The melancholy event took place on Wednesday last week, at his residence, Sandfield, Market Weighton, in the presence of his family. On the morning of the previous Friday Mr. Wray was conversing with his wife about the satisfactory condition of his health, when he was seized with paralysis, and notwithstanding that every attention was paid to him, medically and otherwise, he lingered in a more or less unconscious state until Wednesday night, when he passed away painlessly and calmly.

Mr. Jackson Wray resigned his pastorate of Whitefield's Church some two years ago in consequence of failing health, and retired to Market Weighton, with the result that he was apparently restored to health. He was born near Market Weighton in 1832, and was educated at the Westminster Normal College. Soon after leaving college, he joined the Methodist ministry and went out to Sierra Leone, the climate of which place proved injurious to his health. Returning to England, he spent three years in Crewe, and subsequently took up work in other districts. Ultimately he severed his connection with the Wesleyans, and accepted the pastorate of Whitefield's Congregational Church in Tottenham-court-road. Here he drew a large congregation, but the old building becoming unsafe, it was pulled down, and an iron temporary building put up, pending the erection of a large church. Mr. Wray was the author of many ably written story books.

Some Tried Rules of Life.

Hold Thou me up, and I shall be safe.—Ps. cxix. 17.

In times of perplexity and difficulty—when all seems going wrong—pray, and then leave the burden with God, and pray steadily till the fretful and anxious feeling has passed away.

Make all right with God before trying to make it right with an offender—and then patiently bear any affront, checking the rising feeling of indignation.

Never make any reply to an insult—or, if any, either acquiesce or return some kind word.

In perplexity—avoid doing anything doubtful. Only do that which is sure of a blessing and stay the soul only upon God.

In times of the greatest depression, remember how God has helped in past times, and that He who has delivered from one trial or temptation is able and willing to deliver from another also.

Avoid yielding to feelings which are always changeable, but be led by fixed and definite rules of conduct.

SYSTEMATIC BIBLE STUDY.

Sir,—In view of the widespread and happily increasing desire for thorough and intelligent study of the Word of God, your readers may perhaps like to hear about the "Chronological Scripture Cycle." This scheme of Bible study was organised by my sister, Miss Mary L. G. Petrie (who is a graduate with first-class honours of the University of London), in connection with the College by Post, which she had the pleasure of starting in her own early college days, for promoting systematic reading of Holy Scripture, and for teaching some secular subjects to girls anxious to study under guidance, but out of reach of professional tuition.

The names have now been enrolled of 196 teachers, and of some 3000 students, each of whom has undertaken to give half-an-hour daily to the Bible in connection with one of the correspondence classes. In these, various plans of Bible study already widely followed were adopted, such as the daily lessons of the Church of England, the Bible and Prayer Union, Christian Progress Union, and Young Women's Christian Association subject; but to meet more completely the needs of students, my sister, as president, shaped in 1888 this Chronological Scripture Cycle.

The course lasts three years or nine terms, and is now followed by 50 of the correspondence classes in the College by post, and by about 1700 other readers, who include many clergymen, evangelists, leaders of Bible classes, Sunday-school teachers, and missionaries in every part of the world. One Free Church minister in Aberdeenshire formed a year ago a class for this study of nearly 70 of his congregation, and his example has been followed by other clergymen. The Church Missionary Society recommend the scheme to all intending missionaries in their new handbook, "Candidates in Waiting." The aim of the scheme is to take the Bible as its own best interpreter, by arranging it in the chronological order of the events it relates, and the books it contains, so far as that can be ascertained, and to illustrate at every point the history which tells us what men did by the literature which explains why they did it, elucidating David's life by David's Psalms, taking historical and prophetic books together, and reading Paul's Epistles in the order in which they were written.

Throughout, the design is to aid those Bible students who know no language save English, and who cannot readily avail themselves of larger works of modern Biblical scholarship.

Great interest has been manifested by the students of the scheme, many who began by promising half an hour daily now find an hour all too short for the Scripture reading. Others who confessed that hitherto they had read the Psalms and parts of the new Testament only, failing to understand or enjoy the rest of the Bible, now write saying that it has become a new and most precious book to them, and that their interest and delight in its study deepens each term. "I am very sorry we have nearly finished the Old Testament," wrote a member of my class the other day, who had entered most heartily into the ancient history of Israel.

Over 100 have already won the prizes awarded to those who work out well under a teacher's direction the whole of the nine examination papers (each containing thirty-two questions).

The scheme was originally set forth in a set of twelve pamphlets, and though not publicly advertised, all the 3000 sets of pamphlets hitherto issued have been sold out. In response to many requests they are now being published, revised and enlarged, in one volume, entitled "Clues to Holy Writ." (3s. 6d. Hodder and Stoughton.) This book, which contains about 350 pages, is nearly ready. Further information about the college, by post, may be obtained (enclosing a stamped envelope) from Miss Mary L. G. Petrie, B.A., Hanover Lodge, Kensington-park, London, W. Students are admitted to the classes early in January, May and September only.—Yours faithfully,

Irene E. V. Petrie.

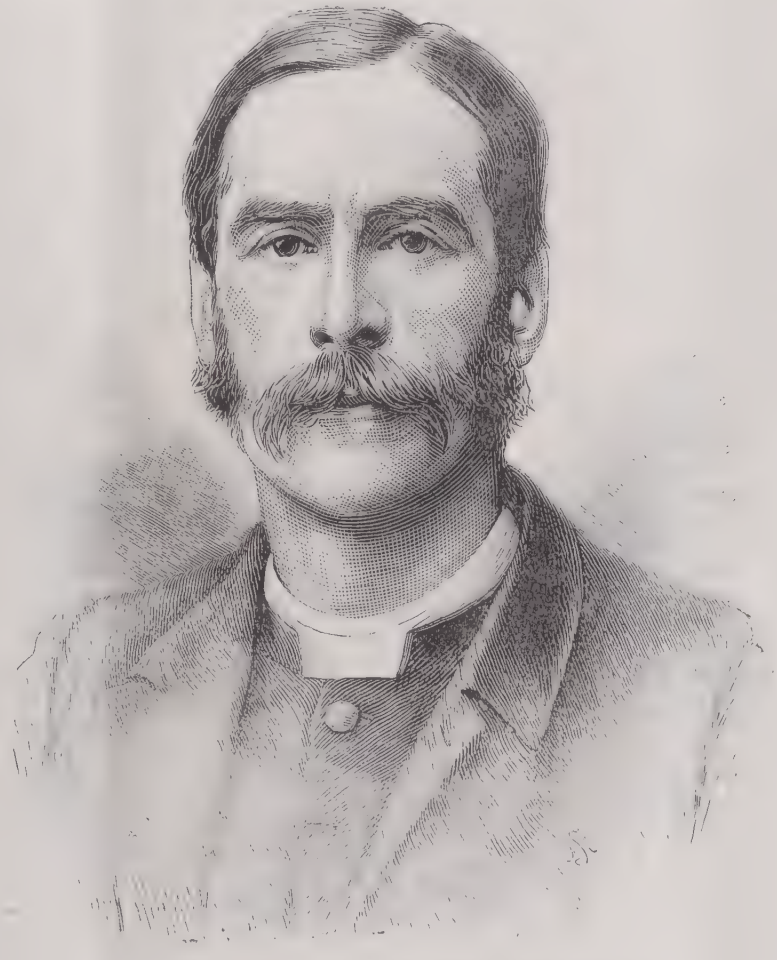
REV. WALTER SEARLE,

SECRETARY OF THE CAPE GENERAL MISSION.

THE Cape General Mission is one of the agencies through which God is answering the prayers of David Livingstone for Darkest Africa. Though still in its infancy, it is one of the most enterprising and aggressive forces in the field. God has recently given to the mission, in answer to the prayers of the Council, the subject of our sketch, Rev. Walter Searle, who, with his devoted and talented wife, has been labouring for the past thirteen years in Birmingham as a Congregational minister.

Nothing seemed more improbable a few years ago than the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Searle to this work, but as one of the Council says in a letter to Mrs. Searle: "While we have been praying, God has been preparing, and we all believe that you and Mr. Searle are God's chosen instruments for this work." A few details of the career of the new secretary of the mission will be interesting to our readers.

Mr. Walter Searle was born in London in 1851 of a godly parentage. Both his father and grandfather were ministers of the Gospel. In answer to his mother's prayers, and through the instrumentality of his Sunday-school teacher, he was deeply impressed with the importance of spiritual things while still a boy, and at the age of fifteen, after deep and agonising conviction of sin, lasting for many months, he found peace through believing.



True to the instincts of the new life, he immediately began to work for the salvation of others, and an intense desire to be a minister of the Gospel took possession of him. This desire was fanned and strengthened by his uncle, the Rev. John Campbell, of the New Tabernacle, London, author of "Popery, Ancient and Modern," "The Martyr of Erromanga," &c.

At the age of nineteen Mr. Searle entered Regent's Park, and afterwards Cheshunt College, in the latter of which he studied under the learned and enthusiastic Dr. Reynolds. His college career was most successful, and he took prizes in Hebrew, Philosophy, Theology, Exegesis, Ecclesiastical History, and Elocution.

While at Chesnunt he received an unanimous invitation to the Congregational Church at Plymouth, and with the hearty commendation of the president, he began his ministry there in 1875.

But God had other modes of preparing his servant for his life-work than those we have mentioned. The death of Mr. Searle's mother in the spring of 1875 was attended with so much of triumph as to produce a deep impression upon him. He was also privileged to attend the famous Brighton Convention, and, like many more, received a spiritual impetus which greatly influenced his after-life.

While at Plymouth Mr. Searle married Miss M. L. Baker, authoress of "Somebody and Nobody," "Paul Haddon," "Redcar Lee," etc. Mrs. Searle at once threw herself enthusiastically into the work of the church, and her labours at Plymouth were the earnest of the thirteen years of devoted and wondrously successful toil in Birmingham.

(From a Photograph by Mr. J. Collier, 66, New-street, Birmingham.)

To the latter city Mr. Searle removed after four years of earnest work in Plymouth. He then became the pastor of Westminster-road church, which had been recently built, and soon gathered around him a large and wealthy congregation. A too-prodigal expenditure of physical and nervous vigour led to a long and serious illness. This illness lasted for six months, and in the school of suffering God taught his servant lessons which, amid the abundant activities of church life, he would never have learned, and which restored him to his people with a spirit subdued and chastened, a simpler trust in the old evangelical faith, and an intenser longing after holiness.

At this period of Mr. Searle's life, God brought him into contact, either personally or through their writings, with a number of men whom He has specially equipped for the work of leading believers into a fulness of blessing previously unknown to them. The first of these was Rev. Thomas Cook, the Wesleyan evangelist. His clear and definite statement of truth respecting the privileges of believers, greatly helped Mr. Searle, and in a personal interview Mr. Cook introduced to his notice Professor Upham's "Interior Life," a book which has been his constant companion for years.

The preaching of a course of sermons on the Divine Authority of the Bible marked a crisis in Mr. Searle's ministry, which from this period became more spiritual, definite, and evangelistic. This change, while greatly blessed to the many, disturbed some others, and a spirit of disagreement was created in the church by those who preferred polished periods to the power from on high, and to whom scholarship had greater charms than spirituality.

About this time Mr. Searle was introduced to the books of Rev. Andrew Murray. God greatly used them for the comforting and edification of his servant, and a link was formed between the Congregational pastor and the President of the Cape General Mission, which will now be greatly strengthened.

In 1888 Mr. Searle visited Keswick Convention for the first time, and learned, as never before, the blessedness of becoming absolutely the bond-slave of Jesus Christ. In a conversation with Rev. W. Haslam at this Convention on soul-winning, the famous evangelist said every preacher had what he aimed at. The man who aimed at the conversion of sinners, and expecting to see them saved, drew the net to land after preaching, received according to his faith and the definiteness of his aim. This conversation had a remarkable result. As the outcome of it, Mr. Searle was led to ask definitely for the addition of a hundred souls to his church in one year. The prayer was answered; there was a deep revival of the work of God, more than the hundred were brought to a knowledge of the truth, and the church became more than ever a centre of spiritual life and activity.

About this time Mr. Searle read Dr. Pierson's "Crisis of Missions," a book which strengthened and directed the missionary impulse which had been recently created. The missionary spirit soon impregnated the Westminster-road Church. One of the members offered herself for work in China, and is at the present time labouring there at the cost of the church. Another is at Dr. Grattan Guinness's College preparing for the same field, while several others as the outcome of the formation of missionary bands, have offered themselves for foreign service.

This deep interest in the work of foreign missions on the part of both pastor and people is a striking commentary on Dr. Duff's words:—

There was a time (said he) when I had no concern for the heathen, and that was when I had none for my own soul. But when, by the grace of God, I was led to care for my own soul, I began to care for them. In my closet I said: "O Lord, silver and gold have I none. What I have I give to Thee. I offer myself! Wilt Thou accept the gift?"

Another memorable friendship to which reference must be made was that formed with Rev. H. C. G. Moule at the Keswick Convention of 1889. This has been maintained by correspondence and personal interviews, greatly to Mr. Searle's mental and spiritual advantage. It was Mr. Moule who first suggested the work which Mr. Searle has now undertaken in South Africa. It was he who wrote Rev. Andrew Murray, suggesting the names of Mr. and Mrs. Searle for the post they will now fill, and the Council, as we have already stated, feel that God has been qualifying a worker for this important position who, because of his intelligent and masterly grasp of the principles of foreign missions, and still more of his intense spirituality and enthusiasm, is eminently fitted for it.

In a powerful article on "Uppermost Parts" in the October number of Out and Out Mr. Searle says; "Last year I felt led, after having sent and urged and trained others to go, to definitely offer myself for China; but after prayer and conference, relinquished it, thinking I was too old for the language. This year the desire returned at the Birmingham Convention. There I signed, on bended knee, a little consecrated Circle Book, belonging to the 'Soul Winners' Union.' Now the opening for service has come, and, God willing, I go to South Africa, as Secretary of the Cape General Mission at Cape Town. My beloved wife is going to 'Try Love' on the colonists, Malays and heathen; and my three boys to live Christ, and be spent in his service. There is work at Cape Town in the slums, among sailors, soldiers, policemen, postmen, Malays and far up in Kimberley, Pretoria, Swaziland, and Basutoland.

"It was like a wail to my heart when I heard the new Bishop of the Niger pleading for comrades. There are three of us going, and we need a fourth. It is this disproportion of work and workers that becomes an irresistible plea; and the conviction that it is not God's plan leads me to give up the charge of a loving church after thirteen years, feeling that I am wanted more there than here."

It is scarcely necessary to say how invaluable in the conduct of The South African Pioneer, of which the new Secretary will be the Editor, will be the gifts and anointed pen of Mrs. Searle. Her booklets reveal a wondrous power of sympathy, and few writers know so well how to touch and stir the finest feelings in the human soul. We trust that in the congenial climate of Cape Town Mrs. Searle's health will be fully restored, and that, together with her husband and boys, she may see a work of God in South Africa exceeding in its sweep and abiding results the most sanguine expectations and the largest supplications of the Council, workers and friends of the Cape General Mission.

Mr. Searle's farewell meeting is at Exeter Hall to-morrow (Friday) afternoon and evening. The missionary party sail from Southampton on the following day.

THE GOSPEL IN THE OPEN-AIR.

By CHARLES. COOK.

No. II.

"Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city."—Luke xiv. 21.

The necessity of going out to "compel them to come in" is obvious. No apology is required to enforce the need of so glorious an institution as open-air preaching. Whether in Old or New Testament times, the most fruitful sermons were preached out of doors. In later days, Wesley, speaking from his father's tomb, and Whitefield among the colliers of Kingswood, illustrate the blessing that follows this Scriptural and apostolic method.

We are in danger of losing the ear of the masses; already many others are catering successfully for their attention in the open-air. The Labour question (to say nothing of the Socialist movement) has developed some excellent open-air speakers, and this coming winter will see them pushing their own propaganda. Though the more cultured in our churches may deem it infra dig. to preach in the open-air, our Lord has commanded it, and we must obey. Numbers of the working-classes are being drawn away to listen to a gospel which ignores altogether spiritual matters.

Despite our climate, it is possible to hold good open-air meetings on many Sunday afternoons during the winter, and our experience has been that large audiences have gathered. When we adjourn to our hall goodly numbers follow. Such efforts should be systematically employed throughout this winter by any who have room inside their churches.

If before the usual evening meeting a short service were held in the street, many would accept an invitation to a warm building, the preacher would feel responsible to put the Gospel before the strangers who followed in, fresh young blood would be infused into the church by the young converts, older Christians would wake up, and a revival begin.

May I refer to one or two weak points observable in some open-air meetings? Some preachers bid the hearers "only believe, only believe," and go on to ask them to "Come to Jesus," but forget they need to be plainly shown "the way of salvation," and that the atoning blood should so be preached that the sinner may see that God has been satisfied about the sin of the sinner. At other times what is missing, is the word of awakening, the arrow of conviction, the preaching which should cause repentance, the charging home of sin upon the conscience of the sinner, that the hearers may be sent away convicted by the Holy Ghost "of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment."

Then I could wish that some friends would take more pains to set forth intelligently the truth. People will listen to what is worth listening to, and if you can but touch their heart strings you may move them how you will. It is not so much eloquence the people want as sympathy.

See that humble brother of ours at work. Look at the interest created! mark the attention given him! there is a might about his rugged eloquence that none will dare gainsay. Learning he has none, and logic he has little, but grounded in the grammar of Heaven he speaks from very love of souls. Power and pathos are there! Where lies the secret? In the sincerity and simplicity of the speaker. He speaks from love of souls, and warns his hearers of "the wrath to come." If success in our vocation means to reach the consciences of men, that man is a master of the art, and we might well afford to copy him. Do we despise learning? By no means, but let it only be the means to the end.

Touching the manner of our preaching, we need to be clear, concise, and consecutive, but, above all, to be Christ-like in our spirit. The thunderings of Sinai should come from hearts occupied with Calvary. We must speak of hell that we may win to heaven, but we must be gentle while faithful, and loving though pointed and personal, for soft words will often break hard hearts. Let us not spoil the glorious matter of the Gospel by the manner in which we put it.

The awakenings of the past century overflowed into the fields and commons of England, and the Revival of 1859 was largely brought about by open-air preaching. May God in mercy send us the like again!

THE LATE MR. J. WEATHERLEY.

A REMINISCENCE.

I was deeply interested in the memoir of this man of God, published in your issue of October 13. It recalled to me a remarkable revival of religion which took place in St. Albans in the years 1861 and 1862. The movement began with tent services, conducted by Captain Wilbraham Taylor and Major Trotter, the late Mr. Baxter, and the late Mr. Denham Smith. The meetings were crowded, and when the assembly room of the Town Hall was taken I remember seeing it filled many times by all classes on a week-night to hear the Gospel.

Thirty years have passed, and much has been seen, but the memory of those Town Hall services, and those afterwards held in the iron room put up by Mr. Sweetman, thrills me yet. There I heard William Carter, who preached like a prophet and talked like a father; Richard Weaver, John Cassell, Henry Vincent, and Thomas Cooper. Going back to the Town Hall services, I see again the white head of Mr. Robert Baxter, the keen, intellectual, and yet yearning look of Denham Smith, and I hear a singularly charming voice, and feel again the touch of a hand laid on a youth's shoulder, and such a tender beautiful face looking into his as the question how it stood with my soul was put to me by Mr. Joseph Weatherley. I see him now getting down among the youths who flocked to the services, but, as youths mostly do at religious gatherings, getting little further than the door. Mr. Weatherley, however, had such a charm of manner, such a loving look, and such tact that prejudice was disarmed, and you felt a friend of Jesus had spoken to you of his Friend whom he wanted you to know. I never met Mr. Weatherley after these services ceased, for years did not even hear of him, but the spell of his interest in a youth anxious about Divine things moulded my life.

Nearly all that band of evangelists "rest from their labours," but "their works follow them." I have only lifted the veil off a little scene—only some services in a country town at a time when mission preachers whose names now adorn your pages were little children, but I have lived to see the methods then new made essential to all missions, and I have lived to be more convinced than ever that the truths made prominent in those days to the saving of many are the truths which God will always honour to the conversion of men. Allow me to lay my late wreath of memory on the tomb of Joseph Weatherley, a man who knew how to deal with youthful inquirers. May he have successors.

Evangelists' Home, Birmingham.

We have 2000 children and sixty teachers in our two Sunday-schools. A band of "forty thieves" have been transformed into a Sunday-school class. We lack accommodation. We propose building a "Young Christians' Institute," and desire to open it free of debt. The cost will be £3000. Half that amount has been promised, and we now appeal for the other half.

Our labours are in the centre of a large and increasing working-class population, and will be, as now, of a religious and philanthropic character. Our purpose is "the neighbourhood for Christ," and to keep our young people off the streets, providing a home for them in the church, where Christ is at the head of the table. Joseph Odell.

A MISSION FAREWELL.

An enthusiastic company filled Exeter Hall on the evening of Wednesday week, when "farewell" was said to some thirty missionaries of the London Missionary Society about to start for the foreign field. The interesting fact may be noted that during a portion of the evening Lord Rosebery, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, was present in the meeting.

Lord Kinnaird, who presided, dwelt on the awakening of missionary interest. When they thought of the number of similar meetings held in other parts of the country during the last few months—meetings of the Baptist Missionary Society and the Church Missionary Society—and thought of the large contingent present that night going out, they thanked God for the forward movement, which began a little more than twelve months ago. The London Missionary Society then thought they would like to take part in the general forward movement by trying during the next four years to send out a hundred additional missionaries; not counting those filling up vacancies, but a hundred in addition. When they saw that within the first fifteen months of that time they had reached thirty-seven of that number, they could not but feel that it was a great earnest of what was to be done. He believed that these workers were going at a time when the tide is flowing, and when they would see many more going out.

Rev. George Cousins, in introducing the missionaries, said that they were there to bid God-speed to that large party of brethren and sisters who, having heard the call of Jesus Christ, were leaving their native land to go forth as missionaries of the Gospel, and unless he totally misconceived the aims and desires of those who were gathered there that evening to bid them farewell, what they wanted to do was to assure their friends of their sympathy and prayerful interest in themselves and in the glorious Christ-like work to which they were going.

The company included the following returning missionaries:—Revs. T. Haines (South India), A. J. Wookey (South Africa), E. V. Cooper (Samoa), and Dr. Gillison (Hankow). The new missionaries are:—Rev. G. J. Williams, for Canton; Dr. S. Lavington Hart, for Hankow; Mr. J. Walford Hart, for Chung King; Dr. Walton, for Hiau Kan; Dr. Bessie Harris and Miss Mary Harris, for Hankow; Misses Carling and Parslow, for Chiang Chiu; Rev. R. J. Ward, for Madras; Rev. J. A. Joyce, for Berhampur; Mr. Harold T. Willis, for Trevandrum, Travancore; Mr. J. E. Dennison, for Nagercoil; Rev. E. W. Watson, for Madras; Rev. J. W. Gillies, for Quilon, Travancore; Rev. H. H. Theobald, for Benares; Rev. A. Sims, for Berhampur; Miss Theobald, for Benares; Miss Maclean, for Calcutta; Miss Haskard, for Bellary; Misses Fooks and Christlieb, for Bellary District; Misses Dawson and Gookey, for Vizagapatam District; Miss Macdonnell, for Nevoor, Travancore; Miss Derry, for Nagercoil, Travancore; Mr. J. E. Reid, for Lake Ngami.

A number of these followed in brief burning words, bearing testimony to the leadings of the Lord, and asking prayer on their behalf. We can but glean a telling point here and there.

Miss Derry said they did not think it a trial to go; they thought it rather an honour and a privilege to go as representatives of and fellow-workers with Jesus Christ.

Miss Parslow concluded a few stirring words thus:—The women of Chiang Chiu are waiting for us to come to them just as eagerly as we are preparing ourselves to go to them.

Rev. H. H. Theobald said: I am here to-night for foreign missionary service because the call from God has come to me with ever-increasing, and at length with irresistible, urgency. I am thankful that God has made the way clear. It is a sore trial to leave my aged father, and my dear mother, and my happy home; but I feel it a great privilege and a great honour to be permitted to go forth. I am leaving my church. But I am not leaving home missionary work because I am weary of it. I am very glad to have had three years in the Home Mission. It has not been without difficulty and it has not been without joy. I am glad I am going to Benares, and that my sister is going with me. Her work will be separate, but we shall be together. Benares is a stronghold of superstition, and I feel very much my insufficiency; but God is mighty to cast down strongholds, and I go forth full of hopefulness and full of faith that He will give us help. I am going to tell the people at Benares what Christ has done for me, and what He can do for them.

Miss Edyth Emma Fooks, niece of Mrs. Grattan Guinness, said that for the past eight years it had been her desire to go to the foreign mission-field. She had been working in connection with the East London Institute for Home and Foreign Missions, and thanked God that the way was now open for her to carry the Gospel to the heathen. In looking forward to missionary work, there were two great sources of encouragement, which were enough to fill them with faith and confidence, and peace and trust, in God's own purpose. First, "He had purposed according to that good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself, to gather together in one all things in Jesus Christ." The next encouragement was that "his strength is made perfect in our weakness." If they ever felt weak at any time they felt weak that night, confronting the immense dangers of heathenism. Nothing but the Spirit's indwelling power could equip them for the work, but with that they went forth encouraged and glad.

Miss Marie L. Christlieb asked for the prayers of her hearers; but she implored them not to ask vaguely for blessing, but that the missionaries might not hinder the Lord's work through us. Oh, how often we hinder Him! Pray that we may live Christ to the heathen, that Christ may live through us, love through us, speak through us, work through us, that our life may be what a Christian life on earth may be, and that through us Christ may become attractive to the heathen.

We cannot possibly record all the words spoken, but having given the names of the missionaries going forth, we commend them heartily to the prayers of our readers that in their future service they may be sustained and used of God.

ENCOURAGEMENT IN MOROCCO.

By J. E. Budgett Meakin.

Among all the discouragements peculiar to work among Mohammedans constant evidences of the Master's approval are by no means lacking, and it is well from time to time to make a note of these for the encouragement of those by whom such work is supported, especially when, as in the present case, the recorder, though living on the spot, has no connection with the missions concerned.

The talk of expelling the missionaries, which caused such alarm a twelvemonth ago, has entirely subsided, and in its place we have the declaration made by the Sultan to Sir C. Euan Smith that the ladies who labour in Fez, of whom he knows most, are doing an excellent work. Such a testimony is given, of course, in the assurance that converts will never be made from among Mohammedans, which experience, thank God, has shown to be a false one. The Sultan approved of these ladies being entrusted with a portion of the fine paid by the Governor of the city, which was to be distributed to the poor, and even spoke highly of their unselfish efforts. The presence of those three brave pioneers among 150,000 Moslems and Jews, six days' journey from their nearest sympathisers, soon made itself felt, and during the four years of their residence in Fez, it has extended amazingly, till they have the confidence of all but the most bigoted in the capital and the surrounding districts. The testimony of the disinterested members of the British Embassy is equally high and gratifying. Two more ladies go forth this week to join them, and later it is hoped that operations will be greatly extended by the assistance of a doctor and his wife. For this sort of work there remaineth yet much land to be occupied, even in Morocco.

From a distant and seldom-visited part comes confirmation of the most welcome news that a band of native Christians has existed for several years, the result partly of labourers who have since been called to rest or left for other fields—perhaps dissatisfied. The reports which came to hand at the time were hardly credited, especially when similar reports about other places proved to have been exaggerated; but here, after many days, the good seed is found again, this time a growing plant. Arrangements are being made for European workers to visit the spot to encourage and instruct, but the circumstances of the case render it unadvisable to publish details as to names, etc. The story of this and a kindred work in another district when it comes to be written, as it should be, will call for thanks and praises to the wonder-working God we serve. From the other district referred to, we hear of enquirers who have become converts and been baptized, here one, there one, but the Spirit of Love, which is our Master dwelling in us, is manifest among them all. This is the testimony of outsiders, who marvel at it.

Had this blessed movement been the direct outcome of European effort, it would not have brought with it half the encouragement it does. Here, however, we have the real thing aimed at, the establishment of native work in the hands of native converts. General Booth once inquired of the writer if there was an opening here for the Salvation Army, and the reply was that never could there be a better, when the Salvation Army could send forth native officers, and make it an entirely native work under European direction. No lasting progress will be made but through the agency of the Moors themselves, for Europeans can never have a tithe of the influence over them that one of themselves has, however much they may narrow the breach between them by imitating their manner of living and becoming one with them outwardly. Then, too, the influence of a foreign missionary, unless he be a doctor, is infinitely less than that of a merchant or mechanic with a visible means of subsistence, and for such there is great need in Morocco. It will be long before there are sufficient fully qualified lady doctors to avail themselves of all the open doors in the country; and in the establishment of educational work with one sole aim, there is a vast, rich, untouched field, though steps are now being taken to commence upon it. What we know here as the "Refuge Work"—the gathering together of the sick and maimed and teaching them the way of life—is also blessed, and is a valuable adjunct to the hospital and medical work.

Missionaries of the Gospel are now well enough known in Morocco to have gained universal respect, and to be recognised as genuine and disinterested philanthropists, even by those to whom their message is foolishness, and they are fairly well distinguished from the majority of those who bear the name of Nazarene, by being known as "Maseeaheen," or Christians. The Governor of Marrakex, the southern capital, recently expressed a high opinion to the writer of those who have for some years laboured under his jurisdiction, though he had no reason to suppose his questioner to be interested in them.

Recently, in Oojdah, on the Algerian frontier, I came across a man who had well learned the truth in Tangier, and was overjoyed to hear more about Jesus, though still afraid to throw off the trammels of Islam. He is just one of many who are scattered up and down the country, of whom plenty of instances could be quoted, whose number is only known to Him who giveth the increase, but of whom the majority will be ready to come forth when the time of harvest arrives. The copies of the Word of God, too, distributed throughout the interior, often in districts beyond the ken of the European, are constantly being heard of, and have each a work to do. It is helpful, too, to note how much impression the passing visits of missionaries have made in the country villages, and how sharp the natives are to pick out those who are in sympathy with them. I have been repeatedly struck with this, especially when the link was traced before any word had been spoken about religion on my part. On several occasions I have met with the same thing in Algeria and Tunis. There are so few Europeans in these parts who show a friendly interest in the natives that kindliness is soon remarked and slow to be forgotten, especially when the stranger tells them that anything he does is "for the sake of Christ."

Yes, God is honouring his work in Morocco, and there is need for constant thankfulness to Him.

British Bhutan.

Four years ago the Church of Scotland Young Men's Guild resolved to undertake foreign mission work, and Rev. J. A. Graham was ordained as its first missionary. Kalimpong, in British Bhutan, being part of the Church's Himalayan Mission, was assigned to it for a field. Since then the work has been very greatly owned and blessed of God, and during the past two years quite an awakening has taken place, and several hundreds have been baptized.

At home the interest in foreign mission work has greatly increased, as is evidenced by the larger number of branches subscribing. At the annual conference recently held in Greenock it was unanimously agreed to accept the services of Mr. John W. Innes Wright, Glasgow, as evangelist and assistant to Mr. Graham.

BRIDGE OF HOPE MISSION.

Though the weather was inclement, Monday last was a cheerful day at the Central Refuge of the Bridge of Hope Mission, Betts-street, St. George's-in-the-East. The occasion was the anniversary of the very important work over which Miss Steer presides, with large blessing although with much anxiety. An exceptional feature of the day's proceedings was a sale of needlework, hosiery, and knitted goods made at the Refuge. The Duchess of Bedford graciously opened the sale, speaking with much feeling of the Christ-like character of the ministry exercised by Miss Steer and her devoted helpers. Rev. C. H. Turner, rector of St. George's, presided over a luncheon subsequently held.

At the annual meeting in the afternoon, the chair was occupied by Mr. R. Scott, who heartily commended the Mission alike for its preventive, rescue, and industrial service. The inmates had earned £622 by laundry, knitting, and needlework, a fact to which Mr. G. Lewis referred with special pleasure in presenting the finance report.

Rev. J. P. Gledstone remarked upon the deplorable need for refuges for deceived and neglected females. Not merely is it requisite to care for the poor, and protect helpless girls from vicious parents, but also to shelter the defenceless from the hands of bad men. Oh, the cowardice, hardness, and cruelty of men who are so degraded as not to know what it is to spare beauty, innocence, or tenderness! Referring to the drink traffic, which is responsible for so much impurity, the speaker urged ceaseless exertion to secure legislation such as shall diminish its ravages.

Mr. W. A. Coote said that the desideratum in rescue work is not some one to stand in front or behind and invite or persuade those who have gone astray; but a sympathetic woman who will stand by the side of the sinners, and woo them into the right way. Alluding to the unchristian indulgence which society has extended to fallen men, he maintained that before long it would be necessary to speak out, in order that a more wholesome public opinion may be formed with regard to men of impure life.

Miss Mason having spoken of Miss Steer's work among children whose young days have been robbed of the charms and pleasures which should belong to childhood, Mr. W. F. A. Archibald delivered a sympathetic address. Miss Steer followed with a pathetic statement. The report which she introduced, the fourteenth, told of a variety of activities, and was at once interesting and painful in its details. We make a brief extract:—"When I look round at the faces of the young women in our refuge, I feel there is a reason to thank God, and take courage. Yet I know how much real hard work has been gone through, before those wild young things have come to be such transformed, obedient members of the happy household over which it has pleased God to place me. I know full well too, how very, very much more remains to be done; or, when the guiding hands are removed, and the girl again stands on her own feet, in the wide world, with all the inherent weakness of character which, first of all, made her a fit inmate of the 'Ratcliff Highway Refuge,' all our work may be seemingly undone.

"No doubt the year's training is of inestimable value, and the strong hand of a good woman friend, whom the girl has learned to love, is of greater value still; but we have great doubt of any girl who leaves us, if her heart, and her will, are not given to God—and those feet, so apt to slip, are not firmly planted on the 'Rock of Ages.' But amid many bitter disappointments, by far the larger number of our girls are doing well, and will, we doubt not, be our crown and rejoicing in the day of Christ."

The printed report indicates several ways in which friends may help, and we trust that such as are able and willing to co-operate will obtain particulars by writing to Miss Steer, at the Refuge, Ratcliff Highway, E.

POLICE SEASIDE HOME.—On Saturday afternoon, H.R.H. Princess Christian laid the memorial stone of the new Home for sick and injured policemen, which is being erected by the Christian Police Association, at West Brighton. After the laying of the stone, a meeting was held when Mr. Thomas Cave, J.P., explained that the special fund amounted to £3825. The total cost of the Home, including the site, will be £8855, there being a deficiency of £2127. Her Royal Highness then received purses of money amounting to £110.

FROM THE COWGATE TO CANADA.

By T. J. Barnardo, F.R.C.S., Ed.

Among one of my recent groups of emigrants was a fine, smart-looking, well-grown lad of sixteen, of ruddy visage and North-country speech. In the hall of the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, London, where our Farewell meeting took place, Neil McKay sat next to a gentleman, who, on entering into conversation with him, discovered that, like himself, he hailed from Scotia. It was pleasant to observe this Dundee merchant talking in tones of subdued interest but of great earnestness with the young lad who had been rescued a short time back from one of the slums of Edinburgh, and was now about to sail for Canada under such favourable conditions.

The past career of Neil McKay was sad in the extreme. Practically an orphan—for his mother was dead, and he had been deserted by his father years before—he had taken to living upon the streets of Edinburgh nearly three years before he came into my hands. During all this time, while somehow keeping honest, he had endeavoured to pick up a living by selling papers, carrying parcels, or doing any odd jobs about the streets, railway stations, or market places.

Neil McKay (Aged 16).

Sometimes Neil slept in common lodging-houses, that is, when he was successful in picking up a few pence during the day; but when this failed him, he would walk about all night, or sleep in the open, or on some common stair. The result of this frequent exposure was that he suffered from a severe inflammation of the ear and jaw, and had to keep his face almost constantly bound up with a piece of rag. The character of the lad seemed to be, so far as my investigations went, blameless; yet he had no friend in the world, absolutely no one to give him a helping hand; and so it was that in rags and wretchedness, half starved, woebegone, and crestfallen, Neil McKay applied for help at our "Open Door," at 4, Castle-terrace, Edinburgh. There he was given a night or two's shelter and food, of which he was urgently in need, while searching inquiries were made into his statements. These proving satisfactory, he was subsequently admitted to the Homes; and it is seldom that so great a change could be seen in so short a time as took place in his outward appearance not long after his reception

Undoubtedly this was due to the fact that the boy had originally inherited a thoroughly healthy physique, and had only been reduced to the state of extreme wretchedness in which he was when he applied by privation and continued exposure to cold and wet. A well-ordered life, with regular meals and proper clothing, medical attention, and the absence of anxiety as to ways and means, soon transformed the miserable, wandering vagrant, into a plump, nice-looking lad, who gave promise of by-and-by becoming a man of great physical stature.

When, after some months' residence in the Homes, in which his conduct was exemplary, I yielded to Neil's earnest request to send him to Canada, the lad's delight knew no bounds. Although I cannot speak of Neil as having been brought to decision for Christ before he left, yet he gave many signs of a truly awakened conscience, and of earnest desires to be right and to do well; and it was not without hope and prayer for his future that the dear lad was, with the others of the party, commended to God before being sent forth to his new life in the Dominion. I have since heard of his safe arrival, and of his having been engaged by a farmer at an annual wage of 70 dols., with board, lodging, and such medical attendance as he might require.

Yet it is for doing just such work as this in the slums of Edinburgh that I have drawn down upon my devoted head the scorn and contumely of The Scotsman, and of its satellite, The Evening Dispatch. The unrelenting animosity of these two papers has indeed become an open scandal, but I venture to think on that very ground it will cease to have weight with fair-minded and unprejudiced people.

I very much regret that I have not had time to get engraved the photograph of Neil as he was when sent to Canada, so that it might be placed side by side with that taken on his admission to the Home. No more striking contrast could, I am sure, be found among the 5734 boys and girls, whom, in the providence of God, I have been permitted to place out in life far away from the festering slums in which their earlier years were passed.

Police-court Mission.

A meeting was held on Monday week in the Mansion House in connection with this branch of the C.E.T.S. The Lord Mayor said it was gratifying to know that, during the past year, 5683 homes had been visited by police-court missionaries, and that the visits to police-courts and sessions, including persons met at prisons, and prisoners' visits to missionaries houses, numbered 2572. As many as seventy-four lads had been taken to homes and put to sea; and clothing, blankets, etc., had been supplied to 1624 families and individuals. Rev. Dennis Hird gave an account of the work of the mission. Mr. James Vaughan said he was able to testify to the great amount of good which was done by the mission. The large number of cases of drunkenness which came before him was, indeed, appalling; but to his mind the present generation was very much paying the penalty of the drunkenness of their forefathers. He was greatly pained when he had people coming before him time after time charged with drunkenness, but he thought there could not be any scheme which was more calculated to diminish intemperance than the method adopted by that Society. Habitual drunkards, however, were persons who could not be dealt with by either magistrate or missionary in a satisfactory manner, and he believed the only hope at all for the amelioration of affairs was by giving power to the magistrates to send them to a place of seclusion where they might be kept for twelve months freed from possibility of getting any drink.

ORPHAN HOME FOR LITTLE GIRLS, Burgos House, Sydenham-road, North Croydon. It is seven years since this Home was first opened, and eighty-seven little ones have been admitted, and thus saved from poverty, neglect, and moral danger. Of these fourteen are now in situations, twenty-one have returned to their friends, five have been transferred to other homes, three have been adopted, one has died, and forty-two are still resident at Burgos House and in the branch at Seaford. During last year thirteen children left the Home, and twelve fresh ones were admitted. Copies of the report may be had from the superintendent, Mrs. N. A. Smith, Dalkeith Cottages, Wellesley-road, Croydon.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—During October this Society, which has entered on the thirty-fourth year of its work among the fallen of the United Kingdom, held eleven meetings in London, attended by over one thousand women. These gatherings were held in Chelsea, Whitechapel, Borough, and Metropolitan Tabernacle. Many entered Homes as the result. Among those who took part were Mr. George Holland, of George Yard Mission, and Messrs. Christien and McCree, officials of the society.

SERVICES IN THEATRES, Etc.

A drawing-room meeting in connection with the commencement of the thirty-fourth winter course of special religious services in theatres, halls, and mission rooms in London was held at the house of Mr. John Attenborough, Rothbury, Beckenham, on Saturday afternoon last. General Sir Robert Phayre presided; a large company was present.

Rev. T. C. Udall said that for thirty-three winters the committee had been engaged in making known the Gospel of Christ to the people in some of the worst localities of London. Unwilling as the people are to enter our churches and chapels, they will readily crowd on the Sunday evenings the places they have frequented during the week. On many occasions during the season some 3000 working men and women will be found at the Pavilion Theatre, Whitechapel; 1000 at the Queen's Theatre, Poplar; 1000 at Morley Hall, Hackney, and so on. It is important that the committee continue to sow broadcast among the people the incorruptible Word of the living God. Mr. Udall regretted to say that owing to the lack of funds the Queen's Theatre was not open this winter, and an offer to rent the Victoria Theatre, New-cut, could not at present be entertained.

Rev. J. B. Barraclough, an East End clergyman, detailed his own experiences as a preacher at the Shoreditch Town Hall, the Pavilion, and other buildings in the East of London, and urged the great need of sustaining and increasing the operations of the committee.

Mr. Geo. Nokes followed with a graphic description of life in Bethnal Green, Whitechapel, and Poplar among the very lowest of the poor, his address abounding with striking incidents of pathetic interest. He stated that for eighteen years he had been preaching at the Pavilion to the poor from lodging-houses, thieves' kitchens, etc. He detailed marvellous incidents of the power of the Gospel to raise the most debased and fallen.

Mr. G. A. Western, of Shortlands, member of committee, pleaded earnestly for an increase of funds. General Phayre also bore testimony as a preacher at the various theatres and halls, and characterised the work as a sincere, honest, and reliable Christian effort. Mr. Charles M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, London, E.C., is the superintendent of the work.

On Sunday a harvest festival service was held at the Holborn Town Hall. About 300 to 400 attended in the afternoon, when an interesting and instructive address was delivered by Mr. G. E. Morgan, upon "A Basket of Summer Fruit." In the evening the Hall was literally packed with the working people of the neighbourhood. Not a single person above the wage-earning class could be discovered. Mr. Chas. Button gave a most earnest and searching address from the text, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." There should be no lack of support for such services, which attract the very class whose absence from our ordinary places of worship is so lamentable.

Mr. W. Sampson at Stamford-street.

Last Sunday a ten days' mission was commenced in the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, Stamford-street, S.E., by Mr. W. Sampson, the Cornish evangelist. Much power attended the preaching of the word at the three services held on that day; the place was "filled with the glory of God," in answer to the earnest prayers offered for many days previous.

Stamford-street has recently been brought into unenviable notoriety, but the Lord is proving his power, even in that neighbourhood, by awakening people to a sense of sin and need of a Saviour. The meetings are to continue throughout the week, and until next Tuesday. W. F. C.

TRAINING INSTITUTES FOR AFRICAN STUDENTS.—A meeting in aid of the Congo House Training Institutes for African Students, one of which has been established at Colwyn Bay, North Wales, was held a few days ago at Manchester, Rev. Dr. Mackennal presiding. The institute at Colwyn Bay was established to train African converts who should return to their country as missionaries, schoolmasters, and useful handicraftsmen. There are ten youths under training. The services of Revs. H. T. Cousins and L. T. Evans have been accepted to establish a branch institution in Zululand. The land required for that purpose in Zululand will, it is hoped, be given, but before operations can be commenced a sum of £2000 will be required.

THE "P.S.A." MOVEMENT.

Dear Sir,—Our experience in connection with P.S.A. work has been up to the present small, and much of what we are writing must be taken as anticipation of results, rather than accomplished facts.

The P.S.A. meeting has been begun by the Birmingham Y.M.C.A. with the view of reaching men, and especially young men, who for various reasons do not go to our churches and chapels. Our aim is distinctly and avowedly evangelistic in the fullest sense of the word, and those who become members of our meeting do so with the full knowledge that our one aim is to lead them to personal contact with the living Saviour. Having this primarily in view, every care has been, and will be, taken that all who take any part in the meeting shall be Christian men.

Our meetings, which are held in the large Lecture Theatre of the Midland Institute, are bright and hearty, the singing is brisk, the solos are hymns or the words of Scripture, the addresses are short practical Gospel talks, and the men are allowed, but not encouraged, to applaud.

The men contribute a penny per week to the prize fund, and we take a copper collection to defray expenses.

Our meetings were extensively advertised, over 650 posters being put out, some of very large size (16ft. by 12ft.), nearly 120,000 handbills were distributed by our workers. On Sunday, October 9, 1100 men were present at the opening meeting, and 460 enrolled themselves as members. Last Sunday about 1050 men came, and 300 more enrolled themselves.

The president of the meeting is the secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and the vice-presidents, secretaries, and officers are all members of the association.

Among the present and anticipated results of our meetings we would note:—

1. A great increase of interest in Christian work, and a drawing together of our workers. The meeting requires many helpers, and affords scope for the exercise of very varied talents.

2. An immediate increase in our Sunday evening evangelistic meeting. Last Sunday about fifty men from the P.S.A. came, and on the previous Sunday, we believe, at least one decided for Christ.

3. We confidently expect that men will be led to Christ at our meetings on Sunday afternoons.

4. Also that many backsliders will be brought back to the old paths, from which they have wandered through coldness.

5. That a spirit of brotherliness and friendship will spring up among our P.S.A. members, who are of various social grades, and that all will be brought to have kindlier thoughts of our Lord and Master, by seeing a brotherly spirit manifested in those who are avowedly his servants.

6. That many of the young men who form more than half the audience will become associates of the Y.M.C.A., and we trust eventually full members.

If there are any further points upon which you desire information, we shall be very pleased to give it, if we are able to do so.

Yours faithfully,
Henry Whitwell, President of the P.S.A.
Geo. B. Wilson, Vice-President.
Y.M.C.A., Birmingham.

UGANDA.

Christ's lamb in far Uganda lowly lies,
Fearing the coming storm; the darkling skies
Speak thunder, whilst around their bleating prey
Foes gather hot in hate, keen for the fray.
The turbaned Moslem grasps his cruel knife,
The wolfish heathen sniffs the bloody strife;
With iron fetters armed, Rome's wily priest
Would rob her of sweet liberty at least.
They wait the signal: "Down with England's flag,"
They mutter, "Whilst that floats we still must lag."

And shall our flag be lowered, shall Jesus' lamb
Be yielded to the spoilers? Endless shame
Would crimson then indeed the coward cheek
Of Britain, once the guardian of the weak.
The patriot memories of our fatherland,
The blood of martyrs poured on Afric's sand,
The shades of Parker, Mackay, Hannington,
Cry with one voice, "This deed shall not be done!"

BIBLE STUDY.—Referring to our recent note as to courses of Bible study in connection with the National Home Reading Union, a correspondent writes: "For some time such a supplementary course (on Scripture) has been carried on by the Wesley Reading Society, the secretary of which is Rev. J. T. L. Maggs, 19, St. Andrew's-road, Enfield."

JEWS OF WEST LONDON.

While the Jews of East London have long engaged the interest and solicitude of several missionary agencies, little or nothing has been done among the Hebrew residents of the West-end. A definite place is therefore filled by the newly-organised West London Mission to the Jews, which has for its president and hon. sec., Rev. Dr. Bullinger, incumbent of Brunswick Chapel, Upper Berkeley-street, W. A circular letter just issued states:—

"The Lord has recently raised up from among their brethren one who is eminently qualified to testify to them concerning their Messiah and Saviour, in the person of Rev. Joseph Larzen. Friends are being raised up to assist him in the missionary part of his work. This work embraces house-to-house visitation, distribution of Scriptures (Hebrew, Judeo-German, German, &c.), and tracts.

"Suitable headquarters have been secured at Ganton House, 5, Ganton-street, King-street, Soho, W., which is in the very centre of a large district crowded with Jews. It consists of a large room, which will be used for the gathering of Jews and foreigners for services on Saturday afternoon, and at other times; also for evening and other classes for men and women, to benefit them spiritually and otherwise. We trust also that we may, ere long, be able to establish a medical mission, which would form an important part of our work.

"Mr. Larzen is not only an accomplished linguist, but he can also deal with the prejudices of Jewish objectors as well as with the infidelity of German rationalists, both of which classes abound in the Soho neighbourhood. Rev. Paul Warschawski (through whom, under God, Mr. Larzen was brought to a knowledge of the Saviour), who is well known to the Christian public as an experienced missionary, having laboured for many years in the East Central Mission to the Jews, has come forward to help in this work. Through overwork, Mr. Warschawski was compelled to relinquish his mission some time since, but feeling now improved in health, he is anxious again to devote some of his time to publishing the Gospel message."

Communications to Dr. Bullinger may be addressed, 39, Harewood-square, N.W.

MISSION TO LEPERS IN INDIA.

On July 23 Miss Reed wrote of great encouragement in the work at Pithora, N.W.P. There had been sixteen baptisms, leaving only one unbaptized man among the forty-seven inmates of the Asylum. He had but recently come and is under instruction. Miss Reed adds: "I wonder if Brother M—— has written to you of the series of meetings he assisted in holding—God owned and blessed the work. We had some precious services. He was amazed at the testimonies, he said. Those dear people have been growing and learning of the 'deep things of God.' All praise to Him whose we are and in whose service we find so much of blessedness."

Mr. Uffmann wrote from Purulia, Chota, Nagpore, on September 6:—"You cannot imagine what desire for the truth exists among the men in the Asylum, and how they devour the Word like hungry people. Almost every week one or another of these folk comes to me and confesses his sins. In one fortnight six or seven letters were sent by messengers to persons who had been offended or injured by the awakened one, in which they beg forgiveness. When these messengers returned, there came two more people and lamented their distress that very day. Then there were more letters to write to the offended ones, in order to obtain forgiveness. An old teacher who has led astray many scholars wishes now to tell all his old pupils that he was a stumbling-block to them before and to exhort them to be converted. So it goes on, and I hope these poor creatures are yet to be as salt among the heathen. It is a real pleasure to proclaim the Gospel to these people. The last time there were 126 at the Lord's Supper."

Mr. Uffmann mentions in a more recent letter that this work of the Spirit still goes on, and that there is so great a desire to read the Bible that some lepers of fifty years of age are beginning to learn to read. The secretary of the mission is Mr. W. C. Bailey, 17, Glengyle-terrace, Edinburgh.

THE NURSING DEPARTMENT of the work carried on by the Sheffield Women's Christian Temperance Union is increasingly useful; the nurses have many opportunities for showing the better way to those who have believed alcohol to be a remedy for every evil that flesh is heir to. They bring relief to many a desolate home, shrinking from no case of suffering, however loathsome, and many warm testimonies are borne by patients and their friends to the blessings conferred upon the sufferers.

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

(From our own Correspondents.)

OXFORD

The list of preachers at Mansfield for this term contains some noteworthy and representative names. Dr. Jefferis, of Torquay, and Rev. P. T. Forsyth, of Leicester, have already preached.

The Y.M.C.A. has a good strong programme of work for the winter, including a large and crowded P.S.A. meeting for men only, and a week evening Bible class for men which has been recently started.

Rev. Jani Alli. of Calcutta (C.M.S.), preached at St. Aldate's on Sunday last, and also addressed a meeting in Balliol College. In pleading for his work among Mohammedans, the burden of his appeal was "Where are the men?"

Earnest action is being taken in the form of strong requisitions from City and University to Mr. Moody to give Oxford the privilege of a visit. It is confidently believed that the evangelist will be able to hold a short mission here.

The first anniversary services and meetings in connection with Canon Christopher's new church were held on Sunday and Monday last, and also those of the New Road Baptist Chapel, when Rev. W. Cuff, of Shoreditch, and Dr. S. H. Booth took part.

The day previous, Bishop Mitchinson, albeit a "High" Churchman, also made a most earnest appeal for the Bible Society from the University pulpit, and when the place, audience, and preacher are remembered, it is a cause for much thankfulness to have the valuable work so emphasised.

The speech of Archdeacon Hodgson at the recent Bible Society meeting deserves more than the mere reference which was all that was possible in last week's notes. Coming from a member of the Universities' Mission, the witness was of double value, and the quiet, though most telling, testimony to the Society will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it. The Archdeacon made an effective appeal to Oxford Churchmen to support the Society.

CAMBRIDGE.

The Sunday evening meetings of the Inter-Collegiate Christian Union, at the Alexandra Hall, began on October 23, with a Bible-reading by Rev. Sholto Douglas; there was a good attendance, and the speaker's earnest words were listened to attentively. Mr. Norman Bennett, of Trinity, and Mr. Mansell, of Emmanuel, are respectively president and honorary secretary of the Union.

Rev. J. B. Brandram, an old Queen's man, who is home for a short time from Kumanoto, Japan, gave an account of the work there to the Church Missionary Union, on Monday, at the Henry Martyn Hall. He contrasted the congestion of churches and chapels in many towns with Japan, with its large provinces, some of which have no provision whatever for evangelising the people.

The other annual meeting was that of the Daily Prayer Meeting, held on Tuesday night, Rev. Evan H. Hopkins delivering one of his particularly helpful addresses. Taking the four heads, Pardon, Deliverance, Cleansing, Filling, he showed their intimate connection with one another, and dwelt upon the agency of the Holy Spirit as the means by which Christ imparts his blessings to those willing to receive them.

This is the term for "annual meetings," and we have had two more interesting ones this week—that of the Church Pastoral Aid Society for one, which aims at assisting large and poor parishes by providing the stipend for extra curates. The Master of Corpus presided on Monday night at the Guildhall, and the secretary (Rev. J. G. Nixon) read the report, which showed that good work had been done during the past year. Canon McCormick, of York, and Rev. Sholto Douglas addressed the meeting.

We have had another visit from Rev. A. J. Harrison, B.D., the lecturer for the Parochial Mission Society, and he has been heartily welcome. The members of the Religious Discussion Society have great cause for thankfulness that they have been able to avail themselves of the cheerfully-rendered services of Mr. Harrison, whose lucid explanation of many of the difficulties which assail the reader and thinker upon the problems of the age have been very helpful. The subject (dealt with in three lectures) taken on this occasion was "The Christian's duty with regard to social questions."

THE HOUSE OF REST.—Miss Mason hopes to hold a sale of useful and fancy articles, for the benefit of the House of Rest for Christian Workers, in the Pillar Room, on November 15, 16, and 17, and will be very thankful for gifts of needlework, jewellery, and any useful household articles. All articles to be sent to Miss Mason, 10, Finchley-road, St. John's Wood, N.W.

THE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS.

Y.M.C.A.

The erection of a new building is under consideration at Newcastle.

New associations have been formed at Chesterfield and Marsden Moor.

Mr. W. J. Hancock, secretary of the Cape Town Association, is visiting this country on his honeymoon.

Mr. E. J. Kennedy, of Exeter Hall, last week conducted a mission to young men at the Sheffield Y.M.C.A.

The Y.M.C.A. motto for the ensuing year is to be "Only be thou strong and very courageous."

The Lowestoft branch has secured a site for a new building, and £244 has already been raised for the building fund.

Ilfracombe proposes to establish a seaside home in the town, where members of the various Associations can spend a holiday.

A new District Union of Y.M.C.A.'s has been formed for Mid-Ireland, and has been formally admitted to the National Union.

The United Y.M.C.A. of Glasgow observed last week as a week of prayer. Special sermons to young men were preached in over thirty churches in the city.

The report of the district conference held lately at Liskeard shows that the Y.M.C.A. is steadily progressing and doing good work in Devon and Cornwall.

Mr. Herbert E. Kinsley reports that the Paris Anglo-American Y.M.C.A. is just now very full of work. The annual public meeting will be held early in November.

Mr. George Williams gave a reception at Burlington Hall Y.M.C.A., Savile-row, W., on Thursday last week, when Rev. W. C. Minnie, Camberwell, was the speaker.

Rev. Robert Taylor, at the request of the Croydon Y.M.C.A., preached on Sunday evening to young men, his subject being, "The Religious Teaching of Tennyson's Writings."

The Bible Class Lessons for 1893, issued by the National Council, have been taken from St. John's Gospel, and are so arranged that the whole of that Gospel may be read and studied in the course of the year.

The Exeter Association has secured new and central premises, which were opened on Tuesday week by Mr. George Williams, Sir J. H. Kennaway, Bart., M.P., Canon Edmonds, Dr. Kingston, and many well-known and leading men taking part.

The New Cross and Brockley Y.M.C.A. has at last thoroughly established itself in its new premises opposite the Goldsmiths' Institute, and promises already to do a very serviceable and successful work in the interests of the young men of that neighbourhood.

At the camping out of the Plymouth Y.M.C.A. members at Whitsands, Mr. Towl, an Association member from London, very pluckily rescued from drowning Mr. Harold Redham, R.N., who was swept away by an undercurrent when bathing near the Spender monument.

At John Hopkins University, Baltimore, the moving of Levering Hall, the Y.M.C.A. headquarters, is nearly completed The building was moved some distance on rollers. It was a work attended with considerable difficulty, but has been successfully performed. A month is required to get the building ready for occupancy again.
